Gramm touts budget bill at feed lot tour

By SHAWN COCKRUM
Staff Writer

CANYON--U.S. Senator Phil Gramm told cattle feeders here Monday that the new tax bill recently passed by the Senate will benefit more people than any other previously proposed tax plan.

Gramm also noted that he and the President are convinced that as long as the people of the Panhandle are opposed to a nuclear waste repository in Deaf Smith County, that it will not be built.

That remark was made following the press conference at the Randall County Feedyard.

"I have met with the President and the Secretary of Energy on the subject and I am convinced that there is not a lot of the people of the Panhandle can do to block any technical studies being done, but the people will have a say in the final outcome," Gramm said.

Gramm's main focus was on the Gramm-Rudman bill, though.

"By making everybody pay their fair share, we will make sure that people do not have to pay more than their fair share," said the Texas Senator. "The President supports the bill and the American people support it."

The bill Gramm refers to is the Senate version of the President's request to lower the budget. Gramm said that under the Senate bill that he instigated, people will pay between 15 and 27 percent income taxes. Only 80 percent of deductions will be allowed and IRA deductions will be preserved for the middle class.

Gramm said that the reduced deductions for investments will affect cattle feeders the same as everybody else.

"What the bill will do is eliminate the rich investors from Dallas and Houston who invest in cattle just because they like to see them grow. The bill will give the industry back to the people who work the cattle and the land," Gramm said. "This bill is all about the American dream."

The Senate bill, which was passed by a resounding 97-3 vote, must now be compared to the House bill. The final draft of the combined bills must be presented to the House subcommittee for revision.

"We are convinced that whatever the subcommittee does, we can fix it. We are not going to let Congress off the hook when it comes to completing

Wheat prices in June led decline in farm index prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lower wheat prices in June led the way for a 1.6 percent decline in the Agriculture Department's index of prices received by farmers for commodities they produce.

The preliminary reading, announced Monday, dropped the June index to 6.2 percent below the year-earlier level.

According to the report by USDA's Agricultural Statistics Board, the monthly decline also was weighted by lower prices for lettuce, cattle, eggs, tomatoes and hay. Higher prices for hogs, broilers, oranges, potatoes and apples helped offset part of the decline for the other commodities.

Wheat prices plummeted 57 cents per bushel during the month, reducing the price to the lowest level since October 1977, the report said.

The government's price supports for 1986-crop wheat, now being harvested, has been reduced sharply under the new farm law in hopes of making U.S. grain more attractively priced in the world market. A further reduction was announced Monday for 1987.

By contrast, hog prices were the highest since August 1984, and broiler prices at the farm were the most since July 1984. Hog producers have cut back sharply on inventories, meaning less pork for consumers.

Prices paid by farmers to meet expenses were not reported for June. Because of spending cutbacks, the board began in April issuing those every three months. The next will be released July 31.

According to the preliminary June figures, based mostly on mid-month averages, the farm prices of livestock and livestock products were unchanged from May but averaged 2.2 percent less than a year earlier. Crop prices dropped 3.5 percent from May and averaged 11 percent below a year ago.

Vegetable prices declined 19 percent from May but still averaged 14 percent more than a year ago. Lower prices for lettuce and tomatoes accounted for most of the decline.

The report said the index of prices for potatoes, sweet potatoes and dry beans rose 14 percent from May but still trailed the year-ago level by 26 percent. Potato prices rose 80 cents from May to $4.89 per 100 pounds, and dry bean prices were up 40 cents to $17.10 per hundredweight.

Consumer food prices are expected to rise, moderately again this year, according to USDA economists. For 1986, the increase may average 2 percent to 4 percent higher than 1985, when retail food price rose 2.3 percent.

Net farm income dropped sharply in 1985, probably totaling $29 billion to $32 billion, according to USDA estimates. For 1986, department economists project another decline to a range of $26 billion to $30 billion.

Overall, June farm commodity prices averaged 121 percent of a 1977 base used for comparison, according to the preliminary figures. That was down two percentage points from the revised May reading of 123 percent. In June 1985, the index was 129.

Because of the elimination of monthly statistics for prices paid by farmers, there was no parity ratio published for June. In computing parity statistics, an index of prices paid by farmers is essential to compare with those received by producers.

The report also said: —Cattle averaged $49.40 per 100 pounds of live weight nationally, compared with $51 in May and $53.60 a year earlier. Those are averages for all types of cattle sold as beef. —Hogs averaged $50.10 per 100 pounds, compared with $44.80 in May

Entities join for site impact study

A new agreement to research the effect of site characterization and its socio-economic impacts on five taxing entities in Deaf Smith County was approved in the county commissioner's court Monday. The agreement forms a non-partisan coalition between the county, City of Hereford, Hereford Independent School District, Walcott Independent School District and the Deaf Smith General Hospital District. Those entities will seek, using results of the research, reimbursement for funds required from the Department of Energy for any additional services, schools, or public facilities due to characterization, and for funds to balance a loss of tax base attributable to the site characterization.

All operating funds will be from grants and monies from the state and federal government, or from other sources. No revenue or tax monies shall be contributed by any of the entities.

County Judge Glen Nelson said the entity coalition was formed to make a preparatory study only and the action should not be taken as approval of site characterization or the repository.

A contract between the county and the state Nuclear Waste Programs Office which would implement the opening of a research office locally was tabled by the commission. The contract calls for $230,000 in grant money.

The commission also tabled another review of the county budget. The commission may study a cut in personnel for next year through attrition. It also mulled commission approval for any equipment or furniture purchase by any department. The court also will look at several offices in the courthouse which are not county operated to see where some savings may come.

The commission meets again on Monday at 10 a.m. in the courthouse.

Texas plaintiff says appeal 'last hope' for homosexuals

DALLAS (AP) — An appeal of a Texas sodomy law is the "last hope" for homosexuals after a U.S. Supreme Court ruling upheld a similar Georgia statute, said the plaintiff in the Texas case.

Donald F. Baker of Dallas, who filed suit in 1979 claiming the Texas law threatened his teaching job, said the hopes of the gay community "are dimmed, but not totally out" after the Supreme Court ruled Monday.

But Potter County District Attorney Danny Hill, who took up Texas' appeal after Attorney General Jim Mattox dropped out of the case, called the high court's decision "a great day for Georgia, the people of Texas and anyone else who believes in states' rights."

Nothing in the Supreme Court's sweeping language cast doubt on the constitutionality of state laws that also make heterosexual sodomy a crime, even when performed by married couples.

The Texas law was struck down in 1982 by a Dallas federal judge, whose ruling was affirmed two years later by a three-judge panel of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

But the full appeals court, in a 9-7 ruling handed down last August, reinstated the law, saying it was a permissible effort to implement morality. The judges said the law is constitutional "in view of the strong objection to homosexual conduct, which has prevailed in western culture for the past seven centuries."

Monday's Supreme Court's ruling was assailed by the Texas Civil Liberties Union.

Response cool toward Soviet arms proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is considering a Soviet proposal for a special meeting on the future of the 1979 SALT II arms control treaty amid widespread concern it might provide an opportunity for the Kremlin to grandstand.

President Reagan, boarding Air Force One in California on Monday on his way back from vacation, quipped: "Too much salt isn't good for you." Two other U.S. officials said the proposal for a meeting later this month in Geneva was viewed skeptically, particularly at the Pentagon.

