

House rejects nuke dump amendment

An amendment to cut nuclear waste repository funding from $677 million to $386 million failed 351-68 in the House of Representatives on Wednesday after a 90-minute debate.

The amendment, presented by Rep. James Weaver of Oregon, was supported by Rep. Beau Boulter of Amarillo and Rep. Larry Combest of Lubbock. It was part of an energy and water appropriations bill.

The fight to stop the Department of Energy from site characterization in Deaf Smith County, Texas; Washington and Nevada, has centered recently on the legal aspect of whether the DOE has been following the Nuclear Waste Policy Act properly. Representatives from the three states selected for characterization have charged that the DOE has predetermined where the repository will go and that that is why the search for a second site has been halted indefinitely. The search for a second site is included in the NWPA.

Among those speaking in favor of the amendment were Reps. Ron Widen and Les Aucoin of Oregon; Al Swift, John Bonker, and Norman Dicks, all of Washington; Henry Reed and Barbara Vucanovich of Nevada; and Ed Markey of Massachusetts.

Silvio Conte, R-Mass., and Morris Udall, D-Ariz., were key speakers against the amendment. Udall is chairman of the House Interior Committee.

"I'm not anti-nuclear repository, I'm not anti-nuclear. I'm pro-safety," Combest told the House. "We've waited years and years while nuclear waste was building up, I think we can wait a few more years."

Boulter and Combest appeared before the House subcommittee on Tuesday. Boulter claimed that politics instead of science and safety are motivating the search for a repository.

Electing GOP governor 'crucial,' Reagan says

DALLAS (AP) — Electing a Republican as Texas governor this fall is crucial to the GOP's fortunes across the nation, according to the country's top Republican, President Reagan.

"I hope the people of Texas know that by electing Bill Clements they won't only be putting Texas back on the road to economic good times, they'll also be sending a message to the rest of the country, especially to the Democratic Party leaders," Reagan said during a stop in Dallas to campaign for Clements.

Ousting Democratic Gov. Mark White in the fall will send the Democratic Party to stop policies of "tax and tax and spend and spend," Reagan said.

Reagan spoke at a GOP rally held at Dallas' Apparel Mart and later was guest of honor at a private luncheon at the Loew's Anatole Hotel.

He credited Republican policies for bringing lower taxes, lower inflation and interest rates and creating new jobs. But, he said, Texas is experiencing financial difficulties because of Democratic leadership in Austin.

"I think it's a tragedy that hard times have hit Texas and that unemployment is as high as it is in this great state. I want you all to know that this administration in Washington is aware of Texas problems," he said.

"So let's say something else flat out: One of the most important steps Texans can take towards full economic recovery is to say no to any more years of tax and tax and spend and spend in Austin," he said.

Reagan said his memories of Dallas include the 1976 and 1980 primaries and his nomination here at the National Republican Convention in 1984.

"Flying over the convention center this morning I started asking myself, I wonder how folks feel about giving it one more try," he said, winning a burst of applause. "Thank you for that, but I'm kidding of course," he said.

Reagan said Texas voters can influence national policy makers by their vote this November. "Believe me, the liberals in Washington know what's at stake in this election," he said.

If Republicans do well in the fall, that could change the political landscape, he said.

At the rally, a group of Dallas-based protesters against South Africa's apartheid policy raised signs spelling out the words, "Sanctions Now," and some heckled Reagan during the speech.

Reagan ignored the protesters except for the comment, "There's an echo in here," toward the end of his speech.

Protester Anne McKinney said there were about 45 people in the audience protesting, some from the Dallas chapter of Citizens Against Apartheid.

White urges oil tariff

AUSTIN (AP) — While saying Texans were honored by President Reagan's visit to Dallas, Gov. Mark White again urged Reagan to impose a tariff on imported oil.

In a letter to the president, White said cheap foreign oil is devastating the American petroleum industry and driving up unemployment.

"In the past five months, our worst fears for the domestic energy industry have been realized," White wrote in a letter that aides said was delivered to Reagan on Wednesday while the president visited Dallas to campaign for former Republican Gov. Bill Clements. Clements is challenging White in November.

As oil prices have tumbled, White said, the economy has gotten worse.

"The economic benefits you predicted from low oil prices haven't materialized. National unemployment remains high, manufacturing output is down, capital expenditures are down and the economy remains weak," White said.

White repeated his call for an emergency tariff on oil imports, saying failure to do so would endanger future American energy supplies.

"We need action now," White told Reagan. "Not just for the sake of the Texans you will meet today, but for all Americans, I urge you to reconsider your reluctance to act upon this matter."

Three bikes reported stolen

Three bikes were reported stolen to the Hereford Police on Wednesday. Two were taken from Green Acres Pool and one was taken from a residence.

Two burglaries also were reported. A stereo taken in a residential burglary was found in an alley behind the house and police continue checking a burglary at the Cement Pond in which about $20 in candy bars were taken.

A purse theft with a loss of $181 was reported and patrolmen checked a prowler report in the 300 block of Bradley.

Other reports included juveniles fighting, a false alarm at Hereford Texas Federal Credit Union, an assault, a civil matter, disorderly conduct, two criminal trespassings, and a firecracker report.

Bad experiments caused Chernobyl nuclear disaster

MOSCOW (AP) — Badly prepared experiments conducted to see if a turbine generator could provide energy to an atomic power plant in case of an accident caused the Chernobyl nuclear disaster, a Soviet official said today.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov, responding to questions at a news conference, said he could not provide full technical details of the experiments.

He said specifics would be published in a report "hundreds of pages" long, to be presented to the Vienna-based International Atomic Energy Agency by September.

Soviet authorities have said the April 26 accident at the Ukrainian power plant occurred as workers were taking down the station for scheduled maintenance work. They said the plant was at a 7 percent power level at the time.

"When you shut the station, the generator is still working," Gerasimov said. "The experiment (was) ... if there is an accident, could the generator provide energy for the station for 40 to 45 minutes."

"The capabilities of the generators were studied, the generators that generate kinetic energy," he said.

Gerasimov said the experiment was "a purely technical experiment, nothing special about it." He denied what he said were suggestions in the Western media that it had military significance.

"The point is not that the experiment was conducted, the point is that it was conducted without the necessary precautions," Gerasimov said.

The ruling Politburo said in a report issued Saturday that Chernobyl's No. 4 reactor exploded as workers conducted improperly supervised and badly prepared experiments on a turbine generator.

The report said 28 people were killed and more than 100,000 evacuated after the accident.

