Soviets okay moratorium

MOSCOW (AP) - The Soviet Union said Wednesday it is ready to agree to a moratorium on nuclear weapons testing, to coincide with the 40th anniversary of the atomic bomb attack on Hiroshima on Aug. 6.

But in reporting the Soviet statement, the official news agency Tass did not say the Soviets were ready to declare a unilateral moratorium. That left it unclear whether they would initiate a ban on Aug. 6 if other nuclear powers did not go along.

Tass said the Soviet moratorium statement was relayed in response to an American group called the Center for Defense Information, which had suggested such a ban to the presidium of the Supreme Soviet, the country's parliament.

On nuclear weapons testing

The center is headed by Gene R. Larocque and Eugene J. Carroll.

In Washington, the State Departent issued a statement saying it had not received any formal proposal from the Soviets, and adding: "If the Soviets are serious, we would expect them to offer some additional substance. We will examine any formal proposal carefully."

The department said it was concerned "about the desirability of an uninspected testing moratorium and the verifiability of restraints on nuclear tests, unless there are substantially improved verification

The statement added that "it was the Soviets who first resumed testing after such a declared moratorium in 1961 with the largest series of high yield nuclear explosions in history.'

The Soviet Union has repeatedly urged that all nuclear powers declare a nuclear test ban. On Feb. 26, the Communist Party daily Pravda called for the ban, saying this would be a gesture of good will for the arms control negotiations that began in Geneva March 12.

The United States and the Soviet Union signed two partial test ban treaties in 1974 and 1976. Neither has been ratified by either country, although both nations have said they are adhering to them.

Disputes about verification and the relationship of a complete ban to other arms control questions have blocked agreement on stopping all

The two countries agreed with Britain in 1963 to halt tests in the atmosphere, in space and under water.

Tass said the Center for Defense Information, in an address to the presidium, called for a moratorium on all nuclear arms tests beginning Aug. 6.

It said the Soviet Embassy in Washington was instructed to give a reply that reiterated the Soviet desire for a nuclear test ban.

"To provide auspicious conditions for drafting an appropriate treaty, the U.S.S.R. suggested such a practicable measure as a moratorium by all the nuclear powers on all nuclear explosions beginning with an agreedupon date," Tass said.

'The Soviet Union agrees that the moratorium goes into effect on Aug. 6, 1985, the 40th anniversary of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima, as the authors suggest.

"If the other nuclear powers display positive attitudes, such a moratorium could be declared even earlier and remain in effect till the conclusion of a treaty on the complete and universal prohibition of nuclear weapons tests.

Such a ban "could constitute a very substantial step towards folding up the nuclear arms race," Tass

Parents of fourth grade students at Shirley Elementary School are invited to the school tonight to review the curriculum for a six-week pilot course on social, emotional and physical develoment to be taught beginning April 22.

School librarian Rosemary Shook will have the course material, which includes film strips, available at the media center beginning at 7 p.m.

The classes will be taught by regular classroom teachers and professionals in the community including Dr. Howard Johnson, registered nurses Carolyn Andrews and June Rudd, sheriff's deputy Sharon Pennington and police officer David Wagner.

Three primary categories are to be presented: communicating with parents and others about personal feelings; undertanding body changes that accompany puberty and understanding what constitutes child abuse and what children can do if

Reagan appears willing to look at alternative aid plan

WASHINGTON (AP) - Facing stiff opposition to resuming military aid to Nicaraguan rebels, President Reagan appears willing to look at alternatives to his plan for $14 million in new aid, House Democrats

As congressional head-counters gave Reagan's plan little hope for House approval, even some longtime supporters of "Contra" aid began publicly calling Wednesday for an approach that would withhold military assistance from the rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia, a moderate Democrat who has backed Contra aid in the past, proposed a pressure on the Sandinistas while putting "military action on the back

"The perception is - right or wrong - that the military option through the Contras has been on the front burner and is the president's course of first resort," Nunn said in a speech to the Coalition for a Democratic Majority, a group of moderate Democrats.

Nunn proposed giving the Contras non-lethal supplies, such as food and medicine, demanding the Sandinistas accept a dialogue with their opponents, and enlisting U.S. allies in an economic embargo on Nicaragua to keep pressure on the

A PRAYER:

Perhaps you will remember, Lord, that back when I was a youngster, when I got on my knees beside the bed and shut my eyes and transmitted to You my evening prayer, I would get very upset because You never gave me any kind of signal to confirm that You were hearing my prayer.

I guess in those days, Lord, I must have felt that praying was something like sending messages out on the CB radio, and I wanted to hear You say, "Roger Wilco," or "10-4, Good Buddy," or something like that, so I'd know You were hearing me. I would have liked some indication that I could expect the next day what I was asking for that night.

Well, Lord, I'm glad to say that I've outgrown that.

Nowadays, in the first place, I don't find myself asking You so much as thanking you. I don't wake up today watching for the arrival of what I asked You for last night; instead, I look forward to the time when I can thank You for whatever good and beauty I know I'll find in this new day.

In the second place, Lord, I don't need feedback to tell me You're listening. I understand now that the impulse that makes me want to transmit to You is the certainty that You're always tuned in!

Over and out, Lord. Or as they sometimes, say, Amen.

Nunn's proposal reflects a growing sense among past supporters of Contra aid that a new approach may be needed to avert Reagan's first major congressional defeat in his second term. The House votes on Contra aid next Tuesday or Wednesday.

Other moderate Democrats who met with Reagan on Wednesday also noted that the president seemed willing to compromise. "He said there is room for negotiation," said Rep. J. Roy Rowland, D-Ga.

But Democratic House members said the president discussed no details of any possible compromise and indicated no intention to reduce the amount of the $14 million in Contra aid, which would start as nonlethal help but could be made military assistance if proposed

Governor signs drug law

AUSTIN (AP) - Gov. Mark White signed into law Wednesday an extension of a state law requiring that the Department of Public Safety get a copy of every prescription written for dangerous drugs.

The law, effective Aug. 26, re-enacts a 1981 law that requires the use of special triplicate prescription blanks. One copy is kept by the doctor, one by the pharmacy and the third goes to the DPS, which keeps a file on purchasers of drugs such as Quaaludes and am-

In committee hearings, legislators were told that the first year of the law, originally passed to last only two years, resulted in a 48 percent decrease in prescriptions for drugs and an additional 13 percent decrease the second year.

Other bills finally approved by the Legislature and signed Wednesday by White included:

A bill regulating health spa services and providing criminal and civil penalties for violators.

A bill providing regulation and penalties for those who sell apartments and condominiums on a timeshare basis - where a buyer supposedly pays only for the actual time spent in the structure for a specific period each year.

- A bill to allow joint airports to make agreements with local governments for law enforcement protection.

Tuition bill cleared for debate

The Senate Finance Committee approved the Senate version, 8-1, Wednesday after a "face-to-face" talk between Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, chairman of the powerful committee, and Rep. Wilhelmenia Delco, D-Austin, author of the House-approved tuition increase bill and chairman of the House Higher Education Commit-

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, said he voted against the measure, which has been touted as a compromise between House and Senate thinking, because it would obligate future lawmakers and it hit medical school students the hardest.

"I got as much as I could on compromises," Mrs. Delco told reporters earlier. "If they don't change the (compromise Senate) bill, I will support it."

The House bill would raise tuition an estimated $235 million to $273 million.

Under the compromise plan, tuition rates for Texas resident undergraduates would jump from $4 to $12 per semester hour this fall and $16 next year. Out-of-state students would pay $120 per semester hour instead of the current $40.

Tuition for non-resident medical students would go from $2,400 a year in 1986 to $15,800 in 1987. Beyond 1988 tuition rates would be 40 percent of the cost of their education.

here in West Texas, an old editor showed that people really couldn't handle the plain, unvarnished truth. Unedited, unexpurgated, unvarnished facts are simply hard to swallow.

This particular editor got fed up with the bellyachin' he had received for the occasional errors in his paper. So he resolved to tell the truth and nothing but the truth. This is how he announced his new policy:

"A lot of people in this town brand the editor a liar when the ordinary human mistakes of life show up in his newspaper. You have a little charity for every man in town but your editor. You claim to want the facts, and I'm gonna give 'em to you.

"Read the next issue of this paper and you'll see some facts with the bark off. I'll admit that I have been an editorial liar ever since I have been editing this sheet, but I have never printed a lie in these columns except to save somebody's feeling from being hurt."