Reagan tentatively decided in late May to abandon the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty by allowing U.S. B-52 bombers carrying nuclear-tipped cruise missiles late this year to exceed the limits set by the unratified SALT II accord.

The president based his action on what he said were Soviet violations of the agreement. These included deployment of the SS-25 intercontinental ballistic missile and the masking of information during missile tests. The Soviets denied the accusations.

Through diplomatic channels late last week the Soviets proposed the Standing Consultative Commission set up in 1972 to consider such charges hold a special meeting.

"A lot of people are not thrilled," said a U.S. official, referring primarily to Pentagon officials. "They said 'no' to us in 1983 and they could turn this into a public relations grandstand about SALT II."

The United States asked for such a meeting in 1983 to discuss the early

Space station management shifted

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Management of the nation's space station is being shifted from the Johnson Space Center to NASA headquarters, a move that follows recommendations by the presidential commission that investigated the Challenger disaster.

NASA administrator James C. Fletcher said at a news conference Monday that moving the space station control to NASA headquarters in Washington was "the first step in the realignment of the management structure." He said other changes were being evaluated.

The change will cause about 100 engineers to move from Houston to Washington and "will require the services of a systems engineering contractor in some ways similar to the way the Apollo program was managed," he said.

Johnson Space Center director Jesse Moore said he did not view the change as an expression of a loss of confidence in the Texas center, but rather as "a management approach that the administrator is comfortable with in order to strengthen the program."

Doug Ward, a spokesman at the Johnson center, said details of the change have not been worked out and that final plans may take six months. He said the shift would have little impact on employment levels at Johnson, which also trains the shuttle astronauts and is the home of Mission Control.

The presidential commission that investigated the Challenger accident said a National Aeronautics and Space Administration management system that vested project control in the NASA centers tended to distort communications between the centers and headquarters, and to dilute accountability. It recommended a streamlining of the system to assure that information flowed to the top.

The change announced Monday will more closely resemble the Apollo program, which was run by a headquarters director who monitored projects in each of NASA's 17 centers.

CHICAGO (AP) — Playboy magazine says it has a plan to rekindle the bond between its readers and the 7-Eleven stores that no longer distribute it. That plan is to run a nude pictorial featuring 12 of the chain's most attractive female employees.

Playboy hopes to include the 'Women of 7-Eleven' in the December issue, eight months after the convenience store's parent company, Dallas-based Southland Corp., pulled the magazine off the shelves.

"We don't see it as a revenge type of thing," Bill Paige, a spokesman for Playboy Enterprises Inc., said Monday. "We would like it to be viewed as a moment of levity." Southland executives said they ended Playboy sales at 4,500 stores after witnesses testified before the U.S. Attorney General's Commission on Pornography that adult magazines are linked to crime, violence and child abuse.

Playboy founder Hugh Hefner has filed a lawsuit against the commission, charging that an intimidating letter sent to Southland and other magazine distributors caused the ban.

"We've got nothing against 7-Eleven; it's the Meese Commission we're pointing at," said Paige, referring to Attorney General Edwin Meese.

The chain was "named on a blacklist by the Meese Commission. We see them as victims in this thing, too," he added. "We can talk ourselves blue in the face about censorship. This is just something fun."

Frank McKeown, Southland vice president of marketing, said he didn't know if the company would try to stop employees from posing nude. "We expect our employees to act in decorum on and off the job," McKeown said in a telephone interview from Dallas. "I can't begin to determine if employees are breaking our code of conduct until I've seen a pictorial."

Jeff Cohen, Playboy's managing photo editor, said some readers had sent letters calling for a boycott of 7-Eleven stores.

"For them, this pictorial will be something of a reunion with their favorite clerks," Cohen said.

Chicago-based Playboy sells about 4.1 million magazines per month. 7-Eleven stores accounted for 5 percent of the 2 million magazines sold in stores, Paige said.

When the sales ban was announced, Moral Majority Leader Jerry Falwell, said, "This is going to bring the pornography industry on its knees."

Besides 7-Eleven, Hefner also has charged that government intimidation forced Thrifty Corp., People's Drug Stores and Rite Aid Drug Stores to end Playboy sales.

7-Eleven also refuses to carry Penthouse and Forum magazines.

Social Security benefits going up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Social Security benefits will go up by $14.30 a month starting Thursday for more than 2 million people, thanks to money they earned in 1984.

Social Security Administration computers have finished recalculating those people's basic benefits with the 1984 earnings included, and what benefits they are due retroactively.

Dorcas R. Hardy, the new Social Security commissioner, said Monday that checks averaging $265 for retroactive benefits will be sent out to the same people along with the new higher monthly payments.

In addition, a half-million others who had wages in 1984 can expect increases and retroactive payments by the end of the year after their benefits are recalculated manually, she said.

In recalculating benefits, Social Security drops a year with lower earnings and replaces it with what the person earned in 1984.

Those beneficiaries who did not work in 1984, or whose earnings were not high enough to trigger a recomputation, are not affected, and the checks they receive Thursday will be unchanged.

In the initial round, the increases will go only to those whose benefits were recalculated by computers, Social Security spokesman James M. Brown said.

The system's computers have reviewed 29 million earnings records, and turned out 1.8 million cases — representing more than 2 million beneficiaries, including dependents — that will get the automatic increases.

The program will pay out more than $500 million in retroactive benefits, plus $29 million in additional monthly benefits. Some 37.3 million people now get more than $16 billion a month in benefits.

Brown said the people getting increases now will receive award notices within the next week. They do not need to contact their local Social Security offices, he emphasized.

Benefits are recomputed manually if that person had told Social Security he or she did not plan to work in 1984, or if the actual earnings were higher or lower than expected, Brown said.

Currently, Social Security reduces benefits by $1 for every $2 that beneficiaries ages 65 to 70 earn above $7,800.

If someone earned more than expected and received too much in Social Security benefits, the agency requires them to pay that amount back either in a lump sum or in installments.

Benefits are not reduced for those 70 or older, regardless of income.

Between 1975 and 1982, all Social Security beneficiaries received annual cost-of-living increases each July. The raise was skipped in July 1983 for six months to save money, and now the inflation adjustments are made in January.

Apartheid reforms take effect

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A series of apartheid reforms took effect today in South Africa, including the scrapping of the pass laws that restricted the movement of blacks into white areas.

The state-run South African Broadcasting Corp. hailed the moves as "symbolic of an era of unprecedented reform," and they received widespread publicity in newspapers.

However, the detention of the leader of the largest black union federation went unreported throughout the country under stringent curbs on the press imposed by the nationwide state of emergency in effect since June 12.

News media also are prohibited from reporting on the actions of security forces, and from reporting "subversive" statements.

The Congress of South African Trade Unions said the detention of its president could spark widespread strikes.

Leaders of the labor group, mostly in hiding to avoid detention under the emergency, were to meet at a secret location to debate the crackdown, including the jailing of their leader.

The name of the detained labor congress president, a longtime anti-apartheid campaigner, may not be disclosed under the press restrictions imposed as part of the emergency proclamation.

Analysts have long described the emerging black trade union movement as potentially the most significant force for peaceful change in South Africa. Black unions were legalized in 1979 under reforms introduced by President P.W. Botha's government, and about 1 million blacks are now members.

The laws implemented today, the effective date for legislation passed during the last session of Parliament, included restoring citizenship rights to blacks from four nominally independent tribal homelands if they live outside the territories.

The pass laws, officially known as influx control laws but which took their names from registration documents each black had to carry at all times, were among the most hated aspects of apartheid.