Rough times make job hard for civic cheerleaders

CRANE, Texas (AP) — With unemployment figures climbing into double digits as energy industry fortunes plummet, civic cheerleading must try harder than ever.

The effect on Crane has not differed from that on any other small town with an economy based primarily on oilfield service and production.

Several small businesses have closed in the town of 3,500. Dozens of jobless residents are moving out. What little oilfield service business is left goes to Midland-Odessa companies.

"Everywhere you go — at coffee shops, on street corners, in offices — all you hear is how bad things are and how much worse they're going to get," said Gene Clack, president of the Crane County Chamber of Commerce board of directors.

To fight back, the chamber has hung a new shingle on its door. No longer just cheerleaders, chamber leaders are using psychology to turn the town around.

It's called the United for Crane campaign. A letter to the editor in the Crane newspaper described it as an effort to organize businesses and individuals to help one another during difficult economic times.

"I hope there will be several things accomplished, the main one being to make some sort of mental adjustment in people's attitude about where Crane is headed," Clack told the San Angelo Standard-Times.

Thus far, the most specific plans are to host a countywide rally on Aug. 21, to print weekly, "What's so good about Crane?" columns in the newspaper, and to encourage major oil companies to hire Crane oilfield service companies.

Major business operators tend to use Midland-Odessa companies because they underbid small town companies, said Jincy Burks, chamber secretary-manager.

Burks said city and county governments will be asked to pass resolutions to support Crane businesses.

"It's mostly to build up morale and remind people that the town is not dying and remind them of why we're living in Crane," Burks said.

Clack said representatives from major and independent oil companies will be invited to the rally as well as merchants and social and service organizations.

Although the purpose is to adjust the town's attitude, Clack believes the goal is supported by physical evidence.

Teachers need larger role in education directives

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Fourteen of the nation's top education experts called on state officials today to begin a wave of school reform giving teachers more power and stressing experimentation and flexibility in the classroom.

The report, "What Next? More Leverage For Teachers," was unveiled at the Education Commission of the States national forum and annual meeting.

While hailing educational reforms of the past few years, the commission report stressed the need for greater professionalism for teachers and more individualized instruction for students.

New Jersey Gov. Thomas H. Kean, the commission chairman, said the test for education in the next five years rests on the quality of people attracted to teaching, not on the passage of reform bills pending in many states.

The commission report is a follow-up to one issued in May by the Carnegie Task Force On Teaching As A Profession titled "A Nation Prepared: Teachers For The 21st Century."

Three areas for redefining the teaching profession are discussed in the new report: restructuring teacher training; changing teacher working conditions; and making teaching more like a profession.

Creating great schools of education is one way to achieving greater success in the educational field, the experts said.

National commission reports

Diane Ravitch, adjunct professor of history and education at Teachers' College, Columbia University, suggested abolishing undergraduate education departments.

"If teaching is a profession, we have to move training to the graduate level. What we're doing now is permitting people to use undergraduate education courses to crowd out the real education they should be getting," she said.

A second area addressed in the report is the stifling effect of school administrations on teachers.

"Schools operate in an incredibly bureaucratic culture, at the bottom of which we find the teacher," said Marc Tucker, head of the Carnegie Forum on Education and the Economy and a contributor to the report.

Patricia Aljberg Graham, dean of the Harvard Graduate School of Education, said requiring administrators to teach might help solve the problem.

"The organization of schools has evolved pretty much along the lines of a factory; administrators are like factory supervisors and teachers are like factory workers," Ravitch said.

"We can't continue to attract people with those sorts of working conditions."

"Once they experienced some of those working conditions, they might be more willing to face up to the difficulties," she said.

Most mentioned was the need to give teachers more authority.

"Powerful people take the jobs that entrust them with the important things," said Theodore Sizer, author of the widely regarded education reform book "Horace's Compromise." "If you want good people in the teaching profession, you have to set it up so teachers have authority over the important things."

Gary Sykes, a former English teacher and governmental policy analyst, said teachers need to be thoroughly involved in running schools. "Nobody else can do it," he said. "The only way is to invest more authority in teachers."

The report also says teacher pay is not the heart of the matter.

"Listen to the good teachers," Sizer said. "They talk about pay, yes. But they talk more passionately about the fact that other people are telling them what to do. I would say the heart of the matter is substantial control over time and materials; pay follows that."

Two lawmakers registered lobbyists

AUSTIN (AP) — The August special legislative session could include two lawmakers who now are registered lobbyists.

The session also will catch the House one member short, leaving Abilene unrepresented.

Because the special session was unforeseen earlier this year, Sen. Ed Howard, D-Texarkana, and Rep. Bill Messer, D-Belton, went about their plans to resign and become lobbyists. Howard thought he quit in April to go to work for a law firm that lobbies for several clients.

But, because of a constitutional provision, Howard will be in office when the special session convenes Aug. 6. A legislator remains in office until a replacement is sworn in.

Messer, a registered lobbyist for several major groups, plans to resign his House seat soon, but he has not announced a date. Messer also will be in office for the special session.

Abilene will be unrepresented when the special session convenes because Gary Thompson resigned. Unlike Howard, Thompson's resignation sticks. The Texas Constitution makes him ineligible for office because he went to work for a state agency, the Teacher Retirement System.

Aug. 9 special elections are set to replace Howard and Thompson. If either race goes to a runoff, it might not be decided until the session is over.

"If I had the gift of prophecy, I might have done it differently," Thompson said of his move that leaves Abilene temporarily unrepresented. "I just have to hope there is no runoff and the winner can assume the position within four or five days."

Property increases recommended

AUSTIN (AP) — Damage caused by too much bad weather the past three years is the primary reason a personal property insurance rate increase is needed, according to two recommendations to the State Board of Insurance.

The Texas Insurance Advisory Association, representing the industry, recommended a statewide increase of 16.9 percent.

The board's staff recommended a statewide average increase for all classes of 5.3 percent, including the widely sold homeowners policy.

The board was to consider today the recommendations from both its staff and the industry that Texas homeowners pay more for personal property insurance the next year.

However, the staff recommendations would give apartment dwellers a reduction on personal property insurance.

In 1985, the statewide average was increased 2.2 percent, while the 1984 average, which did not become effective until March 15, 1985, was a 5.3 percent increase.

Ice headed for heat-stricken town

PIEDMONT, S.C. (AP) — Residents of this parched South Carolina town are awaiting a mountain of ice from Indiana, a gift that at least temporarily will turn Piedmont into the coolest haven in dehydrated Dixie.

Kit Kowski, owner of the 4K Ice Co. of South Bend, Ind., promised that 3,200 eight-pound bags of ice would arrive by refrigerated truck today.

