Site study plans delayed by DOE

Plans to open a field office in Hereford this summer have been delayed by the Department of Energy while DOE takes a little more time to study its schedule and preparatory plans for nuclear waste site characterization, according to Linda McClain, Texas project manager for the DOE.

A story in the Amarillo Globe-News today indicated the delay would be from two to six months while the DOE reviews plans to be presented to the state.

McClain told The Brand today that she should know in a few weeks what kind of schedule changes would be made and how it would affect the entire schedule for the repository.

She said the delay had nothing to do with any "stop work orders" which had been called at the Washington State site. McClain also said DOE is aware of pending litigation with site states, but is keeping the program going as permitted.

Lease or purchase of property on which the site characterization is to be done has not been attempted, McClain said today. She told The Brand that plans by the engineers had to be finished before the DOE could start lease or purchase land. She said she was unaware of what the status is on those plans.

The agency had wanted to have a core group located in Hereford this summer, then within two years have an entire work force of about 600 located in the area. That work force would be conducting "environmental monitoring all around the site with drill holes" and seismic tests.

At Chamber breakfast

Mayor receives Bull Chip award

Mayor Wes Fisher was the recipient of the coveted community service Bull Chip award presented today at the Chamber of Commerce "Fireworks Fun Breakfast" held at the Hereford Community Center.

The patriotic theme of the breakfast was evident in the prizes given away, also. In the drawings, Steve Gilbert won fireworks, Nancy Last won a box of fireworks and Jackie Hammett won $25 in Hereford Bucks.

Miss Liberty, alias Gladys Cavness, visited the 200-plus crowd, too.

Announcements were made of upcoming events in the town. Coming on July 12 are two activities. The daylong Cowgirl Hall of Fame Chili and Rib Cookoff will be at the Hall's grounds and the annual King's Manor Founder's Day barbeque is that evening.

The Hall of Fame Rodeo Association announced its all-girl rodeo will be July 25-27 at the Circle A Arena this year.

Town and Country Jubilee plans are rolling for the Aug. 10-16 event. Applications are available at the Chamber office for parade entries and booths for the Jubilee Junction and the Jubilee Arts and Crafts exhibits.

Charlie Bell and John Stagner were emcees for the breakfast.

Jobless rate hits recent record high

DALLAS (AP) — The effects of collapsing oil and gas prices threw record numbers of Texans into the unemployment line in June when the state's jobless rate hit a recent high of 10.5 percent, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported today.

The June rate marked an increase of 0.9 percent from May and was almost 3½ points above the 7.1 percent rate for June 1985.

The unemployment rate is the highest recorded in Texas since the government began the present system of recording joblessness in 1970.

Bryan Richie, regional commissioner for the bureau, said the increase was the result of a huge increase in the number of Texans unable to find jobs, as well as a drop in the state's total employment.

Richie said falling oil and gas prices would continue to drag down the Texas economy.

"Clearly, the decline in business activity, especially since the first of this year has been linked to the rapid and significant reduction in oil and gas prices. They fell again yesterday," he said.

Richie said a record 846,000 people were unemployed last month in Texas — almost 200,000 more than the previous high in February 1983, during the last statewide recession.

The number of Texans holding jobs dipped by 30,000 to 7,230,000, marking the first decline in total employment in the last 12 months, Richie said.

Problems facing the moribund oil and gas industry have now spread to other portions of the Texas economy, Richie said.

"Almost every sector of the state's economy is showing signs of weakness because there is this rippling effect. At this point, there are no indications of a turnaround," Richie said.

Group studies school budgets

AUSTIN (AP) — School budget writers have warned that any change in the state and local financing of public schools must be made carefully.

"If we make cuts, we must be very sure they are equitable," Commissioner William Kirby told the State Board of Education's committee on finance on Wednesday.

The committee will meet again July 10 to vote on what it will recommend to the full 15-member board on July 11 and 12.

Kirby warned committee members several times that an expected special legislative session in August could change their proposals.

"I would like for this committee to sign off on something by next week," said Kirby. "Then if there is a special session in August and we have to change something we can do it in October."

The committee is studying four plans for levels of state aid for public education, as recommended by the staff of the Texas Education Agency.

One is a "wish" list calling for an increase over current spending of $1.5 billion. Another would continue the current level of operations, which would cost $1.3 million more in 1988-89. The other two call for variations of 10 percent and 20 percent reductions from current budgets, which could save up to $2 billion.

Kirby said the total cost of financing public schools in Texas averages 46 percent from state money, 47 percent from local funds and 7 percent from federal funds.

Much of the local funding goes for construction and maintenance of schools, while most of the state money goes for instruction.

The Foundation School Program, which provides a set amount to local schools to give each student an adequate education, amounts to 33.3 percent from local funds and 66.7 from the state.

Some of the alternatives before the committee would increase the local share of the foundation fund to 40 or 50 percent.

The completed budget for the next two fiscal years is scheduled to be presented to the Legislative Budget Board and the governor's office by Aug. 1.

Final tax vote Monday

Deaf Smith County Commissioners will take the final vote on increasing the county tax rate by 7 percent when they meet at 10 a.m. Monday in the courthouse.

The budget proposal had been approved earlier, but required public hearing before finalization.

Also on the agenda is consideration of an inter-governmental contract for funds to be used in establishing a research office to determine impacts of a nuclear waste repository study. One contract was approved this week by the county to form a coalition with other county taxing entities.

The commission also is to consider some bills to be paid.

Firemen respond to 3 alarms

The Hereford Fire Department responded to an ammonia leak Wednesday at Hereford Grain, 511 W. First, but when firefighters arrived, the leak had been stopped.

A smoke scare was reported at 806 N. Miles, and an electrical fire was reported at the residence of Earl Washington on South U.S. 385. There was minor damage to the Washington residence.

Police report

City police, while responding to a silent alarm, arrested an individual inside Winn's Department Store Thursday morning. The alarm was noticed by a police dispatcher at around 3 a.m. The man was arrested and charged with burglary of a building.

Police also made an arrest Wednesday for driving without a driver's license and failure to show proof of insurance.

Police also heard reports of criminal mischief, the theft of a bicycle, assault, a juvenile dispute, harassment, and a suspicious vehicle.

A report of a pit bull dog killing a poodle also was filed.

Fuel pump stolen

Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Deputies heard a report Wednesday of the theft of an electrical diesel fuel pump from Marvin Smith of Westway. The pump was valued at $280.

Fireworks salesman says stand just a patriotic way

By CINDY SMITH
Staff Writer

Fireworks stands prohibited within the city limit, are doing a "popping good" job with business on the outskirts of town.

Traveling around Hereford one can spot about 11 of the flashing signs pointing out the stands.

In his seventh year of selling fireworks, James Hamby, a patriotic veteran of operating a firework stand, said one doesn't have to get with a company to sell fireworks.

"You can either buy fireworks directly from a distributor or you can go through a distributor who will furnish the fireworks and set up the stand and you sell them working for a salary," said Hamby. He commented that it's very much like a company-owned store where they set prices for you and you sell them.

Hamby chooses to buy directly from a distributor "and that gives me the freedom to set my own prices, run my own specials, (yes, fireworks stands run specials too,) or even promotions that I might choose to run," Hamby added.

Presently, Hamby is going to give away a 16,000 count roll of firecrackers worth $200 for one of his promotions. He's also going to give away a Texas Giant family assortment which is being donated for a drawing at YMCA.

"The reason I'm donating that to the Y is because I like to see the kids with the parents get involved in celebrating our nation's birthday," explained Hamby.

"I think the Fourth of July should be a family oriented holiday," he added. Hamby said he always makes sure children don't buy anything dangerous. "And we stick strictly to the law in selling the fireworks."

"We only sell fireworks that are legal in the state of Texas, no under the counter specials," said Hamby. In the firework business, Hamby said most stands try to carry a full line of fireworks which includes everything from firecrackers to ground fountains to large aerial displays.

According to Hamby, when opening up a stand one looks for a good location which includes adequate parking, easy access, and definitely a good traffic flow.

"It takes a lot of long hours and you have to decide if you can invest the time it takes to keep a stand open," said Hamby.

"There's more than just coming out and opening the door. You have to set up your displays, you have your advertising, scheduling of employees, stocking of shelves, and reordering and purchasing," Hamby said giving a run down on what to expect.

"It's kind of a gamble each year of what you buy," he cautioned. "If you make the wrong choice you might be stuck with a lot of fireworks."

Hamby agreed the person that runs the local firework stand is not just in it for the money. "He enjoys

Legislators favor special session

AUSTIN (AP) — A new survey shows many Texas legislators favoring a special session to balance a state government budget that's now gushing red ink.

But a key lawmaker says plans to call such a session could be jeopardized by legislative leaders' inability to agree on a way to balance the books in a short time.

"I think it could possibly not happen, I just think reaching a consensus in this short a period of time is almost impossible," Rep. Stan Schlueter told the Austin American-Statesman.

Schlueter, D-Killeen, is chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee.

One reason for the possible impasse is that some lawmakers think Gov. Mark White passed the buck by not putting forth a plan of his own when Comptroller Bob Bullock said the state's budget deficit could hit $2.3 million by Aug. 31, 1987, Schlueter said.

