WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John Block says President Reagan misspoke when, vetoing a controversial farm credit bill, he said only 4 percent of American farmers are having serious cash-flow problems.

Reagan did not mean what he said, Block said, adding that "the president understands the problem" confronting farmers.

Asked about Reagan's remark at a briefing for farm journalists Thursday, Block said: "What he was really saying is that he feels that we will probably lose about 5 percent or 4 percent, whatever the number that he said. He wasn't suggesting there aren't more than that in trouble."

When he vetoed the bill Wednesday, Reagan said: "The truth of the matter is — in need of immediate help are less than 4 percent or around 4 percent at best, of all the farmers in the United States. Ninety-six percent do not have liquidity problems."

"The president did misspeak," Block said Thursday under questioning by the Senate Agriculture Committee. "A much higher percentage than that are facing serious strain and stress financially," he said.

According to Agriculture Department economists, approximately 178,000 "family-size commercial farms" with sales of $40,000 to $500,000 annually have debts in excess of 40 percent of their assets and are in a severe cash-flow squeeze. Those do not include other "highly leveraged" farms in larger and smaller sales categories.

The 178,000 middle-size farms in a financial bind represent less than 8 percent of all the farms in the United States, but they account for nearly 18 percent of total production and are considered the cornerstone of the family farm system. They also make up 28 percent of the mid-size group.

"We believe the percentage loss of farms will be heavier this year, maybe in the range of 5 percent" of the U.S. total and "it could get slightly above that," Block said.

According to USDA projections for the next three to five years, the annual farm loss "probably will stay in that range or less" before starting to ease "back down to the normal range" of losses, he said.

Block made his remarks at a conference of farm journalists held at USDA to explain and promote the administration's new farm bill, the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1985, which calls for a reduction in government commodity supports in favor of a "market-oriented" system.

The decline in the number of American farms will continue to be mainly the result international economic conditions and other forces over which farmers have no control, Block said. But if the administration's farm bill is put in place, things should be looking up by the end of the decade "when agriculture is going to become healthy again" — and more profitable, he said.

Reagan vows to continue buildup

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, ready to dispatch American arms negotiators to Geneva, vows the United States will continue building up its military muscle unless the Soviet Union agrees to scale down nuclear arsenals.

While declaring he seeks the reduction and eventual elimination of nuclear arms, Reagan said, "At the same time, we are not going to allow ourselves to drift into inferiority. If we can't get reductions, we will have to continue our modernization of our defense forces."

In a sendoff for his negotiators, Reagan arranged a meeting in the State Dining Room today with his bargaining team, congressional observers of the Geneva talks, Secretary of State George P. Shultz, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane.

The ceremony was a prelude to the opening in Geneva next Tuesday of the first U.S.-Soviet arms control talks in more than a year. The two sides seem far apart, particularly on the issue of space weapons and the U.S. "Star Wars" program that envisions the use of space-based lasers and other high-technology systems to shoot down enemy missiles in flight.

McFarlane said Thursday "if the past is any guide our job will be extremely difficult."

He said U.S. negotiators would be ready to offer tradeoffs in offensive weapons systems "which provide very powerful inducements for an agreement right now."

The U.S. bomber and submarine forces are considered superior, while the Soviets have an edge in heavy ground-based missiles. McFarlane provided no details of the shape of an American proposal to reduce all three types of strategic weapons.

He said Reagan was "nearing a decision" on the U.S. position on both strategic and intermediate-range nuclear weapons. He said it would be a "flexible" stand.

In a preview of today's ceremony, Reagan defended Star Wars and the MX missile during an Oval Office meeting on Thursday with a high-

WASHINGTON (AP) — The slaying of an American drug agent in Mexico has strained U.S.-Mexican relations, but Secretary of State George Shultz says he opposes economic sanctions to punish Mexican inaction on drug traffickers.

Testifying before a Senate Appropriations subcommittee just before U.S. authorities positively identified the body of Enrique Camarena Salazar on Thursday, Shultz said, "Our level of tolerance has been exceeded by these events."

Annabel Liscano, 11, right, captured first place in the Junior Spelling Bee here Thursday while Zack Farr, 12, was the runnerup. Both are sixth-graders at West Central School. Zack will never forget how Annabel Liscano, 11, a sixth-grader from West Central, captured the Junior Bee contest here Thursday afternoon and will advance to the Deaf Smith County Spelling Bee today.

After Zack Farr, 12, another West Central sixth grader, missed the spelling of "adjudicate", Annabel spelled the word correctly and then spelled the next word, "admeasure," to win the contest in the 34th round Thursday at the Flame Room.

Eighteen contestants started the bee and only five were left when first-round words were completed.

West Central made it a clean sweep for the top spots, as Jayme Moore finished third in the bee. She dropped an "s" in "addressable".

Annabel is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jose L. Liscano, and Zack is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Phil Farr. Jayme's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Troy D. Moore.

Only five contestants will be in the senior bee today, which was scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m. in the Flame Room. They are Matt Coplen and Angela Banner from La Plata, Heather Hamilton and Vincent Garcia from Stanton, and the junior winner—Annabel Liscano.

Coplen will be seeking his fourth-consecutive county spelling bee crown. He has placed third in the Regional Bee the past two years and finished 13th on his first try.

The winner of the county bee today will be sent to the Region Bee, April 27, by The Hereford Brand, sponsor of the event. The regional bee will be held at West Texas State University, where the co-sponsor is the Amarillo Globe-News. The region winner advances to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C. in June.

Last year's regional winner was Ashley Adams of Texas County, Okla. This will be the 37th annual Region Bee and Deaf Smith County has never had a winner.

and our efforts until they and all their conspirators are brought to justice."

Shultz said the kidnapping, murder and burial of Camarena on a ranch in Mexico, threats against other American drug agents and inaction by Mexican authorities on illegal drug production may demand some American response.

The secretary said the United States will continue to "forcefully" press the Mexicans to move against drug dealers, and he credited them with taking some tough law enforcement actions.

The Mexican government needs American tourism and so the slowdown and cursory searches of cars crossing the border are effective, Shultz said.

But when asked whether the administration would retaliate economically to force the Mexican government to crack down on drug traffickers, he replied: "I don't think it is a good idea to play around with those kind of sanctions."

In a separate statement, Shultz said he was "angered and saddened" by the killing of Camarena and his Mexican associate, Alfredo Zavala Avelar.

U.S. officials have criticized the Mexican government's response to Camarena's abduction on Feb. 7 on a street near the U.S. Consulate in Guadalajara, Mexico. Acting DEA Administrator John C. Lawn has charged that the response by Mexican authorities was "too little, too late."

Meese ordered flags flown at half-staff at the Justice Department today in memorial to Camarena, whose body was to be flown aboard an Air Force C-141 cargo plane to San Diego, Calif.

