

In Support of Farmer Strike

Stores Consider Closing Wednesday

By JIM STEIERT
Brand Farm Editor

On the eve of a threatened strike by farmers across the nation, local merchants are making decisions on whether they will remain open for business or lock their doors on Wednesday.

And while that decision-making process is underway, representatives of the American Agriculture farm strike movement are requesting special meetings with President Carter and Congress.

Final plans for the farm strike were made by farmers from 26 states at a meeting in Denver Monday, where 160 farmers signed a petition requesting a joint session of Congress to hear the movement's demands for legislation that would assure 100 percent parity prices for farm commodities and livestock.

Representatives of the Hereford strike office are also making plans for the first day of strike activity.

According to a spokesman for the Hereford office, which serves as state headquarters, local strike supporters are "working on getting our businessmen to shut down tomorrow."

The strike supporters are hoping for voluntary closings on the part of numerous local businesses.

American Ag representatives were scheduled to meet with Mayor Bartley Dowell this afternoon, hoping to obtain the Mayor's signature on a proclamation designating Wednesday as American Ag Day in Hereford.

And with one day left before the farm strike date, some city businesses announced plans to close on Wednesday, while others announced it would be business as usual.

A spokesman for Taylor & Sons in Hereford reported that the grocery firm's stores in Canyon, Dimmitt,

SFC Studies Options To End SS Deadlock

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate Finance Committee met behind closed doors today, considering two options that could break a stalemate and lead to passage of a major Social Security bill this year.

One proposal would remove from the bill an unrelated amendment authorizing a $250-per-student tuition credit against income taxes and attach that provision to a different bill. It is a dispute over this amendment that has blocked final action on Social Security.

This proposal could satisfy backers of the tuition credit - but only if they had some assurance that the House would vote on the credit on some bill this year.

The second alternative being considered by the committee is to give in totally to the House and drop the tuition-credit issue.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale told reporters this morning that the first alternative probably would be followed.

"They're probably going to take the tuition tax issue and put it on another bill," he said at a breakfast interview. "If that is done, it will clear the way for immediate adoption of the Social Security bill."

The Finance Committee met in a final attempt to break the stalemate. If no Social Security bill is passed this year, it could delay income-tax cuts next year.

One top-level staff member said the negotiating process was not helped by remarks made by Joseph A. Califano Jr., secretary of health, education and welfare.

Califano told reporters Saturday that a college tuition tax credit now attached to the bill is so bad that he would seriously consider recommending that President Carter veto the entire package.

Califano said it is intolerable for Sen. William V. Roth, R-Del., chief sponsor of the tuition credit, to hold the Social Security bill hostage. In reality, however, Roth has had the unanimous support of other Senate conferees when vetoes were taken.

Senate and House conferees reached agreement last Friday on all parts of the Social Security bill itself. But they could not send the measure back to the House and Senate for final votes because they could not agree on the proposed tuition credit.

Most House conferees are adamantly opposed to the $250-per-student credit and said they can never vote for a bill that includes it.

Getting a Social Security bill this year is a top priority of the Carter

Art Works Appreciated

Laura Walker, of 330 Ave. B, examines paintings today during the fine-art exhibition at Hereford State Bank. The exhibition, which began Monday and was scheduled to end today, has pieces from more than 25 artists from throughout the United States on hand. Hereford State Bank, which has interior design and furnishings from the Baker Company, arranged the art show with the Baker Gallery of Fine Art. The gallery, established in 1963 at Lubbock, had representatives at the bank to answer questions about the works, which were on sale during the exhibition. There were approximately 60 paintings and numerous sculptures for sale during the show. (Brand photo by Paul Sims)

Birdwell Named Top Local Administrator

Howard Birdwell, Shirley Elementary School principal, was honored as "Administrator of the Year" during the annual Christmas Dinner of the Hereford chapter of the Texas State Teachers Association Monday night in the high school cafeteria.

The award was presented by Ronnie Wood, president of the Deaf Smith County Classroom Teachers Association. The CIA will now enter Birdwell's name in statewide competition.

Bill McCarley, TSTA president, was master of ceremonies for the annual Christmas dinner. Approximately 170 teachers and guests attended the event, and special musical entertainment was provided by the Chamber Singers, under direction of Bill Devers.

Birdwell began his teaching career in 1959 in Amarillo. He moved to Hereford as an assistant principal for one year before becoming principal at Shirley. He has served in that position the past seven years.

His civic activities include membership in the Kiwanis Club, where he has served in several offices, including president, and he is currently serving as lieutenant governor of District 33. He is a past board member of Camp Fire Girls, has worked in the summer YMCA track program, and is currently on the United Way board.

The past year, Birdwell helped plan and build a large innovative playground for Shirley students and children of the community. He and wife, Billie, who teaches in the Hereford school system, and their daughters, Judy and Leslie, are members of the First United Methodist Church.

"It is my firm belief that only through mutual respect between classroom teachers and administrators can the education of our children be successful," stated Birdwell.

"I believe it is the goal of education to provide the best possible atmosphere for learning, taking into consideration the strengths and abilities of each teacher and student," he adds.

Alien Students May Do Better

TYLER, Tex. (AP) - A researcher has testified in federal court here that children of illegal aliens generally perform better than native-born minority children.

The testimony of Dr. Jose Cardenas, executive director of the Intercultural Development Research Association, came Monday in a suit brought against the Tyler Independent School District.

Cardenas also said federal legislation dealing with bilingual education does not place any constraints on the children involved in the programs as to their citizenship status.

Similar Texas law, he said, does require that the children be either

Commissioners Meet Monday

Vote Canvassing Shows No Changes

By PAUL SIMS

Deaf Smith County Commissioners found no changes in election returns from Saturday's runoff between state senate candidate Bob Price and Bob Simpson Monday afternoon following their regular semi-monthly meeting.

Price, who won the nomination by a slim margin, outgained Simpson, 589-511, in Deaf Smith County.

Simpson has said he may ask for a recount in at least a few precincts. It is not likely he will seek one in Deaf Smith County, which was not a big factor in his defeat compared to the larger counties of the 26-county area comprising District 31 in the senate.

During the morning Monday morning regular session, commissioners hired Steve Kennedy as assistant county agent following the recommendation of County Agent Justin McBride.

Kennedy, 21, will graduate this week from West Texas State University. He was graduated from Olton High School and was active in Future Farmers of America and 4-H.

At WTSU, Kennedy is a member of the judging team and is one of a few students working on the university farm. Kennedy, who is married, will officially assume his county position Jan. 1.

Commissioners approved a new retirement program which fully vests employees who reach age 65 and have been employed by the county for 12 years.