White last week reversed his stand of many months, saying he is prepared to call the House and Senate into special session once legislative leaders draft a plan to balance the budget.

"I really would (have liked) to have seen his program first," Schlueter said. "Secondly, the House

Governor greets wagon train

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — After 3,000 gritty miles, riders in the Texas Sesquicentennial wagon train won compliments from Gov. Mark White for their pioneer spirit the day before a triumphant parade into the Fort Worth Stockyards.

About 150 wagons rolled into Gateway Park Wednesday afternoon to a greeting of barbecue, country and western entertainment and the applause of state officials, including U.S. Rep. Jim Wright of Fort Worth.

For Teresa and David Shivers, the festivities were the end of a long journey that started in the biting cold of Jan. 2 in Sulphur Springs.

Riders in the historic pilgrimage said they joined the train for a chance to see life differently and be part of an epic event.

"It won't be happening again any time soon," said Sharon Bounds, who joined the train with her family for the last 11 days.

The Shivers said they met with cold, heat and the long stretch across West Texas during their travels in a tandem wagon with relatives. Inside the 38-inch wide wagon, they spread foam to keep out the elements and hung utensils from sheets of fish netting.

Mrs. Shivers, wearing an old-fashioned sun bonnet, said they decided to make the journey for, "the adventure, I guess." She said there was plenty to do on the road.

Dr. undefeated by death of baby

LOMA LINDA, Calif. (AP) — The surgeon who pioneered heart transplants in infants says he doesn't feel defeated despite the death of a Texas toddler who received two implanted hearts in two days.

"Every mountain has at least two valleys, and I suppose you'd have to think of this as one of the valleys in the heart transplant business," Dr. Leonard Bailey said Wednesday after 3-year-old Nicky Carrizales died at Loma Linda University Medical Center.

Bailey said an autopsy should reveal the cause of death. But he added that Nicky's internal organs were badly swollen with fluid from 18 hours on a heart-lung machine between his two transplants on June 17 and 19, and lung failure probably caused by an infection "was the straw that broke the camel's back."

The boy's parents — Rudy and Mary Lou Carrizales of San Antonio — were at his bedside "during the crucial parts of his deterioration," Bailey said.

Nicky, whose second transplant surgery ended June 19 after the first implanted organ failed, was the sixth and oldest child on whom Bailey has performed such surgery since November.

The other five children remain alive after the transplants that replaced their defective hearts.

Bailey hoped the autopsy would provide clues to help doctors choose candidates for transplants, admitting that, "In retrospect, he probably wasn't suitable because the first heart should have worked and it failed."

In October 1984, Bailey implanted a baboon's heart in a child known only as Baby Fae. She died 20½ days later.

Five Chernobyl marrow recipients live

NEW YORK (AP) — Five of 13 Chernobyl nuclear accident victims who received bone marrow transplants are still alive and will likely survive, says the California doctor who assisted Soviet physicians with the operations.

Because of the severity of the patients' injuries and the difficulty in performing the transplants, "we're pleased with the results," Dr. Robert P. Gale told The New York Times in an interview published today.

He also said he had signed an agreement on behalf of his institution, the University of California at Los Angeles, to cooperate with Soviet scientists in a long-term study of the health effects of the accident on about 100,000 people who lived around the stricken reactor in the Ukraine, near Kiev.

He predicted "a small but perceptible increase in cancer" among those people over the next 30 years, and an even smaller increase in disease among people living farther from the plant.

The Soviets say 26 people died as a result of the April 26 explosion at the reactor. Gale said that figure was credible.

Based on what happened at Chernobyl, several new measures should be instituted at all nuclear power plants, Gale said. Emergency planners have focused on small accidents or big disasters, he said, and have not planned adequately for treating 100 to 200 severely exposed victims of a medium-sized accident like the one at Chernobyl.

Missing plane found, four dead

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — The charred wreckage of a small plane carrying a Winnsboro, Texas, tire dealer, his wife, his mother and his stepfather has been found atop Poteau Mountain at the northern edge of the Ouachita National Forest.

The crash site was seen by a Civil Air Patrol pilot on Wednesday, working from a tip from a resident of the southern Sebastian County area where the plane was found. Searchers climbed to the top of the mountain eight miles from Hartford, Ark., near the Oklahoma border, where they found the plane, four bodies, and identification papers of three of the passengers.

The plane had been missing since Saturday morning, when Billy Michael Chaffin of Winnsboro, his wife, Pamela, his mother, Betty Cameron, and his stepfather, William Edward Cameron, both of Ferris, Texas, left Winnsboro in the Cessna 182 bound for Branson, Mo. The plane never made it to Missouri.

Deputy Larry Kennon of the Sebastian County Sheriff's Department said a checkbook bearing the names William Edward and Betty Cameron and a wallet with Chaffin's name in it were found in the wreckage. No identification was found for Mrs. Chaffin. Chaffin was thought to be the pilot.

Local officials said Wednesday that the bodies would not be removed from the plane until Federal Aviation Administration officials arrived today to try to determine why the plane crashed.

Late Wednesday, a bulldozer operator was smoothing the steep, rocky path up the mountain so vehicles could be brought to the site to remove the bodies.

Sebastian County Coroner Jack Sloan said the bodies, which were burned and mutilated, would be sent to Little Rock for an autopsy by the state medical examiner.

The plane wreckage was located on the north slope of the mountain several hundred yards from the top of a ridge running east and west. The plane crashed nearly three miles from the nearest road.

The planes from Fort Smith and many in Oklahoma, Texas and Missouri had been searching for the plane since Monday.

Civil Air Patrol Lt. R.J. Nicotra at Pound Field in Tyler, Texas, said the Chaffins and Camerons took off from Winnsboro Municipal Airport at about 7 a.m. Saturday for Branson, a trip Nicotra said Chaffin had made before. However, he said, Chaffin never filed a flight plan and didn't know if he ever received a weather briefing before leaving.

seeing the people who want to celebrate their country's birthday in the most traditional way—fireworks," said Hamby, "that and dealing with the public is why I like to run a stand."

"There's a lot of people that come back every year and I've seen their children grow up..." Hamby said with a faint smile.

"I'm just a patriotic guy that wishes he was at the Statue of Liberty. I believe in the principles that this country was founded on. I believe in free-enterprise and I wouldn't want to live in any other country in the world but this one here," said Hamby in a burst of patriotism.

"And he treats his workers nice too," added Randy Robbins, his helper.

"I think people should be more appreciative of what we have here in this country," stressed Hamby.

"I was most proud to be an American when we stood up in the Libya bombing and told those terrorists that they were going to have pay a price if they continued to kill innocent Americans," Hamby stated.

"We exhausted every way we had open to us to try to go in and negotiate with these terrorists without using force but it didn't work. We really just didn't have any other choice but to go in and stand up to them," concluded Hamby on the Libya issue.

"I believe we're one of the leaders in the world developing new types of drugs and methods to prolong and better life," he boasted.

"We've definitely went in and helped feed the poor countries and taught them how to feed themselves. We've educated them, helping them to lead civil lives in an orderly manner."

"I'm very proud to be an American," grinned Hamby, full of pride.

Farm Aid to wagon train

Texans gear up for 210th birthday

By DOUG CRICHTON Associated Press Writer

From wailin' Willies to fireworks frenzies, a human chair and the end of the Wagon Train trail, the Lone Star State will celebrate the nation's 210th birthday in Texas-sized style.

More than 80 performers and 30,000 fans will descend on Austin Friday for Willie Nelson's mobile Farm Aid II concert, an 18-hour marathon that after two moves has settled at Manor Downs east of the city.

Besides Nelson, Boxcar Willie and a host of other performers, unsuccessful presidential contender Jesse Jackson will take the stage Friday night to make a plea for the nation's farmers.

In Fort Worth, meanwhile, the Texas Sesquicentennial Wagon train has rumbled into town on the last leg of its 3,000-mile journey that began six months ago in Sulphur Springs.

"This trip is not only to remember the Alamo or Goliad or San Jacinto, but to remember Texas, America and our forefathers," said Donna Neal Stepp of Fort Worth, who is chronicling her experiences for a book.

The wagon train camped at its city stockyards terminus along with Texas' answer to the Statue of Liberty — the Goddess of Liberty, which perched atop the Austin Capitol dome for nearly a century until ill health forced her down.

Texans will also be celebrating the rejuvenated Miss Liberty's 100th birthday with tea parties, Lady Liberty look-alike contests and musical salutes to America, said Marne Friess, Texas regional director of the Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation.

In Dallas, a joint celebration of the Texas Sesquicentennial and Independence Day includes a 15-minute laser light show Thursday night and live television coverage of New York Harbor festivities on a giant screen in City Hall Plaza.

In Houston, more than 10,000 people are expected to gather in Sam

Houston Park in their attempt to set a world record for the largest human chair. Participants will form a giant circle, each sitting on the lap of the person behind him, in their effort to out-set the current record of 10,323 as listed in the "Guinness Book of World Records."

As with dozens of other celebrations, that event accompanies an Independence Day picnic and fireworks display.

Soaring liability insurance rates, however, have fiddled fireworks shows in some Texas cities such as Hereford and Abilene. They even threatened the annual spectacular at Dallas' Fair Park, but officials there say the show will go on and join more than 50 in the Dallas area.