Multiracial administrations for each of the four provinces, consisting of nominees appointed by President P.W. Botha, also took office, replacing elected white provincial councils. Also gone were all-black boards for townships.

No major black anti-apartheid group took part in the new board warning radar the Soviets were constructing at Krasnoyarsk in Siberia. The request was turned down.

In two reports to Congress, Reagan subsequently charged that the radar flouts the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. Even critics of his other positions on arms control support him on the complaint.

One of those critics, Paul Warnke, the chief U.S. negotiator on the SALT II treaty, urged the administration to agree to the Soviet request for a meeting in Geneva.

"It definitely ought to be picked up," he said in an interview. "There's no question we have not made proper use of the SCC (Standing Consultative Commission)."

Warnke said that before Reagan took office in 1981, the commission had resolved several serious questions growing out of the 1972 and 1979 SALT treaties as well as the anti-ballistic missile accord.

APPEAL

Americans and assaults the centuries-old principle of privacy in the home," said TCLU Executive Director Gara LaMarche. "It encourages hypocrisy and erodes respect for our system of laws. What consenting adults do in the privacy of their bedrooms ought to be none of the government's business."

TCLU legal director Jim Harrington called the decision "a devastating reversal of American constitutional jurisprudence."

"There is not a whole lot we can do right now," said Annise Parker, president of the Houston Gay Political Caucus. "We will wait and see what the court rules in the Texas case and we'll challenge it. I believe various sodomy laws across the nation will be challenged and all we can do is try to get more liberal-minded people into the system."

Baker's suit also challenges the full 5th Circuit's ruling on procedural grounds. The appeals court allowed Hill to intervene after Mattox dropped the case. Mattox's office has asked the Supreme Court to review that ruling.

Attorney James Barber, who is helping with Baker's case, speculated Monday that a ruling could be coming soon in the Texas case. He said that although the Texas law is different, he would be surprised if the high court ruled against the state.

"They could distinguish between the two cases, but I doubt it," Barber said.

Ron Dusek, a spokesman for the attorney general's office, said Mattox would have no comment on the decision, other than to say there was no way to speculate what effect the ruling would have on the Texas case.

a balanced budget for the American people," Gramm said.

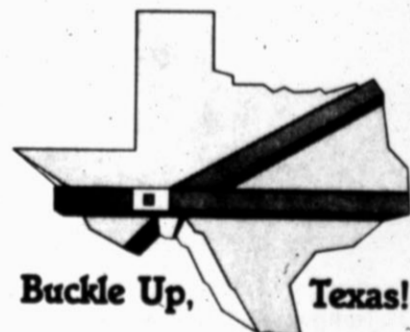

One of the main controversies surrounding the senate bill is the IRA deduction. Under current tax laws, money that is put away in individual retirement accounts is deductible.

In the Senate bill, IRAs will not be deductible if the taxpayer already has a retirement plan, such as union retirement plans or employer paid plans.

Gramm said that under this bill, those who are not high on the corporate ladder will be able to deduct the money they put away for retirement.

"I see the bill as a plus for the middle class people. It is also a plus for agriculture and the cattle feeders," said Gramm.

Number of high earners legally avoiding taxes doubled in 1984

By JIM LUTHER AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of high-income couples and individuals who paid no federal income tax on returns filed in 1984 almost doubled over the previous year despite efforts by Congress to bring them onto the tax rolls, the Treasury Department says.

On those returns, 579 had incomes of $200,000 or more and still managed to pay no tax. Although that represents only 0.23 percent of the 249,319 people with reported incomes at that level, it compared with 299 non-payers in the previous year. Except for a slight dip in 1983, the number has grown steadily since 1978, when the department began collecting this information.

As always, large deductions were a big factor in the ability to avoid taxes. But the wealthy non-taxpayers also used huge losses from farm, business and partnership ventures to shield other income from taxes.

"A high-income return was 2½ times more likely to be non-taxable for 1983 (returns filed in 1984) than for 1979 (filed in 1980)," the IRS said.

Parts of a major tax law enacted in 1982 were aimed directly at high earners who manage to legally escape taxation. The chief weapon against these non-taxpayers has been the "minimum tax," a special levy that Congress tinkers with regularly in an effort to sweep more of the wealthy onto the tax rolls.

The 1982 changes, the report noted, were aimed at raising "the overall level of minimum taxation, to concentrate such taxes on individuals whose tax preferences represented a large share of their income, and to reduce the number of non-taxable, high-income returns."

"The changes have accomplished the first two goals," the report stated. "They do not, however, appear to have been successful in achieving the third goal." The 1982 changes, in fact, "have actually opened the way for a significantly larger number of non-taxable, high-income tax returns," according to the report by Allen Lerman of the Treasury's office of tax analysis.

The broad tax-overhaul plans passed by the House and Senate attempt once again to tighten the minimum tax, which essentially is a special tax on certain large deductions claimed by upper-income people. The Senate measure would crack down considerably on the use of losses from certain partnership investments to avoid taxes.

Of the 579 top earners who paid no U.S. income tax, 142 claimed a tax credit for payments to a foreign government. That number is down slightly from the previous year. The foreign tax credit is a dollar-for-dollar offset against U.S. taxes and is allowed so that income is not subject to double taxation.

The most common factor used by high earners to avoid U.S. tax was a large interest deduction, the Treasury study said. That deduction had the biggest tax effect on 273 of the untaxed returns, or 47 percent of the total. The foreign tax credit was the biggest item on almost 24 percent of the returns.

Ann Landers

Rude salespeople

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I need to blow off some steam and couldn't think of a better place to do it. Thanks for being there.

I am sick and tired of going into a store where the salespeople don't even acknowledge my presence. No hello, no smile, no nothing. Or if there is an acknowledgement, it's as if I've bothered them or ruined their day.

When it comes to pay and I say, "Thank you," they say, "Uh-huh." It makes me sorry I said anything. It seems the salesclerks are the ones who are supposed to say, "Thank you."

Don't these people know it's folks like me who pay their salaries? If they don't like selling, they should quit and do something else.

Am I wrong to assume that if I buy what they are selling, I should be thanked? There's a lot of competition around these days and I could have gone somewhere else.

I do realize that some customers are rude and demanding, but that's not me. In fact, I've noticed that snooty people get treated better. I can't figure out this one. I hope you print this letter, Ann. Maybe it will result in some smiling faces on the other side of the counter. Until then, I am—IRRITATED IN BAKERSFIELD

DEAR BAKER: Here's the letter and it's a good one. It should be posted in the area where sales personnel take off their coats, change their shoes or punch the time clock.

Stores where salespeople are unpleasant should be avoided. If they are downright rude, they should be reported to management. For every sourpuss behind a counter there are three smiling faces who would love the job.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Because of the tremendous loss I might have suffered last night, I would like you to print this letter.

DEAR OFFICER: About 11:30 p.m. you arrested my sister for drunk driving. Thank you.—TRULY GRATEFUL

DEAR TRULY: I don't know when I have read so much good sense expressed in so few words. Your letter packed a wallop. Thank you for writing.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am writing to you because my father and I had a terrific fight. His wife, my stepmother, called my girlfriend a name that would have made any man angry. They were both drunk, a way of life they have become accustomed to.

In the past I have been insulted and hit many times by my parents, often in front of other people. I was always ashamed to bring a girl home to meet them because by 5 p.m. they both were hammered to the gills and using foul language.