The program, nearly created by the state government, allows for teachers and county and municipal employees

Wes Fisher didn't support Bob Price initially in the recent election for a state senator, but it wasn't necessarily because he thought Jim Brandon, whom he did support, was a better candidate.

Brandon was knocked out in the Nov. 8 election, and Fisher transferred his support to Price in the runoff against Bob Simpson.

"I supported Brandon, I committed to Brandon first," said Fisher, Deaf Smith County Republican chairman. "Bob Price did not announce for three weeks after we committed for Brandon

Fisher probably did not know he was switching his support to the would-be winner. Price faced a tough challenge - there are only three Republicans in the senate and

Simpson is a Democrat; Simpson is from Amarillo, the biggest city, by far, in the 26 counties of District 31; Price did not campaign nearly as hard as his opponent; and Price was considered by a lot of folks as a do-nothing U.S. congressman when he served in that capacity.

Price won in a close race Saturday. "I really think the farm economy had something to do with it," who is in the produce business, said Fisher.

Price farms and ranches in Pampa. "And I think Bob (Price) ran more as a conservative than his opponent did. And look where Price ran so heavy - the North Plains."

It doesn't matter, Fisher said, that Price will be among the minority in Austin.

"I frankly think that a Republican, because he is in a minority, might crack a little more weight down here, he heard a little more.

"Because they're Republicans, they stand out by themselves. And the two-part system is coming into Texas slowly. It's healthy."

Fisher, who was never a politician took a political role as Deaf Smith County Republican chairman a few years back "because I wanted people to know I was a Republican."

He is a Republican "because I've always felt the Republican party stood strictly for the conservative party."

"I'm for free enterprise. I felt like it offered more in that line than the other party. I believe that it's come down to its liberal versus conservative."

Fisher likes the conservatism of the area. That may be one reason he's stayed here for 13 years, turning down a transfer from Holly Sugar's Hereford plant a few years ago.

Lighting Contest Planned By Cof C Women's Division

Mr. and Mrs. Mike Patrick, chairmen of the current Home Lighting Contest, remind local residents that only four days remain to enter the competition and have a chance at cash prizes totaling $100.

Participants must complete the entry form (appearing in today's issue) and return it to the Chamber of Commerce office before Friday.

An annual project of the Chamber Women's Division, the Christmas Lighting Contest is open to all city residents and those homes within a 5 mile radius of Hereford. Entrants are asked to illuminate their decorations particularly on the evening of Dec. 20, when judging will be conducted by out-of-town parties.

A grand prize of $50 will go to the overall contest winner, as selected by the judges. Twenty dollars has been set aside for the best spot decoration in a window or other enclosed area.

The designer of the most attractive doorway will be awarded a cash prize of $20. Completing the list of prizes is a $10 award for the best neighborhood entry (including four or more residences).

Last year's winners will not be eligible for cash awards in the upcoming competition, the Patricks explained.

Princeton Woman Has Profits of $1 Million

PRINCETON, Minn. (AP) — Savage passion, blazing kisses and tender caresses are part of everyday life, sandwiched between washing clothes and cleaning house, for a rural Princeton woman.

Kathleen Woodiwiss, author of three can't-put-'em-down historical romances which have earned her more than $1 million, is currently working on her fourth novel.

"I think I fill a need for a romantic novel with a happy ending," Mrs. Woodiwiss said. "A lot of books don't leave you with that feeling. They leave you depressed. I don't like to feel depressed. I try to give a little bit of joy."

A common thread — faithfulness — runs through her novels, Mrs. Woodiwiss said.

The main characters in "The Flame and the Flower," "The Wolf and the Dove," and "Shanna" may be passionate or passive, domineering or headstrong. But they're always faithful to each other.

"I feel part of love is making a commitment," Mrs. Woodiwiss said. "A lot of other people think like that too. It's no different today than it was way back when."

"If there isn't a basic love brunette, who speaks with a slight Southern accent, says she story in a book, one that has faithfulness, I just don't enjoy it as well."

The attractive 38-year-old does not like stories that rely on sex to keep up a reader's interest.

"I try to treat it as part of the love story, since it's natural between two people who are in love. It's not just for sensation's sake," she said.

The historical settings vary, but the hero is always incredibly handsome, the heroine ravishingly beautiful, they're always true to each other and the scenes between them never get really explicit.

Mrs. Woodiwiss, who lives on a 55-acre spread with her husband, Ross, and their three sons, says it takes her about a year and a half to complete a novel, including time spent on historical research, but she doesn't work at it constantly.

"I still get up early in the morning to get the boys off to school. Then I rush around and clean up the house. I usually have two women who come once a week, but they haven't been here for a while. I even cut the grass," she said.

Once her chores are done, she sits down at her large roll-top desk, cranks some paper into her electric typewriter and heads back into another period of time.

The novels all have happy endings, with all the questions answered.

"I cannot see the need in making somebody miserable with what I write," she said. "I've read books with endings I can't stand and I'm really low afterwards."

"These books are to lose yourself in while you are reading, just for enjoyment."

Mrs. Woodiwiss says her novels aren't autobiographical, and her meeting with her husband doesn't read like a chapter from one of her novels.

"He was stationed in my home town of Alexandria, La., when I was in high school and he came to one of our dances — a sock hop," she said. "I remember he had a long gash in his head because he'd been in a car accident."

They were married a year later, and Mrs. Woodiwiss didn't begin writing until 1968, when they lived in Topeka, Kan. The family moved to Minnesota about three years ago, when Woodiwiss retired from active duty.

"I had the desire to write, but I didn't think I could do it," she said. "It was only when I sat down and started writing and began to have so much fun at it that I wondered what had taken me so long."

Rent-A-Protector Firms Do Business In France

PARIS (AP) — "Rent-A-Gorilla" firms are beating their chests in Paris, muscling in on the violence trend by offering male and female bodyguards for as little as $10 an hour.

Budo Brothers, a 3-year-old protection outfit, opened a women's branch called Budo Sisters early in 1977. A third firm, KO!, recently entered the field.

All offer employees skilled in a variety of martial arts and languages. Aphasis is also put on good grooming and athletic appearance.

"This is a profession like any other," Sally Desplan, director of Budo Brothers and Budo Sisters, said in an interview. "There's nothing secret or illegal about it. There's a problem of escalating crime and violence in the world, and the need for our service proves it."

"Businessmen, politicians, entertainers come to us when the police can't solve their protection problems. We're non-political, and we'll take clients from the left, right or center."

Desplan said budo is a Japanese word designating the ensemble of martial arts. He said he had 60 male and 15 female employees, and that fees range anywhere from $10 to $40 or up, "depending on the circumstances."