Fireworks will also follow a "Salute To America add the Challenger Crew" at Fort Worth's Burnett Park, as well as the Houston Symphony Orchestra's "Celebrate America" performance at the Miller Theater.

More than 500 immigrants will join in the celebration and the nation at naturalization ceremonies in San Antonio and Dallas that are timed to coincide with the re-dedication of the Statue of Liberty.

On the grim side of the festivities, the Department of Public Safety's holiday highway death toll runs from 6 p.m. Thursday to midnight Sunday, and the agency predicts that as many as 45 people will die.

"Preliminary figures indicated the number of traffic deaths statewide was down 1.6 percent in the first quarter of this year compared to 1985," DPS Director Jim Adams said. "We hope that trend will not be reversed this July 4 period with a number of senseless tragedies."

position has pretty much been the same all along — and that is to have the Appropriations Committee go through and start cutting before we even start talking about any sort of revenue."

A tax increase "is not even going to be discussed until we've had an opportunity to look at what can possibly be cut," he said.

Tax bills must originate in the House of Representatives. The Senate has indicated a willingness to make up the $2.3 billion shortfall through a combination of spending cuts and tax increases, but House members generally have opposed tax increase suggestions.

The Dallas Morning News on Wednesday said its survey of lawmakers found a majority favoring a special session. But they are divided over the solutions to the crisis, the newspaper said.

Legislators also told the News the results of the special session will be a critical factor in the Nov. 4 general election, particularly the governor's race where White faces former Gov. Bill Clements. Clements has campaigned vigorously against further tax hikes.

"It has the potential to be devastating to people running for office this year," said Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin. "But there is also the opportunity for some people to emerge as heroes if they provide the kind of leadership we need at this crossroads in the state's history."

In a telephone survey of key lawmakers, the News found: — Members of both chambers and both political parties are ready to convene as soon as White formally issues the call for a special session. In most cases, lawmakers said the sooner they can start dealing with the crisis the better.

— In the Senate, there is general agreement that the shortfall cannot be handled through budget cuts alone. Several senators indicated a sales tax hike will be necessary.

— House members interviewed said either that they oppose a sales tax increase or view it only as a last resort. Instead, they said, the state's financial problems should be handled through substantial budget cuts, even in such sensitive areas as education and highways. White has said he opposes education cuts.

— Virtually all lawmakers surveyed raised the possibility that the Legislature will consider a state lottery and legalized gambling on horse races.

Administration concedes defeat in view of affirmative action

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is conceding defeat — at least for now — in its five-year crusade to break the Supreme Court's embrace of an expansive view of affirmative action.

"There is no question that the court did not agree with the position advanced by the administration ... that they ruled against us in both of these cases," Attorney General Edwin Meese said after the court announced two decisions Wednesday that gave the civil rights movement its most sweeping victory of the 1980s.

The justices said preferential treatment of blacks and other minorities in the American work place does not have to be limited — as the administration urged — to actual victims of discrimination.

The rulings also can be applied to affirmative action programs for women.

Julius LeVonne Chambers, chief lawyer for the Legal Defense and Educational Fund of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said the court "has given new faith to minorities and other disadvantaged groups. Blacks, other minorities and women can take heart."

Meese's remarks Wednesday contrasted sharply with earlier claims by administration officials that the high court was retreating from its approval of on-the-job preferences.

In 1984, the court threw out a Memphis, Tenn., plan protecting the city fire department jobs of minorities and women at the expense of white men with more seniority.

Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds, head of the Justice Department's civil rights division, called the 1984 ruling "an exhilarating decision."

But the administration had trouble convincing lower courts the 1984 ruling was everything government lawyers said it was.

Last May, the Supreme Court overturned a Jackson, Mich., plan that protected black public school teachers from layoffs at the expense of whites with more seniority.

Firework factory scrambles to meet holiday orders

By DAVE PEGO
Dallas Times Herald

WAXAHACHIE, Texas (AP) — Things are popping here at Tom Manley's small factory on the north side of town.

Not literally, of course. They'd hear it in far North Dallas if that were to happen. More in the sense of Santa's workshop a month before Christmas.

Manley and about 20 employees of U.S. Fireworks have been scrambling to prepare thousands of orders of fireworks for retail clients — most of them roadside stands — in 11 states. Everything from sparklers to skyrockets; enough to fill 40 truck trailers.

Rockets' red glare. Bombs bursting in air. American tradition, Manley says. And he feels Independence Day should be celebrated properly — with a bang. For 25 years, the last 17 at U.S. Fireworks, he has done what he can to preserve that tradition.

"Sure, it's commercial," Manley says. "But it's also patriotic."

"I started working at a fireworks stand when I was 15," he says. "I put myself through high school, then through college, selling fireworks."

Now at age 40, he is president of the nation's third largest Class C fireworks company. Only Red Devil of California and OK Fireworks of Oklahoma are larger in Class C, which is generally restricted to low-power fireworks.

"We've got close to 10 billion items set for distribution," says Manley, pointing at cartons stacked 10 to 12 feet high in his main warehouse.

It's ironic that most of this American-style dazzle is made not in the U.S. but China.

"About 90 percent of all fireworks are imported from China," says Manley. "They're being made by peasants who are paid 20 to 30 cents a day. Even after we pay $6,000 freight for a container of fireworks and pay another $6,000 duty, it's still 50 times cheaper to import them than it would be to make them here."

Manley stocks about 200 different types of fireworks and touts them proudly to dealers in a small room lined with large glass cases. The colorful packages range from dime packs of firecrackers to 400-shot displays priced at $299.

Some have traditional Chinese names, promising serene bursts of colored light: Happiness, Plum Flower, Birds Following Phoenix, Mountain Flowers, 91 Shots Glowing. Others are familiar from an American childhood: Black Cats, Zebras, Snakes, Snappers.

When the state-regulated season for fireworks sales opened last week, people began coming from across the state to stock up. Most buy about $30 or so to top off the Fourth of July family picnic. But some buy much, much more. A few years back, a Dallas man came in and spent $6,000 on a wide range of items that he and his family later watched go up in smoke.

Manley says the fireworks he sells now are much different than those he used to buy as a child. Gone are the powerful M-80s and cherry bombs which used to create an annual summer boom for mailbox manufacturers. Both were banned in 1967.

Even the amount of gunpowder in the familiar Black Cat firecracker has been greatly reduced, although it still pops just as sharply as ever because of an improved design.

This year, the perennial bestseller, the bottle rocket, will join the list of banned items in Texas. State legislators decided that the small projectiles were responsible for too many rooftop fires.

"We in the fireworks industry agreed," Manley says. "We had no problem with that decision."

Manley says many people don't understand how safe Class C fireworks are. He says his business gets a bad reputation from highly publicized mishaps caused by bootleg of homemade fireworks, or large items created for commercial displays.

"Since that explosion in Oklahoma last year (which killed 21 people at a class B factory in Hallett), we're being watched real closely by federal agencies," Manley says. "The people from the Consumer Products Safety Commission in Dallas were here just the other day, taking apart some of our products and making sure they are in compliance with Class C regulations."

"Comparing us with that Oklahoma factory would be like the difference between a BB gun and a nuclear explosion. They were making the kind of stuff that it would take two men to carry."

Leaning forward in his desk, Manley recounts the story of a Richardson man whose $150,000 home burned down about 20 years ago after he lit a cone-type fireworks shower.

"It plainly said on the directions there was going to be a shower about 60 feet high and 25 feet in diameter," Manley says. "So what does he do? He sets that thing off in his formal living room. Now, how are you going to blame that fire on fireworks?"

Juarez may soon be mecca for cheap booze buyers

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP)

— This city just across the Rio Grande from El Paso may once again become Texans' mecca for inexpensive imported liquor, thanks to election-year politics.

Before 1982, many U.S. shoppers got used to buying their liquor in Mexico because they didn't have to pay several dollars' worth of U.S. taxes. That policy changed in 1982, and Mexican liquor stores have sold only Mexican-produced liquor, wine and beer since then.

But now, the Mexican government has granted permits to Juarez merchants to import $1.5 million worth of foreign liquor duty-free, Juarez Chamber of Commerce President Jesus Macias Delgado said.

The permits, good only in Juarez through the end of the year, reverse the 4-year-old policy banning foreign-liquor imports. The measure, along with other import bans, was aimed at promoting sales of Mexico's domestic liquor industry.

The United States applies a tax of $12.50 per gallon of 100-proof liquor, said Bob Bowlin, agent-in-charge of the Albuquerque, N.M., office of the U.S. Department of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

A liter of 100-proof liquor would be taxed $3.25, and a tax of $2.50 would be charged on a liter of 80-proof liquor.

"There's no tax, though, on liquor going out of the country," Bowlin said Tuesday, referring to the price advantage that U.S. shoppers used to enjoy in Mexico before 1982.

Texas charges 60 cents for a quart or liter of liquor entering from Mexico. There also is a federal tax of $2.50 on a liter of alcohol for people who bring in more than one bottle every 30 days, although officials say the tax seldom is enforced.

The Chamber of Commerce has been seeking the import permits since 1982, Macias told the El Paso Times. But he said mayoral candidate Jaime Bermudez was instrumental in getting them.