The DEA announced Thursday night that Lawn would lead an agency delegation to a memorial service for Camarena, although the time was not certain.

Ambassador John Gavin said in Mexico City that the U.S. drug agency was vulnerable because it was "thinly staffed and thinly spread out."

But Gavin also said the United States was receiving "very good cooperation" from Mexican authorities.

Mexican officials have said they are doing all they can to stem drug traffic. During the search for Camarena, Attorney General Sergio Garcia Ramirez said Mexican police were using "all the resources at their disposal" to find the missing drug agent.

Meese said the slaying of Camarena "will not lessen the resolve of the government of the United States to enforce the drug trafficking laws of this nation."

Arson conviction nets 12 years

A Hereford man was convicted of first degree felony arson and sentenced to 12 years in the state penitentiary Thursday in 22nd District Court.

The jury deliberated one hour and 20 minutes before finding Pete Casias Jr., 28, guilty of intentionally setting fire to his home on July 8, 1984.

Deliberation in the punishment phase of the trial lasted about two hours. Casias is not eligible for parole because of prior felony conviction. (See ARSON, Page 2)

DOE reps review impacts

Tax base questions considered

By KIM THOGMARTIN
Staff Writer

A roundtable meeting Thursday between Department of Energy officials and members of the Deaf Smith County Tax Appraisal District was "productive", according to Chief Appraiser Fred Fox.

The group was joined by Steve Frishman, director of Gov. Mark White's Nuclear Waste Programs Office, for the two-hour meeting at the DOE Information Office.

Representatives of local taxing districts heard Linda McClain, project manager for the proposed nuclear waste site north of Hereford, explain the financial assistance available to the state as provided by the Nuclear Waste Policy Act of 1982.

According to the provision of the act regarding taxing, the Secretary of Energy is to "grant to each state and unit of general local government in which a site for a repository is approved...an amount each fiscal year equal to the amount...they would receive were they authorized to tax site characterization activities at such site."

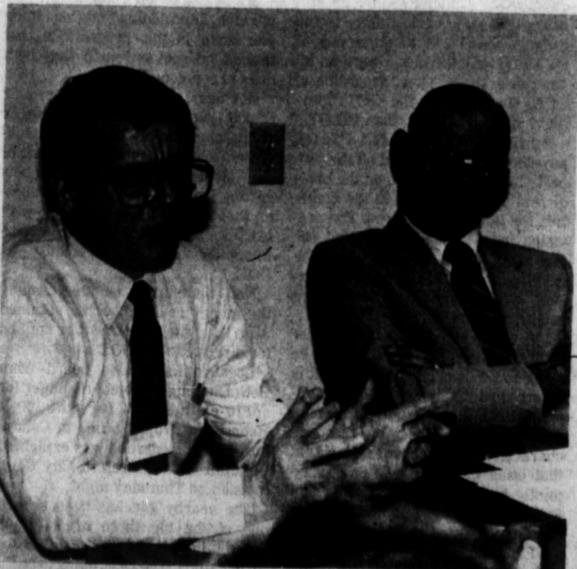

In addition to the grants available to taxing districts, the act provides for money to reimburse state and local governments for expenses incurred as a result of an area site in that state being chosen for site characterization.

The Hereford City Commission heard about socio-economic impact and the Deaf Smith County Tax Appraisal District board learned of grant money available in reports given by the Department of Energy on Thursday which focused on the site characterization of a nuclear waste repository here.

At the meetings were Jeff Neff, DOE Salt Project Manager; Beth Darrough, DOE project manager for socio-economics; Margaret Boryczka, Battelle socio-economics manager; and Helen Latham, of Battelle.

Exploratory site characterization for an underground nuclear waste repository will require about 350 workers during the peak with 10 to 25 percent of those to come from a nine county area near the site, according to Department of Energy officials at a Hereford City Commission meeting last night.

At the request of the city commission, the DOE representatives presented a summary of the socio-economic impact that Hereford would feel during a five year site characterization.

The DOE officials told city commissioners that almost one-fourth of the nearly 700 in-migrants (workers and families) expected to move to the region for the characterization would locate in Hereford. The 160 new residents number is how much Hereford would expand during the peak characterization project.

The project would be scheduled to begin in September of this year with the peak activity being during the construction of an exploratory shaft in March of 1987.

In addition to the workers, about 180 indirect jobs would be created and filled through retail and commercial businesses in Hereford, Vega, Canyon and Amarillo, says the DOE.

Mattox's sister testifies

AUSTIN (AP) — Jurors in Attorney General Jim Mattox's commercial bribery trial have heard his sister, Janice, testify she believes the effort by a Mobil Oil Corp. lawyer to question her about a $125,000 loan was a bid to harass her brother.

Mattox is charged with allegedly threatening the bond business of the Fulbright & Jaworski law firm unless one of the firm's lawyers, Thomas McDade, stopped trying to question Miss Mattox in an oil lease case.

In that case, Mattox represented the state after it joined wealthy rancher Clinton Manges in suing Mobil over an oil lease on Manges' ranch. The case was assigned to Judge Ruben Garcia of Laredo.

McDade, who wanted Garcia removed, issued notices in 1983 that he intended to question Mattox, his sister and others in connection with that motion.

But Miss Mattox said Thursday she believed McDade only wanted to irritate her brother. She said she had never met Judge Garcia, so questioning her would yield no evidence for McDade.

Governor defends no-bid report

AUSTIN (AP) — A $9,950 private study commissioned by the governor's office was worth the cost, Gov. Mark White says, shrugging off criticism from independent experts who said it contained new information.

While admitting that the report "did not yield as much results as I'd hoped for," White maintained Thursday it "was worth the dollars spent."

The 23-page narrative was authored by Austin lawyer John Stover, who said this week he received the contract because of White's promise to "help any way he could" after White nudged Stover off the Texas Water Commission.

The Austin American-Statesman showed the report to three independent water specialists, who it said agreed the report "was superficial and offered no new findings."

At his weekly news conference, White denied making promises to Stover to persuade him to quit the water commission job. "Certainly there was no promise or commitment," White said.

Coca-Cola's Woodruff dies at 95

ATLANTA (AP) — Robert W. Woodruff, who built the Coca-Cola company into an international financial empire and amassed a personal fortune large enough to donate more than $200 million to the college he left out of boredom, has died at age 95.

Woodruff, a former president and chairman of the board of the soft drink company, died Thursday night after a 10-day stay at Emory University Hospital, said spokeswoman Julia Hoye.

At the age of 33, Woodruff quit as president of a trucking company to take over the helm of the soft drink company his father, Ernest Woodruff, had purchased four years earlier for $25 million.