Desplan said business was booming but declined to give figures. Asked if his agents carried arms, he said, "only if the occasion calls for it."

One of the Budo Sisters, Catherine Pruvot, a 23-year-old secretary who speaks English and Spanish in addition to her native French, said she had joined the firm to supplement her income. Recent missions included guarding a businessman in Hamburg and a child in Paris.

Claudine Dory, a 23-year-old university student waiting for a job with an international organization as an interpreter in English, Italian, Spanish and French, said she too wanted extra money. So did 35-year-old singer and actress Stephanie Ohsenart.

All agreed that staying in good condition was another benefit, and said that they trained regularly in a specially-equipped room provided by the firm.

Like their Budo counterparts, most of the men from KO! are recruited from sports clubs and are seeking extra money to supplement their regular jobs. KO! fees are slightly higher, however, beginning at about $12 an hour.

"A key element in protecting someone is to be non-provocative, not to stand out," KO! Director Daniel Remy, a karate black belt, explained in an interview. "We're seeking men who are articulate, can carry on a conversation in a variety of different situations, are intelligent and well groomed."

Retrieving Sunken Logs Is Profitable Business

CLOQUET, Minn. (AP) — Joe Porcelli, a 31-year-old Korean-American, claims he's been searching for roots since he was 5 years old. And after coming to the United States 23 years ago he may finally have found them at the bottom of the St. Louis River in northern Minnesota.

Porcelli, after serving as an underwater demolition instructor for the Green Berets in Vietnam and working for an ocean salvage company, came to Minnesota to pursue a marine engineering degree at the University. He now runs his own company retrieving sunken logs from river bottoms.

Millions of dollars worth of logs are there for the taking and he aims to get his share, declares Porcelli, who says, "I've been on my own since I was 5 and I've been groping for roots. Now I have the world by the tail."

"If I had 20 crews and worked for the rest of my life, I couldn't get all the logs out of Minnesota's waters," Porcelli claims. "But my biggest problem is convincing people that the logs are a viable and valuable product."

"I guess I'm ecology-minded too," he adds. "Each log pulled out of the water represents one less tree that has to be cut, and helps clean the water."

Porcelli began diving at the age of 11, three years after he left Korea and was adopted by an Italian family in South Carolina. He earned a degree in biology at the University of South Carolina and then became a member of the Green Berets.

After his discharge, Porcelli traveled around the world as his company's chief diver, but decided to venture to Minnesota, where he not only worked on his marine engineering degree, but met his wife.

He got into the logging business a few years after helping with some underwater blasting in the St. Louis River when a stranger kept asking for the sunken logs they cleared out. Porcelli checked into this and figured there was some $50-million-worth of logs on the Minnesota river bottom.

The logs are not only plentiful, but are still of good quality, even though some are more than 100 years old.

"I learned that 10 to 15 percent of all the logs that were floated down rivers sank," he said, "as long as the logs are submerged, they are not exposed to air and the water temperature does not reach 76 degrees, which is needed for the proliferation of fungus that destroys wood."

"The major reason a log goes bad is deterioration," he continued. "Air and the proper temperature are needed to cause this."

Porcelli had trouble convincing bankers that financing a business such as log salvage was worthwhile and finally secured a loan through the Small Business Administration. It also took him a year to get the proper state permit.

But eventually he did receive the permit and was able to begin business. He purchased a 22-foot, jet-powered work boat, a bulldozer, trucks, diving equipment and two small fishing boats, and began training a crew, which now numbers five.

In less than three months, Porcelli and his crew have brought to the surface enough logs to produce 500,000 board feet of lumber. A 16-foot-long log which yields about 100 board feet is worth approximately $25.

The work is hard and long, consuming 12 to 16 hours a day, but Porcelli has never been happier.

"I'm doing exactly what I want to do; not sitting in an office," he noted. "It's good healthy work and an honest day's work and I think we're doing something good for the environment."

NOTHING TO FEAR: Coping with Phobias. By Fraser Kent. Doubleday, 204 Pages, $7.95.

From acarophobia, the fear of small insects, to zoophobia, the fear of animals, just about every phobia anybody ever thought of is included in Fraser Kent's "Nothing to Fear."

He includes the familiar claustrophobia (fear of enclosed or confined places), agoraphobia (open spaces or public places), acrophobia (heights) and xenophobia (strangers). And along the way he considers phobias (fear of fear), xanthophobia (yellow), pelagophobia (sea) and numerous other esoteric, morbid fears.

Phobias are funny to almost everybody but those who have them. For the "phobics," their uncontrollable fear is not only debilitating but often restricts their ability to earn a living and may even, in rare circumstances, lead to death.

Little has been written about what is, for 18 million Americans, a serious problem. Kent has performed a valuable service in writing this book. He interviewed more than 600 people around the country suffering from phobias and talked with psychologists and psychiatrists who are specialists in dealing with the problem. He also consulted what seems to be just about everything ever written on the subject.

This well written, easy-to-read book is illustrated with case studies, which make it more than an academic discussion and more interesting to read. It provides useful advice to the phobics and their families and friends about the origins of phobia and how to get help in overcoming it.

Sugar Cube Cottage, Easy, Pretty

As a table centerpiece or mantle setting, the quaint little sugar cube cottage is a picturesque addition to decorations. It also makes a thoughtful gift because it is something you have taken the time to make yourself.

First you need about 2 1/2 boxes of dainty sugar cubes. Red frosting will serve as mortar so beat enough confectioners powdered sugar into one unbeaten egg white to make a paste. Tint bright red with vegetable coloring. Place a damp cloth over bowl of mortar when not in use to keep it from drying out. A butter spreader is handy to use as a trowel.

DRAW DIMENSIONS

On a cardboard draw dimensions of the house, 7x5 inches. For the front and back walls, mortar 11 cubes together; stick them to the cardboard with mortar along the 7-inch lines. To make windows and the door, omit 2 cubes for each window and 3 cubes for the door; build walls 5 rows high. Form windowpanes with colored toothpicks.

For the sixth row, which forms tops of windows and door, mortar 11 cubes together and allow to dry before putting in place.

As you build end walls 9 cubes high, cut cubes in halves diagonally to form the gables. In left end, leave opening for window. Build a 2-cube-wide, 11-cube-high chimney; attach to the right end of house, spreading mortar on the surface of chimney to hold in place.

For roof, cut an 8 by 7-inch piece of red or green art paper. Crease lengthwise and cut a notch in the center of one end to fit chimney. See if roof fits in place but do not fasten down yet.

FINISHING TOUCHES

Your sugar house is ready for the finishing touches.

Christmas seal cutouts pasted on heavy white paper make perfect windows and door. Fasten window-panes to the insides of the windows with mortar. In the same manner, fasten the door. Spread mortar over tops of gables to hold down the roof.