Kowski said he decided to send the ice to this town of 600 people just southwest of Greenville in South Carolina's northwest corner after seeing an Associated Press photograph in the South Bend Tribune.

"It showed a group of thirsty people filling up their water jugs at the Piedmont Fire Department and I thought how terrible it must be to be caught in a drought and not have a cold drink of water," he said from South Bend.

Kowski refused to say how much operation was costing him. "That doesn't matter. What does matter is that people are suffering and need help."

Fire Chief Doug Cowart said the ice would be transferred to another refrigerated truck and distributed on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Cigarette tax may increase 8 cents

WASHINGTON (AP) — Smokers could be asked to cough up 50 percent more in federal cigarette taxes as Congress searches for ways to fulfill its deficit-reduction promises.

In an unexpected vote, the Senate Finance Committee on Wednesday approved 11-8 an amendment to raise the tax by 8 cents, to 24 cents a pack. Tobacco supporters marshaled their forces and later won a strong rejection of the plan in a House committee, but the measure could still work its way through Congress and become law.

"It's Gramm-Rudman, and they're looking for money," said Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., referring to the budget-balancing law. Congress must meet a deficit target of $144 billion in fiscal 1987, and the more than $1.5 billion a year from the added tobacco tax would help.

The Senate panel was considering an increase in the telephone excise tax when Sen. John H. Chafee, R-R.I., suggested doing a cigarette tax increase instead.

"Telephones are a true necessity," said Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo. "Cigarette smoking is not."

Sen. Bob Packwood of Oregon, the Republican committee chairman, opposed the amendment as coming too soon after final passage of a law earlier this year to keep the tax at 16 cents, instead of letting it fall back to 8 cents.

Packwood also said he "was wondering if the poor disproportionately smoked more than they talked."

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., responded: "They do both, but only one is bad for your health."

Pregnancy weight study released

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women who gain 26 to 35 pounds during pregnancy run a significantly lower risk of losing their child to stillbirth or late miscarriage than women who put on less than 16 pounds, a government study shows.

The study by the National Center for Health Statistics said women who gain less than 16 pounds have a fetal death rate of 10.5 per 1,000 live births, compared with a death rate of 3.8 at the higher weight range.

The statistics, based on a sample of nearly 16,000 pregnancies, suggest that current obstetric guidelines for weight gain may be too conservative. Those guidelines, issued in 1983, suggest that weight gain during pregnancy should be between 22 and 27 pounds.

But the new figures show progressively better outcomes with weight gains up to 35 pounds. Above 35 pounds, the fetus is at slightly higher risk but still is statistically safer than at any weight gain below 26 pounds.

With a weight gain of 16 to 20 pounds, the fetal death rate was 6.7 per 1,000 births; 21 to 25 pounds, 4.8 per 1,000 births; 26 to 35 pounds, 3.8 per 1,000 births; and more than 35 pounds, 4.1 per 1,000 births.

New Paint Job

David, Dennis and Ernest Brown stopped in Hereford recently to show off a new paint job on Walcott Volunteer Fire Department's latest vehicle. TSTI in Amarillo did the paint job and Walcott volunteers will be adding a foam fire extinguishing unit to the 1980 Chevrolet truck. The unit will replace an older model.

American priest helps alcoholics

CAMPINAS, Brazil (AP) — In the green rolling hills of southeastern Brazil, a Texas-born priest is rehabilitating alcoholics and drug addicts with methods learned in the slums of El Paso.

The Rev. Harold J. Rahm, a 67-year-old Jesuit from San Antonio, said he uses a blend of prayer, therapy, hard work and love to recuperate "chemically dependent" men at his ranch outside this city.

Of the approximately 2,000 men who have been treated by Rahm and his team of psychologists, social workers, educators and former addicts, at least 1,000 have been cured and "reintegrated into society."

"If I can do this for at least half the people I serve, then I will have realized my dream," said the stocky, balding and constantly smiling priest.

Rahm arrived in Campinas in 1964 "as one of the first missionaries to leave the United States when Pope John XXIII called for reinforcements from North America for the Church in Latin America."

He brought with him 12 years of experience working with juvenile delinquents, alcoholics and prostitutes in the ghettos of El Paso, Texas, where he founded Our Lady's Youth Center.

In Campinas he established the Kennedy Social Center, where underprivileged youths learn trades, two orphanages, a center to find jobs for prostitutes "so they can leave the red-light district" and a residence to care for their children.

Eight years ago he started concentrating his efforts on the chemically dependent "when I saw the terrible toll in broken marriages and anguished homes caused by drinking and drugs."

Rahm also had a personal reason. His father died of alcoholism.

The priest said one of the reasons for his success is the use of ex-addicts "who are among the most valuable members of my staff."

"Their perspective is different than ours and they have the capacity to relate to the men in a manner that no other staff member can," he said.

Valdir Urquiza, 34, a former addict, stayed on after his rehabilitation "to help repay Father Rahm for saving my life."

Urquiza was an alcoholic and amphetamine addict by the age of 13. Later he became hooked on cocaine.

"I was sent 22 times to psychiatric hospitals but always failed to kick the habit. My life was empty and meaningless and three times I tried to kill myself."

"One year ago I came to Father Rahm and here I found a group of people who really cared about me. People I could talk and relate to and for the first time in 21 years I can honestly say that I am cured," Urquiza said.

During nine months, the addicts undergo Rahm's live-in rehabilitation program 12 miles (20 kilometers) outside Campinas on the Ranch of the Lord Jesus, a 50-acre spread donated by a wealthy businessman.

Most of the men, between the ages of 18 and 45, come from the middle and lower classes.

Rahm plans to enlarge his facilities to include women "as soon as I can get together a qualified staff to deal with female addicts and alcoholics."

The men are at the ranch on their own free will and "because they convinced us they sincerely wanted to be cured. We never accept anyone sent, against his will, by relatives or friends," Rahm said.

On the ranch, the patients grow vegetables, oranges and coffee and care for 16 cows as part of their rehabilitation program. Most of the produce is consumed at the ranch but some of it is sold in Campinas to raise money.

Donations and fees charged by Rahm for lectures he gives throughout Brazil also help finance the project.

Besides work and therapy, Rahm emphasizes what he calls the "spiritual dimension" of rehabilitation.

"The program does not demand adherence to any particular church. But, it does demand that each patient confront his religious needs. I believe that in every person there is something that wants to relate to God. Hope for healing comes from working on this spiritual dimension," Rahm said.