Bermudez, a well-known Juarez businessman who owns a twin-plant industrial park, is running under the ticket of the PRI, or Institutional Revolutionary Party, which has controlled state and federal governments in Mexico since 1929.

Macias admitted politics were involved in the granting of Bermudez's request so close to the election Sunday.

"Of course, sure. But what interests us is the result, not the road it arrived on," Macias said.

The PRI is seeking to regain the mayoralship in Juarez after three years in which the rival conservative PAN, or National Action Party, has held the office.

The import permits probably will mean bad news for El Paso liquor stores, said Ray Telles, owner of the Barrel House liquor chain, which has eight stores in El Paso.

Although he had not heard of the new development, Telles said he would have to take it as bad news.

"If it happens, I'm sure we can expect a decrease in sales," he said.

Telles estimated 10 percent of his clients are Mexican nationals who purchase U.S. liquors unavailable in Mexico. He said he probably would lose on sales to U.S. shoppers also if they start buying U.S. liquor again in Juarez.

Many tools used in Liberty's revamping

NEW YORK (AP) — In 1983, after almost a century of wind, rain and pollution, the Statue of Liberty had a broken nose, a cracked right eye, a split lip and stains on her gown. Her spike-crowned head tilted to the right, stabbing her sagging torch arm.

"I knew she was in trouble," quipped Bob Hope, "when I waved at her and she waved back."

By the turn of the century, engineers said, the statue would be near collapse.

Using tools as modern as the computer and as ancient as the hammer, a team of 200 American and French designers, painters, carpenters, ironworkers, masons and laborers spent three years restoring Liberty in time for her 100th birthday celebration starting July 3.

They fixed the symbolic broken chains at her feet, restored one of her lost curls and replaced all 1,800 bars in her corroded interior armature. They even had to remove the letters on her tablet — July IV MDCCCLXXVI — while it was repaired.

The renovation was both public spectacle and private drama. Liberty Island became a construction site, and the statue was caged by the world's highest free-standing scaffolding. On July 4, 1984, as the nation watched on television, a crane operator carefully lowered the old torch to the ground.

Behind the scenes, the restorers wrestled with the complex issues and myriad details involved in a $70 million restoration of a 151-foot, 225-ton international symbol of freedom.

Computers produced three-dimensional, multi-colored structural drawings, and sophisticated instruments measured air currents outside the statue and carbon dioxide and moisture inside it. The statue was X-rayed for hidden cracks.

Repouse, an ancient technique of shaping copper by hand-hammering it, was used to create a new torch and flame. The latter, a replica of the 1886 original, was then covered, patch by patch, with gold leaf.

Unlike its predecessor, which had been fitted with windows and lit from within, the new flame will reflect light shone on it from the base of the torch and the base of the statue.

The statue's armature — the interior latticework that conforms to the undulations of the statue's shape, holding together the plates of its skin and linking them to the central superstructure — was badly rusted.

When its iron bars began to swell with rust, they popped the riveted brackets that held them to the skin. Workers removed each of the 1,800 old bars, no more than 12 in a day, and fashioned identical new ones out of stainless steel.

Original design flaws in the statue's interior support system and its subsequent deterioration had produced dozens of holes and cracks in the penny-thin copper skin. They were repaired with new copper that had been treated to give it the characteristic light green of aged copper.

Outside, workers found bird nests in the folds of Liberty's gown and graffiti that dated back to 1886. They included a B for Bartholdi on the first copper plate to be riveted and the inscription "Alone with God and the Statue, Christmas Eve" on the left big toe.

The crown's seven spikes were removed and cleaned, and the position of one adjusted so it would no longer scrape against the reinforced torch arm.

Although the surface of the statue was washed with water, it will never shine like a new penny. The green patina that forms when copper oxidizes protects it from further dissolution.

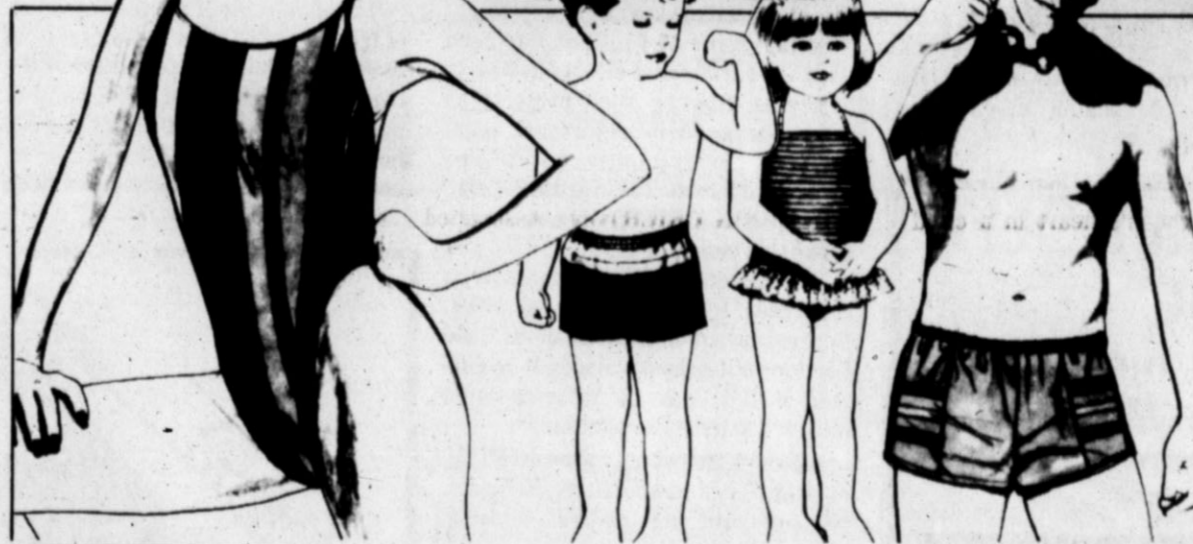

The statue's surface, however, also is marked by streaks and patches of black from an earlier and equally vital stage in the patination process. Winds have apparently blown away the green patina, revealing the lower black layer.

Inside, a new double-decker hydraulic elevator will lift visitors from the ground level to the top of the statue's pedestal. From there, they can climb a new 171-step spiral staircase to a viewing platform inside the crown.

A new set of bronze doors were installed at the monument's entrance, featuring 10 bas-relief panels that depict the tasks and tools of the statue's construction and centennial restoration.

Pope calls on youth to avoid drugs, sex, violence

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Pope John Paul II appealed to Colombian youth to withstand the temptations of drugs, sex, alcohol and other "sorry vices," and to reject guerrilla violence as a solution to social ills.

must surpass the test," the white-robed pontiff Wednesday told a chanting, swaying crowd of about 65,000 Roman Catholic youths who packed the city's main soccer stadium on a starlit, chilly evening.

of a weeklong tour of this predominantly Catholic South American nation, long troubled by guerrilla activity and drug trafficking.

against their own will and others clouded by ideologies inspired by the principle of violence as the only cure for social ills," the pope said.

seen some fighters as young as 12 years old, carrying rifles nearly as long as they are tall.

Trafficking in cocaine and marijuana is a $3 billion a year industry in the country, involving many young people seeking quick wealth. Many youths end up using drugs that are easily purchased on the streets at low prices.

Governor's apology about test clarified

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White is sorry for the stress teachers suffered from having to take the state competency test, but he still believes the test was needed, an aide says.

White's highly publicized apology last week doesn't mean White is backing off from support of the test he has staunchly defended since pushing it and other school reforms through the Legislature in 1984, said Mark McKinnon, White's campaign press secretary.

"The governor apologized for the stress the test caused. He genuinely feels they have been through a rough time and he wanted to express that to them," McKinnon said.

More than 202,000 public school educators this year were required to take the Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers, or TECAT test. Those who failed face loss of their jobs.

About 97 percent passed the first exam in March, while some 6,500 who failed got a second chance last Saturday. Results of that test won't be available for three to four weeks.

Since the test requirement became law, teachers statewide have voiced their anger with White, who won election in 1982 with teachers' support.

Teachers frequently confronted him during campaign appearances before the May 3 primary, and during June, first lady Linda Gale White held daily meetings with groups of educators around the state.

McKinnon said White still believes the test was needed.

He planned today to visit Chiquiquira, a farming town 65 miles north of the capital where according to church annals the Virgin Mary descended from an oil painting before devout peasants 400 years ago.

At Bogota's Campin Stadium, the pope made an impassioned address in fluent Spanish to the youth rally, calling for Catholic stoicism in the face of temptation.

"There exists here the attraction requires college students to pass the standardized test before they can take education courses necessary for certification as teachers.

Texas also requires an "exit-level" test upon graduation and before receiving a teaching certificate.

"We're pleased the court ruled in our favor," said Kirby. "We do not believe our tests before and after education training are biased. We feel we will be able to sustain our case in the courts."

David Thompson, general counsel for the Texas Education Agency, said state officials would study the lengthy court opinion before making other comment.

The question before the appeals court was PPST, which the Texas Education Agency requires to screen prospective teachers. The testing requirement, along with an exit-level test, were mandated in the 1984 major school reform bill.

The PPST was challenged by 14 students who were denied admittance to education courses.