Well, this time I was so humiliated I had to fight back. My father hit me first. I retaliated, but out of respect I didn't use my fist. I sort of slapped him around. Since it happened at his home I was booked for assault and battery.

This is a small town and everyone knows about the fight. (My family has been here for five generations). What should I do? Don't suggest my parents seek counseling. They won't go.—UP THE WELL-KNOWN CREEK

DEAR UP: You ought to get out of that squirrel cage as soon as possible. If you are under-age, ask a lawyer about a foster home.

I also recommend Al-Anon. It will give you a better understanding of your parents' problem and reduce your anger.

Ann Landers' booklet, "Sex and the Teenager," explains every aspect of sexual behavior—where to draw the line, how to say no, the various methods of contraception, the dangers of VD, the symptoms and where to get help. ## POLLY'S POINTERS Making delicious ice cream at home

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — I'm looking for a simple recipe for a good vanilla ice cream. I have several recipes, but they all make a gallon or more of ice cream. The ice cream machine my mom gave me only makes two quarts. Can a standard recipe be simply cut down? — RACHEL

DEAR RACHEL — Yes, most standard ice cream recipes can be halved or otherwise divided successfully. However, here's my favorite easy ice cream recipe. No cooking required and it's the perfect size for your two-quart machine. Stir together 2 cups heavy cream, 2 cups light cream or half-and-half, ¾ cup sugar, 1 ½ teaspoons vanilla and ¼ teaspoon salt until sugar is dissolved. Freeze in an ice cream freezer according to manufacturer's directions. This makes about two quarts. I'm sending you a copy of my newest newsletter "Homemade Ice Cream," which has more delicious recipes for vanilla, chocolate, strawberry, banana and lemon ice cream, including a recipe (it's really just a technique) for a frozen banana treat that tastes and looks just like creamy soft-serve ice cream, but is low in calories and contains no cream or sugar! There are recipes that do not require a special ice cream maker. Others who would like this issue should send $1.00 for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1216, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to include the title. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Spring-type clothespins do much more than just hold clothes on the line. Use them to slip up a "hideout" for the kids. With clothespins, pin a sheet to a curtain or around a chair leg (be creative!). Another hint: It may be hard for some men to tell if they're putting on the correct color socks. With a pen, write the correct color — black, navy, gray, brown — on the end of a clothespin and clip it to the corresponding pair of socks. — S.M.

DEAR POLLY — By mistake, I bought four bags of unbleached flour. I usually have no use for it. Could you please let me know how I can use it to measure up to bleached flour? For instance, I use 2 ¼ cups of bleached flour to make a cake; how much should I use of unbleached? — ANGIE

DEAR ANGIE — Unbleached all-purpose flour is measured exactly the same as bleached all-purpose flour. Use exactly the same measurement with either flour. Some unbleached flours may have a slightly higher gluten content than some bleached flours, and thus be even better for bread baking, but the difference is slight and products such as cakes are not affected. However, when substituting unbleached flour for CAKE flour (which is finer than all-purpose), make the same adjustment that you make with any all-purpose flour, bleached or not. That is, remove one tablespoon all-purpose flour from each cupful to equal one cup of cake flour. Hope this is all clear. Happy baking! — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — This is from a knitting nut 65 years old. I knitted 17 long-sleeved sweaters in 1985 and would like to pass on a handy knitting hint. When binding off the last row of stitches, instead of using a knitting needle in your right hand, use a crochet hook of comparable size. Bind off as usual. The hook makes it so easy to slip one stitch through the others. You must try it to appreciate it. — BETTY

DR. GOTT We're all going deaf by degrees

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

Some scientists have calculated that if normal human hearing were more sensitive, we would be disturbed by the constant rumbling of air molecules colliding with each other. That's probably an exaggeration but, unquestionably, the ability to hear is one of Nature's miracles. However, in lemmy-like fashion, we seem determined to destroy this marvelous gift. Several medical reports have indicated that the current noise level of our 20th-century cosmopolitan existence is causing permanent hearing damage in millions of people.

We are able to discern tones because of unique cells within the inner ear, one set on each side. When sound is transmitted through the acoustical bones of the middle ear, it produces fluid waves in the cochlea, a lymph-filled, snail-shell-shaped chamber that is lined by specific sensors called hair cells. There are sets of hair cells for each tone in the audible sound spectrum. The tiny hairs of the cells project into the lymph of the cochlea. As the fluid wave travels through the cochlea, the hairs are set in motion, stimulate the hearing cells and produce minuscule electrical currents that speed through the auditory nerves to the brain, where they are perceived as sound.

If a particular tone is excessively loud, the hair cells that sense the pitch can be shaken loose and dislodged; they cease functioning. No new cells regrow to take their places; the person simply becomes unable to hear soundwaves in that range. Thus, irreparable damage occurs within specific hearing ranges. That is, persons exposed to loud high noises lose cells in the high range; those exposed to low-frequency noise lose cells in the low range.

The resulting acoustic abnormality is easily demonstrated in an audiogram, a hearing test that examines a patient's ability to perceive faint tones at various frequencies.

Loud noises cause a dropoff in tone perception in the so-called "conversation range," the mid-range of hearing. This hearing loss had been characteristic of people working in loud occupations, such as air-hammer operators, riveters and personnel who service jet aircraft. In industry today, workers are required to wear ear protection but, in the past, "boiler-maker's ear" was a recognized consequence of a specific occupation. Chronic exposure to loud noise results in complete or partial deafness in the conversational frequency-range. Although these individuals can usually hear high and low tones, they have difficulty perceiving sounds produced by ordinary conversation.

In 1953, Britain granted amnesty to more than 14,000 World War II deserters from her armed forces.

In 1973, the International Control Commission for Vietnam unanimously voted itself out of existence.

Deafness in other ranges has been produced in studies of animals; for obvious reasons, there have been no experiments on human beings.

Despite the hearing dangers posed by industry, we continue to be bombarded by excessive noise in our environment. In particular, bands playing rock music at high decibel levels are causing irreparable damage to the ears of youthful listeners. More than one report has shown permanent hearing loss in the musicians themselves.

Several years ago, a study investigated tone perception in healthy college freshmen. The results were shocking: Almost half the students showed significant hearing loss in the mid-range frequencies. Other investigators have tested hearing in members of a primitive tribe, isolated from industrial noise of any sort. The findings were striking: Most of the natives over 70 years of age had better hearing than the average 30-year-old in our society.

There seems to be little doubt that we are progressively deafening ourselves. Much "old-age deafness" may, in fact, be the result of longstanding exposure to the noises of our culture. Perhaps we need to re-evaluate our priorities, since most of this hearing-loss may be preventable.

Sounds that are loud enough to cause pain or ringing in the ears certainly have the potential for knocking off hair cells and causing permanent damage. An approximate limit to nondamaging sound is the roar of a subway train. Yet doctors frequently see young people who brag that they experienced ringing in the ears or "temporary" deafness after listening to amplified rock music. Repeated exposure is certain to cause permanent hearing problems.

People should not take it as a sign of weakness to cover their ears when in the vicinity of loud noise. Earplugs and sound-dampening earmuffs are effective ways to reduce the noise caused by engines (like those of chainsaws), as well as rock groups. Children must be educated to protect their ears from excessive sound. Adults should discourage fads that involve high-decibel noise, such as unprotected listening to electronically amplified music.

If we do not approach the problem head on — and soon — we may have to make louder and louder noise ... just to be heard.