A new patient at the ranch, Antonio Marco Pinheiro Gomes, 26, said "I've been here only one month and I already know I will be cured because Father Rahm has helped me discover God. Without God's help, I would never find the inner strength needed to kick the habit."

Several of the 60 patients at the ranch said they experienced similar spiritual experiences but none showed any inclination toward zealotry.

Rahm said he had no plans of retiring "but before I die I hope the ranch will be self-supporting under the leadership of a dynamic priest from the area, with a flair for administration and devotion to the program."

Electronic sensor detects mating time

WASHINGTON (AP) — A cooperative scientific venture with Israel has produced an electronic sensor that can automatically tell dairy farmers when cows are ready to mate, a gadget that has proved to be more than 90 percent accurate in tests.

The Agriculture Department said Tuesday that farmers miss their cows' fertile periods approximately 50 percent of the time. Since most dairy cows are artificially bred, that means added costs for technicians and semen.

Gregory S. Lewis of the department's Agricultural Research Service said the experimental sensor — a plastic inch-long cylinder that is placed inside the cow's vagina — sends a painless electrical signal to a computer when a cow is in heat.

According to Lewis, the experimental system might cost $20 to $100 per cow if developed commercially, compared with an estimated $300 in costs for semen and feed for one cow over a year's time if a fertile period is missed.

Lewis and Eliezer Alzinbud, an Israeli scientist, cooperated in developing the detector in a joint project. Tests were conducted in the United States and Israel over four years, involving 25 cows.

For 'Star Wars'

Reagan to propose testing

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has tentatively decided to propose to the Soviet Union expanded testing of U.S. "Star Wars" technology and to urge deep cutbacks in long-range nuclear missiles, administration officials said today.

Along with the "new approach" on testing, a draft of Reagan's letter to Secretary General Mikhail S. Gorbachev also offers to delay deployment of anti-missile technology in space for five to seven years, the officials said. They stressed the decision was tentative.

Three U.S. envoys sent to consult with allied governments in Western Europe and Asia were due back shortly. The officials, who demanded anonymity, said their reports would have to be weighed before a final decision was made.

The proposal for expanded testing is designed to go beyond the laboratory in determining if mobile sensors and chemical lasers capable of tracking and destroying attacking missiles could be effective in a space-based defense system.

This would require a major concession from Gorbachev, who has condemned the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative, known popularly as Star Wars, as likely to expand the arms race into a dangerous new sphere.

However, a U.S. pledge to put off deployment of any anti-missile technology for five to seven years amounts to a guarantee the United States would observe the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty at least that long. Either side now can withdraw from the agreement with six months' notice.

Accent on Health

Heart disease and cancer continued to exact their toll in Texas last year, killing more than 64,000 Texans, the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the Texas Department of Health reported.

Heart disease once again was the leading cause of death, claiming 40,079 lives, while cancer was responsible for 24,032 deaths. Cerebrovascular disease was third, claiming 8,793 victims, and accidents caused 7,059 fatalities to rank fourth. These four killers were responsible for 68 percent of the 118,183 deaths of Texans in 1985.

Completing the top 10 list of death causes were (5.) chronic bronchitis, emphysema, asthma, and allied conditions—3,730; (6.) pneumonia and influenza—3,521; (7.) suicide—2,236; (8.) homicide—2,213; (9.) diabetes mellitus—1,911; and (10.) certain conditions originating in the perinatal period—1,412.

The 10 leading killers were in the same order as in 1984, with one exception. Suicide edged into the seventh spot ahead of homicide.

The death rate last year was 7.2 per 1,000 population, based on an estimated population at mid-year of 16,370,000. The 1984 death rate was 7.3.

Although death is inevitable, individuals can lessen the risks of heart disease and cancer, the two leading killers, through good health practices, according to Dr. Robert Bernstein, Commissioner of the Texas Department of Health.

He said that even older people can benefit from these lifestyle changes. Young people, Dr. Bernstein said, should be aware that most heart diseases in older people is the result of many years of bad habits.

He cited smoking as the single most preventable cause of heart disease and cancer.

Indicators of possible heart ills such as diabetes, high blood pressure, and tendencies toward obesity usually can be controlled with the help of a physician, Dr. Bernstein said. In addition, high blood cholesterol levels and lack of exercise can be corrected by the individual, he said.

Dr. Bernstein said preventive measures for cancer include: having regular checkups, since early detection is a key to curing cancer; maintaining a proper diet; by avoiding high fat foods and eating more fruits, vegetables, and cereals; using a sunscreen and protective clothing in the sun, since skin cancer is directly related to the amount of exposure to the sun's rays; and avoiding exposure to chemicals and other cancer-causing substances such as tobacco, asbestos, vinylchlorides, and polychlorinated biphenyls.

FRIEND noun a person on the same side of a struggle.

It's been said, "No friend's a friend till he shall prove a friend."

In today's hectic business world a lot of people say they are your friends; but when the 'chips are down,' will they be there for support?

At First National Bank of Hereford we work hard to develop a friendship with our customers. It's that kind of "one-on-one" relationship that makes our bank unique. If you need a financial friend, come let us serve you.

Rangers suffer 3-2 loss to Yankees

NEW YORK (AP) — From mid June until early July, the Yankees fell farther and farther behind the first-place Boston Red Sox.

But in the past two weeks, New York steadily has cut an eight-game deficit down to three in the American League East. Concurrently, second baseman Willie Randolph has batted out of a two-month slump.

"It's just a matter of concentration," said Randolph, who lined a two-out pinch-hit triple in the 10th inning and scored the winning run Wednesday in New York's 3-2 victory over the Texas Rangers. "I had a long time to sit there and think about what I had to do. Lou (Piniella, the Yankees manager) told me he might use me in the late innings."

New York, which won for the eighth time in 10 extra-inning games this year, swept a three-game series from the Rangers and gave the Yankees nine victories in their last 12 games. Texas has lost seven straight.

On May 6, Randolph was batting .325, but by Tuesday has average had plummeted to .258. He batted just .200 in that stretch with 35 hits in 175 at-bats. Prior to his double against Texas Tuesday night, he hadn't had an extra-base hit in 20 games.

Piniella rested Wednesday for only the third time this season and, in the 10th, Randolph pinch hit for Mike Fischlin and sent a 1-1 knuckler from Charlie Hough, 9-5, rolling through left-center field.

Rookie left-hander Mitch Williams relieved and after intentional walks to Don Mattingly and pinch-hitter Dave Winfield, slow-footed Ron Hassey hit a roller to first and slid into the bag ahead of a sliding Pete O'Brien when Williams failed to cover in time.