That was in 1923 when the company "was largely a soda-fountain business, heavily in debt. I took the company and spread it around the world — with the help of a lot of fine people," Woodruff said in a 1981 interview.

Second AIDS blood test approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has approved a second screening test for blood contaminated by AIDS following laboratory results indicating it is the most sensitive indicator of possible exposure to the deadly disease.

Electro-Nucleonics Inc. of Fairfield, N.J., was awarded the second license by the Food and Drug Administration on Thursday to market a blood test to detect possible AIDS contamination.

Laboratory tests showed the test was correct in 99.6 percent of the cases, compared with the 93 percent accuracy rate of the test licensed earlier, company and government officials said.

The company said it was prepared to ship 150,000 tests kits immediately and that it planned to produce about 1 million test kits a month.

FDA approval came only five days after the first production license was granted to Abbott Laboratories of North Chicago, Ill.

Both tests operate on the same principle. A small blood or plasma sample is combined with a reagent solution. If antibodies to the virus suspected of causing AIDS are present, the solution turns color, becoming yellow.

A positive test does not necessarily mean the donor has AIDS or will get it, and health officials are asking people not to consider the test a means of making a diagnosis.

The test, however, does indicate that the donor has been exposed to the suspected AIDS virus or to a related virus, and blood carrying a positive indication will be discarded.

A&M officials 'snubbed' student

HOUSTON (AP) — A former Texas A&M University student says she was "forced to become a focal point" on campus after filing a sex discrimination suit against the school.

Melanie Zintgraff, 26, testified in U.S. District Judge Ross Sterling's court she was snubbed by school officials after she sued to gain entry in all-male campus programs.

Ms. Zintgraff, who is now a captain in the U.S. Air Force, said then-university President Jarvis Miller "publicly humiliated" her during her 1980 graduation ceremony by refusing to shake her hand. "There was booing and the Aggie tradition of hissing. I did not get a handshake," Ms. Zintgraff said Wednesday.

Ms. Zintgraff, who filed a class-action lawsuit against A&M during her junior year, is seeking $75,000 damages from Miller; John Koldus, the school's vice president for student services; and Robert Kamensky, a cadet colonel and commander of the Corps of Cadets in 1979; for public humiliation and sex discrimination.

Committee calls for curbs on interns

LONDON (AP) — A parliamentary committee has called for a crackdown on American students working in Britain's House of Commons, citing cases of stolen books and discussions of American football in the library.

The handful of U.S. college students who first came to work for British legislators in 1977 has mushroomed to about 80 a semester. An all-party select committee recommended this week that a limit of 50 be set on the number of foreigners.

"There's a danger now of seeing Parliament as an American finishing school," said opposition Labor Party lawmaker Bruce George. His statement reflected a souring of relations between British legislators and U.S. students working for them for free.

George, one of the staunchest supporters and users of U.S. student researchers, said Wednesday that "the profusion of schemes has put the whole internship program in jeopardy."

Seeks protection from creditors

Company files bankruptcy

DALLAS (AP) — A series of ills, including weather-related production problems and mismanagement, are to blame for the demise of the Great Western Sugar Co., owned by the multimillionaire Hunt brothers, officials say.

The Denver-based Great Western, one of the last assets of Hunt International Resources Co., sought protection from its creditors Thursday in a federal bankruptcy court here.

On Friday, Great Western abruptly ceased operations at its 13 refineries after funds ran dry, and the company laid off 250 to 300 of its remaining employees. One week earlier, paychecks to employees bounced when banks stopped funding some of the company's operations.

The company's financial woes can be blamed in part on weather-related production problems, according to a recent government filing by Hunt International.

But informed sources say poor management in recent years was the biggest factor in the company's downfall.

"This company has been terribly mismanaged. There's just no question about that," an unnamed source told The Dallas Morning News. "This company 10 years ago was fabulously profitable. Ten years later, it's bankrupt. That doesn't happen simply and solely because of economic changes."

"... This is a constantly eroding kind of thing that occurred over a number of years, predicated on the inability of management that the Hunts picked out," the source said.

Hunt International, owned by trusts of billionaire brothers Nelson Bunker Hunt and W. Herbert Hunt of Dallas, earlier disclosed that it is in default on $295 million in debts and is unlikely to repay the loans in full.

The bankruptcy protection filing was the latest in a series of financial embarrassments and downturns experienced by the wealthy Hunt family, once one of the nation's richest clans.

In the voluntary petition, the Hunts are seeking protection for Great Western and two of its subsidiaries under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code, deputy court clerk Marge Tucker said.

The Hunts had sought bids for Great Western, but were apparently unable to make a sale that satisfied creditors. Hunt International's lenders have been in control of the ailing company's finances for several weeks.

Company officials acknowledged last week that before Great Western's shutdown, Hunt International's only other operating assets were two offshore oil rigs.

"The banks refused to continue funding us," said Glen Adams, vice chairman of Great Western. "So we didn't have enough funds to protect the collateral."

Great Western's three main banks are Bankers Trust of New York, First National Bank of Chicago and Manufacturers Hanover Trust of New York.

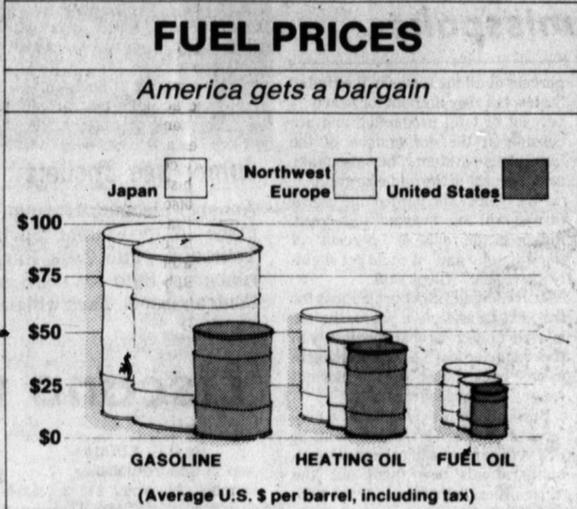

Adams said the company's next move is to try and "make some kind of arrangements with the banks so that we can assure that the sugar beet crop gets in the ground."

Three thousand growers, owed money by Great Western, are depending on the company for money to buy beets in the next 30 to 45 days.

"It's going to take some money from the banks to do that," Adams said. "After that, then hopefully we can sell the company."

Great Western said it will seek approval to continue operating as a "going business" and proceed with shipping and marketing operations.

Hunt International was one of the family's three major holdings. Nelson Bunker and Herbert Hunt invested heavily in energy, commodities such as sugar and silver, and farm land, all of which have experienced slumps. Their losses have been estimated at $4 billion.