VICTIMS OF TERROR

The toll since 1970

Sixty-one percent of the U.S. casualties in terrorism abroad since 1970 have occurred in the past five years. In comparison, 44 percent of all international terror casualties since 1970 (which includes U.S. victims) have occurred in the past five years.

Judge approves mail restrictions

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge has given the Texas Department of Corrections permission to restrict mailing privileges of inmates suspected of using the mail to foment violence.

Assistant Attorney General S. Scott McCown, representing TDC, said the proposal approved Monday by Chief District Judge John B. Singleton could go into effect within a few weeks.

TDC officials contended that inmates have been able to recruit for gangs, organize and plan assaults and murders through the mail. More control over inmate mail will help decrease gang violence, they said.

The out-of-court settlement approved by Singleton affects two long-running prisoner lawsuits, one by Guadalupe Guardado, in which Singleton upheld prisoners' rights to receive mail, and by David Ruiz, which led to the sweeping reform order by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice.

Court approval of the mail plan came while Justice was hearing more testimony in another Houston federal court concerning inmate allegations that TDC has failed to meet reforms he ordered in 1982.

For more than a week, a parade of inmates, TDC officials and prison experts have testified before Justice, on a request that the Texas prison system be found in contempt and fined for violating court orders.

James Park, a retired official with the California Department of Corrections, testified Monday that the Texas officials could reduce violence, theft and other abuse by inmates by placing guards within prison living areas.

Park testified that a lack of guards increases the chances that inmates will be victimized.

"Dormitories are particularly bad at night," he said. "It gives a prime opportunity for victimization of weaker inmates."

In 1985, 27 Texas inmates were killed and 216 wounded in the Texas Department of Corrections while in 1984, 25 were murdered and 404 wounded. So far, this year, only one inmate has been killed in prison.

An inadequate staff in inmate living areas is one of several complaints by inmates' attorneys that has brought the TDC back into federal court.

Attorney William Bennett Turner of San Francisco, who is representing inmates in the class action suit, says Texas officials have failed to hire enough staff to provide adequate housing, facilities, medical treatment and counseling for inmates.

According to the World Almanac Book of Inventions, in 1907 aviator Santos-Dumont set the first airborne speed record by traveling 220 meters in 21 seconds. Santos-Dumont knew immediately by checking a wristwatch given him by a friend. The wristwatch became popular during World War I, when French soldiers made makeshift wristwatches by attaching watches to their arms with small chains.

Planned city looks like Anytown

DELICIAS, Mexico (AP) — The century-old railroad station still stands on the outskirts of town, a remnant of this prosperous agricultural center's early days.

Signs perched over stores in the downtown business district announce "mercado" and "helados" and "libreria" for market, ice cream and bookstore.

The signs in Spanish, the Spanish words coming from the ranchers' mouths as they dismount pickup trucks, the fruit and vegetable vendors selling produce from street corner carts and the smell of freshly baked bread wafting from the doors of neighborhood bakeries are common around these parts.

This is Chihuahua state, Mexico, after all, just 65 miles southeast of the state capital, the city of Chihuahua, and 225 miles from the Texas border at El Paso.

But there's something about the appearance of Delicias that makes visitors rush to recheck their road maps.

The paved streets are nice and wide — four lanes in the center of town — and they seem to be arranged in quadrants to converge neatly and orderly on the spotless downtown shopping district.

Delicias, an isolated oasis in the midst of Mexico's largest state, is the Wild West civilized with the comforts money can bring.

Ranch-style homes sit back on sprawling lawns, large manicured parks seem to abound at measured intervals and healthy, playful children rollerskate on wide sidewalks.

Delicias, which means "delights" in Spanish, could be Anytown, U.S.A., back in the 1950s.

"It was the most modern city in the republic for its time," said local businessman Fernando Torres.

Stores piled to the ceiling with straw cowboy hats or genuine leather boots do a booming business, but so do the boutiques and beauty salons.

A former library, the locally supported paleontology museum reminds local residents of their beginnings.

A partially complete dinosaur skeleton, prehistoric fossils and a 300-year-old female mummy on display draw visitors from throughout the region.

Just a settlement when the Mexican National Railway system built the station here in 1884, Delicias today is the bustling commercial center for the District 5 irrigation project, Chihuahua state's largest irrigation system.

Former President Plutarco Elias Calles created the district in 1926, naming engineer Carlos G. Blacke to design a dam and canal project and to plan its neighboring city.

Today, the Boquillas Dam on the Conchos River and the Francisco I. Madero Dam on the San Pedro River, together with an extensive canal system, bring water to the 175,000 acres of former desert land.

The lakes created by the two dams offer excellent fishing and recreational activities for the 100,000 Delicias residents and the thousands more who live and work on the surrounding farms.

Like many northerners, Delicias residents don't hesitate to criticize the centralized government in Mexico City, which they say provides food and transportation subsidies to its citizens at northern expense.

"In Delicias, there's a lot of everything. But we did it ourselves. The government didn't do it for us," said one pecan farmer, asking not to be identified. "The federal government has left us crumbs."

Yet, businessman Torres said residents here don't worry too much about Mexico City.

"Here, the fight is against nature more than the government," he said.

This territory, once a major cotton growing center, now produces a large part of Mexico's wheat, alfalfa, sorghum, soy beans, peanuts and pecans.

It's also known nationally for its milk and dairy products.

Although a portion of the land here is set aside for "ejidos," communal farms, the Delicias agricultural district is largely a system of independent "minifundios," scaled down versions of sprawling landholdings known as "latifundios."

Land ownership, limited to 250 acres per rancher, offers the pride and independence of running their own operations but controls the rise of powerful land bosses common during the latifundio eras.

The ranchers, because they own property, have more political and economic freedom than those who work on the communal farms.

Delicias produced Fernando Baeza, the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party's gubernatorial candidate in Sunday's state elections. Baeza, former Delicias mayor and former state secretary to past Gov. Oscar Flores, is popular in his hometown.

One large red, white and green campaign sign declares, "Delicias, Land of Fernando Baeza."

"He's one of the new leaders that is not corrupt," Torres said. "He was a magnificent mayor."

In 1983 mayoral elections, however, Delicias voters turned to the opposition for leadership, electing a member of the National Action Party.

Teachers to judge governor candidates

AUSTIN (AP) — How educators cast their ballots in November will depend on the education platforms candidates present, a spokeswoman for the Texas State Teachers Association said.

Annette Cootes, TSTA public information officer, said Monday that both Democratic Gov. Mark White and former Gov. Bill Clements, Republican, will appear before TSTA leaders at an Austin conference scheduled for July 19-21.

"Time will tell how teachers will perceive his (White) actions and the teacher vote will depend on the education packages of both candidates," said Ms. Cootes.

On Saturday at the state Democratic convention, White apologized to Texas teachers saying he was sorry they had to take the competency exam.

"We asked you to take a test, and honestly I didn't realize the intensity of the stress that it would cause,"

White said. "For that, I am genuinely sorry."

Ms. Cootes said TSTA was "very pleased with his apology. Knowing that he was going to get criticism for it took a lot of courage for him to do it."

"We hope it will open an era of better communications between the TSTA and the governor's office," she said.

The TSTA made no endorsement in the governor's race in the May primaries.

The political arm of TSTA, Texas Educators Political Action Committee, meets in August.

Mexico to pay $600 million, must agree with creditors

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government will pay $600 million on its $97.6 billion foreign debt today, and has another 30 days to reach an agreement with its creditors on managing the rest of the debt, the Treasury Department said.