To create snow effect on roof, use a pastry brush to dampen the roof with warm water. Then sprinkle Epsom Salt generously on the damp spots and let dry to hold snow in place. Fasten a Santa Claus cut-out to chimney.

Place three cubes across the doorway for the entrance landing. Then form a cobblestone path from the doorway to the gate by rounding off sugar cubes with a knife and laying with mortar three cubes wide.

THEN LANDSCAPE

Next comes the sugar cube fence. Mortar a row of cubes to form a wall around the house, arranging place for gate at end of path. At regular intervals, form pillars in fence by placing second sugar cube topped with cube cut diagonally. Plan so that pillars are placed in each corner of fence and next to gate.

Cut gate latch and hinge from black paper and fasten with mortar.

Cover the yard with cotton, then landscape. Trees and bushes can be made by sticking evergreen tips in potato cubes.

Ann Landers Question By Teacher

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You will probably tell me to go look up the answer in a book of etiquette, but I don't have one. Please help me.

I am a retired schoolteacher. I taught first grade for many years and enjoyed it thoroughly. The problem is this: How do I address the president of the bank, the top lawyer in town, the sheriff and several others who were once my students? I love them all dearly and remember so well their early growing-up years. It seems natural for me to call them, as I did in those days, "Elmer," "Gerald," "Henry," etc. But would it be disrespectful?

I did call the bank president "Mr." the other day and he said, "Miss Jones, won't you please call me Elmer?" I blushed and thought it was terribly sweet of him but somehow I feel I should be more formal. What do you say, Ann? — Still Blushing

DEAR STILL: Call him Elmer and stop blushing or you'll make HIM blush! And this goes for all the others as well. I believe in doing what comes naturally. It works out better for everybody.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Several months ago a girl we all knew and loved was killed in a car accident. She was 17. She loved to write poetry so her parents had their favorite poem printed up and distributed it at the funeral. That poem always gives me a lift when I'm down. Would you please put it in your column and give others the pleasure of reading it?

One and Only You
Every single blade of grass
And every flake of snow

Is just a wee bit different
There's no two alike, you know.

From something small, like grains of sand,
To that gigantic star,
All were made with this in mind:
To be just what they are!

How foolish, then, to imitate,
How useless to pretend,
Since each of us comes from a mind
Whose ideas never end.
There'll only be just ONE of ME

To show what I can do,
And you should, likewise, feel quite proud

There's only ONE of YOU.
— Deb Moir, 1959-1976
THANKS, ANN. — Sorry She's Gone In Edmonton, Alta.
DEAR FRIEND: I am sorry, too. A girl with such a beautiful outlook on life had a great deal to give. Thank you for allowing me to share Deb Moir's lovely poem with my readers.

At Wits End

BY ERMA BOMBECK

I wish when a TV set would "go," the wood would warp, the rollers would fall off, the paint on the knobs would chip and it would start to smell.

You wouldn't feel so guilty about getting rid of it. But our set looks so great and majestic as it stands there in the living room...21 inches of shiny mahogany topped off by a bowl of fresh flowers.

The only thing wrong with it is when the Bionic Woman jumps over a building she keeps on going... Cannon looks like a ballpoint pen...and Laverne and Shirley need a shave.

Not only that, the picture will occasionally go into a spin and you expect to see an orange and two cherries lock into place when it stops.

The other night when we were watching the three angels, my husband said, "Something's wrong with that picture and I can't put my finger on it."

"I think it's because Jaclyn Smith looks like Raymond Massey."

"That's it!" he shouted, "is it possible we need a new set already?"

"I'm afraid so. Fifteen years fly when you're having fun." The new set was only a matter of selecting and having it delivered.

The problem is how do you dispose of an old TV set? I called my daughter at her apartment. "How would you like an extra TV set?"

"Is it the one that makes John Wayne look like Woody Allen?"

"It has a beautiful cabinet."

"I'll pass."

I called my son at school. "How would you like your own TV set?"

"Is it portable?"

"It depends on how many of you are there to lift it."

"Maybe we could keep it in the spare room." I told my husband. "I'll bet if someone is handy, they could fix it for $5."

"You said that about the one in each bedroom, the kitchen, the garage and the basement. The old one on the porch is even beginning to smell."

Thank goodness.

Bigotry A Target of 'The Tallest Liar'

THE TALLEST LIAR. By C.L. Sulzberger. Crown. 216 Pages. $8.95.

What would you do if you were over 8 feet tall, naive, of Nazi, Jewish and black heritage, white-skinned, and possessed a slight-but-real tail?

If you were C.L. Sulzberger and such a creature was the product of your imagination, you would write a strange and outlandish story.

Curly von Snarl, the character in question, has a grandmother who was a member of a vanishing African tribe, a mother who was Jewish, and a father who was a high-ranking member of the Third Reich.

Also, he becomes an American. Curly becomes a clandestine member of the Globetrotters, a Canadian woodcutter, a South African showpiece, a potential Israeli and other things designed to give Sulzberger a showcase for demonstrating what he calls man's inexhaustible capacity to hate.

Consider, for example, the time Curly is in South Africa. He becomes involved in a controversial trial after killing someone. His German blood — and the Nazi view of racial purity — makes him acceptable to an apartheid government. But his black genes make him totally rejected.

We're banking on the future of American Agriculture.

A Scriptural Garden?

NEOT KEDUMIM, Israel (AP)—Helen Frenkley, combination agronomist-historian-sociologist, is planting a biblical garden and discovering surprises such as the world's original jeweler's weights and an ancient air-conditioning system.

Miss Frenkley, who immigrated to Israel from Washington, D.C., eight and a half years ago, is director of Neot Kedumim, a 400-acre plot, where she and other experts are carefully reproducing the original flora of biblical Israel. In the process she has become an expert in the vast realm of plant lore and symbolism of the Old Testament.

In Neot Kedumim, halfway between Tel Aviv and Jerusalem, grow all the exotic plants of the Bible — myrtle and hyssop, tamarisk and moriah, acacia and ladanum. The gardens probably won't be open to the public for several years, but when they are, signs and electronic speakers will give visitors a botanical tour of the prophets' Israel.

"When Moses led the Jews out of Egypt to the land of Israel, he brought them to a richly forested country — a 'land flowing with milk and honey,'

Thousands of years of neglect and erosion have left the hills denuded of trees and the ground bared to the bedrock," says Miss Frenkley. "We are bringing together the plants that made up that original landscape, the plants that the ancient Israelites lived with every day."

"The seeds of this carob tree are called 'gerah' in the Bible, which was the smallest ancient weight. It is the origin of our word 'carat,' the standard jeweler's measure, equal to about .0009 ounce."