Hassey's hit was New York's fifth and his second infield hit of the season. The other was a single to third against Texas on May 3.

"When I was running, I saw he wasn't there and thought I had a chance," said Hassey, who has 10 stolen bases in his nine-year major-league career.

Hough had few problems before the 10th. Don Pasqua doubled and scored on Fischlin's sacrifice fly in the second and Mattingly hit his 18th homer in the third to give New York a 2-0 lead.

Those were the only hits off Hough until Mike Pagliarulo's two-out single in the ninth, which stopped a string of 18 consecutive outs.

Texas tied the game in the sixth when run-scoring hits by Scott Fletcher, who extended his hitting streak to 19 games, and Larry Parrish chased New York starter Joe Niekro. But the Rangers failed to move a runner past second after that against relievers Tim Stoddard, Al Holland and Dave Righetti, 7-4.

"I've been at a loss the last few days," said Valentine, whose team has lost seven straight. "Nothing I'm doing is working."

Lopes' RBI gives Astros 4-3 win

By The Associated Press

It was Dave Lopes' first game with the Houston Astros and he made his mark by driving the game-winning run over the Montreal Expos at the last at-bat in the 11th inning.

The Astros' 4-3 victory Wednesday ended a three-game sweep with the injury-riddled Expos. All three games were decided by one run which the Astros scored on the last at bat on each occasion.

Lopes not only drove in the winning run but he also made his presence known by hitting a triple, single and driving in two runs off Expos reliever Tim Burke.

"I feel real comfortable here. This is an unselfish club who do what they have to do to win. I look forward to the opportunity to contribute this year," said Lopes who joined the team Tuesday in a trade with the Chicago Cubs for left-handed reliever Frank DiPino.

"Lopes has been around on some winning teams and he will help us down the stretch," said Astros second baseman Bill Doran.

without the services of shortstop Hubie Brooks, the leading hitter in the national league with a .337 batting average.

"I would like to take my chances in these three games with a healthy Hubie Brooks," said Expos manager Buck Rogers, "but take nothing away from them. They are hot right now and good things are happening for them. They don't beat themselves."

The Astros started their scoring quick with a single run in the first inning and two more in the second.

Left-handed pitcher Bob Knepper started for the Astros and lasted until the seventh inning when four singles and a sacrifice fly netted three runs for the Expos to tie the game at three.

Dickie Thon lead off the 11th inning with a walk, advanced to second on a sacrifice by Terry Puhl and scored on Lopes' two-out line drive single to left center.

The Astros concluded a seven-game homestand with a record of 6-1 and 53-42 for the season. They lead the National League Western Division over the San Francisco Giants.

EDGE TO EWING

NEW YORK (AP) — Pat Ewing has taken the first long step on the path to success traveled by Willis Reed.

Ewing, the tall center of the New York Knicks, won the 1986 Edge-NBA Rookie-of-the-Year Award. The former Georgetown star was the first Knick rookie to win a freshman pro award since Reed did it in 1965.

Among other things on Ewing's mind is the hope that, like Reed, he will lead the Knicks to some NBA titles — Willis did it in 1970 and 1973 — and also that he will follow Reed into the Basketball Hall of Fame.

BAD MEMORIES

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Roger Craig, the manager of the San Francisco Giants, must win anytime the club goes to New York to play the Mets.

Craig, a righthanded pitcher, had a 10-24 record for the hapless 1962 Mets, leading the league in losses. One year later he again was No. 1 in the loss column with a 5-22 record.

In fairness to Craig, in his first 17 starts, the light-hitting Mets scored only 23 runs for him. It was the year he tied a National League record by losing 18 in a row.

'Never takes it easy'

Bill Bates plays hard at practice

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Bill Bates hurtles his body into a pileup during a scrimmage and Dr. Walter Knight just shakes his head on the sidelines.

"He told me he'd take it easy today because of his pulled hamstring," said Knight, a Dallas Cowboys physician. "I don't guess he ever takes it easy, does he?"

Bates is particularly driven during this Cowboys training camp because starting strong safety Dexter Clinkscales is apparently thinking about retirement.

He sees it as his big chance, although it really won't change the way he plays — all out all of the time.

"Whether Dexter comes to camp or not I'm concentrating on playing my best," said Bates. "His absence means I'm going to get a lot more playing time, a lot more repetitions out there."

Bates was asked if he was risking early season burnout with his aggressive play in practice.

"I only know one speed and that's all out at all times," Bates said. "I just want to make the point I can."

Bates is faster this season thanks to off-season training that lowered his time in the 40-yard dash from 4.7 to 4.58.

"You run on this machine that makes you run faster than you can," said Bates. "It trains your muscles to accept a faster pace. It makes you feel faster and helps your confidence."

Bates, signed as a free agent in 1983, intercepted four passes in 1985 and was the leading tackler among non-starters.

"Bill Bates will hit anybody," said Coach Tom Landry. "He could be our starting strong safety. He just needs to control his impulses enough to keep everything under control in order for him to be a real solid player."

Landry said he likes the fact Bates is a competitor.

"He's the type of player you need on the field," Landry said.

Bates returned punts part of the time last year, but that's not expected to be a part of his chores this season.

"I'll return punts and play on the special teams, or anything else it takes to win," Bates said.

Former assistant coach Gene Stallings, now the head coach of the St. Louis Cardinals, used to be amazed by Bates.

"You can go to a game and not know anything about football and still see Bill Bates," Stallings said. "He'll trap somebody, make a tackle on a kickoff or knock somebody down."

Bates admitted he needed to ease off more in training camp.

"I need to not kill myself because it's going to be a long season and I've been hurt every year," Bates said. "I need to start playing smart."

With that, Bates went back into practice and tackled a running back during a warmup drill when there wasn't supposed to be any contact.

Dawkins signs contract with San Antonio Spurs

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Duke University star Johnny Dawkins donned a San Antonio Spurs' cap and called his new home a "great town" as the team announced its first-round draft pick had signed a four-year contract.

Dawkins was introduced by Head Coach Bobby Weiss at a news conference Wednesday night.

"This is a great town and the fans seem to be very enthusiastic," Dawkins said. "So far, I've found that it's a lot more competitive," he said of workouts at the NBA team's rookie camp.

"I am playing against top of the line college players and some NBA veterans. It's more difficult, but I can play."

Donald Dell, chairman of the board of ProServ, Dawkins' agents, and Spurs President Angelo Drossos came to formal agreement Wednesday afternoon, but terms of the contract were not disclosed.