A Treasury Department statement issued late Monday said Mexico owes $600 million today rather than the $1.6 billion it has been reported to owe.

Spokesman Roberto Contreras said the $600 million, including interest, payments to suppliers and international organizations, will be paid from the country's reserves.

The statement said the amount due did not include $950 million in principal that was deferred twice, each time for six months, after the Sept. 19 earthquake. It now is due Oct. 1.

At a breakfast with foreign correspondents last week, Treasury Secretary Gustavo Petricoli said Mexico owed about $1.5 billion by July 1. Mexico has been paying only the interest on its foreign debt.

The Treasury Department statement was issued after Petricoli reported to President Miguel de la Madrid and the economic Cabinet on his meetings last week in Washington with U.S. and international banking officials.

It said no bridge loan to help Mexico past today's deadline had been discussed.

The Treasury Department statement was the first information released by Mexico on talks Petricoli had with U.S. Treasury Secretary James Baker, Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker, and Jacques de Larosiere, managing director of the International Monetary Fund.

Petricoli also met with Thomas Clausen, outgoing president of the World Bank, and Antonio Ortiz Mena, president of the Inter-American Development Bank.

"The response of international and American authorities was basically one of interest and comprehension," the statement said.

It said Mexico "emphasized the need to reach an agreement that would not simply include additional credit, but also concessions that diminish the weight of the debt service on the economy."

Mexico wants a level of payments that will allow the economy to grow at 3 percent to 4 percent in 1987 and 1988. It also insists that payments on its debt, second highest in the developing world, vary according to the price of oil, the country's main source of foreign exchange to pay the debt.

"In synthesis, the domestic program and the foreign negotiations coincide in the need to link the amount of net foreign resources needed and the size of the public sector operating deficit with the evolution of petroleum income," the statement said.

Mexico has relied on oil sales for 70 percent of its foreign earnings, but expects oil to produce only about $7 billion this year, compared with the $13.3 billion in 1985. The price of oil on the world market has fallen by about 50 percent since the first of the year.

Mexico also has stressed that it was looking at ways to protect its remaining reserves. The statement said those measures could include depositing interest payments in Mexican banks briefly until foreign currency was available to transfer abroad.

International bankers have indicated a reluctance to reduce the charges on loans granted Mexico years ago, especially since some feel Mexico could have worked harder to improve its economic condition.

The statement said there would be meetings at various levels during July to work out details of an agreement with international creditors.

Tours to precede FarmAid Concert

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Department of Agriculture will sponsor a bus tour of a Central Texas farm on Thursday to publicize the efforts of the Farm Aid II benefit concert to raise money for needy farmers.

More than 50 musical acts have agreed to perform at the July 4 farm benefit, which was originally scheduled for the University of Texas Memorial Stadium but has been moved twice.

The current site for the 14-hour benefit, which was organized by singer Willie Nelson, is Manor Downs, a quarter horse racing and training facility 11 miles east of Austin.

Fred Lundgren of the agriculture department said Monday the department will "let the press have access to Farm Aid leadership in a rural setting" on Thursday, the day before the concert.

Lundgren said presidents of general farm organizations would be available for questions at Dan Berdell's farm just outside the Austin city limits off Texas 71.

The first Farm Aid concert at Champaign, Ill. on Sept. 22, and subsequent solicitations through advertisements, have attracted about $9 million in donations, according to Farm Aid director Carolyn Mugar.

After paying $2 million in expenses, the Farm Aid project spent or committed $4.3 million on programs in 37 states, officials say. The project has $2.7 million remaining in its relief fund, which has gone for food pantries, legal services, telephone hot lines and scholarships for debt-ridden farmers.

The department has asked concert-goers on Friday to bring non-perishable food, which will be donated to the Capital Area Food Bank. "Food banks are on the front lines, helping feed people who have nowhere else to turn, and today that includes many farm families," said Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

On Monday, a spokesman for black rock star Rick James quoted James as saying, "A lot of black farmers are caught up in this situation, too. That's why I'm getting down to Farm Aid. I hope I can help make a difference."

Pope faces dangerous Colombia trip

ROME (AP) — Pope John Paul II left today to bring a week-long message of peace to 12 cities of Colombia, labeled by the Vatican newspaper as a country of undeclared war.

The pope's special Alitalia Boeing 747 took off for Bogota from Leonardo da Vinci Airport at 10:50 a.m. (4:50 a.m. EDT) for a flight of nearly 12 hours.

The Vatican daily L'Osservatore Romano, describing Colombia as a small screen that reflects Latin America's broader image, said in an editorial that the gap between rich and poor was triggering "terrible and blind shortcuts to violence."

On his 30th tour abroad as pontiff and seventh to Latin America, John Paul will encounter a country charged with the tensions of guerrilla warfare, drug problems and extreme poverty. He will travel through a land that last year was wracked by a deadly volcanic eruption and an earthquake.

The pope's safety has been one of the Vatican's major concerns, as it has been for the Colombian government, but no extra security complement is coming from Italy.

Leftist guerrillas with submachine guns stormed a church during Mass on Monday in Medellin, one of the cities on the pope's itinerary. The rebels delivered a lecture from the pulpit, urging the Catholic church to do more for the poor.

Early in June, guerrillas took over two seminaries the pope is scheduled to visit and in the last three weeks they have set off 14 bombs in Medellin, Cali and Pereira, three cities on the pope's itinerary.

"Peace, in this country of undeclared war, is one of the great unopened horizons of the future of this land," the Vatican newspaper said.

Vatican officials are also edgy about the pope's helicopter trip over the rumbling volcano Nevado del Ruiz. John Paul is scheduled to stop for 30 minutes at Armero, where 22,000 people died last year in a sea of mud.

When the pope receives political representatives at the presidential palace in Bogota, he may meet with ex-guerrillas of the Patriotic Union party, which has 12 elected members in parliament. This party is the political arm of the pro-Soviet guerrilla group FARC (Colombian Revolutionary Armed Forces).

The pope will also send a videotaped personal message to the inmates of Colombian prisons, which include jailed guerrillas. But the Vatican has emphasized that the papal trip is religious and pastoral, not political.

Nevada speed limit increases to 70 mph

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — Motorists hoped to put the pedal to the metal as the speed limit on a 33-mile stretch of Interstate 80 hit 70 mph today, but the change wasn't expected to last long enough to put up new signs.

State lawmakers in Nevada, the last state to adopt the 55-mph limit imposed 12 years ago, ordered the limit raised to 70 on the wide-open spaces of I-80 near Fernley, east of Reno.

But the Federal Highway Administration, which monitors speed limits set by state governments, said it would immediately pull $100 million in federal funds until the 55-mph limit was reinstated.

The moment the state gets written notice of the funding cutoff, the lower limit would be back, Nevada Transportation Director Garth Dull said Monday.

"If they delay their response, we'd have signs up," said Dull. "But if we can believe the FHWA, the letter denying us funds will be delivered immediately."

Tony Horner, the federal agency's chief in Nevada, said he intended to hand Dull the letter in person. "And I expect to be there pretty early," he added.

The increased limit was approved by the 1985 Legislature with a built-in evaporation if the federal government pulls the funds.

Officials in Nevada, with vast stretches of open country and mile upon mile of desert highways, have always argued that the 55-mph limit doesn't belong in the state. Many of those roads were designed for high-speed driving and were built in the days before the 55 mph speed limit took effect in 1974.