Casias took the witness stand in his own defense Thursday morning, telling jurors he was drunk and having family problems on the day of the fire, and that he did not remember setting fire to the house.

Defense attorney John Lesly, reminding jurors to hold the prosecution to its burden of proof, suggested that the fire might have been accidentally set.

For a first degree felony conviction of arson, it must be proven that bodily injury resulted from the fire. In Thursday's case, it was Casias himself who was injured by the blaze. Local emergency personnel testified Casias was dragged from the front porch of his home and revived by lifesaving techniques.

In the charge to the jury, 22nd District Judge David Wesley Gulley reminded jurors that intoxication is not a defense for the commission of a crime. Casias had admitted to investigators that he consumed nearly two cases of beer the day of the fire.

POPULATION

Hereford would mean a need for 74 housing units in the community and would boost the school census by 35 and require two additional teachers to handle the load, according to the DOE report. It is estimated that the short term of various jobs will result in fewer families settling here.

The extra population increase would not pinch the water and sewer system, said City Manager Dudley Bayne. The estimated increase of about 2,400 gallons of water per day and the 16,000 gallon sewage increase would not cause major problems in Hereford, Bayne said, as it would in nearby Vega which is just at capacity in those areas.

Site characterization would cost approximately $270 million over a four year period, the report said. It was indicated that some materials would be purchased locally. Purchasing would be on a bidding basis.

The report said that local revenues would increase from sales and other taxes, but no direct dollar amount or percent increase was noted.

The impact which a real or perceived hazard would have on the agriculture market was not detailed in the report. Jeff Neff, DOE salt project manager, said the effect on goods in a county with a repository would not be major on a national market level but might have repercussions on a regional or local level. He said that since a large portion of Deaf Smith County's goods are exported, he doesn't expect much of a problem because major buyers are "not aware" of where products come from.

He said there are studies being made on the results of market impact in the areas of nuclear plant accidents and hazardous waste leaks.

Bayne asked Neff about problems in that area perhaps ten years later. Neff said that the DOE would be monitoring that marketing impact data yearly.

TAX

ment between the state of Texas and the Nuclear Waste Programs Office, a grant for $652,617 was awarded the state for the period of July 1, 1984 to June 30, 1985.

According to DOE, that money can be used by the state to monitor and comment on DOE plans, provide information to interested state officials and agencies, conduct research to evaluate the impacts of the DOE program, and coordinate interactions among state, federal and local units of government.

McClain and Program Manager Jeff Neff described two programs that will be made available to the state: the Payment In Lieu of Tax Program (PILOT) and the Grants Equivalent to Tax Provision (GETT).

PILOT payments, they explained, partially reimburse state and local governments for lost tax revenues. Most payments are based on a rate fixed at the beginning of a project or on a percentage of the property tax revenues that would have been received if the activity were for a privately owned facility.

Describing differences between the two programs, the DOE officials pointed out that PILOT payments are based on either the lost property taxes, project revenues or receipts, or a "formula" such as payment for community assistance or payment per government employee.

The GETT program, they said, appears to be tied very closely to the range of taxes that would be paid if the site characterization were an industrial activity. Thus, according to DOE, the base for the GETT payment may be broadened than PILOT.

Additionally, most PILOT payments that are based on the property tax are calculated on the basis of real property value in the condition the land was acquired. The provision for GETT indicates that the payment should be based on the developed value of the property during site characterization and repository development activities.

Fox questioned Neff as to whether compensatory payments could be made to the appraisal district if it is determined that the value of land adjacent to the nine-square mile site goes down because of the site characterization activities. Neff said that issue would have to be studied jointly by the appraisal district and DOE, adding that "I don't know if we could pay for that impact."

Neff added that if property values in the area do go down, "that's an important piece of information for us to have as rapidly as we can." He said an initial step in dealing with such problems is acquiring that type of data so that DOE can look at it and say, "Yes, there is an effect" due to site characterization.

Neff admitted that the DOE probably won't be able to satisfy the county as far as the land going down ranking Soviet official, Vladimir V. Shcherbitsky, a member of the policy-making Politburo.

It was "a lively give and take," White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said.

Shcherbitsky called it "interesting, frank and, I consider, useful, although our viewpoints do not coincide on all subjects."

By all accounts, the biggest differences were over Star Wars, or as the administration calls it, the Strategic Defense Initiative, which is now in the research stage.

Speakes said Reagan underscored that "none of the steps that we're taking are meant to be threatening."

The president argued that Star Wars did not violate the U.S.-Soviet Antiballistic Missile Treaty and said

"If the research program produces a defensive weapon, then we would sit down and discuss ways to deploy in a stabilizing manner," according to an account provided later by Speakes.

Reagan said Star Wars "could prove helpful in dealing with the madmen of the future" — referring to what Speakes said later was the possibility that a nuclear bomb might fall into the hands of terrorists someday.

Shcherbitsky, talking with reporters outside, said he told Reagan the MX missile was an expensive weapon that "is not needed." Referring to Reagan, the Soviet official said, "He has another opinion."

Bayne also asked about the need for extra emergency vehicles such as fire and ambulance service. Neff said the DOE recognized that and that one suggestion was to have the DOE purchase the equipment and keep it at the site.

The report included impacts the city would have if the repository were to be located in Deaf Smith County.

About half of the 1,500 workers needed during development peak would be from the nine-county area with about 300 indirect jobs created for local residents.

The construction costs over an eight-year period would be about $1.4 billion. Local purchases during construction are estimated at about $9.4 million a year, according to the report.

The in-migration for repository construction would mean a need for 250 housing units in the Hereford community. Nine additional teachers and one more policeman would be needed.

The impact which a real or perceived hazard would have on the agriculture market was not detailed in the report. Don't let anger rub off

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have read many letters in your column that have made me want to write, but none as much as the one I saw in the paper yesterday. It was the letter from the person whose parents were getting divorced. She vowed never to speak to her father again. May I give some advice from one who knows?

My parents were divorced before I was 10. (I am now in my mid-20s). My mother was granted custody of all the children. Less than a month after the divorce my father remarried. I was in his home only once in the 10 years that followed. My father tried to maintain a relationship with his children, but mother kept telling us, "He doesn't love you. He wouldn't be with that woman and her children if he loved you." (You are hearing the same thing from your mother now).

Please believe me, it is not true. Your father loves you. He may no longer be in love with your mother, but that doesn't mean his love for you has diminished.

After a 10-year separation I decided I wanted to see my father and get to know him. I found a warm-hearted, funny man, who was thrilled to have me in his life again. I also found a stepmother who is wonderful.

My father is dead now. We had just a few short years together. How I wish I could get those 10 years back—the years I wouldn't speak to him.

Please don't let your mother's anger rub off on you. Since Dad died, my mother has become so hostile and sharp-tongued that I find it impossible to have a relationship with her. She is furious that I enjoy my stepmother's company and considers my friendship with her a betrayal.