"Angelo and Donald Dell spent a lot of hours talking and we finally made it official this afternoon," General Manager Bob Bass said at the news conference at Blossom Athletic Center, where Dawkins has been working out at rookie free-agent camp.

"They did a lot of negotiating in New York last week and finished it off here," Bass said.

The 6-foot-2 guard led Duke to the NCAA championship game and averaged 25.2 points during the tournament. He finished his college career with a 19.2 average and was Duke's all-time leading scorer and a two-time All-America player.

Dawkins said he, his agents and parents discussed the matter and all decided it would be best for him to come to the rookie free-agent camp.

Alcoholics more likely to attempt suicide

It's widely known that alcoholics are at greater risk than non-alcoholics of developing serious health problems, including seizures, liver disease and gastrointestinal disorders.

But new research indicates that alcohol abusers are also 15 times more likely to attempt suicide than the general population.

Those findings were reported earlier this year by Dr. Richard Frances, an associate professor of clinical psychiatry and director of alcohol treatment services at New York Hospital. Frances found that while 1 percent of the U.S. population attempts suicide, 15 percent of alcoholics do so.

He added that alcohol plays a strong role in more than half of the 30,000 suicides that occur yearly in the U.S.

Frances' findings parallel other research, including:

—A 1983 Congressional report which found that as many as 80 percent of people who try to kill themselves had been drinking prior to the attempt.

—Studies indicating that alcohol and drug abuse are factors in a significant number of the 5,500 teenage suicides occurring each year in the U.S.

—Reports linking suicidal attempts among alcoholics to possible biochemical imbalances.

While emotional troubles, increasing withdrawal and drastic changes in personal habits are universal symptoms of a suicidal person, the following cues are especially important in the case of the alcoholic:

- Severe anxiety or depression.
- Extremely heavy drinking or prolonged binges.
- The reckless combination of alcohol with other drugs.
- Other difficulties in the alcoholic's life, including legal or financial difficulties, troubles on the job or health problems.

—A major loss in the alcoholic's life such as the death of a spouse is a particularly significant factor in many suicide attempts.

Those who've stopped drinking are no less at risk of a suicide attempt. Without a chemical buffer between them and their problems, newly recovering people may feel particularly vulnerable during a crisis.

Pay special attention to the newly sober person who suddenly stops attending A.A. meetings and becomes increasingly depressed and withdrawn.

Help should be sought immediately through that person's physician, A.A. or treatment center.

"Drug and Alcohol Update" is provided by the CareUnit at Palo Duro Hospital.

A SPREAD OF COLOR

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Add flair to parties this summer with a color theme.

Color adds interest to a party when carried out from the invitations to decorations to food that's served, says Donna Higgins of Del Monte USA.

For example, a red theme party can include such food selections as hot dogs, strawberry yogurt dip and salad tossed with cherry tomatoes and red bell peppers. Serve punch as a beverage, either alone or combined with juices or seltzers.

Ann Landers

"OK"

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was interested in your comments on the overuse of "OK" and decided to do a little research on it. "OK" was first used in 1839 by C.K. Greene, the editor of the Boston Post, as an abbreviation of "oll korrekt," a facetious misspelling of "all correct." Given misspellings were approval, endorsement, accepted as legitimate or correct.

While there are no hard statistics to prove it, one can safely assume that the most widely used American word in the world is "OK." Spaniards utter it more often than "salud" and in England it is more common than "righto." Even speakers of the Djabo dialect in Liberia say "O-ke."

"OK" freely punctuates the conversations of people who do not know another word of English. During a World War II soccer match, a team comprised of Poles, Czechs, Danes and Norwegians was hamstrung by their language differences until a Polish player shouted "OK!" Everyone on the team knew what that meant, and from then on the play proceeded smoothly.

In 1840, when Martin Van Buren was running for re-election, the Democrats banded together under the banner of the New York Democratic OK Club and soon after the word became part of the language to signify that what is OK is all right.—MRS. J.H.R. RENTON, WA.

DEAR MRS. J.H.R.: Thank you for sharing your research. Your letter is another fine example of how my readers educate me.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Recently I received a call from someone who was taking a survey for our alumni college directory. One question really annoyed me. The caller asked, "Do you work?" I replied, "Yes, I am the mother of two." The woman then said, "I mean, do you have a REAL job?" I replied stiffly, "I have a very real job. Raising children properly is probably the hardest job there is."

Will you please tell me why a woman who stays at home and takes care of her children is considered "unemployed"? I was trained to be a professional and one day I hope to practice that profession, but I consider homemaking and being a fulltime mother my career for now. Comment, please.—MAKING NO APOLOGIES IN CONN.

DEAR CONN.: A dozen long-stemmed red roses for you and a pox on both the houses (summer and winter) of anyone who tries to put you down.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your response to "Fixing to Kill in Seattle" showed that you have never had any firsthand experience with an ex-wife who is a total witch (I'm trying to keep this printable) and a stepson who would try the patience of a saint. I've had plenty, so please let me speak.

That woman should understand that the problem is between her and her husband and not between her and his ex-wife. She should enlist her husband's support—tell him it is destructive to their marriage when he has secrets with his former spouse. She should be as sweet as honey to the witch and refuse to become involved in any ugliness that can only make her look bad. And most of all she should make a real friend out of that stepson, no matter how bratty and hard-to-handle he may be. That child is her husband's and unless she makes peace with him and turns that situation around her marriage will be forever in danger. This is the best advice she'll ever get. I hope she takes it.—BIN THAR IN VT.

DEAR BIN: Beautiful. You did a lot better job than I did. Thanks for the assist.

Calcium-fortified foods can't replace dairy products

The food industry is now marketing a number of calcium-fortified foods to nutrition-conscious women who believe they may be at risk for developing osteoporosis.

Osteoporosis is a disease of brittle and porous bones that affects millions of middle-aged to elderly women, making them more prone to fractures.

Calcium-fortified foods currently on the market include some brands of diet carbonated soft drinks and non-carbonated soft drink mixes, bread and flour. Most are prominently labeled and advertised as having added calcium.

"Eating calcium fortified products in a balanced diet that still includes dairy products, may be helpful," says nutritionist Dr. Alice Hunt, "especially since the Recommended Daily Allowance of 800 milligrams of calcium per day is thought by many medical experts to be too low."

However, she cautions that when dairy products are replaced with calcium fortified foods, other important nutrients from dairy products such as protein, vitamin D, riboflavin, B-6 and B-12 are lost.

It's especially important that teenagers and children eat dairy products both for the calcium and the other nutrients they provide, stresses the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service Specialist.