"I'm not afraid of any of you, and I'll be dad-blamed if I won't print the plain truth from now on." True to his word, when the next issue came out, he didn't pull any punches. Here are some excerpts from that particular edition, as reported by Bob Karolevitz in Publisher's Auxiliary:

"John Coyle, our groceryman, who voted with the Republicans in 1896 and consumes more mail-order whisky than any other member of the Baptist Church in this county, is doing a poor business. His store is dirty and dusty. It is a wonder he has any business at all."

"The Reverend Sty preached last Sunday night at the Christian church. He also recited a few passages from one of William Elbert Munsey's sermons and had the gall to palm it off as his

He gave it out that Dave died of the heart failure. That is a lie! Dave died from drinking too much of a very poor grade of mail-order licker. This paper prints the truth.'

"Tom Spadlin married Miss Cordie Meador last trades' day at the county seat. It ain't generally known, but the marriage was brought about mainly by a Remington shotgun manipulated by the bride's father. Tom concluded that marrying was the healthiest thing he could do until other arrangements could be made."

"Roger Lloyd, cashier of the State bank at Willow Grove died Wednesday evening and was buried Friday by the Odd Fellows in Pleasant Mount cemetery. Adventists live longer

Somewhere in the world are people exposed to an environment similar to ours, yet they are living 6.2 years longer. And their secret is no longer

These "special people" have less large bowel cancer, less colon cancer, less heart disease, less bladder cancer, less prostate cancer, less lung cancer.

These people who have somehow managed to improve both the quality and quantity of their lives are our own nation's Seventh Day Adven-

Their religion since its beginnings has emphasized self-discipline.

Complicating statistical studies are these variables: Only about half of Adventists are vegetarians and the vegetarians are divided into three categories.

Despite inconsistencies among Adventists, the evidence I have examined affirms that their live expectancy exceeds the average by 6.2

One study narrowed to the consumption of coffee only and covering a period of 20 years revealed an increased incidence of fatal colon and bladder cancer among individuals who consume two or more cups of coffee per day.

Vegetarian Adventists, generally,

It may be argued that Adventists behave themselves otherwise. That their religion tends to reduce debilitating emotional stress as well.

The risk of death due to ischemic heart disease among Adventists, male and female, is half what it is for the general population.

In essence-and at the risk of oversimplifying-the diet proved best for Adventists is "less fat, more fiber."

How, in an era of fast-food restaurants, does one manage a "low-fat" diet? Adventists have been known to order a cheeseburger "and hold the burger." Some restaurants accommodate vegetarians with "stuffed baked potatoes" and a salad bar. America's 631,000 Adventists have now supplied us with nearly as much evidence about "diet" as we had about cigarettes when your government first sounded that alert. Yet most of us, including some Adventists, know better than we do.

Understandably - and statistically - life long Adventists have a head start toward longer life. But parallel studies reveal proportionate health benefits to the "late starters."

So we can live longer starting now - if we want to.

Columnist admits to donut addiction

As much as it pains me to do this the time has come that I must admit publicly I am a junkie-a donut

It all started innocently enough. I was at a party and the hostess brought out some donuts she had purchased at one of those all-night donut places.

While the others at the party stuffed their faces with the donuts, I resisted.

"Aw, go ahead," my friends chided me. "One little donut isn't going to get you hooked."

The pressure was enormous. Finally, I gave in and had myself a donut. It was a remarkable fresh donut. it had chocolate frosting on the side. The taste of it caused my pulse to quicken and my eyes to roll back in my

"Ha!" my more experienced friends laughed at me. "One donut and he's already high."

The rest of the story is a pathetic one. Sure, just like everybody else who gets hooked on donuts. I thought I could remain a recreational user myself. I would limit my donut use to weekend and holidays, I thought, and I would never allow donuts to hinder me in my work.

I was stupid. At parties, one donut suddenly was not enough. I would gorge myself on them. I would beg my friends to give me their donuts. If they refused I used trickery.

"Look out the window!" I would shout. "It's Halley's comet!"

When they looked away, I would steal their donuts from their plates and hide in the closet and eat them. My friends soon began to avoid me and to talk about me behind my back. "He's simply pitiful," they would say. "I saw him at work the other day coming out of the men's room and he had something white all over his mouth and mustache."

"You don't mean at work, he..."

"That's exactly what I mean. He was actually in the men's room eating a powdered donut."

My addiction to donuts now has grown to be a $20-a-week habit. I can't pass a donut shop without stopping for a couple of honey-glazed and chocolatecovereds.

Whenever I see a donut commercial on television, my hands begin to shake and I jump into my car and drive over to see my connection at Dunkin' Donuts, Raoul, who works the night shift.

I have sought help. My psychiatrist gave me one of those word-association tests.

"Just say the first thing that comes into your mind," he explained.

"Edwin Meese," he began. "Jelly-filled donut."

"California."

"Nut-covered donuts."

"Dolly Parton."

"A fresh eclair." "You're a sick man," said my doctor.

I'm thinking of having my jaw wired shut next. One good thing about being addicted to donuts: They're too big to stick up your nose.

Texas may reap water technology, Hightower says

AUSTIN (AP) - Texas farmers could be learning a lot about irrigation of arid lands from their Israeli counterparts under a new agreement between that nation and the state, Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower says.

Israel and parts of Texas have similar climates and similar water shortage problems, said Hightower, who visited that country last year.

UTA study ranks Texas cities on quality of life

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - A university study ranks Austin as the best place to live in Texas, but lastplace Brownsville still has aesthetic assets like "beautiful sunsets," a researcher says.

The survey on the quality of life in the state's 52 largest cities by the University of Texas at Arlington ranks Austin first, then San Antonio, Dallas, Midland and Houston.

On the bottom of the list are Tyler, Texas City, Paris, Killeen and Brownsville.

The authors of the study said it takes into account only things that can be measured, rating the cities on eight major "quality of life" elements - transportation, culture and recreation, public safety, housing, politics, education, economic opportunities, and health and the environment.

Researched by UTA's Institute of Urban Studies, the survey used data from the 1970 and the 1980 U.S. Census and dozens of reports from agencies and private organizations, said authors Richard Cole, the institute dean, and professors Delbert Taebel and Ann Smith.

THE ICE JACKET

For an important occasion, nothing quite makes as dramatic a presentation as serving vodka from a bottle encased in an ice jacket. It also keeps the contents frigidly refreshing. Here is how to do it. Pour approximately half an inch of water into an empty half-gallon milk container or 46 ounce juice can. Allow the water to freeze. Center the vodka bottle on the frozen base and add water to just below the shoulder of the bottle. Again, allow the water to freeze. To release the jacket, dip the container quickly in hot water and slide it off. Place the bottle on a tray to catch the drippings. When pouring, wrap the bottle in a napkin to keep your fingers from freezing.

"Obviously, quality of life is subjective, but there are some elements that can be measured, and that's what we tried to do," Cole said. "Other people may have different views.'

Steve Bosio, executive vice president of the Brownsville Chamber of Commerce, said he is a "little upset" about his city's being ranked as the state's worst city to live in.

"I'm not sure of the criteria they used to rank us, but I think you need to take into account our location, the beach, the (Mexican) border - our different way of life," Bosio said.

Senior university official kidnapped

BEIRUT, Lebanon (ap) - George Sayegh, a Lebanese who is the American University of Beirut's acting vice president for adminstration, was kidnapped from his home in mostly Moslem west Beirut overnight, the university said today.

The university said in a statement that a group of gunmen broke into Sayegh's apartment in the seaside Chouran neighborhood shortly after midnight and took him away. It did not say how many gunmen were involved.

Several hours after the attack, university officials said they had not heard from the abductors, and had no idea about the motive.

Chouran is one of several Beirut neighborhoods in which rival Moslem militias have been battling for the past two days. On Wednesday the neighborhood was in the hands of the Shiite Moslem Amal militia and its Druse allies.

The university appealed to the kidnappers to release Sayegh, stressing that he has a history of heart trouble and "continuously needs to take his medication."

Sayegh is a Greek Orthodox Christian who was born in Lebanon's northern port of Tripoli and grew up in Beirut.

University personnel have been frequent targets in Lebanon's 10-year-old civil war. Last year, gunmen shot and killed the university president, Malcolm Kerr, outside his office. Kerr's predecessor David Dodge, was kidnapped and held for more than a year before he was

Oilers in dispute over rights to Kosar

HOUSTON (AP) - Howard Slusher, representing the Houston Oilers in a dispute over draft rights to University of Miami quarterback Bernie Kosar, said he believes the Oilers will win if National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle gives the matter a fair hearing.

"I don't see any rational way that Mr. Rozelle can make a decision that would give Kosar the right to escape the April 30 draft," said Slusher, who normally is a player agent but in a strange twist has been hired by the Oilers.

"I'm always optimistic that a hearing will always be fair and on its merits. If it is on the merits, there's no way the Hoston Oilers can lose. It doesn't even warrant a hearing," Slusher said.