I hope for your mother's sake that she will get help. She needs it. Hate and vindictiveness are like cancers that rot away a person's very soul. Through therapy she may be able to overcome her animosity, which has proven so destructive.

I know this is a long letter and you can't print it all, but use what you can, Ann. There are so many children who are being brainwashed by a divorced parent. (Sometimes it's the father). A letter like this could do a world of good. Children who are caught in the middle need all the help they can get.—VICTIM TURNED VICTOR IN WHITE PLAINS

DEAR VICTOR: I was able to run your letter with very little cutting. You did a beautiful job expressing yourself and I thank you on behalf of all the children and young adults you helped today.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our 25-year-old daughter has been getting counseling from a lay analyst (no degree, just a certificate) and she thinks his word is law. Last night her boyfriend rang the doorbell at 3 a.m. She went out with him and returned at 6 a.m.

We had plenty to say to her at breakfast but she claims her urbane, pipe-smoking therapist has advised her to be available whenever her boyfriend calls. What do you think about this, Miss Landers?—DISGUSTED IN MARTIN'S FERRY

DEAR DISGUSTED: If your daughter is telling the truth, I think her urbane therapist has a little locoweed in his pipe.

Tofu is the dense white soybean cake that is found in the super market and oriental groceries. It remains a mysterious entity to many customers. It is neither curd nor cheese. It is a fresh product, made from curdled soy milk from a process that has remained unchanged for centuries. It is very high in calcium, phosphorus, iron and vitamins E and B. Williamson also discussed the process of sprouting and other nutritional food facts.

Local resources for nutrition information

COLLEGE STATION—"How can I cut down on salt?" "Is it really cheaper to buy the larger size eggs?" "Exactly how does cholesterol function in the body?" For answers to these and other food and nutrition questions, you don't have to look any further than your own community.

Many people doubt what they read or hear about nutrition—especially when it seems designed to sell health products, vitamins, foods or fad diet programs, says Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service nutritionist Dr. Alice Hunt.

Others have specific questions, such as how food interacts with a medication or whether a certain food is appropriate for a diabetic diet, that aren't answered by nutrition articles in popular magazines.

Whatever type of nutrition information consumers are seeking, it should be available from reliable community resources, she says. These local resources include:

-The County Extension Office. The Extension office will have free or low-cost publications, purchasing, storage, handling and home canning. The county Extension home economist can answer specific questions about food and nutrition. The office should be listed under county government in your phone book.

-Dietetic Associations. The American Dietetic Association operates a Dial-a-Dietitian service in many larger communities. It's staffed by volunteer certified nutritionists and dietitians to answer consumers' food related questions.

The American Dietetic Association and its local affiliates are observing National Nutrition Month during March. Check with your local Texas

Dietetic Association group for information on special activities.

-Local Health Department. This office may offer classes and health fairs on nutrition and other topics. It also handles food poisoning cases and monitors the sanitation of restaurants and food stores.

-Food Stamp Offices. These offices may have free nutrition and food cost publications in English and Spanish for food stamp recipients. They are designed to help low-income consumers in buying and preparing more nutritious, less expensive food.

-Local Libraries. The reference librarian can direct you to a number of books and other materials written by authoritative sources on nutrition and food.

The resources are available for consumers to have their nutrition questions answered quickly and easily by professionals in their own community, concludes Hunt.

A Feeling Of Oneness

Life was extremely rough on the early settlers' families. Grandma, grandpa, mom, dad, brothers and sisters all lived together in some very tight quarters.

There was little leisure time with each family member having to carry his or her full load of chores. Yet, family life was comfortable — and prosperous.

At our bank, we strive to generate that same Pioneering spirit of oneness. We want to make your banking experience with us as friendly and pleasant as possible.

When you bank with us, you'll know we've brought back that Pioneering spirit . . . the kind of dedication it takes to get the job done right.

Track meet tops slate

The city of Hereford will be buzzing this weekend with sports activities, and teams from Hereford High School are to be involved in the activities both here and away.

The Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce is to sponsor a girls invitational track meet at Whiteface Stadium Saturday. Thirty-two total teams in four divisions, two high school groups and two junior high categories, will be competing.

Teams from Hereford, Canyon, Clovis, Dalhart, Dumas, Lubbock, Muleshoe, Panhandle and Plainview are entered.

Field events begin at 9 a.m. with running preliminaries set for 9:15 a.m. Finals begins at 1:30 p.m.

The HHS baseball team also should keep Hereford citizens' sports slates full.

The Whitefaces were to host Levelland in a single game today at 4 p.m. at the HHS diamond. Saturday, Hereford hosts Canyon in a double-header beginning at 1 p.m.

Back to track. The Hereford boys are to run in Panhandle Saturday.

And golf. The HHS boys linksters have been playing in a tournament in San Angelo. First-round play was to be Thursday, with the final round scheduled for today.

The Whitefaces were to play in the Fort Worth Invitational tennis tournament today and Saturday, but scheduling complications forced Hereford to go elsewhere. Now, Hereford coach Ruben Vargas said, his team will play in the Midland Tournament.

Hereford's first matches were scheduled for today at 8:30 a.m.

Bay Hill Classic

Tourney leader content

By BOB GREEN AP Golf Writer

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — It was a delighted Morris Hatalsky who considered the 5-under-par 66 that staked him to the first round lead in the $500,000 Hertz Bay Hill Classic.

"No complaints. I'm as pleased as I can be," Hatalsky said Thursday after he had scored an eagle-2 on his way to a two-shot lead.

Hal Sutton also was pleased. He scored his second hole-in-one of the season.

But he definitely had a complaint. The ace, with a 3-iron on the 17th hole at the Bay Hill Club came three days too early.

The sponsors have offered a $1 million prize, $500,000 to the player and an equal amount to charity, for a hole-in-one on the 17th. But only if it comes in Sunday's final round.

Sutton, who finished with a 73, was not alone in considering what might have been.

Tom Watson, for example, was in position to challenge for the lead until he hit into the water and made a triple-bogey 7 on the 13th hole. He, too, finished with a 73.

"But I'm more excited about playing now than I was earlier in the year. I'm more excited because I'm hitting the ball better than I have all year," Watson said.

And then there was Buddy Gardner, who was 4-under-par, a single shot out of the lead, until he hit into the water on the 18th and made double bogey.

"I hate to finish like that, but it's one of those things," he said after his 2-under-par 69.

U.S. Open champ Fuzzy Zoeller, on the mend from major back surgery, agreed with Gardner. Fuzzy made bogey-5 on the hole.

"I can sleep on a 5," he said. "But a 6 or a 7 or an 8 would be a little hard to handle."