Their suit challenging the regulation claims the test is biased against blacks and other minorities and that requiring the test would result in depriving public school students of teachers of minority races.

The New Orleans ruling dissolved a preliminary injunction issued by U.S. District Court Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler.

The young crowd, which also heard a Mass celebrated by the pope, cheered the address, waved yellow and white banners — the Vatican colors — and chanted song which referred to "our beloved John Paul."

Kirby confident test isn't biased

AUSTIN (AP) — Education Commissioner William Kirby says Texas educators are confident the state can prove a test for college students wanting to become public school teachers is not biased.

A federal appeals court in New Orleans on Wednesday dissolved a temporary injunction against the Pre-Professional Skills Test. The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ordered a trial on the Texas law that requires college students to pass the standardized test before they can take education courses necessary for certification as teachers.

Texas also requires an "exit-level" test upon graduation and before receiving a teaching certificate.

"We're pleased the court ruled in our favor," said Kirby. "We do not believe our tests before and after education training are biased. We feel we will be able to sustain our case in the courts."

Farm Aid II organizers urge shuttles, car pools to avoid traffic congestion

AUSTIN (AP) — Organizers of Farm Aid II and city officials urged the thousands of fans expected for the 18-hour concert to use a shuttle bus service or car pools to get to Friday's event.

"We've seen stories in the paper about the possibility of real traffic congestion out there. I hope people would see this as a good way to go," said Cynthia Darwin, spokeswoman for the Capital Metropolitan Transportation Authority.

Farm Aid II concert, being staged to raise funds for family farmers, will be held at Manor Downs, a horse racing and training facility 11 miles east of Austin.

Farm Aid ticket manager Bob

Fuller said more than 30,000 tickets had been sold for the event that is scheduled to begin shortly at 7 a.m.

Ms. Darwin said Capital Metro will provide 15 buses that will run from northeast Austin's Reagan High School to Manor Downs every 30 minutes. Service will begin at 6 a.m. Friday, with return trips continuing until 2 a.m. Saturday, she said. Tickets are $3.

"Our feeling is that people may prefer this (to driving)," she said.

The Texas Department of Agriculture organized a media tour today to a cotton gin and several family farms, offering what the TDA called "a last chance to interview farm families and farm crisis workers about the economic problems confronting American agriculture."

More than 75 acts will perform during the concert, although Farm Aid officials said Wednesday they still didn't have a schedule for each.

The concert is being organized by singer Willie Nelson, who also organized the initial Farm Aid concert at Champaign, Ill., last September.

Nelson said the first concert raised about $9 million and that he hopes this event will do that well or better.

So far, some $4.3 million has been used for rural relief efforts in nearly 40 states, funding such projects as telephone hot lines for farmers, legal services, food pantries and purchases of seed for farmers who otherwise wouldn't have been able to make this year's crop.

The concert will be carried live on the cable television channel VH-1. Spokeswoman Margaret Wade said portions of the event also will be carried on the Voice of America radio network to listeners overseas.

Although this event follows a string of charity fund-raising concerts, Nelson said he doesn't believe

Violence main issue in campaign

CULIACAN, Mexico (AP) — The opposition National Action Party hopes to capitalize on Sinaloa Gov. Antonio Toledo Corro's tarnished image in the war on crime and drug trafficking to capture a governorship this fall.

Francisco Labastida Ochoa, gubernatorial candidate for the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party and former federal energy secretary, is spending a great deal of time explaining his plan to clean up Mexico's 17th largest state.

National Action also is running a strong race for governor in Chihuahua, Mexico's largest state on the border with Texas and New Mexico, where the vote will take place Sunday.

Toledo, like Labastida a member of the party known as the PRI, has come under sharp attack by opposition parties who contend he has not cracked down on crime — and by U.S. officials for his alleged involvement in drug dealings.

"We have the most violent state in the union," said Manuel Clouthier, gubernatorial candidate for the National Action Party, or PAN, in the Oct. 28 elections. "You just pick up any paper any day you feel like it and you see that crimes are committed every darn day."

Early last year, Zeferino Ojeda, municipal police chief of this capital city of 600,000 people, was murdered gangland-style in broad daylight on a city street. Close to 100 bullets were recovered from his body and vehicle.

His killers have not been apprehended. Later in the year, two 17-year-old students riding a motorcycle were gunned down by a man walking out of a local bar. He is not in custody.

A few months ago, witnesses identified the pilot of Toledo's private plane as the man who shot a street vendor to death.

"Everyone is afraid to walk down the street during the day," said Jesus Reyes, a Culiacan restaurant owner. "It's always been this way but lately it's gotten worse."

Reyes said citizens are afraid to report crimes. "If you try to complain you fear something will happen to you," he said.

Patrons entering a popular discoteque in the beach resort of Mazatlan, Sinaloa's second largest city, must pass through an airport-style metal detector.

"There was a gunfight here last year. A man was killed," one employee explained.

Labastida, who was born in Los Mochis but has lived most of his life in Mexico City, resigned as energy secretary to run for governor.

He acknowledged that violence is a major concern in the state and listed "the handling and cultivation of narcotics" as one of the principal causes. He said poor living conditions and unemployment also contribute to violence.

Labastida, 43, is promising to improve the entire justice system in the state, beginning with the police force. "Better police, better laws, better efforts," he said in an interview in Mazatlan.

A few days earlier, one of the cars Labastida uses in his campaign was hit by gunshots. The car was unoccupied and Labastida himself was out of town at the time.

Claims of Toledo's direct involvement in drug dealings have come from the United States, which receives a good portion of the marijuana and heroin from opium poppies produced in Sinaloa's Sierra Madre Occidental mountains.

Clouthier, 52, a Culiacan businessman, said the atmosphere of violence, more than drug trafficking, concerns citizens.

"Curiously enough, the issue is corruption and violence more than drugs," he said. "The effects of the drug problem really bother the people more."

In a June 26 hearing of the Western Hemisphere subcommittee of the U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee, former Ambassador to Mexico John Gavin said at least two governors were "up to their elbows" in narcotics trafficking.

Gavin did not name the two involved but committee chairman Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said one of them was Toledo.

Gavin said Rodolfo Felix Valdez, the governor of neighboring Sonora state who had been accused by U.S. Customs Chief William Von Raab of involvement in drug cultivation, was not one of the two.

On water glasses

Marine veteran plays symphony

By RICK SMITH Sherman Democrat

BONHAM, Texas (AP) — Ray Chapman has earned a living from many jobs during his 64 years, but he lives for his music.

Pianist, singer, trumpet player, Chapman can blow ragtime on harmonica or tap out a symphony on 27 water glasses with two wooden dowels.

"Not many people play the glasses. I guess they just never attempt it. It's difficult. You have to concentrate. You have to forget the audience. It's just you and the glasses."

As he spoke, he was tuning 27 glasses, tapping them with a small wooden stick and adjusting the water level to change the pitch. Tap, ping, more water; tap, ping, more water.

"I've had all kinds of experiences playing glasses. Last night I was playing before 200 people and broke a glass. Sometimes the glasses tip over and spill. Then you have to whistle that note when you come to it, or sing it."

"But you don't stop. You never stop."

"The secret," says Chapman, "is to keep going, whatever happens. Don't stop!"

Chapman, a Marine veteran, lives and works at the Sam Rayburn Memorial Veteran's Administration Center here.

Tap, ping, more water. Tap, tap, ping, a little less.

As a member of the Marine Corps

Band, he played for combat troops in the South Pacific during World War II.

Chapman doesn't like to talk about those days.

"It was very depressing playing for those soldiers. You would see them all blown up. Legs blown off. Arms blown off. And you'd have to go in there and carry on with a smile."

But he never stopped playing. "We were about the only entertainment they had. We couldn't stop."

He still plays for soldiers, the patients and residents of the VA center here.

"There's a lot of sadness here," he says.

"These men never talk about their wars. They never mention it. But there's sadness. A lot of these men can never get out of here."

Tap, ping. Tap, ping. Music, he thinks, helps.

"It makes me happy to play for people and it seems to make people happy hearing it."

"I've had a lot of people say, 'Ray, I came in here depressed, feeling blah, but that music just picked me up.'"

"Music makes people happy. They can be down, but it makes them happy, cheerful, right off."

Tap, ping; tap, ping.

Chapman taught himself harmonica when he was a 5-year-old and, later, played vaudeville theaters in his native California in the '30s.

He says he was on "The Ed Sullivan Show" in 1958 and also on "The Gong Show," "Hee Haw" and Jerry Lewis' telethon.

But, always, he's had to take other jobs to support his music.

"I've been a painter. And I haven't been above washing dishes. I never cared a lot about money."

Last year Chapman traveled to Washington, D.C., a winner in a national Veteran's Administration music competition.

"I played 'Stars and Stripes Forever' on 37 glasses. That was a thrill."

Tap, ping, tap, ping. Tuning finished, Chapman dipped his sticks in the red and green food-colored water, the better to hold onto them.

Mildred Savoie accompanied him on the organ. Chapman raced up and down a long, glass-lined table, never missing a note.

He slid a little on the floor, but his music never slipped. And Chapman smiled as he played.

After the concert, Chapman began to pack his glasses, pouring the colored liquids into gallon jugs.