The dispute Rozelle must arbitrate centers on whether Kosar should go in the regular collegiate draft or in the supplemental draft. Kosar has said he would give up his two remaining years of college eligibility and graduate early, but he has not submitted a formal letter to the NFL indicating his intent to become eligible for the draft.

That could create a supplemental draft for Kosar and give the Cleveland Browns the inside track.

The commissioner has said he

Negotiations stalled in baseball talks

NEW YORK (AP) - Contract negotiations between baseball's club owners and and the Major League Players Association were stalled today as the two sides began an examination of the union's request for detailed financial figures.

The players asked for what management called "comprehensive and voluminous" information, including a club-by-club breakdown, and Donald Fehr, the union's acting executive director, said there would be no further talks until the material is analyzed.

"We have been bargaining for 51/2 months and functionally, nothing has happened," Fehr said. "There is no point, against their unwillingness to discuss the issues, to our continuing to meet on an ongoing basis. If they would change their position and talk about the issues, we'd continue. But they have said quite emphatically that they can't discuss the issues until the financial stuff is through."

Lee MacPhail, president of the Player Relations Committee and management's chief negotiator, said, "We are anxious to cooperate by giving the information as promptly as possible so we can direct our attention to important issues involved in reaching a new basic agreement."

He added, however, that the owners wouldn't necessarily give the players everything they had asked for because "there may be some information we feel isn't appropriate."

He also said he thought it might be possible to continue talks while the union studies the data

Fehr estimated that a study of the information should take a month to six weeks, after which he said he could ask for a strike authorization.

The club owners, for the first time in the history of negotiations, have said that baseball is having severe economic problems and asked for the union's help. That opened the way for the players' representatives to get an unprecedented look at figures provided by management.

At Wednesday's bargaining session, the union for the first time asked for the individual clubs' financial statements as well as other material including details of club ownership, licensing agreements, radio and television contracts, concessions and parking agreements, stadium leases and minor league financial opera-

"We welcome their request for additional information and view it as an indication they are giving serious consideration to the problems we have discussed," MacPhail said.

Cardinals' left-hander John Tudor, 0-1, nearly matched Hesketh's performance. After allowing a runscoring single to Hubie Brooks in the first inning, Tudor managed to escape a two-on, none-out jam in the fifth before the Expos broke through to snap the 1-1 tie.

Duncan led off the 11th with a single and was sacrificed to second by Bill Russell. After Ken Landreaux struck out, Pedro Guerrero was walked intentionally. Marshall, who had fanned in his previous three atbats, then singled to score Duncan with the only run of the game.

Orel Hershiser, 1-0, who retired the nine batters he faced in relief, earned the victory. Frank DiPino, 0-1, the fourth Houston pitcher, took the loss.

Malone scores 26 points, leads 76ers past Bullets 104-97

By RALPH BERNSTEIN AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Moses not only shoots and rebounds, but he talks. Honest.

Moses Malone, whose loudest postgame remark this season has been a grunt, was in good voice after leading the Philadelphia 76ers to victory over the Washington Bullets last night.

series against the Los Angeles Lakers. They were defeated three times at home last season by New Jersey en route to first-round

Five of the NBA's eight first-round series open tonight, with last year's championship opponents expected to breeze into the second round.

The Boston Celtics, attempting to become the first team since the 1968-69 Celtics to successfully defend an NBA title, open at home against Cleveland.

Boston posted the best regularseason record at 63-19, while Cleveland, 36-46 during the season, enters the 16-team playoffs with the worst record.

Meanwhile, on the West Coast, the Phoenix Suns provide the opposition as the Los Angeles Lakers look for a berth in the championship finals for the fourth straight year.

Lakers Coach Pat Riley, a player with LA's 1972 champions, an assistant coach with the 1980 champs and head coach of the 1983 winners, has a good feeling heading into the best-offive clash with the Suns.

"I think we're focused now," he said. "I think the team is older now, and we've benefited from what happened in the past."

What happened in the past two seasons were final-round losses to Philadelphia and Boston, respectively, in the championship series.

Other series which open tonight have New Jersey at Detroit, San Antonio at Denver and Portland at Dallas. On Friday, Chicago calls on Milwaukee and Utah is at Houston.

En conformidad con las disposiciones de la Comisión de Servicios Públicos de Texas, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company anuncia mediante el presente aviso su intención de establecer un nuevo arancel de tarifas telefónicas en Texas, con vigencia a partir del 6 de mayo de 1985, salvo disposición en contrario de la Comisión. La Comisión de Servicios Públicos de Texas a registrado esta solicitud bajo el Docket 6200.

Si bien existe variación entre las propuestas en cuanto a las tarifas precisas, se anticipa que el arancel tarifario solicitado aumentará en un 10.5% los ingresos intraestatales no ajustados de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company durante el año de prueba, o sea, un aumento del 9.7 por ciento en los ingresos del año de prueba, después de realizar el ajuste por la expanción de los usuarios y por la anualización del aumento de tarifas para el año de prueba. El objeto de esta solicitud de tarifas es lograr un aumento anual en los ingresos de $323.9 milliones. Los cambios propuestos afectarán a todos los usuarios y grupos de usuarios de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company en el estado

La mayoria de las tarifas que resultarian afectadas por el propuesto aumento aumentarian aproximadamente en un 18.5 por ciento, incluyendo las tarifas de centrales locales. Sin embargo, existen algunas excepciones. Por ejemplo, los usuarios que residen en ciudades que se reclasificarán para formar parte de grupos tarifarios mayores experimentarán aumentos mas elevados del 18.5 por ciento. San Antonio police investigate tattoos

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) -Police Chief Charles Rodriguez says he questions the symbolism and the appropriateness of lightning bolt tattoos worn by a dozen members of the police force SWAT team.

Rodriguez, in a statement Wednesday, said his department is investigating the tattoos, which carry the inscription "Total Hit."

"The department feels there is a question of symbolism and that there a lack of appropriateness," Rodriguez said in the statement. We are continuing our inquiry into the issues involved," he said.

Rodriguez said the tattoos came to his attention through reports from other officers.

The San Antonio Express-Ne quoted unnamed sources as saying hose wearing the tattoo, which some claim resembles the Nazi SS division insignia of World War II, would be transferred out of the SWAT division. Police spokeswoman Delte Dascomb said she knew nothing about the alleged transfers.

Rodriguez said in his statement that 12 of the 20 Strategic Weapons and Tactics team have tattoos "which appear to be lightning bolts or modified SS with the term 'Total Hit' between the bolts."

Ms. Dascomb said the SWAT team members are wearing the tattoos on different parts of the body.

The Express-News reported the SWAT team would continue in full force until the upcoming Fiesta celebration is over.

Interviews with more than a dozen officers, military academy instructors and Vietnam veterans still produce frequent references to the social and political handicaps under which they felt Americans fought in Vietnam - restrictions on targets and tactics, bungling by civilian leaders and an intrusive press that undermined public support.

"Our armed forces see themselves as having been taken for 10 years down a one-way street leading to a dead end by a civilian leadership that never understood the fundamentals of military strategy," said Professor Alvin H. Bernstein, the chairman of the Strategy Department at the Naval War College in Newport,

But top officers now also seem to acknowledge that the military was not blameless. And they believe the U.S. fighting machine is better off today; that hard lessons have, in fact, been learned.

"If we had to do the things militarily today that we had to do in Vietnam, we would do it just a lot better," said Col. Rod Paschall, who fought in Vietnam and Laos as a member of the Special Operations Forces as well as an infantry company commander and is now the director of the Military History Institute at the Army War College.

"We learned a great deal about intelligence. ... We've had considerable equipment improvements. We've learned we didn't emphasize the strengthening of the South Vietnamese Army enough. And we learned you've got to have a clear command structure that has authority. I'm not sure we can ever fight a war again the way we did in Vietnam, underneath an embassy.'

The Pentagon also learned its planes had to become more specialized - a fighter or fast attack plane wasn't suitable for support of ground

'We now have the A-10, specialized for close-in support," said Col. John L. Martin, an Air Force veteran of Vietnam currently assigned to the Air War College at Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala. "Likewise, we have the F-15 for air-to-air combat." Lt. Gen. Harry W.O. Kinnard, considered one of the fathers of the combat helicopter, said Vietnam also taught the Army hierarchy it could rely on the copter as "a fire-power device."

As bad as the casualties were in Vietnam, they would have been much worse without the groundbreaking use of the helicopter, he how Vietnam began.

Even if resources are sufficient, military leaders must do more, writes retired Gen. Bruce Palmer, a former Army vice chief of staff.