The federal government urged states to adopt the 55-mph limit that year as a reaction to the oil shortage. Since then, the government has pointed out that highway deaths dropped and has urged the limit be retained, using the threat of federal funding cutoffs to enforce the point.

Until 55 mph was adopted, Nevada had no speed limit on outlying highways.

While the higher limit may last only minutes, the process is designed to provide ammunition for a lawsuit against the 55-mph limit.

Assemblyman Bob Thomas, who with Republican colleague Art Raer wrote the 70-mph bill, said the state argues that Nevada has a legal right to try to prove that the higher limit is safe.

The legislation provided for a mandatory seat-belt law if the higher limit took effect. Tests along certain sections of highways and freeways were planned to show there was as much or more safety under a 70-mph limit, Thomas said.

Dull said that if the federal government allowed the higher limit to stand, the Nevada Transportation Department would expand its testing to still more roads around the state.

Nevada already has eased penalties for exceeding the speed limit. This state imposes a nominal $15 "energy-wasting" fine and fee for people ticketed at speeds up to 70 mph.

Behind 3-hit pitching of Frank Viola

Twins beat Rangers 5-2

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The Minnesota Twins put on a major league display of pitching and hitting with a 3-hitter by left-hander Frank Viola and 10 hits, including a homer and four doubles.

But most of the post-game talk Monday night centered around a play straight from the sandlots — the old hidden-ball.

Backed by the hitting of Roy Smalley and Gary Gaetti, Viola won his eight games in 14 decisions as he stymied the Texas Rangers 5-2 at Arlington Stadium.

Smalley had three hits, including his 14th homer, and scored three runs, and Gaetti added three hits, including two doubles, and drove home three runs.

But with the Twins' 3-2 lead in jeopardy in the bottom of the eighth, second baseman Steve Lombardozi pulled the hidden-ball trick on Ranger rookie catcher Mike Stanley and snuffed out a potential Texas rally.

"I've tried it several times before this season, but it hasn't worked until tonight," said Lombardozi, who admitted having mixed emotions about pulling the trick since Stanley is a good friend of his.

"Mike and my brother were roommates in college (Florida)," Lombardozi said, "and I knew Mike would be embarrassed if I caught him. But ... what are friends for?"

Just before the trick, Lombardozi had made a putout at first on Scott Fletcher's sacrifice bunt that sent Stanley to second with one out.

Manager Ray Miller, Lombardozi and Viola held a conference on the mound, and when Lombardozi returned to his position, he still had the ball.

"I didn't know the play was on," said Miller, "until I turned around and saw what happened. If you ask me, that's what kept Frankie in the game."

Rangers manager Bobby Valentine took the blame for not spotting the trick.

"No one saw it. Someone should have. I blame myself," he said. "They tried it in Minnesota and I saw it. I don't know if it won the game for them, but it was a great play at the right time."

The Twins took some of the heat off Stanley by scoring a couple of insurance runs in the top of the ninth to put it out of reach.

The big blow was Gaetti's two-run double off reliever Greg Harris, 3-7, the third of four Ranger hurlers.

Bobby Witt started, was replaced by Dale Mohoricic, who gave way to Harris, who left in favor of Mitch Williams.

Viola, who was nicked for a two-run homer by Pete Incaviglia, his 13th, needed relief help after walking two batters with one out in the ninth.

Keith Atherton retired the final two batters for his fifth save, although it took a spectacular diving catch by right fielder Tom Brunansky to keep the Rangers off the board.

"That was a heck of a catch," said Miller. "It was in no-man's land. Most players would play it safe in that situation, but he went for it and made it."

The catch robbed Steve Buechele of a hit that would have extended his hitting streak to 14 games.

Despite the loss, the Rangers remained one-half game behind California in the American League West.

Joe Cronin, a member of the Baseball Hall of Fame, was a playing manager for the Boston Red Sox in 1943 when he connected for pinch-hit home runs in both ends of a doubleheader.

Paul Derringer lost 27 games for the St. Louis Cardinals and Cincinnati Reds in 1933 and two years later won 22 for the Reds.

Happy Birthday J.J.!

End 3-game losing streak

Padres defeat Astros 9-2

HOUSTON (AP) — San Diego pitcher Dave Dravecky and shortstop Gary Templeton are both rebounding from slow starts this season. The result of their efforts Monday night was a 9-2 win over the Houston Astros.

The win stopped a three-game losing streak for the Padres, 38-37, and halted a three-game win streak of the Astros, now 41-34 as San Diego moved to within three games of National League West leaders.

Dravecky, 7-7, was not in top form while allowing eight hits in seven innings, but he won for the second time in a row after having lost four straight.

"Tonight was a finesse night," Dravecky said. "I didn't let things get out of hand even though I didn't have my best stuff. I just tried to be consistent and stay ahead of the hitters. The defense behind me was excellent."

Catcher Terry Kennedy agreed. "He didn't have his A-1 stuff, but he's learning how to pitch without it. He didn't strike anybody out, but he made the pitches he had to make." Templeton finished a four-run Padre first inning with a disputed three-run homer that bounced off the top of the inner-center field wall and landed on the playing surface.

Tony Gwynn, the National League's leading hitter, had already slammed his seventh home run with one out.

The Padres scored three more runs in the sixth as Kennedy drove in two runs with his second double of the night and Templeton scored again in the ninth as he accounted for three runs, three hits and three RBI. That gives him 17 RBI in his last 18 games.

"I got off to a slow start," Templeton said. "But men have been getting on base in front of me, giving me the opportunity to drive in some runs."

"That (Templeton's homer) didn't beat us," said Houston manager Al Lanier. "We jut beat ourselves."

Houston pitcher Bob Knepper, 10-6, has lost four of his last five decisions. He had criticized his team's lack of effort but he accepted the blame on Monday.

"It was one of those games when I had rotten stuff. No, I really had rotten location. My arm was not tired. I just threw bad pitches, and therefore, gave my team no chance to win the game."

The Astros scored both their runs in the second inning when Kevin Bass was driven in by Jose Cruz's triple. Cruz scored on Tony Walek's double. After that, however, Houston stranded eight runners.

Bo Jackson goes 1-for-4 in pro baseball debut

By JONATHAN VITTI
 AP Sports Writer
 MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Always the patient hitter, Bo Jackson may wait months for a ball more to his liking.

The Heisman Trophy winner made his much-awaited professional baseball debut Monday. He went 1-for-4, including an RBI single in his first at-bat for the class Double-A Southern League's Memphis Chicks.

After the single, in the first inning, the ball was taken out of the game for Jackson to keep.

They can put it back in play today. "I don't want it," Jackson said. "Why? I've got enough at home in my trophy case."

ding back to the pitcher. His pro debut ended up as a 9-5 loss to the Columbus, Ga., Astros.

Though he didn't want the ball, Jackson said the night as a whole was a dream come true.

"Yes it is," he said, "simply because ... the last pro baseball game I saw was the game that Hank Aaron hit that record home run. I've always wanted to know what that felt like, just to be in the big leagues."

"I'm almost there now, and I'm just going to work harder and harder."

One of the key men Jackson has to please to get to the majors, Royals head scout Art Stewart, liked what he saw Monday night.

"I was pleased," he said. "How many (athletes) walk into Double-A without playing a full season in college?"

Says NCAA committee chairman

Drug testing necessary

By RUSTY MILLER

AP Sports Writer
COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The chairman of the NCAA committee on drug education, saying every college in the country has a drug problem, feels that an effective testing program acts as a deterrent to abuse by athletes.