Three burly construction workers listening outside, came in and shyly asked Chapman for another tune.

He dipped the sticks in water and belted out one of his favorites, "Lady of Spain."

The cheap Walmart glasses rang like fine crystal. Chapman did a little dance, sprinting back and forth, up and down the table, ringing this glass, then that.

Water sloshed and glasses teetered, but Chapman didn't stop. He smiled and the construction workers smiled, too.

Afterwards, Chapman packed his glasses — he owns 120 in all — into an old cardboard box and went back to his job on a photo copy machine.

He says he would like to move from the VA center, perhaps to Sherman or Denison.

"I'd love to get a job with a church. Custodian work. I'd like to use my music and be a part of that church. That's what I'd really like."

"God gave me the talent to play. It's my way to make people happy. I'm always ready to play. I don't think I'll ever quit."

"You've got to keep going," he said, smiling.

SALUTING THE AUTHOR

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — While the Pledge of Allegiance is recited daily in many schools across the country, the name of its author, Francis Bellamy, has fallen into relative obscurity.

But at Bellamy's alma mater — the University of Rochester — his memory was revived recently by students who found a hidden plaque in his honor and moved it to a prominent location near the university's flag pole.

Bellamy, a graduate of the class of 1876, wrote his famous lines beginning with "I pledge allegiance to the flag..." in 1892. His pledge, with a few minor amendments, has endured to the present.

SYNTHETIC METALS

BARTLESVILLE, OKLA. (AP) — What's stronger than steel and lighter than aluminum?

According to Don Brady of Phillips Petroleum it's a new line of plastics, called advanced composites, which soon will be used as building materials for cars, airplanes and defense vehicles.

He says composites of glass or carbon reinforced with sulfide plastic already are finding their way into missile components, aircraft interiors and pipe.

Austin bank 11th to fail in Texas in 1986

AUSTIN (AP) — The National Bank of Texas in Austin, with 2,900 depositors, has become the 11th bank to fail in the state this year.

The 12-year-old bank was declared insolvent Wednesday by the comptroller of the currency and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. was appointed as receiver, federal officials said.

U.S. Deputy Comptroller of the Currency Robert J. Herrmann, who issued the closure order at 3 p.m., EDT, said the failure was due primarily to loan practices.

"The bank's failure was primarily the result of substantial loan growth during 1984 and 1985, combined with liberal commercial lending practices and inadequate board oversight," Herrmann said.

"The bank was unable to remedy its problems and losses finally exhausted the bank's capital funds, resulting in its insolvency," he said.

The FDIC, which placed the bank's assets at $32.6 million, said from Washington that its board of directors approved paying off insured depositors after no bids were received for the failed bank.

Deposits in the bank amounted to about $30.6 million in 2,900 accounts.

YMCA schedules 'Softball Olympics'

A sports event known as the "Softball Olympics" has been scheduled for Sunday, July 13 by the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA.

The competition will be held at St. Anthony's Field at 126 Sunset, beginning at 2 p.m.

Registration deadline is July 12 at 7 p.m. Late registration will be held from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. on July 13. A $3 late fee will be charged to those who enter during the late registration.

Entry fee is $10 for the Softball Olympics. T-shirts will be available for $5 on a first come, first serve basis. Awards will be presented to the first place winner in each event and to the overall winners.

The Softball Olympics will have men's and women's divisions.

The events in the Softball Olympics are batting for distance, pitching, base running, throwing for accuracy, and fielding.

In the batting for distance competition, each entrant will hit five pitches. In pitching competition, each person will throw 10 pitches, receiving points for each pitch going through the strike zone.

In base running, each participant will be timed for circling the bases one time.

Each entrant will throw at home plate in the throwing for accuracy event—with men throwing 100 feet, 150 feet and 200 feet from home plate, and women's throwing 60 feet, 80 feet and 100 feet from home plate.

In the fielding competition, each person will attempt to field ground balls thrown by other participants. Most balls stopped within a designated area and successfully thrown to first base wins.

Scoring in the Softball Olympics is five points for first place, four points for second place, three points for third place, two points for fourth place, and one point for fifth place.

In case of ties in individual events, each participant will receive the full point value for that placing.

In case of a tie in the overall competition, events will be held again. The first person to win three out of five events wins the tie-breaker.

To register, send entries or take entries to the YMCA office. For more information on the Softball Olympics, call the YMCA at 364-6990.

YMCA summer racquetball being organized

Summer racquetball leagues are being organized at the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA, with divisions for men's "A," "B," and "C" singles, women's "A" and "B" singles, and coed doubles.

The first matches in the leagues will be played on July 14-17. Registration deadline for the racquetball leagues is Thursday, July 10 at 5:30 p.m.

A minimum of six players or six teams is necessary for each league, said Jerry Brock, YMCA program director. If fewer than six register for a league, divisions may be combined.

Playing days will be Monday nights starting July 14 for men's singles, Tuesday nights for women's singles starting July 15, and Thursday nights for co-ed doubles starting July 17.

The first matches each night will begin at 7 p.m. Each league will have six weeks of matches, followed by a single elimination tournament.

Registration forms are available at the YMCA. For more information on the summer racquetball leagues, call the YMCA at 364-6990.

Tennis Tourney Award Winners

Jake Head, right, and his brother, T.J. Head, left, show the awards they won at the Lubbock Junior Highway 80 Tennis Tournament last week. Jake won the 12-year-old boys' singles regular division, and T.J. placed second in the 14-year-old boys' regular division.

YMCA plans tennis lessons for boys, girls

Tennis lessons for boys and girls ages seven to 18 will be offered for two weeks this month by the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA.

Ruben Vargas will serve as instructor for the tennis classes, from July 14-18 and from July 21-25.

Signup deadlines are July 11 for the first session and July 18 for the second session. Cost is $7 for YMCA members and $15 for YMCA non-members.

Vargas said the lessons will include the basics of serving, volleying, backhand and forehand strokes, and other techniques in the game of tennis. He adds that rules, tennis safety and scoring will be discussed.

Each class member must bring his own tennis racquet, two tennis balls, and must wear tennis shoes.

Registration forms are available at the YMCA. For more information, call the YMCA at 364-6990.

Head brothers win tennis tourney awards

Two boys from Hereford, Jake Head and T.J. Head, placed first and second, respectively, in their singles divisions of last week's Lubbock Junior Highway 80 Tennis Tournament.

Jake Head won the 12-year-old boys' singles regular division, and T.J. Head finished second in the 14-year-old boys' singles regular division. There were 37 entrants in the 12-year-old singles regular division, and 70 boys were entered in the 14-year-old singles regular division.

Jake captured his title by defeating Ryan Neal of Lubbock in the finals, 7-6, 6-2. T.J. lost to Mitesh Patel of Lubbock in the finals of his division, 7-5, 6-3.

Jake played four matches in the tournament, which was held Friday, Saturday and Sunday, and T.J. played six matches. The tournament, which was sanctioned by the United States Tennis Association and the Texas Tennis Association, was held at the Lubbock Municipal Tennis Center.

Jake was a member of the Astros team in the Kids Inc. boys' major league, the team that won the league tournament. In Tuesday's issue of the Brand, Jake was not identified as a team member, since the Brand was not informed if any team members were not present for the photo.

The tournament championship games were played Saturday night, when Jake was in Lubbock competing in the tennis tournament. Rain had postponed the boys' major league tournament a couple of times, pushing the tournament championship games back several days.

BIG DADDY FLIES
GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — "Big Daddy" was ding-donging it this spring at the Motorcraft Gatornals here. Don Garlits, known to his fans as "Big Daddy," posted a record speed of 272.56 miles per hour in a quarter-mile run at the National Hot Rod Association meet.

It was the first time the 270-mph barrier had been broken. "Know what?" Garlits said, "We are going to go faster."

In 8-1 victory over San Diego

Walling drives in six runs for Astros

By The Associated Press

Houston's Mike Scott has been pitching with no visible means of support recently but third basemen Denny Walling decided to do something about it Wednesday, knocking in six runs with two homers and a single for a career-high.

Scott, being promoted by his teammates for a position on the All-Star team, threw a six-hitter in leading the Astros to an 8-1 victory over San Diego Wednesday night.

Walling, however, made it possible with a three-run homer, a solo homer and a two-run single to tie a club record with six RBI.

"I haven't had a day like that in my career," said Walling, who also had another single to finish the game 4-for-5. "I've never hit two home runs in a game and never had more than three RBI."

"He had a fantastic day," Houston

Manager Hal Lanier said of Walling who had hit two home runs previously this year with 15 RBI.

His Wednesday slugging helped out Scott.

The right-hander, now 8-5, has pitched well this season but has had little support from the weak-hitting Astros. The team averaged .247 going into Wednesday's game.

Scott struck out three to raise his major league-leading total to 151 as he threw his second straight complete game. He allowed six hits and did not walk a batter as Houston took the final game of the three-game series.

"The bottom just drops out when he pitches," league-leading Padres hitter Tony Gwynn said. "If more pitchers pitched like that, there wouldn't be hitters — just pitchers and catchers."

Gwynn and Lanier agreed that

Scott should be firmly established on Whitey Herzog's All-Star pitching list.

Lanier said Scott gave another solid performance the Astros need to keep in first place in the National League West.