Senior officers "apparently did not clearly and unequivocally tell the president and the secretary of defense that the (Vietnam) strategy was fatally flawed and that U.S. objectives were not achievable unless the strategy was changed," Palmer

Military officers now appear more willing to offer such views, and they have won a convert in Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger. In a speech last November, Weinberger accepted the need for clearly defined militray objectives and public sup-

What the military learned in Vietnam thus remains open to question. But that may be the most important question of all.

Col. Harry G. Summers Jr., now a professor at the Army War College, recounted a conversation he had in Hanoi after the war with a North Vietnamese officer.

Southeast Asia a surprising evolution

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ten years after the communist conquest of Vietnam, the politics of Southeast Asia have evolved in a way that the architects of American military involvement would never have predicted.

While the region's communist countries have suffered war, economic decline, mountains of mutual distrust and floods of refugees, the non-communist nations have, for the most part, prospered as never before.

The apocalyptic consequences of South Vietnam's defeat, outlined by President Lyndon B. Johnson, did not come to be.

In a speech in Baltimore in April 1965, Johnson sketched U.S. stakes in the area:

"There are those who say that all our efforts there will be futile — that China's power is such that it is bound to dominate all Southeast Asia. But there is no end to that argument until all of the nations of Asia are swallowed up."

In September 1967, Johnson told an audience in San Antonio that the defense of South Vietnam had implications far beyond Asia.

Johnson's assessment was shared namese forces and by many. In 1959, years before the troops are deployed.

large-scale U.S. military commitment, President Dwight D. Eisenhower said, "The loss of South Vietnam would set in motion a crumbling process that could, as it progressed, have grave consequences for us and for freedom."

Now, a decade after the fall of the Saigon government to Hanoi, reality bears little resemblance to those views.

The "domino theory" first advanced by Eisenhower and embraced by Presidents Kennedy and Johnson has applied only to Vietnam and its two neighbors to the west, Cambodia and Laos, both of which fell to communist rule, like the Saigon government, in the spring of 1975.

What the war's advocates did not, and possibly could not, anticipate was that the wartime cooperation between China and Vietnam would dissolve by the late 1970s into the historical enmity between the two countries.

Whatever territorial ambitions

Vietnam may harbor elsewhere in Southeast Asia have been set aside, partly because of Hanoi's preoccupation over its frontier with China, where an estimated 600,000 Vietnamese forces and 250,000 Chinese The two countries fought a brief but bloody war in 1979 and continue to squabble over the pro-Hanoi government in Cambodia, backed by more than 150,000 Vietnamese troops.

U.S. policies toward Southeast Asia in the 1960s were guided by the assumption that China was hostile to American interests. Johnson's 1965 prediction that China ultimately would "swallow up" all of Asia was discredited seven years later when his successor, Richard M. Nixon, visited Peking.

China has suspended its support for guerrilla insurgencies in Thailand and other countries in the region, concentrating instead on economic development.

The region is now comprised largely of nations whose growing prosperity is reflected in their importance as U.S. trading partners. In 1983, trans-Pacific trade exceeded trans-Atlantic trade by $30 billion.

The supposed "dominoes" of noncommunist Southeast Asia have joined together in the six-nation Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) and constitute the fifth largest trading partner of the United States, purchasing $10 billion worth of American goods last year. Alluding to the ASEAN group, made up of Indonesia, Thailand, Singapore, Malaysia, the Philippines and Brunei, outgoing U.S. Trade Representative William Brock said recently, "It would be hard to pick an area of greater opportunity in the world."

Donald Weatherbee, a professor at the University of South Carolina, said, "Of all the world's Third World regions, if any region is going to achieve its development aspirations, it will be ASEAN."

The appeal of Marxism has been further muted by the substantial internal problems plaguing the area's communist nations. A decade after the reunification of Vietnam, an average of 80 Vietnamese a day still flee their nation by boat, according to U.S. estimates.

Elliott Abrams, the assistant secretary of state for human rights, attributes the continuing refugee flow to Vietnam's "extremely brutal" communist system. Abrams calculates that only Afghanistan has a worse human rights record.

Frank Sieverts, a Southeast Asia expert in the State Department's Bureau for Refugee Programs, said Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos have "seen their economies falter in a continuing decline marked by vast stateauthorized persecution and the flight, still continuing, of their citizens."

Over the past decade, about 760,000 Indochinese, mostly Vietnamese, have settled in the United States alone, Sieverts said. Hundreds of thousands of others have sought refuge elsewhere.

It is widely acknowledged that the gravest human rights abuses of the past decade occurred in Cambodia from 1975 to 1978, when the Khmer Rouge regime murdered more than 1 million — some estimates range as high as 2 million — Cambodian citizens.

The Khmer Rouge were ousted by Vietnamese forces in early 1979. American officials say the greatest fear of the Cambodian people nowadays is that a Vietnamese withdrawal from Cambodia would lead to the return of the Khmer Rouge, currently the most active of three anti-Vietnamese guerrilla groups in the country.

At present, the United States has taken a low-profile attitude toward Southeast Asia. It has strongly opposed the continuing Vietnamese occupation of Cambodia, but ASEAN has been taking the lead at the United Nations and elsewhere in attempts to find a diplomatic solution. The United States has endorsed ASEAN's recommendations.

ASEAN's recommendations.

While ASEAN's economic prospects generally are bright, the sixnation group is not without problems.

None, for example, fully practices democratic rule.

The Philippines is regarded as having the most serious political and economic problems. A communist insurgency in the Philippines is gaining strength, generating concern among U.S. officials about the future of American military installations there.

The administration believes the insurgency is not the product of Sovietsponsored subversion but of widespread internal discontent stemming from corruption, a faltering economy and continuing human rights abuses under the rule of President Ferdinand Marcos.

Congratulations on moving out

I was 23, living with a divorced man, 29. We got along fine. The only thing I didn't like about him was the hatred he expressed toward his mother and sisters. (He hasn't spoken to them in five years.) After awhile he began to get pretty rough during our lovemaking. His "nibbling" turned into biting and his caresses turned into such hard squeezes that he was crushing me. Then he started to pinch me and pull my hair out. When I announced that I didn't care for such rough handling he said I was missing out on the best part of sex.

The next night when he wanted to make love I told him I didn't feel like it. He said, "Well, that's tough, because I DO." Although he wouldn't admit it, he raped me.

The following morning I was such a nervous wreck I couldn't go to work. I moved out of the apartment puts everyone in the immediate area and into my cousin's place. When he in grave danger.

Blood pressure may be affected by amount of polyunsaturated fats

A series of nutrition studies by researchers at the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) suggest that one of the many factors affecting blood pressure is the amount of polyunsaturated fats in the diet, says nutritionist Dr. Alice Hunt.

By increasing the ratio of polyunsaturated to saturated fats, the researchers significantly reduced both systolic and diastolic blood presture in 40-t0-60-year-old men and women with normal or slightly elevated blood pressure, reports the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service specialist.

"It's significant that in two of the studies the participants' blood pressure was lowered without reducing their intake of meat, dairy products, eggs or salt," says Hunt. "These studies show that blood pressure can be reduced by increasing polyunsaturated fats in the diet, regardless of the saturated fat con-

The specialist notes that to reduce fat calories and increase polyunsaturates in the studies, the researchers used lean meats with all visible fat trimmed off before cooking, including removing chicken skin. They also substituted polyunsaturated products for butter, mayonnaise, salad dressings and cooking oils.

Palm and coconut oils are high in saturated fats, while corn oil and soybean oil are high in polyunsaturates, Hunt explains. Cheese, other than the low-fat types such as cottage cheese and mozzarella made from skim milk, contain between 30 and 60 percent saturated fat. Some baked products like crackers and cookies also contain saturated fats to increase shelf life.

"The label is a good guide for selecting polyunsaturated products," Hunt says. "But you don't have to avoid a particular food because it may contribute important nutrients like proteins, vitamins, major minerals and trace elements."

The specialist notes that to make up for the reduction of fat calories in the experimental diet, the researchers used fresh fruits and vegetables, bread, cereals, pasta and potatoes. When the volunteers returned to their pre-study diet, their blood pressure generally returned to pre-study levels.

Since high blood pressure has many causes, diet may be only part of the answer, reminds Hunt. She cautions people with high blood pressure to consult a physician before making changes in eating

Onions may prevent cancer

Cancer, one of the most feared diseases, will attack one of three people in the U.S. in a lifetime.

Chances in the American diet can reduce cancer deaths by at least 35 percent, according to conservative estimates from the American Cancer Society.

Including more onions in the diet may be one of the most important dietary adjustments Americans can make. Preliminary research has shown that onions have the ability to prevent cancer in its initial stages.