Near the stocky carob trunks is a field being plowed for wheat, which Miss Frenkley believes was the original "tree of knowledge" of the Garden of Eden.

"The theory was proposed by a rabbi many years ago. The sociological implications are staggering," she says. "After all, good and evil, and civilization with all its knowledge and problems, began when man learned how to cultivate grain and settle down from his nomadic life."

In a grove of chest-high tamarisk saplings, Miss Frenkley tells how the full-grown trees acted as a biblical air-conditioner.

The Ford Model A was introduced in 1929.

4-H Firsthand

To most young Americans good citizenship means voting, respecting the flag and standing to sing "The Star Spangled Banner." To four million 4-H members, citizenship means all these things — and much more.

As participants in the national 4-H citizenship program, these boys and girls are responding to the needs, rights and responsibilities of others as they develop their own citizenship skills. Across the country 4-H members are helping the elderly, working with the handicapped, teaching low-income children, beautifying their communities and becoming involved in local, state and national issues, points out Claudette Mitchell county agent with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

4-H members 9-19 are finding solutions to local problems through research into the needs of their communities and then taking action to fulfill those needs. In California, 4-H'ers designed a day camp program for nearly 100 low-income children. A 4-H club in New York carried out a special project for the physically and mentally handicapped. And a group of Florida 4-H members surveyed needs of senior citizens and then planned parties and involved them in a wide variety of recreational activities.

Each year, more than 6,000 boys and girls from across the country meet during the summer in Washington, D.C., at the National 4-H Center for weeklong conferences to learn more about citizenship and their American heritage. They return home to put into practice the skills they learned while in the nation's capital, points out Claudette.

4-H citizenship projects and activities are supervised by the Extension Service. Young people can be recognized for their accomplishments in 4-H citizenship through awards sponsored by The Coca-Cola Company.

The company offers recognition for 4-H'ers at all levels of participation: nine $1,000 scholarships nationally, an all-expense paid trip to the National 4-H Congress in Chicago for one member per state each year, and four medals of honor in each county.

During the congress two of the nine national citizenship winners along with their counterparts in the 4-H achievement and leadership programs are selected to receive Presidential Awards. Winners are chosen by the Extension Service and awards are arranged by the National 4-H Council.

More information on the 4-H citizenship program is available from the county Extension office, notes Miss Mitchell.

Woman, 87, Still Runs Needlecraft Shop

TECUMSEH, Mich. (AP) — Margaret Kidman may be 87, but she's not ready for a rocking chair yet.

This pert little Tecumseh woman still operates her own business, the Needlecraft Shop, in her home just as she has for the past 36 years.

Her daily schedule is a demanding one. She's up by 6:30 a.m. every day except Sunday, because she opens her shop at 7. All day long she greets an intermittent stream of customers, catering to their needs for yarn and other fancywork supplies.

Whenever she can grab a few moments she knits booties or does other needlecraft, because she sells the finished products as well as the raw materials.

She waits on customers until 9 p.m., six days a week, except in the winter, when she closes at 8 o'clock.

Although she has always worked on needlecraft, she had never made a business out of it until her husband was killed. After his death, she moved from a farm to her present home, unpacked a suitcase of her handmade embroidered things, and began to sell them in her home. Originally, she kept everything in a cupboard in her dining room.

As the demand grew, she began to stock more and more kinds of supplies. Today her home has been taken over almost entirely by the yarn shop.

In some rooms, one has to inch through sideways to keep from knocking over the merchandise.

Atlanta Rally Attracts 5,000

By The Associated Press
Thousands of farmers who drove tractors, pickup trucks and go-carts to weekend rallies in 30 states were back on the farm Monday waiting to see whether their demonstrations for higher prices for their products will have any effect.

The largest demonstration was in Atlanta where the state patrol estimated there was 5,000 tractors. Organizers of the Georgia rally claimed it was 17,000.

In Topeka, Kan., 5,000 people showed up at the state capitol in one of the weekend's other large rallies.

They were organized by American Agriculture, the Colorado-based group claiming one million members which also is calling for a nationwide farm strike Dec. 14.

It is unclear what effect such a strike - which would include a halt to the purchase of farm equipment - would have.

Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland has endorsed the strike, but is among those questioning whether it will be effective unless nearly all of the nation's 2 million commercial farmers join in.

Appearing on the CBS broadcast "Face the Nation," Bergland said Sunday that the government has to balance the needs of farmers, consumers and nations which import American farm products.

"We don't think it is a proper function of government to guarantee the kinds of profits that some people are demanding," said Bergland, a former Minnesota wheat farmer.

"We have to provide farmers with some measure of security, however, against the vagaries of international weather and politics and domestic economic circumstances," he said.

"The consumer is not going to be well fed at a reasonable cost if agriculture is driven to bankruptcy. We think to provide a federal guarantee at the cost of production is about as far as the government should go."

Bergland said he does not believe the farmers' protest - particularly a demand for 100 percent parity - will force any immediate changes in government policy.

Parity is a complex, theoretical yardstick based on an assumption that at 100 percent parity, the price a farmer gets for his goods, such as a bushel of wheat, should have the same purchasing power as the amount he sold it for during the 1910-14 based period used in the formula.

Hughes Trial Won't Be Halted

WASHINGTON (AP) - An attempt by California authorities to halt a trial in Houston over Howard Hughes' estate was rebuffed by the Supreme court Monday.

The justices turned down a request by Myron Siedorf, chief inheritance tax attorney for California, that they order the trial halted while they try to decide the recluse millionaire's home of record when he died last year.

The Houston trial has resumed after a two-week delay and is in the evidence stage.

At stake is a hefty sum in inheritance taxes either California or Texas will collect if either state can prove Hughes lived there at the time of his death April 5, 1976. The states have competing claims of being Hughes' home state at his death.

California earlier this month asked the Supreme Court to decide which state's claim should win out.

Probate Judge Pat Gregory, presiding over the Houston trial, last week refused to delay the start of the proceedings.

Siedorf told Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., who referred California's request to the full court, that a postponement was made necessary "by the insistence of Texas upon proceeding in its courts with a trial at which Texas will seek to establish domicile and the liability of the estate to it for inheritance taxes."

"The very purpose of California's suit... is to obtain... a judgment... that its rival claimant Texas is not entitled to levy a domicile-based inheritance tax because the assets of the estate are insufficient to satisfy both the claims of California and Texas," Siedorf told the court.

A federal tax return lists the value of the estate at $167 million.

The Houston trial is to establish Hughes' legal domicile at the time of his death and the validity of the so-called Mormon will allegedly left behind by Hughes.