Dr. Robert J. Murphy, an associate clinical professor of preventive medicine and the head team physician at Ohio State University, says he has data showing that in the last five years 20 percent to 25 percent of college athletes use marijuana or cocaine — or both — on an average of once a week.

"I think an institution should and must have a drug-testing program, but I don't think it can be mandated," Murphy said.

Murphy, also the chairman of the NCAA's committee on drug education, provided information presented to the Big Ten Conference Awareness Committee on Alcohol and Drug Abuse. A 1984 NCAA survey found that 36 percent of 2,039 athletes responding had used marijuana within the previous 12 months, 17 percent used cocaine, 8 percent used amphetamines and 6.5 percent used anabolic steroids.

"Every college in America has a drug problem because it's a reflection of our society and of the student body," Murphy said during an interview. "Drug use among athletes is approximately 50 percent that of the general student population."

Cocaine was cited as the cause of deaths this month of Maryland basketball player Len Bias and Cleveland Browns football player Don Rogers. Bias died June 19, Rogers last Friday.

Murphy said that when an Ohio State athlete is detected using drugs, "We feel they should not play. ... If they have drugs in their system, they run the risk of injuring themselves as well as causing other players to be at risk because of their lack of performance."

Murphy said that every athlete, coach, trainer, team physician, manager and staff member affiliated with the program at Ohio State is tested.

He said that when an athlete tests positive the first time, they are checked again. So-called "false-positives" occur in less than 1 percent of the tests, Murphy said.

On the determination of a positive test, the athlete is placed on probation but is not disciplined by a loss of playing time. For the remainder of his or her college career, the athlete must submit to weekly tests. Positives are cumulative, so that if an athlete fails a test as a freshman and then again as a senior, it is still a second positive.

A second drug test failure brings intrasquad discipline. For instance, starters don't start, those on the traveling squad are left at home and those who are on the non-travel squad are taken off training table.

The athlete is suspended on a third positive test. They may be reinstated after they have been declared clean for a period of four to six weeks, Murphy said.

"Every player who has been suspended over the last two years (at Ohio State) has been reinstated," said Murphy, who said that six or seven athletes at the university had failed a third test over that period.

MINORITY RULE

DALLAS (AP) — The NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee flew in the face of majority opinion when they adopted a three-point field goal for the next season.

A questionnaire was distributed to the college coaches and only 35 of those who replied said they would vote for the change.

The chairman of the rules committee, Jerry V. Krause, said: "We knew that changing the rule was contrary to the prevailing sentiment. But we decided to make an exception for a significant rules change."

Big city Playboy Clubs close doors

By The Associated Press

The pajama and tuxedo set turned out by the hundreds to take a final ogle at the Playboy bunnies as the empire built on men's libidos closed its big-city clubs in Chicago, Los Angeles and New York — the victims of changing times.

"My wife reminded me on the way over here that we're going to another end-of-the-'60s party. And it is," said Jerry Rubin, the Yippie-turned-Yuppie who attended Monday night's closing of the New York club with his wife, Mimi.

Playboy founder Hugh Hefner joined a capacity crowd of 550 at the Los Angeles club, including his 22-year-old girlfriend, Carrie Leigh, who was wearing a jewel-bedecked see-through dress.

"The Playboy clubs were a phenomenon, but nothing lasts forever," Hefner said in a statement released before the party.

Others attending in Los Angeles were comedian Jackie Gayle, actors Tony Curtis and Jack Carter and singer Mel Tormé, said Playboy Enterprises Inc. spokesman Bill Farley.

Although Hefner said it was a time to celebrate the past rather than mourn it, the closings saddened many keyholders, bunnies and company officials.

"I feel badly," Harriet Bassler, Playboy's director of bunnies for the last 10 years, said at the Chicago club, the oldest. "I'll get this out of my system first and then start looking for a new job."

There were once more than 15 clubs either owned by Playboy or franchised since the one in Chicago opened in 1960. Now, bunny watchers will have to go to Playboy's three remaining franchise clubs — in Des Moines, Iowa; Omaha, Neb.; and Lansing, Mich. — or to the four in Tokyo and one in Manila.

"Tonight isn't a time to mourn the loss of an old friend," Hefner said. "It's a time to look back fondly on the good times and happy memories the Playboy clubs have brought to countless millions of keyholders and guests." But Joe Chmielik, owner of a Playboy key for more than a decade, said in Chicago: "When they say a farewell toast at midnight, I'll shed a few tears. It's the end of an era."

It also was the end of jobs for the bunnies — decked out for the last time in their rabbit ears, figure-molding satin suits, tuxedo cuffs, collars and powder-puff tails — and for the rabbits, their male counterparts.

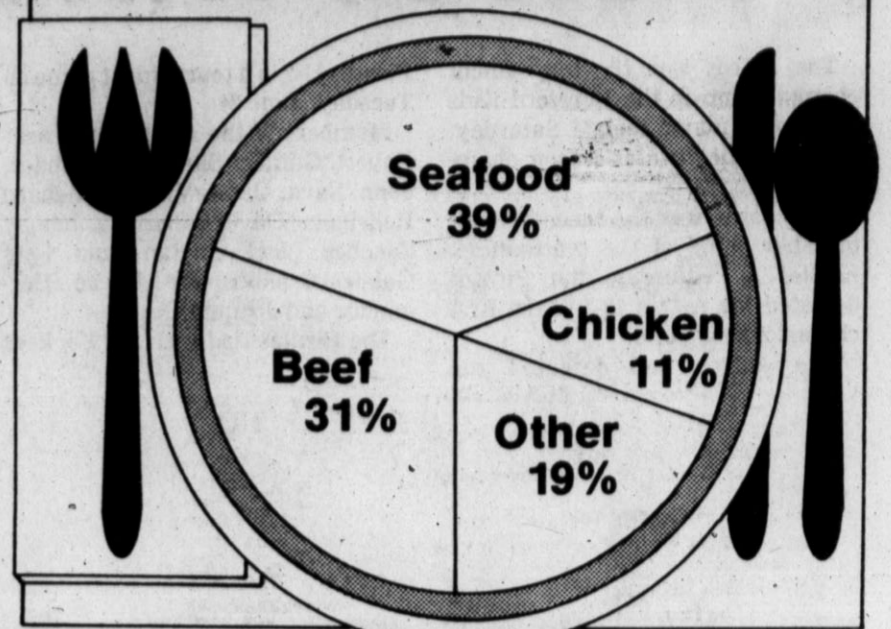

"I guess I'll try to get more acting parts now," said Monica Lindner, a part-time actress who was among the dozen bunnies serving drinks to 200 invited guests on the final night in Chicago.

The clubs, which once provided 40 percent of Playboy revenue, made up just 5 percent of 1984 revenues. The company in May reported a third-quarter loss of $3.2 million on $42.8 million in revenues. The loss was attributed mainly to the poor performance of the club division.

Other reasons for the closings included the fact that the mainstay of the clubs — the businessman of yesterday — could be the businesswoman of today, and the tameness of the clubs in cities where hard-core sex is as close as the corner video rental shop.

SHOPPING DAY When people buy groceries

It's not your imagination — supermarket lines are longer on Fridays and Saturdays. While most people shop on any — or every — day, half the people who buy groceries on a specific day, shop on Fridays or Saturdays.

When putting in screens for warm weather, either clean with a hand brush or the vacuum cleaner dusting attachment. Windowpanes will stay cleaner and more sunlight will filter through clean screens.