This revelation was discovered while tests were in progress to show the impact of environment and livestyle in developing cancer, according to Dr. Michael Wargovich, Phd., of the M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute in Houston.

Dr. Wargovich explained that several different stages are involved in the development of cancer. The first event which occurs is the "initiation stage" where an interaction occurs with a normal cell. "Onion and garlic oils actually inhibit that interaction. Components in onions block some of the enzymes necessary to convert a carcinogen (cancercausing substance) into a dangerous chemical.

He said it has been determined that "Sulfer is very important in the detoxification of carcinogens. Onions contain some of the richest concentrations of organic sulfides. The component in onions is propylsulfide."

This ongoing research is being conducted at the M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute as a result of studies in which Dr. Wargovich was involved over a fouryear period in Toronto at the Ludwig Institute for Cancer Research. At the Institute, researchers were studying the impact of lifestyles on cancers. It was discovered that in populations where a lower incidence of certain cancers exist, the diet usually includes more fruits and vegetables. The decision to do a more concentrated investigation specifically on the onion and garlic family resulted partially from a study Dr. Sydney Belman conducted at the Institute of Environmental Medicine in Tuxedo,

New York.

In Dr. Belman's tests, a carcinogen was placed on the outer layer of skin of mice, followed by an application of onion or garlic oils. "Commercial onion and garlic oils inhibited the dangerous cell growth," he stressed, adding, "there's a lot of interest in the benefits of onions and garlic."

Dr. Wargovich further isolated the chemicals in onions and garlic which were responsible for the inhibited growth.

"There's a new emphasis toward prevention" in cancer studies, he stressed. "We are studying how you can alter your diet and prevent cancer. They're determining now that 80 percent of cancers are contributed to lifestyle."

A new laboratory is being constructed at the M.D. Anderson Tumor Institute to study this newfound information about diet and cancer, and specifically the special characteristics of onion and garlic.

Since Dr. Wargovich's findings on onions are conclusive on a short-term level, he is now working toward more long-term tests which should provide een more exciting results. He will present more detailed information on his studies in May to the American Association of Cancer Research.

Health wrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D. Menopause age

DEAR DR. LAMB — When my grandmother was 36, she went through the menopause. My mother also started at about that age. I am 30 and am concerned. Will I also go through the menopause early? Once a woman starts to take hormones for this, will she always have to take them?

bear Reader — No one can tell you when you will begin menopause. With your family history, there is a chance that you will have your menopause early. The time of onset of menopause is not exactly correlated with age or other age-related changes in the body. Menopause has been known to occur as early as age 25 in an otherwise healthy woman. It is not rare for it to begin in the late 30s. The most common time is between 45 and

Not every woman needs estrogen replacement when she enters the menopause. Contrary to popular belief, the ovaries don't completely stop functioning. They still produce a sex hormone that can be converted by body fat cells into estrogen. That is why women who have some body fat tend to have higher estrogen levels than women who are very lean.

If a woman does need estrogen, she will usually continue to need it. It is needed to replace the amount required to avoid such symptoms as hot flashes, bone loss and other changes. If the estrogen is stopped when it is needed, a woman will then develop the symptoms of menopause.

I am sending you The Health Letter, Special Report 22, Understanding the Menopause, which will explain the process fully for you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Knowledge about managing the menopause and providing a safe amount of estrogen replacement has advanced a great deal in the past 20 years. If you do have an early menopause, you will have much better management than was possible for your grandmother, and probably even for your mother.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm 22 and happily married. I've had cold sores all my life. I know this is herpes, but I am very clean and neat and am very careful about what I drink from so I don't get any germs. It is so embarrassing that it makes me want to crawl under a rock, and I feel so sorry for my husband. He says he doesn't care and still loves me. How can I prevent cold sores? My theory is that something in my system is causing the cold sores. Must I wear a mask for life?

DEAR READER — There certainly is something in your system, and it is the herpes virus — but don't panic. You've probably had it since you were a toddler. Herpes simplex type one is transmitted by kissing. Up to 80 percent of the public may have it. The virus lives in nerve fibers near the mouth. When the virus is activated, it migrates down the nerve fiber and causes the cold sore.

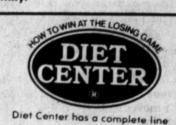

This virus is very similar to herpes simplex type two, also known as genital herpes, but herpes simplex type one is the kissing virus, not the sex virus.

There are many things that activate the virus living in your nerve fibers. A febrile illness, such as a common cold, is one of these, which is probably the source of the term "cold sore." Indigestion, fatigue and perhaps nutrition are sometimes factors. Not enough is known yet about treatment to really provide a means of prevention, but that will come.

After three years in prison

Business executive returns home

CHICAGO (AP) — Business executive Richard Flynn is spending his first day at home after three years in a Mexican prison, full of praise for those who stood by him but critical of the State Department.

Flynn, 49, of suburban Riverdale, arrived back in Chicago late Wednesday night.

"I kind of feel that Ambassador (John) Gavin didn't do as much as he could have," he told reporters at O'Hare International Airport.

Flynn said he would meet today with his lawyers to discuss his lawsuit against the State Department for failing to provide a witness at his fraud trial, which resulted in his conviction and six-year prison sentence.

"They refused to give me a witness which I think was a violation of my constitutional rights," he said.

He said the attorney general of Mexico had told the State Department that he was being held for political reasons, but the United States did nothing about it.

But, Flynn insisted he wasn't bitter toward either the U.S. or Mexican governments.

"I have no bitterness toward Mexico whatsoever," he said.

Flynn — accompanied by his wife,
Catherine, who had flown to Mexico
City on Tuesday to be with him — told reporters, "It's wonderful to be home."

Down from about 200 pounds to about 120 — a weight loss he attributed to his three heart attacks while he was imprisoned — Flynn was unshaven and wearing a beige sweater. He looked tired but Before leaving the plane at O'Hare, Flynn was routinely checked by Dr. John Sanders, a heart specialist at Northwestern Memorial Hospital, where Mrs. Flynn is a nurse.

Sanders said Flynn had a hospital appointment Friday and would undergo heart treatment as an outpatient.

Flynn's four children also were allowed on the plane for a family reunion.

During his imprisonment, his friends and family in the Chicago area had kept up pressure on the Mexican government to free Flynn, including letter writing, lobbying

Congress and picketing.
"I want to thank all the people in Chicago who came to Cathy's aid and assistance," Flynn said from a wheelchair at the airport.

Flynn, freed by the Mexican Supreme Court, was placed on board a commercial flight bound for Chicago by judiciary police agents earlier in Mexico City, but his wife could not accompany him because of a mixup.

a mixup.

He landed in Dallas early Wednesday evening and said he would wait for his wife, who arrived later in the evening.

"I can always get another plane. I can't get another wife," he said.

His fraud conviction was overturned Monday by the high court and he was released from the North Prison on Tuesday. But because his permit to stay in Mexico had expired while he was in prison, he had to be issued a new one.

However, Flynn could not make it to the Interior Department in time Tuesday night to be issued the necessary documents to leave the country, and he was taken to a detention center for illegal immigrants.

Flynn's conviction stemmed from a business deal between Bob Schwermer and Associates, a nowbankrupt Arlington Heights printing machinery company, and Talleres Mexicanos, the government printing office.

Schwermer defauled on a contract for $1.5 million in paper products, but has said he thought he had settled with Talleres before Flynn arrived in Mexico in February 1982. He met Flynn at the Mexico City airport, then flew to Texas.

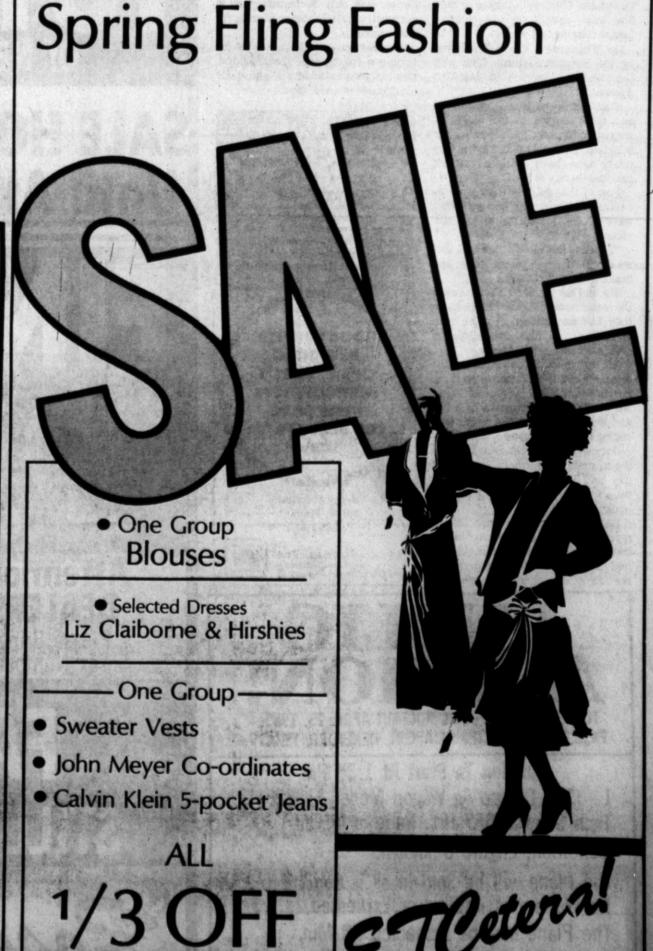

When the Mexican company learned Schwermer had left, Flynn was arrested and later charged with defauding Talleres.