Hughes' relatives are challenging that document, claiming it is a forgery. They are attempting to prove that Hughes' legal domicile was Nevada - a state that has no inheritance tax.

If California is able to collect an inheritance tax, it will take 24 percent of the total estate, an estimated $32 million. Texas

SANTA and the PIGWIDGEN

By LUCRECE BEALE

Synopsis: Claus uses the ring to change the donkey back into Tweedledee, leaving only two weapons to fight the Pigwidgen. Then the elf falls into a snake nest.

"I am done for," said the elf. "You must go on."

CHAPTER TEN THE DAGGER

WHEN CLAUS saw the snakes preparing to strike Tweedledee he knew what he had to do. He dug the magic mouth-harp from his pocket.

The elves had told him the sound of the harp would charm the fiercest foe. Would it work for a thousand snakes? wondered Claus.

Although he had never played such an instrument, he took a deep breath and blew with all his might on the harp.

The sweetest music he had ever heard filled the air. The snakes grew silent. Slowly they uncoiled. Their tongues were still. Their eyes grew dreamy.

Claus took his mouth from the harp and shouted, "Tweedledee, come!" Then he filled his lungs with air again and blew desperately on the harp while the elf, freed of his hypnosis, scrambled up the log to safety.

As soon as Tweedledee was out of the pit he ran. Claus stumbled after him still blowing furiously on the harp. They ran until they had no breath left either to run or blow. They fell into a snow bank and lay there gasping.

Presently Claus sat up. He threw away the harp. It was the third weapon and its magic would not work again. Claus said not a word but Tweedledee said miserably, "It's all my fault." Then he wailed, "But it wasn't because I lost my temper! I was only trying to be kind to the rabbit."

Claus nodded. "Ah, well," he said. "We still have one last weapon." He drew from his belt the dagger whose point had been dipped in a deadly poison. "When I meet the Pigwidgen I shall use this. Even if the dagger fails to kill, the poison will."

Tweedledee took the dagger in his own hands and examined it. "The point seems dull," he said critically. He pressed the point gently against the palm of his hand. "Ah," he said with satisfaction. "It is sharp enough." He handed back the dagger.

"Let us go," said Claus rising. "For surely we have wasted time enough."

But Tweedledee did not stir. His face turned dreadfully pale. Sweat poured down his forehead. His whole body shook with fever. "I cannot move," he grunted.

The awful truth came to Claus. He opened Tweedledee's hand. There lay a single drop of blood where the dagger had pressed against the palm.

"You are poisoned!" cried Claus. He cradled the trembling elf in his arms. "What shall we do? What shall we do?"

"Leave me," murmured Tweedledee.

"Never!"

"I have been nothing but trouble."

"It doesn't matter. You never meant harm."

"I am done for," growled the elf. "You must go on. There is no more time to lose."

Claus would not leave. "There must be some way to save you. You are an elf. Tell me what you know!"

"There is a way," sighed Tweedledee.

"What is it? Tell me!"

"If," whispered Tweedledee, fainting, "a stone should weep for me."

Raid Convictions Studied By Federal Appeals Court

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - A federal appeals court was asked Monday to set aside the convictions of two men in connection with a commando-style raid on a Mexican jail which freed 14 American prisoners in 1976.

The court was told that the men were found guilty only of an obscure little law which forbids the carrying of a sawed off shotgun across the Mexican-American border. Such a crime should be a crime only if the person knows it is illegal in the first place, defense attorneys said.

Appealing were William McCoy Hill, 32, and Sterling Lake Davis Sr., both of Dallas.

At the trial, Donald Fielden, 29, a burly ex-Marine, testified he masterminded the raid with the financing of Davis who wanted to get his son out of the Pedras Negras jail, across the border from Eagle Pass, Tex.

Fielden said he, Hill and Billy Jack Blackwell held Mexican guards at gunpoint and released the prisoners, who crossed the Rio Grande into Eagle Pass and turned themselves in to U.S. authorities.

Mexico has asked for the extradition of the men in the raid - giving the case added impetus in light of last week's exchange of Mexican and American prisoners.

Fielden said he was paid $5,000 by Davis and also collected several thousand dollars from other prisoners who were released.

Fielden pleaded guilty and was sentenced to four years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Hill was found guilty of conspiring to export and import the shotgun, but was acquitted on two other charges. He was sentenced to six years in prison and $10,000 fine.

Davis was found guilty of conspiracy to export the gun and was sentenced to five years on top of a 10-year sentence he is serving for violation of parole.

The third defendant, Blackwell, 19, was acquitted.

One of the main points of the appeal lies on whether the men intended to violate the guntransportation law. Defense attorneys said the jury should have considered intent in their deliberations.

Another point at issue was the massive news coverage of the raid and the whether the court adequately checked out the impact of the publicity on the jurors, all of whom said they had heard of the case.

The court gave no indication when it would rule.

The federal government owns and operates a fleet of nearly 191,000 trucks, which makes it the motor vehicle industry's biggest truck user, says the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association.

US Business System Hurt by Pressure

NEW YORK (AP) - Concern is growing in American business that the private enterprise system that helped make this the most materially wealthy nation on earth is eroding under pressure of societal change and bureaucratic drift.

Causes and effect are intermingled. The proliferation and rigid application of laws, the emphasis on consumerism at the expense of production and a "no-risk" mentality in regard to technology are among the factors involved.

Prominently mentioned also are a lack of economic understanding and a feeling of estrangement from the economic system.

While polls sometimes show Americans tending to become more conservative, rejecting the notion of government as the answer to all problems, the trends seem to continue almost beyond control.

Many businessmen today feel they are being isolated from the community at large and categorized as the enemy, sometimes by the nation's most respected leaders, even by the president.

Some $50 billion would "go into the pockets of the oil companies" if Congress rejected his program to continue regulating oil and gas prices, said President Carter in October. He has angry, using the words "ripoff" and "profiteering."

He was also incorrect. The $50 billion figure referred to gross profits, not net income. Should the oil companies gross $50 billion during any period, they would likely keep as income less than 10 percent of it.

Infrequently, business is pleasantly surprised. His attitude molded by years of frustration, Edgar Speer's words snapped with anger. "Big deal," he said scornfully of his meeting the next day with the president.

"In this country," he said brittlely, "we're saying it's irrelevant whether our steel industry competes or not." In other countries, he said, they protect their businesses for the welfare of all.

Carter listened to Speer, changed his own thinking on imports, and on Dec. 6 announced a plan to protect the industry against import competition and to aid it through loan guarantees and tax breaks.

But businessmen say their viewpoint is usually more difficult to convey. Speer himself noted during the interview that he had sought a White House meeting on imports three years before the invitation came through.