Mark McCumber, a winner two weeks ago in the Doral-Eastern Open, was two strokes back of the leader with a 68. Gardner was alone at 69 with Zoeller and five others at 70, the only others of the select, invitational field able to break par 71 in the gusty, blustery winds.

Tied with Zoeller were Nick Faldo of England, Nick Price of South Africa, Bob Lohr, Billy Glasson and Tim Simpson.

British Open champ Seve Ballesteros and Australian Greg Norman were in a large group at 71. Masters titleholder Ben Crenshaw took a 76. Host Arnold Palmer struggled to a 78.

As SWC opens tourney

Slow-down offense may return

By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — "Stall ball" is a nasty phrase that is striking fear in the hearts of Southwest Conference coaches going into the 10th annual Post-Season SWC Basketball Classic that starts today.

There will be no 45-second clock as there has been during the regular season.

"It will certainly make for a different approach," said Texas Christian Coach Jim Killingsworth. "We'll live in fear of what the other guy will do if he gets ahead."

Killingsworth said nobody had to worry about the Horned Frogs taking the air out of the ball.

"All the crowd has to do is starting yelling 'Boring' and our players put the ball up," Killingsworth said.

No. 4 seed Texas A&M and No. 5 seed Texas Christian were set to open the tournament quarterfinals at 12:08 p.m. today, followed by Texas Tech, the SWC regular season champion, and No. 8 Baylor at 2:08 p.m.

At 7:08 p.m., No. 2 seed Arkansas and No. 7 seed Texas meet, while third-seeded Southern Methodist plays sixth-seeded Houston at 9:08 p.m.

The winner of the tournament gets an automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament.

"This tournament could be anybody's," said Red Raider Coach Gerald Myers. "This is a brand new challenge for us. Any team can get hot and win it."

Tech's Red Raiders did not automatically win a berth into the NCAA Tournament with their first SWC title since 1973.

But "I think we will probably get an invitation from what I've heard even if we don't win the tournament," Myers said.

Texas will miss senior Carlton Cooper, who tore a ligament last week and will have skip the rest of his final season.

"You don't replace a guy like Cooper," Texas Coach Bob Weltlich said. "It will hurt, but we beat Southern California without him last Sunday."

Tech comes into the tournament with an eight-game victory streak after closing fast over the final two weeks of the season to beat out SMU, Arkansas and Texas A&M for the title.

"We're coming into the tournament with a good feeling," said Myers. "You build up your confidence when you win a lot of games in a row and it puts you in a good frame of mind."

"However, sometimes you play better in a nasty frame of mind and that's what we are worried about with some of the other teams."

Houston defeated Arkansas 57-56 last year to win the tournament and advanced all the way to the NCAA Final Four for the third consecutive year.

The SWC is hoping to land four teams in the NCAA playoffs.

"Our conference deserves four teams in the NCAA playoffs," said Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton.

SMU Coach Dave Bliss said he hopes his Mustangs will overcome their fast fade that saw them lose six of their final nine games.

"The highlight of my week so far has been going to the dentist," said Bliss. "I hope we shake out of our slump."

Handling player-manager duties

Pete Rose still gets in his time

By HAL BOCK AP Sports Writer
TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Pete Rose was in his office, preparing for what some people view as the toughest job in baseball, player-manager.

He will be 44 in five weeks, a senior citizen athlete. He is in the final countdown of his chase, 94 hits from Ty Cobb's record 4,191 base hits, and has set late August as the target time for tying Ty.

All of that would seem to be enough of a burden for most men, but Rose has another one as well. He is also managing the Cincinnati Reds, a team trying to recover some of its past glories, glories he once helped weave.

"I don't know if it's the toughest job," he said. "It's the most time-consuming, though. You have to stay around a lot longer."

Keeping Pete Rose around the ballpark, though, is like Uncle Remus tossing Br'er Rabbit in the Briar Patch — not exactly capital punishment.

The Reds' practice drills are designed to rotate groups of players through three fields so that they all eventually pass by the manager, who stays put, taking his work in one place.

"Whether it's me or Sparky (Anderson) or Davey Johnson, you can only be on one field at a time. I still get my grounders and my BP. Most managers get involved hitting fungos in batting practice. I'm just involved a little more."

All of this would seem a challenge if you viewed baseball as a job. Rose, however, maintains the boyish enthusiasm of a dead-end kid playing on a sandlot with an old split bat held together by tape. He plays for fun, so how tough can it be?

"The last three or four years, this team fell into a losing attitude because of the way it played," Rose said. "I'm trying to get the positive back from the negative. Then you start having fun. It's amazing what guys can do when they start having fun."

Rose has always been able to recite statistics the way some people give their telephone numbers. He is equipped with facts that show the Reds improved dramatically after he came over from Montreal last Aug. 16 to double as player and manager.

"I told them at the end of last season they had left a lot of positives, things we could build with," he said. "We finished fifth, but we weren't a fifth place team in September. The team batting average was .244 for the season, but it was .274 after I got here. The pitching improved, too. We knocked our runs allowed down from 4.5 to 3.9. That's pretty good improvement."

"I'm optimistic. We were within one game of the best record in the West in September. I don't care about what happened here last April, May, June, July and the first part of August."

Rose returned to the Reds with a typical flair, drilling an RBI-single in his first at-bat and then belly-whopping his way into third base with a head-first slide. "I told them I wouldn't ask them to do anything I wouldn't do myself," he said.

There are, however, obvious complications involved in the double job of playing and managing. Rose learned about them three games into his dual duty.

The Reds were playing Chicago on a sunny Saturday afternoon with Jeff Russell pitching for Cincinnati, Rose playing first base, and umpire Harry Wendelstedt about to supply a reminder about how often a manager can visit his pitcher.

Bob Dernier hit the game's first pitch for a single and Rose strolled over to Russell, a new teammate simply trying to remind the pitcher that he wasn't familiar with his pickoff move and to be careful if he decided to throw over.

He never thought of it as a visit by a manager to a pitcher in trouble. He has seen trouble and this wasn't it. Wendelstedt, however, had other ideas.

From behind him, Rose heard the umpire's voice with a little lesson for the new manager.

"That's one trip, Pete," he said.

Record now 1-1

Herd loses, 'officially'

Herford baseball coach Don Long said he thought the Whitefaces played well enough to win Thursday at Pampa, and he may have been right.

The Herd was leading the Harvesters 10-7 when the ball game was called in the sixth inning because of darkness. Officially, however, because the game was called because of darkness, the final score was determined by referring to the the score at the end of the previous full inning.

That was the fifth, and Pampa had the lead 7-5.

The Whitefaces now sport an official record of 1-1.

"I sure don't look at it as a loss," Long said. "It was one of those tough situations, though. We were pounding the ball in the sixth and looked like we could score a couple more runs."