Scuffling Match

As if the student protest weren't enough excitement, the next day a representative and a senator, both from Houston, got into a scuffling match by the tourist desk just outside the governor's door.

The governor, who was with them when the finger-pointing and lapel-grabbing began, retreated into his nearby offices. A third lawmaker stepped in just as blows were about to be exchanged and broke it up, leading the senator away from the scene.

The subject of the argument was of minor importance: whether one of them had requested an attorney general's legal opinion regarding minority contracting by the City of Houston. But it's the local issues which can provoke some heated debates, as demonstrated once again.

In The House

On a more positive note, the House voted last week to:

-Increase the penalty on checks returned for insufficient funds, up to three times the amount when the writer of a hot check refuses to pay.

—Give committee approval to a $200 million fee hike package on items such as wrestling and boxing permits, personalized license plates and vehicle inspection fees.

-Offer a $96.1 million package of enticements to bring a battleship home port to the Texas coast.

Mattox Opinion

Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox filed a lawsuit last week seeking a special master to oversee the charity operations of a Houston hospital for the poor.

Mattox charged that theft and mismanagement of money from the multi-million dollar Hermann Hospital Estate has occurred, presumably by some of the directors and executives of the hospital.

More difficult schools could mean more money for teachers

HOUSTON (AP) - Houston school officials say they are working on a plan to offer bonuses of up to $10,500 to teachers in the district's 45 lowincome schools.

But a teachers' union said district officials are "playing games" with instructors.

Superintendent Billy Reagan of the Houston Independent School District said administrators are drafting a plan to tie federal money with an existing bonus program known as the Second Mile Plan.

Under the Second Mile Plan, teachers can earn an extra $1,500 a year if they work in a low-income area or teach in a high-demand field like bilingual education.

The proposal now under consideration would increase the bonus in schools that qualify for federal aid to the disadvantaged. Some 45 Houston schools now are in that category.

Reagan refused Tuesday to disclose other details of the plan, although he said the proposal should be completed by next week.

However, Gayle Fallon, head of the American Federation of Teachers, accused the school district of "playing games" when teacher salaries should be raised overall.

"First they say there's no money in the budget for a raise," Ms. Fallon said. "Now they're going to get $10,000 bonuses for some teachers."

Any proposal would need to be approved by the Texas Education Agency, which controls disbursement of federal money to Texas schools. Houston public schools are eligible for about $17 million federal money next year.

Meanwhile, some teachers said th bonus would be welcome.

Margaret Wisdom, executiv director of the Congress of Housto Teachers, said the extra mone could provide incentives for teacher to remain in the more difficul

"Some of those schools are combat zones," she said. "Money seems to be the only solution to keep them from burning out."

But Deborah Walker said money is not what motivated her to work in a low-income school.

As a group, the 750,000 refugees from Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia are making steady gains in employment, status and income. The longer they are in the United States, the better off they are, particularly if they have mastered English.

"I had just my bare hands," said Medd Rattana, a former Laotian army major now working as a computer technician in Raleigh, N.C.

"It was pretty easy to find jobs," said Rattana, who arrived in 1976 and worked as a fry cook, street cleaner and driver while going to survivors."

Yet, "for every success story, we have three or four failures," said Dr. Dam Trung Phap, former dean of the language school at the University of Saigon and now coordinator of an "English as a second language" program in the Dallas public schools.

Dam, whose daughters are honor students at Southern Methodist University, sadly recalled a Cambodian refugee wedding he attended.

"The bride was 16. The groom was 17," Dam said. "They had decided just to start a family and see if the next generation could do better."

As the Saigon government collapsed in 1975, refugees poured out of Vietnam by chartered jet, stolen military aircraft or leaky merchant ships to camps in Guam and California. Later came tragic waves of "boat people" who had survived horrifying voyages to Thailand, and Cambodians fleeing on foot from the butchery of Pol Pot and the Khmer Rouge.

Some refugees waited for years in camps for passage to the United not over.

Resettling the refugees, a task which will continue for years, has been a joint venture of state and federal governments, which have invested millions of dollars in aid and programs, and churches and individuals who have offered helping hands to bewildered new residents.

The refugee class of 1975, which included some of Vietnam's best and brightest, has done especially well. By 1979, men from that group achieved median earnings higher than the U.S. average, according to the federal Office of Refugee Resettle-

Four of five refugees require some form of financial assistance in their first year in America. After five years, the welfare dependency rate drops to 20 percent or less.

In 1984, 55 percent of all adult refugees had jobs or were looking for jobs, compared to 64 percent of all American adults. But only 20 percent of the refugees who cannot speak English were looking for work, and one-third could not find jobs.

What the statistics don't tell are the human stories, 750,000 tales of tragedy, success, romance, horror and comedy. Among them:

Sam Ware, who was 20 months old when he was flown out of South Vietnam in the "babylift," is now 12 and showing some shifty football moves in Canby, Ore. Don Ware tells of taking his adopted son to Asia two years ago. "I asked him what he would think about living over there and he said, 'Not a chance, Dad, I'm an American kid.""

Huy Nguong Duong, 25, was charged with murdering a 9-year-old boy who was waiting for a school bus in Houston in January. Police said Duong, who fled Vietnam in 1979, was unhappy here. "He thought if he did something really bad he would be

For these struggling capitalists, and for refugees across the country, crime has been a special problem.

"At one time I would have said 80 percent of the businessmen were victims" of some kind of extortion, said Garden Grove police Lt. Ken Adair.

"Now it's approaching 50 percent." As the younger immigrants get used to the system, they're fighting back, said Cpl. Ronald Cowart, a Vietnam veteran who is the Dallas Police Department's liaison officer with the Asian community.

Many families of MIAs still awaiting final word

By TIM AHERN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - On the black granite walls of the Vietnam Memorial, the names of 2,483 Americans are singled out with a

Unlike their 58,020 fallen comrades, these Americans never came home, their bodies lost in the jungles or waters of Southeast Asia.

A decade after the fall of Saigon definitively ended the Vietnam War, all but one of the military men missing in action have been declared dead. But families and friends still wait for some final word.

"I don't stay awake anymore thinking I'm going to hear from him tomorrow," said Sara Shay, whose son, Air Force Maj. Donald E. Shay, is among the missing. "But we've never accepted his medals or had any kind of service because I won't accept that he's dead until I hear something definitive."

President Reagan has listed among his priorities a full accounting of the American MIAs. The Pentagon still investigates occasional reports of Caucasians being held in Southeast Asia, although most U.S. officials say privately they don't believe anyone was left behind.

Donald Shay, a navigator, was 24 years old and a month away from returning home to be married when his RF-4 photo reconnaissance plane disappeared when returning from Saigon to its base in Thailand on Oct. 8, 1970.

"We don't know if it crashed, was shot down, or what happened," Mrs. Shay said in an interview from her home in Linthicum, Md.

After three years of fighting to get information from the Air Force, Mrs. Shay said she was told that two parachutes had been reported sighted. But the Pentagon said it couldn't confirm the chutes were from the RF-4, and the Shays have heard nothing since.

"These men were sent over there by the U.S. government, and there should be an accounting," Mrs. Shay said. "I am convinced there are prisoners over there. I don't know how many or where they are, but I know in my heart there are some."

Vietnam and Laos claim they hold no prisoners and most Pentagon officials basically agree, while saying the government cannot conclusively rule out the possibility that some POWs remain.

In recent months, the countries of Southeast Asia have made some overtures toward accounting for the American MIAs.

On March 20, Vietnam turned over remains believed to be those of missing American servicemen. The Pentagon announced April 9 that the Army's Central Identification Laboratory in Honolulu had identified six men - four Air Force officers shot down over North Vietnam and two others, a Marine officer and an Army officer, who had died in captivity. The new IDs mean the total unaccounted for is now 2.377.