He observed also that the import problem, while foremost, was but one area in which cooperation was needed. Exact application of environmental regulations to obsolescent units also contributed to steel's problems, he said.

Wouldn't it be more efficient, he asked, to be more economically aware and sensitive, and permit those old facilities to live out their brief remaining life and spend the money instead on new, environmentally clean facilities?

Sidney Terry, Chrysler Corp. vice president, asks similar questions. He tells of the tiny, under $10 anti-pollution item that Chrysler inadvertently substituted for the almost identical device approved by the Environmental Protection Agency.

The EPA sued for $95 million, or $10,000 a car, even though the device was equally effective to the original one, even though most of the errors were corrected. The judge dismissed the case. There was no case, he said.

Why does the government assume such an attitude? For the protection of the public? Or, ask some businessmen, for the protection of bureaucratic rights that eventually hurt the consumer by inexorably forcing up prices?

Edward David Jr., president of Exxon Research & Engineering, and science adviser to President Nixon, believes our attempts to eliminate risk in everything is foolhardy, thwarting technology as well as free choice.

Relatively little money is being appropriated for research that produces new technology, he said. Instead, it goes for product improvement, for attempts to eliminate risks that are inherent in life itself.

Sidney Homer, a noted credit authority, observes that as a nation we also have been funneling more money into the consumption goods, and less into the means for producing those goods. We don't understand, he says; it cannot continue.

A lack of understanding is the common denominator of business gripes. Subject of repeated surveys, the answer is always the same: Most Americans know very little about their system. Many people feel estranged from it.

"More and more people are coming to see their personal interests and the interests of business as separate and incompatible," says Paul Webber, the securities firm, in an essay to be incorporated in its 1977 annual report.

We demand more from government and government demands more from business but, says Walter Hansen, chairman of Pete, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., the accountants, we fail to see that:

"The closer the effective tax rate approaches 100 percent the closer it is that tax revenues, production and job creation approach zero."

CIRCUS CROWDS BREAK RECORD

DETROIT (AP) - There's nothing like a circus to lift the spirits, and in this city a record run by the circus is being hailed as evidence of a dramatic crime turnaround.

More than 115,000 persons jammed Olympia Stadium here in a recent six-day run of the Ringling Brothers Barnum & Bailey circus - setting an all-time record for the circus in this city.

Last year only 73,000 persons attended during a two-week engagement and the circus played to several near-empty houses. Ringling Brothers and Olympia officials attributed the record attendance to new confidence in the safety of the city.

In 1976, some performances drew as few as 200 persons as Detroiters stayed away in droves during a period of gang violence. Since then, the city has rehired some 600 police who had been laid off and promoted veteran policeman William Hart, to chief. Youth gangs are no longer a serious problem and all crime statistics are down by 20 percent and more, city officials say.

Satellite Unit For Hospital Care Planned

PARIS, Ark. (AP) — The city of Paris and the St. Edward Medical Center at Fort Smith are undertaking what they believe is an innovative project — providing health care by long distance. The Paris community has been without a hospital since the late 1960s, when a privately owned doctors' hospital closed. Leaders in the community wanted a health facility closer than 20 or 40 miles away, but officials at St. Edward and their consultants advised them a rural community such as Paris could not economically support a full-fledged hospital. They suggested instead that Paris build a satellite. Paris Mayor Bill Elaken said the new satellite could be smaller than a totally self-sufficient hospital need be, with the result that it would be cheaper for the patient. "It is a major effort at cost containment, not only in the building, but also in the operation," said Sister Judith Marie Keith, administrator of St. Edward. The Paris satellite will have 22 beds, X-ray equipment, laboratories, an operating room, an obstetrics unit and a nursery, just like any other hospital. The savings result from the fact that the facility will not have to have a kitchen, laundry, or areas for supplies and accounting, Sister Judith said. It will use the facilities at the 341-bed medical center for those functions. Supplies will be transported the 40 miles between the two facilities daily. Money for the $1.4-million construction cost was generated through a Farmers Home Administration loan, a grant from the Ozark Regional Commission, and a five-million tax voters in Paris approved. But Paris is not yet assured of even a satellite hospital. The contractual agreement between the city and the medical center says that Paris must help find doctors to staff the satellite. The shortage of doctors in Arkansas has been a statewide problem. "We will not participate in the maintenance of the facility if, on the day the doors open, they do not have three full-time practicing physicians in Paris," Sister Judith said. Groundbreaking is scheduled for the first of next year, with construction to be completed the following year. "We feel the country is looking at this project because it's so innovative," Sister Judith said.

LIFE OF RILEY

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG AP Newfeatures

Q. — We have wood siding on our house. It hasn't been painted for several years and is in need of it. When I examined the siding a few days ago to see whether any repairs had to be made before painting, I noticed that the heads of many of the nails were rusted. I assume that if I paint right over them, the rust will show through again in a short time, but I can't see pulling every one of those nails and putting in new ones. Is there any other solution?

A. — Yes. It won't be easy, but it will be a lot easier than trying to replace the nails. You will have to use a nail set to drive each nail a little below the surface. With a tiny brush, touch up each nail head with a rust-inhibiting paint. When the paint has dried, fill each indentation with wood putty. When the house is repainted, the repaired spots won't show. The bad news in this explanation is that you must do this with all the nails, not just those which are rusted, otherwise you will have the same problem again within a year or two, perhaps less.

Q. — Some weeks ago I purchased a cover for my paint roller. It worked all right with the latex paint I did my living room with, but when I cleaned it with water and left it to dry, it became all tangled. Can you tell me what caused this?

A. — It is possible the roller cover is made of lamb's wool. When used with water, it doesn't exactly get tangled, as you say, but it does get matted. That type of cover should not be used with water-based paints or washed in water.

Whitefaces Meet Palo Duro Tonight

By BOB NIGH
Sports Editor

The Hereford Whitefaces, 6-6 of the year and sporting one player with a 24.4 points per game scoring average, travel to Amarillo tonight to play the Palo Duro Dons, a team which has forged a 3-7 mark thus far this season.

The varsity encounter will follow a junior varsity match which will begin at 6 p.m. in the Palo Duro gym.

All-everything wing man Kelly Kitchens will lead the Herd charge against the Dons. Kitchens is sporting a 24.4 scoring average after the first dozen games of the year, and is coming off an outstanding performance in the Amarillo Tournament last weekend.

Kitchens had a 27.0 average for three games in the tourney as the Herd came back from an overtime loss to Odessa Permian to capture third place in the event.

The 'Faces downed district foe Plainview in the third-place battle. The Bulldogs, first-half winner in District 4-4A a year ago, have slumped to a 1-9 start this year.