Some of the powdered drink mixes supply 100 percent of the RDA for calcium, both other fortified foods provide a smaller percentage. For example, 2 slices of bread made with calcium fortified flour supplies only 10 percent of the RDA for calcium.

Adults can be sure of getting sufficient calcium by drinking the equivalent of 2½ cups of milk each day. Children under 9 need 2-3 cups, 9-12 years olds should have 3 cups, and teenagers need 4 cups of milk a day.

A cup of yogurt, 1½ ounces of cheese, 1½ cups of ice cream or 2 cups of cottage cheese all supply the same amount of calcium as a cup of milk, notes Hunt.

"Consumers should also realize that eating calcium-fortified foods will not necessarily prevent osteoporosis, since general nutrition, hormone balance and exercise—in addition to calcium intake—have all been found to affect the condition," says the nutritionist.

While-calcium rich dairy products are a necessary part of a balanced diet at any age, when it comes to preventing osteoporosis, Hunt says they may have their most critical effect early in life.

A study conducted recently at the University of Pittsburgh measured the density of certain bones in middle-aged women and found that those who drank milk with every meal up until the age of 35 had significantly more minerals in their bones than those who rarely drank it, reports Hunt.

The study emphasizes the fact that bones reach their lifetime peak for mineral density during early adulthood and then tart to deteriorate. The peak mineral density is determined part by genetics. But the nutritionist says the amount of milk a person drinks during the first 20-30 years is believed to determine whether a person's bones attain optimum density.

"Whether or not a woman chooses to buy special calcium-fortified foods, probably the best thing she can do for herself and her children is to make sure they get plenty of milk and other dairy products," advises the specialist.

The tallest building in Pittsburgh is the U.S. Steel Building, which stands 841 feet tall and has 64 stories.

Cape Columbia on Ellesmere Island, Northwest Territories, is the northernmost point of Canada.

Ways with Wine by David Hutchins

THE BIG CHILL

One may have been told that red wines should be served at room temperature and white wine should be chilled. Instead, however, try to think of wines as either full-bodied or light. Wines should not be separated according to color. Full-bodied, rich wines (red or white) should be served at cellar temperatures. That is 55-65 degrees F. Lighter wines should be served chilled. Half an hour in the refrigerator or 15 minutes in an ice bucket should suffice. For example, light and fruity reds such as Beaujolais call for chilling. Heavy whites, like Chardonnay, should not be chilled. Chilling a wine reduces its flavor. It can ruin a full-bodied wine. Chilling a lighter wine brings out its tartness and freshness.

If you are planning a special party this summer be sure to come by THE STORE where we carry a marvelous selection of red and white wines, both imported and domestic. A bottle or two of wine will add just the right touch of conviviality to your gathering. Perhaps you have been invited to a friends or relatives. If so, a bottle of wine makes the perfect hostess gift. You'll find us at 400 N. 25 Mile, 364-7802 where we are open Mon.-Sat. 10-9, use our drive up door until midnight for beer and wine, on Sun. only beer and wine is available from 12-12.

Note that cellar temperature is lower than that of most dining rooms.

DR. GOTT Self-help works for some people

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — At age 54, I was stricken with severe osteoarthritis. Indocin helped. Then I tried a diet that eliminates red meat, dairy products, eggs and citrus fruits, and encourages the consumption of white-meat poultry, vegetables, cereals and grains. On my own, I've eliminated caffeine, alcohol, soft drinks and smoking. After six weeks, I was able to drop the Indocin. Maybe the arthritis would have gone into remission without the diet, and this program obviously isn't for everyone, but it worked for me. Is there any scientific reason for its success?

DEAR READER — Some people with arthritis find that they feel better after eliminating certain foods from their diets. I do not know any scientific basis for this finding. Osteoarthritis is caused by the gradual wearing down of joint surfaces; it usually is helped by the use of selected anti-inflammatory, anti-pain medications.

Nonetheless, I respect the experiences of patients who discover ways to help themselves. Your diet seems to be nutritionally sound; I certainly endorse your choice to give up alcohol, smoking and caffeine. Don't forget to check with your doctor periodically to make sure that your newfound diet is permitting you to stay healthy in areas other than joints.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my new Health Report, UNDERSTANDING OSTEOARTHRITIS. Other readers who would like a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Our son is 30 and suffers from torticollis, or wry neck. It started in 1982 after he spent an entire day carrying shingles to the roof of a two-story house. Then, in 1983, he was thrown from a truck and received a gash in his right lumbar region. He's been to several doctors and a chiropractor, and has taken muscle relaxants and tranquilizers. Recently he had five or six seizures, but an EEG determined that he's not epileptic. He's not able to work, shows no improvement and, naturally, is quite depressed. Where do we go from here?

DEAR READER — I have trouble connecting your son's torticollis to his 1983 back injury and to his seizures.

The back injury should have healed by now. Seizures always indicate a problem; epilepsy is not always the cause. I believe that your son should have a complete neurological examination to determine the cause of his seizures.

Torticollis is a common condition that is caused by spasm of the neck muscles. It usually can be treated with physiotherapy — hot packs, ultrasound and so forth.

In my opinion, the seizures are the problem on which to focus. A neurological specialist would be a good place to start.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Our daughter, a diabetic, is 5 feet 4, weighs 100 pounds, and recently placed herself in the hands of a "nutritionist." Her diet, to the best of my knowledge, consists of salads and dozens of different kinds of herbs. She has constant nausea, diarrhea and stomach cramps, and she vomits daily. Her nutritionist says she's eliminating the poisons from her system.

I don't understand how these people can be allowed to test their theories with no risk to themselves. What is happening physically to our daughter? How can we convince her to see a diabetes specialist? We feel that her therapist has given her the false sense that this regimen is controlling her diabetes.

DEAR READER — Diabetic control can only be assessed by periodic determination of blood sugar. Diet is important in treatment, but I am not aware that herbs are useful. Some patients need anti-diabetic medicine or insulin.

You suggest that your daughter might be in the hands of a quack. I agree that she would be better served by seeing a doctor who is familiar with diabetes and uses a more traditional and appropriate approach. Complain to your state's consumer protection bureau. Maybe your daughter's "nutritionist" isn't one at all and should be put out of business.

AVOIDING HOSPITALS

NEW YORK (AP) — There is a new movement in medical treatment that could keep you out of the hospital and save you money if you become ill.

Alternative health-care facilities — diagnostic centers, ambulatory surgery centers and walk-in emergency centers — are taking over many of the medical tasks that once required a hospital stay.

Is the care any good? Sometimes, it's even better, says Family Circle magazine. A well run diagnostic center provides an efficient, low-stress environment in which to have tests done. It's less costly than hospitalization and is usually covered by medical insurance.