American and Laotian soldiers joined forces in the search for the bodies of 13 American airmen missing since their C-130 gunship crashed in Champassak Province, Laos, in 1972. Two Americans survived the crash and the body of a third was recovered.

The Cambodian deputy foreign minister, Kong Korm, said his country was prepared to cooperate with Washington in the search for the 91 Americans listed missing in Cambodia. However, one observer who follows U.S.-Cambodian relations said the statement appeared to be a ploy by Phnom Pennh to get the U.S. government to deal with it.

The only servicemen not declared legally dead is Air Force Capt. Charles Shelton, shot down in Laos 20 years ago and believed to have been taken prisoner by the Pathet Lao.

Shelton, who has become the symbol of U.S. determination to pursue the fullest accounting of MIAs, has been promoted to colonel over the years and still draws pay as if he were reporting daily for duty.

While the Vietnam MIA total may seem high, it's far smaller than the missing lists from the two previous wars. There are still 8,800 men unaccounted for from the Korean War and 78,000 missing from World War

In the conflict in Southeast Asia, most of the missing, including Shay, were lost when their planes or helicopters went down in the mountainous jungles or waters off Viet-

More than 3,000 planes and 4,000 helicopters were shot down in the long air war.

From 1965 to 1970, U.S. fighters and bombers operated virtually round the clock from ground bases and three or four aircraft carriers in the South China Sea. American pilots flew more than 1.8 million missions, and the giant B-52 bombers added 117,794 flights. Helicopters, used extensively for the first time in warfare, made 11.8 million sorties.

Vietnam has rejected past U.S. requests to permit searches of suspected crash sites because the two countries have no diplomatic relations.

But the United States says that one condition of normalizing relations must be substantial progress by the Vietnamese in accounting for the Vietnam claims it has turned over all the information it has on MIAs, a claim scoffed at by the Pentagon.

Defense Department officials note that the North Vietnamese kept detailed records and published large amounts of information on airplane downings in the war. They also note that Vietnam produces small amounts of information on a regular basis, but say they have no information on why the Vietnamese would withhold details.

It was the lack of information that caused Mrs. Shay to become active in the National League of POW-MIA Families, a group that has continually pressed for a fuller accounting.

"I just can't believe we can't find out more than the U.S. government says it knows," said Mrs. Shay. "I think we could if we tried harder.

High tab for judicial lunches draws criticism

DALLAS (AP) - Some felony court judges' lunch tabs - as high as $565 for a single outing - are drawing criticism from a Texas legislator, who has called them "blatantly improper."

Between April and August 1984, 11 Dallas County felony court judges spent a total of $3,564 on lunches and dinners with probation officers, The Dallas Morning News reported Wednesday.

State District Judge Mike Keasler, for instance, selected one of Dallas' priciest restaurants, the four-star Calluaud's, for a luncheon business meeting with 24 probation officers. The bill was $554.30, or about $22 apiece.

"It is blatantly improper to spend money - any state money - on meals at a four-star French restaurant where prices aren't even printed on the menu and where valet parking costs more than a McDonald's hamburger," said state Rep. Steve Wolens, D-Oak Cliff.

The Dallas-area legislator called the expenses from the training sessions and other probation-related meetings ill-conceived and extravagant uses of public money.

"It doesn't pass the fish test," Wolens said. "It smells."

The food expenses for the "judicial training sessions" were paid from a fund used by the felony court judges to operate the Dallas County Adult Probation Department.

The most expensive lunch tab was $565. The cheapest was $151, according to county records.

An additional $3,100 was spent on meals for other probation-related business meetings between August 1983 and March 1985.

About 60 percent of the fund comes from state appropriations, and the rest is from fees paid by probationers. The meal expenses have prompted Wolens to introduce a bill to put controls on such funds.

But several judges said the money for the training sessions was well-

Besides allowing judges a chance to meet face-to-face with the probation officers assigned to their courts, the judges said the meetings give them a chance to discuss their probation philosophies and policies.

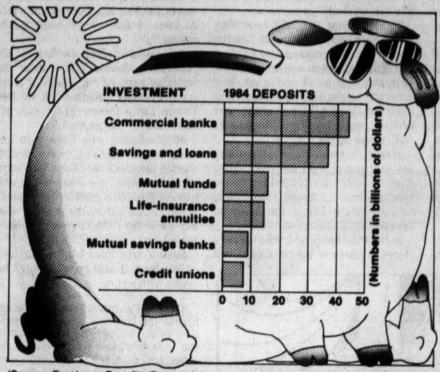

"Perhaps we should have gone to McDonald's or had it in the courtroom, looking back," Keasler said. "But at that time, it seemed perfectly innocent and productive. And it was productive."

State District Judge Pat McDowell, chairman of the committee that oversees the probation office, said the meal expenditures would not be repeated this year because of the state's tight budget.

Meanwhile, Wolens is pushing a bill to transfer control of the probation office to Dallas County commis-

Tapes show two men claiming responsibility

PALO PINTO, Texas (AP) - As a protect his cover. hush fell over the courtroom, jurors heard two men describe on a secretly-recorded tape how they bludgeoned a Dublin minister with an ax, robbed him and left the body in his van.

And they heard undercover Phoenix, Ariz., lawmen identify the men Wednesday as Robert Michael Purtell and Dale Arthur John Carasquillo, who are charged with capital murder in the Rev. John H. Basham's death.

More testimony was scheduled to-First United Methodist Church minister was beaten, stabbed and strangled Feb. 7, 1984, and his body was found two days later inside his camper van.

Purtell is being tried now. Carasquillo is scheduled for trial later.

Testimony from Gary Davis, a member of a Phoenix sting operation who initially dealt with Purtell and Carasquillo, dominated Wednesday's proceedings.

Davis testified before the portions of the tapes were played, explaining his meetings with the suspects because much of the recording was unintelligible.

Despite constant objections from defense attorneys, Davis explained that on March 13, 1984, Purtell and Carasquillo bragged about a Texas killing so Davis would consider them for a contract killing he made up to

"They talked about how they met a guy in a bar, learned he had a lot of money and ended up leaving in his van," Davis said. "The killing took place in a van ... Chris (Carasquillo) said they got $2,500 from the man. They left the van on the highway, threw a blanket over him and walked Davis testified that officers knew the suspects as Steve Radcliff (Purtell) and Chris Radcliff (Carasquillo).

"Chris said they hit him in the day in the death of Basham, 55. The head with an ax. I said, 'Wasn't that messy?' and he said, 'no, not really,' he got some blood on his pants," the detective said.

Both men said they couldn't return to the Dallas-Fort Worth area on any jobs for Davis because the killing took place just outside the metroplex, he testified.

Twins observe 100th birthdays

ASHLAND, Ky. (AP) - William Sexton says he came into the world 10 minutes ahead of his sister, Margaret Adams, and that after 100 years he still doesn't know the secret of their longevity.

"If I could write them a recipe, I'd be a millionaire," Sexton said Tuesday, surrounded by about 100 family members and friends who gathered to wish them well as the twins reached the century mark.

Sexton and Mrs. Adams beat incredible odds to celebrate their 100th birthdays, said Nell Adams, who was hostess of the lawn party for her mother and uncle. "My daughter looked it up and found that the odds against brother and sister twins both living to be 100 were 700 million to one," she said.

The "Guinness Book of World Records" refers to the odds of identical twins both reaching 100 as "said to be 1 in 700 million." The oldest recorded twins were Eli and John Phipps, born Feb. 14, 1803, in Afflinghton, Va. Eli died at the age of 108 years and 9 days on Feb. 23, 1911; John died later, Guinness says.

Sexton and Mrs. Adams are fraternal twins, born April 16, 1885.

Mrs. Adams was widowed in 1935 and Sexton has outlived three wives, including one he married at age 82 and who died several years ago.

Nell Adams is her mother's only surviving child. Sexton has four children still living. All of them attended Tuesday's party.

The centenarians told how they were born on a farm at nearby Music, Ky., the youngest of Cynthia and William Sexton's seven children. Both married at 19 and went their separate ways. Mrs. Adams always lived in the Ashland area; her brother went to West Virginia to work in the mines.

"Our father was killed in the mines but that didn't stop me from spending 35 years as a miner in West Virginia and Kentucky," said Sexton, who retired from the mines at age 65.

Both of the twins operated grocery stores at one time. Sexton said he lost down during the Depression."

"I had a big store, a stock of goods worth $20,000. The Depression wiped me out. I had to go back to the mines."

A Democrat since the days of the New Deal, Sexton joked about the birthday card he received last week from President Reagan."If he had known I'm a Democrat he wouldn't have sent it," he quipped.