When play was halted, Herford had three men on base with one out.

"We didn't get there until 4:30, and the game was supposed to start then," Long said. "We had just about five minutes to warm up before we started playing. We were kind of dead at first."

After being held scoreless the first three innings, the Whitefaces crossed the plate four times in the fourth, once in the fifth and five times in the shortened sixth.

Stefan Hacker and Doug Evans each scored a pair of runs for the Whitefaces, and Kurt Simon knocked in three. However, the Whiteface defense committed four errors, and pitcher Chad Stephan allowed four unearned runs.

"Even though he gave up those four unearned runs, Chad was throwing the ball really well," Long said. "He threw a fine game, throwing the curve ball probably 75 percent of the time."

Stephan struck out seven batters and gave up seven walks. He was the only pitcher Herford used Thursday.

The Whitefaces were to be in action again today when they were to host Levelland in a single game at the HHS diamond. Game time was set for 4 p.m.

JV baseball team victorious

Herford's junior varsity baseball team won its second consecutive game Thursday at the HHS diamond, an 11-2 trouncing of the Canyon Eagles.

The Whitefaces' Paul Maes led the attack as he scored three runs on one hit. Herford coach T.R. Sartor also commended Maes' defensive performance Thursday, citing Maes' had seven chances at outs with no errors.

After loading the bases with only one out, Herford scored three times in the first inning. The Whitefaces added one more run in each of the next four innings and got four in the sixth for their final total.

For the game, Herford, now 2-0 had only seven hits.

Canyon didn't get on the board until the fifth. The Eagles crossed the plate once then and once in the sixth inning.

Santos Reyes picked up the win for Herford. He went two innings giving up two runs, both of them earned. Donnie Rieves opened the game for Herford on the mound, pitching three innings allowing no runs.

Bobby Medina also pitched two for Herford with no runs given up.

After Canyon had scored a run in the fifth, Herford answered with a solo home run by Kyle Streun. It was Streun's only hit of the day.

Other Whitefaces, their hits and runs were Medina, one and two; Todd Shire, one and zero; Bobby Martinez, two and one; Rex Baxter zero and one; Reyes, zero and one; David Manchee, one and zero; and Rieves, one and zero.

Tech, Texas women in finals

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Tech coach Marsha Sharp will get a chance to see just how correct her recent assessment was when her 19th-ranked team meets No. 1-ranked Texas in the finals of the Southwest Conference women's basketball tournament.

Texas whipped Arkansas, 104-62, to raise its record to 26-2 overall and 19th-ranked Texas Tech moved to 22-6 overall with an 81-67 victory over Houston in the other semifinal game played here Thursday night.

The finals will be at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at SMU's Moody Coliseum.

Fran Harris scored 19 points for the Lady Longhorns in the easy victory over Arkansas. Texas never trailed in winning its 97th straight game against SWC opponents and held a commanding 51-23 halftime lead.

Lisa Logsdon and Tricia Clay scored 20 points each to lead Texas Tech to the come-from-behind 81-67 victory over Houston.

Houston held a slim 36-35 lead and increased the advantage to as much as seven points early in the second half, but Texas Tech took the lead for good after Sharon Cain scored.

Bob Dernier hit the game's first pitch for a single and Rose strolled over to Russell, a new teammate simply trying to remind the pitcher that he wasn't familiar with his pickoff move and to be careful if he decided to throw over.

He never thought of it as a visit by a manager to a pitcher in trouble. He has seen trouble and this wasn't it. Wendelstedt, however, had other ideas.

From behind him, Rose heard the umpire's voice with a little lesson for the new manager.

"That's one trip, Pete," he said.

Food individuality reaches 'Main St.'

LOS ANGELES -- John H. Hamstra saw it happen here.

"Given choices, more Americans are choosing vegetable and seafood pates from California or New York, elk meat chunks from Montana, salami from Hungary and pepper sauces from Barbados.

Hamstra admits—not too happily—that America's image as "hamburger heaven" still persists. But it is changing, he smiles.

Stores that once had most of us eating the same mass produced foods, are discovering America's growing culinary individuality, says Hamstra. He recently presided over the record-breaking 10th Winter International Fancy Food & Confection Show at the Los Angeles Convention Center.

"Access is everything," says Hamstra, president of the National Association for the Specialty Food Trade, sponsors of the show.

"We've found a way for the specialty food producers of Vermont and Georgia and New York to sell in California and for western producers to reach new markets in the east," he says.

"At the rate the industry is growing, the U.S.A. could become the biggest producer of specialty foods in the world," Hamstra predicts. "And with exporters from 50 nations using our unique marketplace to reach the American consumer, food varieties will be greater than ever before," he adds.

The show attracted some 15,000 buyers and industry members from all parts of the country, show management says. And it is significant that the exhibition at about 94,000 square feet, was 45 percent larger than last year's show in San Francisco, says Hamstra, a third generation importer of food as president of H. Hamstra & Company.

"In the early days of our industry," he says, only a handful of stores in the major cities sold specialty foods, mostly imports," Hamstra recalls. Now there are tens of thousands of stores and mail order firms ready to serve the consumer, he says.

"The grass roots growth in number of outlets, number of producers, plus the growth of the show and the NASFT offer the best economic barometer of what is happening to the culinary individuality of American consumers," Hamstra says.

The next show—the 31st Annual International Fancy Food & Confection Show—will be held July 14-17 at the Georgia World Congress in Atlanta, Ga.

VA hospital topic of lecture

The Hereford unit of the American Legion Auxiliary met in the Legion hall Tuesday evening. Beverly Jesko introduced Mr. Charles Emery, director of volunteers, who talked with both Legion and Auxiliary.

He chose as his topic "The state of the V.A. Hospital." Emery told of the changes being made in the hospital at this time. The Volunteer room as well as his office has been moved. New telephone systems installed and a complete computer system installed. He also announced the architectural plans to the new addition to the medical center have been approved and the building is scheduled to begin later this year.

The T.V. project which was started two years ago needs 5 T.V.s to be completed with a New T.V. in each room.

The volunteer recognition will be held April 23 in the psychiatric pavillion. A dinner will be served to the volunteers and guests. The hospital will sponsor a recognition party for former prisoners of war April 9 from 1:30-3:30.

The Hereford unit will sponsor a recreation party in the hospital Monday at 7 p.m.

Americanism chairman, Carol Lohr read the meaning of the Auxiliary Emblem. Poppies will be distributed to the public May 22. The state Service officers school will meet in Hereford April 9-10. The Legion and Auxiliary will host a dinner for those attending April 9 in the Legion Hall.

Ruth King, assisted by her husband, Jake, served refreshments to the legion and auxiliary members in attendance.