Hereford and Monterey boast of the best records among loop teams at the present. The Whitefaces and Plainsmen both stand 6-6, while the rest of the district teams are far below 500.

Cowboys Win 42-35 Defense-Less Game

By ERIC PREWITT
AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The halftime show, featuring a fireworks display that got out of hand, was topped only by the offensive fireworks generated by the Dallas Cowboys and San Francisco 49ers.

"It was a fun game for the fans," said Tony Dorsett, the Cowboys' star rookie who scored two touchdowns in Monday night's 42-35 National Football League victory.

"Personally, I'd rather be in a lopsided game with us on top," he added.

"If someone had said there would be 77 points scored, I wouldn't have believed it," said Coach Ken Meyer of the 49ers, whose team totaled only 29 points in losing its first four games of the season.

"They sell better with a Family Homes sign out front."

Coronado stands at 3-8, while Lubbock High owns a 2-6 mark and the Bulldogs bring up the rear with their 1-9 record.

First-year Herd coach Bobby Decker has two other Whitefaces scoring in double figures this season. David Schumacher sports a 12.8 average through 12 games, while junior Robert Graves is hitting at an 11.8 clip. The other two remaining starters, David Arney and Jackie Mercer, have 7.6 and 5.4 averages respectively.

Point totals for the first five read 293 for Kitchens, 153 for Schumacher, 142 for Graves, 91 for Arney, and 59 for Mercer. Mercer's points have come in 11 games, with the junior ballhandler having missed one contest due to illness.

The second four varsity members include Brent Allen (4.3), Larry McNutt (1.3), Ricky Matchett (5.0), and Kent Ellis (6). Greg Brockman, another member of the second five, quit the squad last week to concentrate on off-season football training.

In the rebounding department Schumacher is at the forefront with 92 total caroms this season for a 7.7 per-game average. Graves has collected 60 rebounds for a 5.0 standard, while Arney has 47 for a 3.9 average.

Dockery Retains Three

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Three of the current Texas Tech assistant football coaches have been asked to stay on the staff of new Head Coach Rex Dockery.

The three were included in the names of the five assistants named Monday by Dockery.

Dockery and the trio worked under Steve Sloan, who resigned to go to the University of Mississippi.

The holdovers from Sloan's staff are offensive line coach Al Tanara, backfield coach Taylor McNeel and defensive end coach Jess Stiles.

The other two are Bud Casey, who comes from Georgia Tech and Sam Robertson of Southwestern Louisiana.

Casey will work with the offense and Robertson with the defense. Specific duties will not be assigned until the staff is completed.

Dockery said "We think all five are excellent coaches with excellent backgrounds. Hopefully, we can get the staff completed and get on to other things in the next week or so."

Plainview Defeats Herd Girls, 58-30

By BOB NIGH
Sports Editor

With playmaker Tammy Heard sidelined with an ankle sprain the Hereford Whiteface girls' basketball team couldn't offset a 32-point performance by Plainview's Gay Hemphill Monday night, and fell to the Bulldogs 58-30 in Plainview.

The Herd varsity, now 4-5, will play Palo Duro at 3:15 Friday in the first round of the fracture on the foot back during the cross country season.

"It was a pretty physical game," Herd coach Roy Shipp said Tuesday morning. "We just got into foul trouble early trying to guard their big girl, and couldn't contain her."

Hereford's Marie Schilling and Denise Albracht both got into foul trouble early in the game guarding Hemphill, a 6-1 post.

Heard, the Herd sprakplug whenever she's in the game, sat out the entire contest as Shipp tried to let her injured ankle heal some before the Pampa Tournament this weekend.

"Hopefully she'll be ready this Friday," Shipp said. "Right now we're treating the ankle twice a day trying to get it ready."

The Herd began the game like Heard's loss wouldn't be a factor, racing to a 9-0 lead early. The Bulldogs roared back, however, with Hemphill leading the way.

Plainview cut the lead to 9-6 at the end of the first period, and then soared to a 34-14 lead at the half. The lead grew steadily with Plainview ahead 38-16 after three periods and upping the margin to 28 points as the game ended.

Sheri Whitaker led the Herd scoring attack with nine points in the game, while Schilling added seven. Rounding out the scoring were LuAnna Berryman and Mary Kooser with four points apiece, and Albracht, Laurie Pittard, and Debra Rogers, all with two points each.

All was not thorns for HHS for the night, however. The Herd JV gained its second win of the season with a 39-36 win over the Bulldog JV. Beverly Nixon took up some of the slack for a missing Darlene Sanders, who also sat out her game with an injured ankle.

Sanders has been the leading scorer for the JV during the year, but Nixon tallied 10 points, and Rhonda Foad and Jennifer Griffin added seven points each to lead the win.

Kerry Hacker and Melissa Tatum also pitched in six points each to give JV coach Gail Barnes a balanced scoring attack, and Alane Rogers scored two and Christie Beene one, to round out the scoring.

"I was really pleased with the way the JV played," Shipp said. "The only possible sour note to the JV win was that Nixon reinjured a foot in the contest. "We don't know right now how bad it is," Shipp said. "We're having it looked at today." Nixon suffered a stress

William and Mary didn't gain a spot in the national college basketball rankings, but the Indians certainly made their presence felt in the latest balloting by upsetting North Carolina and enabling Notre Dame to move into second spot behind Kentucky.

North Carolina, 5-1, fell from second to fifth after losing 78-75 to William and Mary.

Notre Dame, 6-0, taking advantage of the upset and helping itself with three victories last week that included a 69-66 triumph at UCLA, received nine first-place votes and 872 points in nationwide balloting by sports writers and sportscasters.

But the Fighting Irish were easily outdistanced by Kentucky, 3-0, which beat Indiana 87-64 and Kansas 73-66 and remained No. 1 with 42 first-place votes and 1,014 points.

The other first-place vote went to Marquette which moved from fourth to third with 799 points after two easy victories.

Arkansas, which boosted its record to 6-0 with two wins, moved into fourth from sixth with 647 points. North Carolina, which also won once last week, was next with 485.

Cincinnati, 4-0 after nipping Miami of Ohio 61-60, was sixth and was followed by Indiana State, 5-0; UCLA, 4-1; Nevada-Las Vegas, 5-0, and Louisville, 3-1.

Indiana State advanced four spots from 11th to third with 799 points after two easy victories. UCLA dropped from fifth. Nevada-Las Vegas moved up from 10th and Louisville advanced from 16th to 10th with a 88-85 win over Michigan and a drubbing of Robert Morris.

The Second Ten were San Francisco, Syracuse, Holy Cross, Providence, Michigan, Detroit, Purdue, Maryland, Kansas State and Kansas.