Mrs. Adams, who lives with her daughter at Ashland, is recovering from a slight stroke. Until last summer, however, she lived alone and always planted a garden. "Mother is bouncing back from the stroke," said her daughter. "She has fought hard to make it to this 100th birthday."

Sexton, who lives with a daughter at Hitchins, is still spry although he walks with a cane.

FBI admits interviewing Americans traveling to Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) - A mysterious handwritten note, containing only a name and telephone number, awaited Detroit peace activist Amy Good when she returned home last March 19.

When the person answering the number said "FBI," the bewildered social worker hung up. Later, she learned that agents wanted to talk about her trip to Nicaragga last Oc-

On Wednesday, FBI Director William H. Webster told a House Judiciary subcommittee that "in the area of 100, possibly less than 100" travelers to and from Nicaragua were interviewed by his agents.

But Webster denied the contacts were attempts to harass those opposing U.S. policy in Central America, adding: "I can assure you there was a legitimate counterintelligence purpose for every interview."

Ms. Good, 28, and others asked by The Associated Press about the contacts said they are still searching for the purpose. They never found out, because they refused to cooperate.

However, some of their comments contradicted Webster's testimony.

For instance, the FBI director said agents interviewed travelers the AP or who wrote statements were trying to gather intelligence." about their experiences said they had never been there.

And while Webster testified that only a small percentage of the total travelers were interviewed, an attorney who called the FBI on Ms. Good's behalf said he was told by an agent: "We try to interview everyone who comes back from Nicaragua."

"I believe it was harassment," Ms. Good said. "It makes people paranoid. It makes me angry, because their approach to me was heading to and from Nicaragua, not honest. They left a note without Some of those who were contacted by an identification. I don't believe they

"I do feel it's harassment," said Rostan, who said he had no such contact. "It's a shame our government is spending our tax dollars doing this. I wish they would tell me what they wanted and be aboveboard. That's what really bothers me; they're not aboveboard."

As climbing season begins, Noah's Ark fever runs high

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) - As the season approaches for climbing Mount Ararat, Noah's Ark fever is running high despite one explorer's claim that he has already found the legendary boat.

This year 73 foreigners, 68 of them Americans, have sought permission from the Turkish government to search for the ark which, according to the Bible, came to rest on Mount Ararat after the great flood inundated the earth.

Ron Wyatt, an anesthesist from Madison, Tenn., said he's sure the boat lies three miles on the southwest side of the mountain at a height of 6,300 feet.

On a trip last summer, Wyatt took samples from the mountain.

"I brought a high-power metal detector which showed metal all around the boat shape and there were ribs of timber every nine feet all over the boat," he said.

Wyatt, who came here for preparations for an expedition he plans to start in May, said, "It is only a matter of digging it up."

'This is not a guess, it is a fact that this boat formation and everything about it is exactly as it should be for Noah's Ark," Wyatt said in an inter-

Although Turkish scholars doubt his claims and one geologist says the boat-shape is caused by erosion, Wyatt claims the dimensions of the boat shape correspond to the measures given in the biblical book of Genesis. The length is 471 feet and the width 141 feet, he said.

According to Genesis, the ark was 300 cubits long, 50 cubits wide and 30 cubits high. A cubit, an ancient form of measurement, is believed equal to between 18 and 22 inches. That would make the ark at least 450 feet long.

Wyatt said analysis of his samples at the University of Georgia and by Galbraith Laboratories in Knoxville, Tenn., showed that they were decayed wood. A nuclear physicist friend, he said, estimated the samples to be between 5,500 and 5,900 years old.

Wyatt plans to return to the site with eight experts, including David Fasold, a marine archeologist from Florida, to X-ray the formation before starting to excavate. The excavation on the volcano that last erupted in 1840 will take about five vears, he said.

Turkish scholars are skeptical about claims of the ark's discovery.

Many believe the explorers are searching at the wrong place.

Prominent Turkish archeologist Ekrem Akurgal said that "evidence presented by Mr. Wyatt gives the impression that the formation could be an ancient boat."

"But it is hard to explain how flood waters could elavate to a height of 6,300 feet and the boat come to rest there," he added. Akurgal said humans were not advanced enough 5,000 years ago to build the kind of boat described by Wyatt.

A Turkish geologist, Yilmaz Guner, said in an interview that the boat-shaped formation could be the result of thousands of years of ero-

Another Turkish geologist, Suleyman Turkunal, said he thinks Noah's Ark, if it exists at all, must lie somewhere in northern Mesopotamia near Mount Judi, 200 miles southwest of Ararat.

CHICAGO (AP) - Hostile takeover attempts such as the one planned by broadcast maverick Ted Turner threaten the "independence and integrity" of CBS News and will be resisted by the network, CBS Chairman Thomas Wyman said at the company's annual meeting.

Wyman vowed to about 100 of the corporation's 20,000 shareholders on Wednesday that CBS would fight off any bid for a controlling interest in the front-running network, which is also the object of other possible suitors.

Turner's lawyers, meanwhile, told the Federal Communications Commission's general counsel in Washington, D.C., on Wednesday they planned to file papers today detailing Turner's intended takeover of CBS Inc., said FCC spokesman William Russell.

The lawyers gave no details of their plans to the FCC, Russell said, adding, "We're not sure because we don't know how they intend to do

SWPS receives award

White presented Southwestern Public Service Company an award symbolic of "business of the year" in Texas on Monday.

At a special luncheon in Austin, White presented SPS Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Berl M. Springer with the Texas Association of Business (TAB) Ed C. Burris Award. The awad is presented annually to one company that exemplifies the best in Texas business and industry, said Bob Myers of Fort Worth, Chairman of the TAB committee that made the selec-SPS's efficiency in opera-

Among the many SPS accomplishments noted by the selection committee were:

-SPS is working hard to keep down all fuel costs, including costs of coal. After extensive negotiations completed last year with the Burlington Northern and Santa Fe railroads, SPS renegotiated its coal-haul contracts.

-In a further effort to keep down costs in the future, SPS is constructing a test facility near Amarillo that will examine the feasibility of a coal slurry pipeline using liquified carbon dioxide in place of water to transport coal.

-SPS also has led the development of historic interconnections between the Eastern and Western Electrical Grids of the United States, with two connections that began operations last year. -As a participant in the energy conservation programs of the Governor's office and the Public Utility Commission, SPS is making its customers more aware of ways to use energy wisely.

gain control of CBS News Lucas hearing continues

WACO, Texas (AP) -After already spending nearly four hours before a special grand jury, Henry Lee Lucas faced more scrutiny into whether his claims to hundreds of murders are true. Jurors summoned the selfprofessed mass killer behind closed doors Wednesday as Attorney General Jim Mattox tried to lay the foundation for a statewide investigation into the drifter's confessions.

The Waco probe was prompted by Lucas' confession to the 1981 murder of Dorothy Collins at a time when officers believed another suspect was on the verge of confessing, authorities said. Lucas was expected to return for more testimony before the grand jury today.

With Mattox' assistance. the McLennan County grand jury is also looking into Lucas' confession to the 1977 killing of Glen Parks. Mattox said Wednesday that one of his greatest concerns is how Lucas knew enough facts to convince law enforcement officers that he committed hundreds of slay-"There's two ways you can get information about a crime," Mattox said. "You

Nationwide, authorities closed the books on 210 murders because of Lucas' confessions. Mattox declined to speculate on the number of killings that Lucas may have lied about, but he added that 'I think there are a number of crimes that he has confessed to that he clearly could not have committed. 'The inconsistencies indicate that there are murderers that are still on the loose," he said.

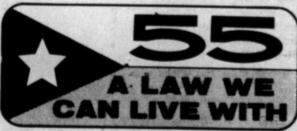

Lucas, 48, was quoted earlier this week as saying he committed only three of the as many as 600 murders he has claimed. He says he was trying to embarrass authorities with the exaggerations.

The testimony given to the grand jury would be used to determine "where the state will go" in an investigation of Lucas' confessions, Mattox

Mattox said state District Judge George Allen had granted a 90-day extension of the grand jury term after jurors requested it. Their term was to expire at the end of the month.

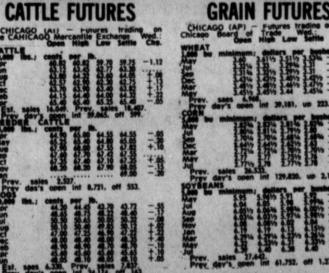

Mattox said the new investigation is needed because the Texas Rangers Homicide Task Force, which has been investigating Lucas' confessions since 1983, did not believe it had responsibility to determine the validity of the statements.

Mattox said the grand jury was not investigating the task