The Astros now embark on a weekend trip to New York to face the Eastern Division leading Mets.

In the other NL games, New York got past St. Louis 4-3; Atlanta defeated San Francisco 7-4; Chicago completed Tuesday's suspended game with Montreal with a 1-0 victory, then defeated the Expos 5-4 in the regularly scheduled game; Pittsburgh defeated Philadelphia 4-3 and Cincinnati beat Los Angeles 4-3 in 10 innings.

Mets 4, Cardinals 3
The New York Mets have a problem shared by every other team in the major leagues — they can't find five good starting pitchers.

What they don't have in common with other teams is that the first four are doing just fine.

Dwight Gooden, Sid Fernandez, Bob Ojeda and Ron Darling are a combined 36-9. But the Mets' other starters are 3-5.

One of those extra starters, Rick Aguilera, had another shaky outing Wednesday night, giving up eight hits and three runs in 4 2-3 innings. But that was no solace to the rest of the National League East as the Mets improved their record to 52-21 with a 4-3 victory over St. Louis, giving them an 11 1/2-game lead over second-place Montreal.

The Mets' Doug Sisk, 2-1, a much-maligned reliever, picked up the victory with 2 2-3 innings of three-hit pitching and Jesse Orosco got the last five outs for his 12th save.

While the Mets posted their sixth straight victory, the defending NL champion Cardinals continued to slide.

The Cards are now 32-43, 21 games behind the Mets.

Braves 7, Giants 4
Atlanta knocked San Francisco out of first place as Omar Moreno hit a three-run homer and pitcher Zane Smith collected a two-run single in a six-run fourth inning that broke open a 1-1 game.

Smith, 7-8, held the Giants to eight hits and struck out nine in pitching his third complete game of the season.

Scott Garrelts' record dropped to 6-7.

Reds 4, Dodgers 3
Cincinnati climbed out of last place for the first time since April 26, taking advantage of an error by Los Angeles shortstop Bill Russell to win on Tony Perez's two-run double in the bottom of the 10th.

Perez, pinch-hitting for Pete Rose, doubled to right-center, giving the victory to Reds reliever John Franco, 2-4, who pitched 2 2-3 innings.

Cubs 1, Expos 0, suspended game

Cubs 5, Expos 4, regular game
Davey Lopes acknowledged he was going for a home run after his solo shot in the bottom of the ninth inning gave Chicago a sweep of Montreal.

"I was trying to drive a pitch out of the park, and I was lucky because I guessed right on a changeup," Lopes said of his homer off Bob McClure, 0-1. Jody Davis hit a two-out, run-scoring single in the eighth to snap a 0-0 tie in the game suspended because of darkness on Tuesday.

Lee Smith, 5-6, who pitched the last two innings, was the winner.

Pirates 4, Phillies 3

Tony Pena hit a two-out, run-scoring single in the bottom of the ninth and Rick Rhoden went 3-for-4 and pitched a six-hitter for his third straight complete-game victory as Pittsburgh beat Philadelphia.

Rhoden, 9-4, started the Pirates' winning rally in the ninth with a leadoff single off Philadelphia reliever Don Carman, 3-2.

Texas designated hitter slugs his 12th home run

Parrish carries Rangers over Twins, 10-2

By The Associated Press

Veteran Texas Rangers designated hitter Larry Parrish has been described as the kind of hitter who can carry a team when he gets hot.

But by the same token, when he's mired in a slump, the team can get bogged down, as was the case over the past 10 games in which the Rangers went 4-6.

But Parrish got untracked Wednesday night, collecting three hits, including his 12th home run, and driving in three runs as the Rangers whipped the Minnesota Twins 10-2 at Arlington Stadium.

The victory assured the Rangers, who are off tonight, first place in the American League West on the Fourth of July. The Rangers have a half-game lead over the California Angels.

"The last two weeks are about as bad as I've swung the bat in the last four or five years," Parrish said of a 12-game stretch in which he batted .170.

"I was very frustrated with myself," said Parrish, whose two-run homer in the second launched a five-run explosion against Twins starter Mike Smithson, 7-, and made it easy for Ranger left-hander Mike Mason to run his record to 5-2.

"I realize that one game doesn't make a season," continued Parrish, "but I hit some pretty good fastballs tonight and I laid off the same kind of bad pitches I've been chasing lately."

As far as manager Bobby Valentine is concerned, the performances of Parrish and Mason, who gave up only two hits in a six-inning stint, couldn't have come at a better time.

"It's good to see Larry swinging the bat good again," said Valentine, "because when he's hot, he's one of the toughest hitters in the league. And we've got the East coming in now, and they're always tough."

"And having Mason pitch the way he did alleviates a lot of doubts about him being back. I'm really excited that he pitched as well as he did."

The Rangers were leading 6-0 before the Twins got on the board against Mason in the sixth on a walk and Gary Gaetti's RBI double.

Dale Mohorcic relieved Mason at the start of the seventh and the Twins made it 6-2 on a single and pinch-hitter Roy Smalley's double.

"I felt we were still in the game going into the seventh," said Twins manager Ray Miller. "But (Ron) Davis gave up the two runs in the seventh and they strung together some hits in the eighth."

In other AL games, Toronto defeated Boston 4-2; Detroit bested New York 8-3; Milwaukee nipped Baltimore 1-0; Cleveland stopped Oakland 7-3; Seattle beat Kansas City 5-3 and California edged Chicago 4-3.

Blue Jays 4, Red Sox 2

Rube Marquard and Johnny Allen can rest in peace. Dave McNally can relax. Their records for the most consecutive victories by a starting pitcher at the start of a season no longer are threatened.

Roger Clemens, the Boston Red Sox' 23-year-old strikeout artist, finally came up short Wednesday night, losing to the Toronto Blue Jays 4-2 after going 14-0 to start the season.

Clemens fell one victory shy of the American League record set by Allen with Cleveland in 1937 and tied by McNally with Baltimore in 1969. Marquard set the major league mark in 1912 when he went 19-0 for the old New York Giants.

There were no tears, no excuses, no complaints after the Blue Jays rallied for three runs in the eighth inning for the victory.

"Sure, I'm a little disappointed, but things just didn't work out," said Clemens, whose amazing streak included a major league record of 20 strikeouts in a victory over Seattle on April 29.

"I felt strong, pretty good in the cool (57-degree) weather and did exactly what I wanted, but came up short," the big right-hander said.

"Nobody wants something like this to come to an end, but it happens," he told a post-game news conference. "I'm just going to turn around and try to start another (streak) the next time out there."

Clemens allowed only one hit, a solo homer by George Bell in the fourth, over the first seven innings, but began to have trouble when he gave two walks in the seventh.

Then, he faltered in the eighth, walking the first batter giving up a single to Damaso Garcia and a one-out game-tying double to Rance Mulliniks. Clemens was replaced by Bob Stanley, who then was tagged for an RBI single by Bell and a sacrifice fly by Jesse Barfield.

Left-hander Jimmy Key, 7-5, allowed eight hits, including Marty Barrett's two-run homer in the fifth, before he suffered a twinge in his pitching arm with two out in the eighth. Key was the winner as Tom Henke retired four batters in a row, the last three on strikeouts, for his 11th save.

Clemens finished with eight strikeouts, boosting his league-leading total to 183. e allowed only three hits, but walked three. He threw 102 pitches, 69 for strikes.

The victory was Toronto's first in nine games in Boston since 1984 and snapped the Red Sox' six-game winning streak.

However, the Red Sox remained eight games ahead of New York in the AL East race as the Yankees lost to Detroit.

The Red Sox try to get back on the winning path tonight with Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, 10-5, down to start against Toronto's John Cerutti, 3-1, in the series finale.

Tigers 8, Yankees 3

Alan Trammell and Darrell Evans drove in two runs apiece as Detroit handed New York's Ron Guidry his seventh straight loss. Larry Herndon rapped three singles during Detroit's season-high 16-hit attack against four Yankee pitchers.

Guidry, 4-8, continued the longest losing streak of his career. He hasn't won in 10 starts since May 10. The left-hander pitched seven innings and gave up three runs on 10 hits. He left the game after the seventh.

Dave LaPoint, 3-6, struggled through five innings for the victory, allowing five hits and five walks but only one run. Reliever Bill Campbell gave up a two-run single to Willie Randolph in the eighth, and Willie Hernandez got the last four outs for his 16th save.

Brewers 1, Orioles 0

Rookie left-hander Juan Nieves scattered five hits and made an unearned run stand up in pitching visiting Milwaukee over Baltimore.

The 21-year-old Nieves, 7-2, struck out eight and walked four in posting his second major league shutout.

Baltimore starter Ken Dixon, 6-7, pitched almost as well as Nieves, giving up four hits, but suffered his fourth consecutive defeat.

Mariners 5, Royals 3

Ken Phelps and Scott Bradley hit solo homers as Seattle defeated Kansas City and handed the Royals their sixth straight loss. The three-game sweep dropped the third-place Royals, last year's world champions, five games behind the AL West-leading Texas Rangers.

Mike Morgan, 6-7, scattered nine hits, walked none and struck out three in eight innings before Matt Young came on for his sixth save. Scott Bankhead, 3-2, was the loser.