Yogurt cheese has many uses

DEAR POLLY — I've heard that you can make cheese out of yogurt. Do you know how? — SHERYL

DEAR SHERYL — Yogurt cheese is easy to make. It's delicious and low in calories, too!

Simply place yogurt in a fine sieve or colander lined with a triple layer of cheesecloth or a clean, thin cotton cloth (such as a cotton handkerchief). Set the colander or sieve over a shallow pan or in a larger bowl and put it in the refrigerator. Let the yogurt drain for three to four hours. Liquid will drain off, leaving thick yogurt "cheese" behind. One quart of yogurt will give you two to two-and-one-half cups of yogurt cheese. The whey that drains off can be used in yeast doughs instead of water.

This cheese can be used like cottage cheese or cream cheese. It's excellent for making cream cheese dips and spreads without the calories of rich cream cheese.

Variety of caskets made

Burial more than an old pine box

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — A casket doesn't have to be "just an old pine box."

Today's coffins run the gamut from a simple cloth-covered wood to solid bronze. Abilene Casket Company here has been in the business of making customized burial caskets since 1927.

"In fact, I have one identical to the one President (John F.) Kennedy was buried in," says Belon Sedberry, co-owner of the company with Bill Megginson. The two men, both long-time salesmen for the company, bought the operation in January 1984 when Texas Coffin Company in Waco made a stock trade.

"We sell strictly to funeral homes, but we welcome the public to come by and look at the caskets," Sedberry explains.

The company keeps 1,200 to 1,400 coffin shells in stock at their 11th Street facilities. Workers at the company hand-make the delicate tucked, pleated, tufted, shirred or tailored linings to order.

Sedberry takes special pride in the custom work they do. It's the little things that make a difference: "We're the only manufacturer in the United States to put velvet trim or binding on the throw that goes on top of the casket."

"We're known for our fine hand-tailored interiors. Most places do it by machines, but all of ours are done by hand," he adds. "We want to stay in the custom-made business as long as possible. It may come a time when we'll get squeezed out and have to go to the assembly-line standard casket."

Such details take time — Sedberry estimates it takes about four hours to complete a velvet-tufted interior.

The casket shells are made in another part of the country, but Abilene Casket Company adds the finishing customized touches, including the linings and the handles. They also carry special caskets, such as oversized for the larger or taller person — "We made one recently for a person weighing over 600 pounds" — or Orthodox Jewish caskets, which must have no metal in them. Wooden dowels are used to hold the Orthodox Jewish coffins together, including the wooden handles.

"We're the only custom casket company in the Southwest. We're also the only people in this part of the country to make oversized caskets — the standard casket is 6 feet, 6 inches," proudly states Sedberry, who worked as a salesman with the company for 15 years.

They also make several models of baby caskets, from newborn through all ages, in both wood and metal.

"A lot of times the small funeral homes can't keep baby caskets in stock, and they send the families here to select one," he explains. "It does get to you, and they (families) get pretty emotional."

Sedberry feels his work is providing a special service, but he remembers some people more than others. "Yes, it does bother me at times," he says, recalling one instance when a man came in after his 16-year-old son was killed by a drunk driver. "He was from out of town, and he wanted to know if we had a purple casket. Purple was his son's favorite color."

"The nearest we had to purple was an orchid casket, so he buried his son in an orchid casket," Sedberry recalls.

Vaults also are carried by the company. The "Cadillac model" of vaults has a metal base that goes in the bottom of the grave with the dome placed over the casket and locking automatically in place for airtight protection.

Regular galvanized steel vaults come in three gauges — the lower the gauge, the thicker the metal. But there also are stainless steel and copper vaults. "That's getting up there in price, but they'll never deteriorate," he says of the copper ones, which come in two gauges.

"There's no state law that says you have to put a casket in an outside container (vault), but certain cemeteries have rules," Sedberry says. Some country cemeteries require the casket at least be in a box "Perpetual care" cemeteries, for example, also require "an outside container that won't deteriorate, because when they do, the ground has a tendency to sink."

Sedberry, an Abilene native, worked for a time at West Texas Utilities before joining the casket company. His wife still works for WTU, and his son is in the computer business, living near Fort Worth.

Megginson worked as a funeral director before switching to the casket company. One of his sons graduated from mortician school and worked in the funeral service business for two years before changing to banking. Another son is in the Navy and a daughter works at West Texas Utilities.

While Sedberry says he doesn't get much kidding about his occupation, he has heard all the old jokes. And around Halloween, he says, "We get flooded with calls by people wanting to use a casket. We used to loan some out, but didn't get cooperation from people, who would lose or damage them, so we don't do that any more."

He pauses, adding, "Really, I've always been against that sort of thing (using caskets for Halloween). I think people should find a better way of entertaining themselves. Course, maybe it's because I'm around caskets all day."

Megginson, too, feels the jokes and stereotypes of people in the funeral service business have changed, along with the profession. "Used to be everybody teased you, but I think it (the business) is more professional than it's ever been."

Man's work in industrial design to be on display

PITTSBURG, Texas (AP) — Fifty years ago, Malcolm Park had dreams of being an artist. He took classes in watercolor painting and studied with noted artists in France.

When he came back to the United States, he found that even if he had the talent to make a living as an artist, he didn't have the connections to sell the paintings.

Park turned his creative talents to industrial design. He traded in his paintbrush for sewing machines, power tools and vacuum cleaners. He may have sacrificed some artistic dreams, but his creative talents have led him to the Smithsonian Institution.

Last month, he was informed that his industrial designs for Singer Manufacturing Co. will be part of a Singer display in the Smithsonian Institution. Part of the display will focus on Park's pioneer work in changing an ugly, bulky sewing machine to a leaner, more attractive model.

Park said he was surprised when the letter from Singer arrived.

Singer officials lauded Park's achievements in a letter announcing the plans for the display: "It is recognized that over a span of 25 years, your 24 plus appearance patents document the early industrial design evolution of the sewing machine. On behalf of The Singer Company, we are pleased to inform you that the Singer history you have created will be preserved in The Singer Industrial Design Archive Collection at The Smithsonian Institution: Natural Museum of American History."

Singer officials came to Park's Pittsburgh home to pick up an album filled with Park's work for Singer.

"I got cleaned out when they were here two weeks ago," Park said. "They took a big album with leather covers that had photos, drawings, renderings. It had patents of everything from sewing machines to vacuum cleaners, electric fans, power tools."

Park, 79, who retired in 1965, compiled the album over many years.

"They're going to reproduce it for me exactly, every sketch and rendering," he said. "In a personal way, I'm sorry to see it go but really proud to have that little niche in the Smithsonian."

The Parks are planning to go to Washington D.C. for a show in July or August that will feature the Singer displays.