THE NEW SUPREME COURT

	Year of birth	Year term began	Appointing president
William Rehnquist	1924	1972	Nixon	Dogmatic conservative, with engaging personality that has made him well-liked on the court.
William J. Brennan	1906	1956	Eisenhower	Liberal of the old school. His opinions have moved to the center.
Byron R. White	1917	1962	Kennedy	Conservative on some issues; liberal on others. Often joins liberals on key votes on civil rights and women's issues.
Thurgood Marshall	1908	1976	Johnson	Last of true liberals in Warren court tradition. Strong civil rights advocate and death penalty foe.
Harry Blackmun	1908	1970	Nixon	Rock-ribbed conservative when he joined the court. His views have moderated and, with White and Stevens, he forms court's center.
Lewis Powell	1907	1972	Nixon	Leans conservative, but isn't as rigid as Rehnquist or O'Connor.
John Paul Stevens	1920	1975	Ford	Considered a moderate. Sides with liberals more than conservatives. Often swing vote in 5-4 decisions.
Sandra D. O'Connor	1930	1981	Reagan	Strict constructionist and a leader of court's conservative majority. Some see opinions as slightly more moderate than might be expected.
Antonin Scalia	1936		Reagan	Man of sharp intellect with outgoing personality. Has been law professor, practicing lawyer and judge. Very conservative. Could quickly become leader of court's conservatives.

With the retirement of Chief Justice Warren Burger, the Supreme Court will probably become somewhat more ideologically conservative than it's been. (William Rehnquist's promotion to chief justice and Antonin Scalia's appointment must be confirmed by the Senate.)

West attends program

Donna West, a CPA from Hereford, recently attended a program offered by the Texas State Society of CPAs.

The course, Pension Profit-Sharing Plans and Compliance, is prepared by the Continuing Professional Education Division of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants (AICPA) to further the knowledge of CPAs in the continually changing field of retirement and pension planning.

West is a CPA with Brown, Graham & Co., P.C. of Hereford. She is also president of the Pilot Club of Hereford, Inc. an international women's service club, is active in the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Women's Division and serve on the auditing and accounting committee of the Panhandle Chapter of Texas Society of CPAs.

ARTHRITIS MAY BE INHERITED

ATLANTA (AP) — Like blue eyes, big ears and good teeth, the tendency to get some forms of arthritis may be inherited, according to the Arthritis Foundation.

It says the susceptibility to certain arthritis-related diseases, such as spinal and rheumatoid arthritis, is passed from parent to child. Scientists have discovered specific genetic "markers" associated with these types of arthritis.

However, only a few people who have one of these markers actually develop arthritis. It is likely that a bacterium, a virus or some other environmental agent triggers the disease process in individuals who have markers for a particular disease, the foundation says.

A "watch" of nightingales is how you refer to a big bunch of those birds.

Doughtery, Hershey honored at reunion

The 27th Annual Progressive Reunion was held Sunday at the Hereford Community Center with Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Russell and Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Boyer serving as host couples.

Gifts were presented to Margaret Doughtery for being the oldest woman present and Horace Hershey took honors for being the oldest man in attendance.

Carolyn Hutcheson was the youngest person at the reunion and Nancy Gamel traveled the furthest.

The program for the afternoon affair consisted of several activities. Special piano music was played by Norma Tomberline and musical numbers were sung by Norma Tomberline, Catherine Russell, Cecil and Eunice Boyer and Calvin Edwards.

Also, on the program's agenda was the presentation of a memorial for deceased friends given by Katherine Clegg. A tribute to the Texas Sesquicentennial was composed by Marie Ratcliff and Cecil Boyer read a poem entitled "My Get Up and Go Has Got Up and Went."

New officers for the 1988 reunion are John Hunter, who will serve as president, and Norma Tomberlin, secretary.

The next reunion will be the third Sunday in July of 1988.

Lemons, Mathes installed at Rebekah Lodge meeting

Hereford Rebekah Lodge No. 228 met in regular session Tuesday evening with Noble Grand Gladie Shelton presiding.

Several sick members and friends were reported and cards were signed. Forty-two visits to the sick and 15 cheer cards were reported for the week.

Lodge Deputy Lydia Hopson installed Peggy Lemons as inside guardian and Edna Mathes as color bearer.

A letter was read from the Jubilee committee of the Chamber of Commerce. Also, an invitation was extended to the group to attend the Odd Fellow and Rebekah Rally Aug. 16 in Amarillo.

Irene Merritt sent refreshments which were served by Edna Mathes to Shelton, Hopson, Lemons, Wallace Shelton, Anna Conklin, Ada Hollabaugh, Karrol Rettman, Dorothy Lundry, Maxine Rickman, Susie Curtsinger, Kee Ruland, Dora Lee Howell, Faye Brownlow, Stella Hershey, Jo Irlbeck, Anthony Irlbeck and Fred Ruland.

POLLY'S POINTERS What cleans a used playpen?

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — I bought a used playpen. It has netting around it which is very musty smelling. I have washed it with dishwashing soap, rinsed it with vinegar and have had it sitting outside for several days. Nothing seems to do any good. What is your suggestion? — ROSE

DEAR ROSE — Try a bleach solution on the netting. Chlorine bleach is excellent for destroying mildew and mold and is very helpful for eliminating odors from these problems. Rinse thoroughly with clear water after washing with the bleach solution.

Another good odor remover is hair shampoo. Work up a lather of a little shampoo and water and wash the netting with that, again rinsing thoroughly with clear water.

Also, when you let it air outside, be sure it's sitting in bright sunshine.

Whenever you get used baby equipment, it's a good idea to check it against safety standards for newly manufactured equipment to be sure it's safe for your baby. A mesh-sided playpen must have holes in the netting no larger than one-quarter of an inch. Mesh larger than this can be used by a climbing baby for footholds. In addition, if the baby falls, a button could become caught in larger mesh, leaving the baby hanging and possibly strangling. Beware of net playpens with sides that collapse down toward the floor. If the sides accidentally collapse, a baby could become caught in the mesh side. A better choice would be a pen with sides that fold together vertically, or one with special safety features that prevent accidental collapsing.

I'm sending you a copy of my newsletter "Childproofing Your Home" which has safety standards for other items of baby equipment such as cribs, car seats, high chairs, strollers and others, as well as safety tips to use all around the house, advice on poison first aid and a list of common household poisons, and guidelines for preventing choking on small objects. Others who would like this issue should send $1 for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1216, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to include the title. — POLLY