Angels 4, White Sox 3

Reggie Jackson's first triple in almost two years drove home three runs in a four-run first inning for California. The victory — in a game in which all the runs were scored in the opening inning — halted a four-game winning streak by the White Sox. Chicago is 7-3 since Jim Fregosi replaced the fired Tony LaRussa as manager.

Indians 7, A's 3

Andre Thornton hit his sixth career grand slam in the first inning as Cleveland completed a three-game sweep in Oakland.

It was the fifth consecutive loss for the A's, who are awaiting the arrival of new manager Tony LaRussa. It took a lot of convincing, but former Chicago White Sox Manager Tony LaRussa finally agreed to give up a visit to Mount Rushmore with his family to take over as manager of the Oakland A's.

The A's haven't been nearly as exciting this season as the famous mountain in South Dakota, and LaRussa's decision was a tough one. "My first priority is my family," he said after arriving in San Francisco Wednesday night.

His reluctance to give up the time with his family was overcome by the lure of a mountainous challenge: trying to end the season-long slide of the injury-riddled A's.

"We're a down club, because nobody likes to get beat," he said. "We've got to try to turn that cycle around."

The former White Sox manager said he has no plans for immediate changes, but: "I'm going to watch them, evaluate what I see and try to get them competitive right away. Getting healthy would be a step in the right direction."

The A's are off today and begin a three-game series in Milwaukee Friday. LaRussa is in Oakland to hold a news conference and get his wife and two young children settled in a new home.

LaRussa's new bosses realize there's no urgency about rescuing this last-place team, so they have agreed to let him join up with the club in Boston after the weekend in Milwaukee.

The A's just hope the fiery, 41-year-old LaRussa, AL Manager of the Year in 1983, can keep the club from sliding deeper into the American League West cellar.

LaRussa, fired by the White Sox on June 20, was the only candidate the A's talked to after firing Jackie Moore last week.

Take the Clara Johnson Test.

In Alamance County, North Carolina, Honda lawn mowers are assembled from the wheels up. Then, each mower must pass rigid quality control standards before we ship it.

The final test is a critical performance check to ensure easy starting. We call it the Clara Johnson Test. At the end of the assembly line, each mower is started or it doesn't ship.

Come in and give the whole line of Honda mowers the Clara Johnson Test yourself. Each one will start easily, or it won't be a Honda.

Chiles agrees to sell Rangers team

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Rangers majority owner Eddie Chiles has agreed to sell controlling interest in the American League club to Edward L. Gaylord, head of an Oklahoma-based communications company, The Dallas Morning News reported today.

The newspaper said its report was based upon several sources close to the team. The purchase price for Chiles' majority interest was not disclosed, The News said.

Chiles, who purchased the Rangers in 1980 from Brad Corbett, refused comment late Wednesday.

"I have absolutely no comment to make," Chiles told the newspaper when reached at his home in Fort Worth. "First of all, you have no business calling me at this time of night."

Chiles could not be immediately reached at his home or office by The Associated Press for comment today.

Chiles, head of Western Co. of North America, a Fort Worth-based oil drilling company, sold about a one-third interest in the Rangers and all the club's local television rights to Gaylord Broadcasting about two years ago for $20 million. At that time, Chiles also agreed to give Gaylord the right of first refusal if he decided to sell a majority interest.

Gaylord's television station in Fort Worth, KTWT, which is carried by many regional cable TV systems, has telecast Rangers' road games for the past two seasons.

Team President Mike Stone also would not comment.

"It's really Eddie's franchise," Stone said. "He's the majority owner. Whether he sell it, is thinking about it or has sold it is his story to tell."

OLYMPIC SOCCER
SEOUL, Korea (AP) — When the soccer competition begins in the 1988 Olympics here, only 16 countries will be represented.

Soccer, called football by the rest of the world, will have regional preliminaries for almost two years before the Olympics begin.

South Korea, as the host country, has an automatic berth in the championship tournament. But the rules of the International Football Federation demand that even France, the defending champion, must engage in the qualifying rounds.

According to The News, Chiles will remain with the club as chairman emeritus of the Rangers' board. However, Gaylord officials would have all the decision-making powers.

Recently, Chiles' drilling company has been forced to restructure and reschedule debt payments as the result of the collapse of world oil prices. However, Chiles said earlier this year that the problems facing Western Co. were unrelated to Ranger operations.

Gaylord, the principal owner of the Oklahoma Publishing Co., has a variety of interests, including The Daily Oklahoman of Oklahoma City, a television production company and the Grand Ole Opry in Nashville, Tenn.

Baseball camp set at Texas Tech July 13-17

A baseball camp for youth ages 10 and older has been scheduled at Texas Tech University July 13-17.

The "Red Raider Baseball Camp '86," scheduled by the Division of Continuing Education at Texas Tech, has a registration deadline of July 8.

Camp director Gary Ashby said, "We are trying to improve the quality of baseball in West Texas. This camp is one of the best ways we know of to do that. By teaching young people proper baseball fundamentals and sportsmanship, they become involved in and appreciate the game at an early age."

Youth may attend the baseball camp as residents or commuters. The fee for resident campers is $190 and includes a double-occupancy dorm room, meals, and instructional materials. The $100 commuter fee includes four lunches and instructional materials.

Ashby and the camp staff will instruct youth in offensive and defensive play, outfield, infield, catching, pitching, bunting, baserunning, and hitting.

Campers will spend six hours on the playing field each day, and will be videotaped and evaluated by camp instructors. They will view films, share in theory discussions, visit with guest speakers, and participate in recreational activities.

To register for the camp, contact Camp Coordinator Martha Hise, Division of Continuing Education, Box 4110, Texas Tech University, Lubbock, TX, 79409-4110, or call her at (806) 742-2352.

No pass, no play rule not proven discriminatory

HOUSTON (AP) — Statistics on the racial breakdown of the state's schools is not enough to prove that the controversial no pass-no play rule is discriminatory, a special master in a lawsuit challenging the law testified.

But attorney Gerald Treece said statistics collected from school districts statewide pointed to an "imbalance" of more minority and handicapped students being excluded from school activities.

Treece, who served as special master over a five-month period, said in a hearing Tuesday he received responses from 700 of the 1,000 school districts in the state. He was released from duty as special master at his request after turning over the statistical data and boxes of the original questionnaires to the court.

The lawsuit against the statute, which prohibits high school students who fail a course from participating in extracurricular activities during the ensuing six weeks, is set for July 16 on the claim that the law discriminates against handicapped and minority children.

The latest figures gathered by Treece, a South Texas School of Law dean, involved 1.2 million students. His figures showed 29 percent of handicapped children, 23 percent of black students and 22 percent of Mexican-American students were excluded by the law from participating in school activities compared with 15 percent of Anglos.

Treece told State District Judge Marsha Anthony that his initial attempts to gather statistics from the districts "met with significant resistance" because of the expense and time the districts had to invest in collecting the figures.

"I had to spend much time cajoling and begging school districts that would say they'd never submit to the authority of a court in Houston," said Treece, who has not submitted a bill for his services, but said it would amount to "a lot" since he charges $150 an hour.

Treece said the statistics are inadequate to prove a case of discrimination.

"It's a rare case where statistics and imbalance alone are enough to prove an equal protection case," Treece said.

He said the trial will have to expose a historical background of discrimination, specific events that led to the discrimination, any departure from the norm and the legislative history.

"I will agree there is some imbalance between Anglos compared to the handicapped and minorities, but these statistics should only be the beginning of the inquiry, not the end," Treece said.

The judge told attorney Anthony Sheppard, representing the class action suit for the children of Texas, and Assistant Attorney General Kevin O'Hanlon to submit their written briefs by July 16 to answer the questions of whether the lawsuit should be decertified as class action and whether statistics would prove "invidious discrimination."

"I want this case to be finally and fully finished," said Ms. Anthony, a former schoolteacher. "The people and children of this state need this case adjudicated."

The versatile Larry bird of the Boston Celtics was the only NBA player in the 1965-86 season to grab more than 500 rebounds and also make more than 500 assists.

The New York Mets were in last place in the National League East on Aug. 30, 1973. In September, they won 20 of 28 games to finish on top.

Best at bottom of Fortune 500

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Which portfolio is likely to provide you with the greatest return: One made up of the 15 companies at the top of the Fortune 500 list of biggest companies, or one consisting of the bottom 15 concerns?

Gerald Perritt, a former professor of mathematics, has already worked it out.

Since 1975-1976, the smaller portfolio — which varied year to year because of changes in the list — would have provided an average annual return of 22.3 percent, while the larger one would have lagged behind at 15 percent.

Because of dividend and capital gains compounding, the difference is even larger for the full period. The smaller company portfolio returned 817 percent, more than double the 368 percent of the larger company investment.

Perritt, editor of Investment Horizons, a Chicago-based newsletter, conducted the research in keeping with his philosophy that smaller, less known companies are likely to produce greater returns than big, publicized concerns.

While the companies at the bottom of the Fortune 500 list aren't small by most standards, they are so in relation to those at the top.

According to Perritt, annual sales of of the company ranked first by Fortune Magazine have averaged nearly $77 billion over the past 12 years, or about 200 times the $386 million-average of companies in the 500th spot.

Being in that position, they are well known by the big investors. Today, says Perritt, an average of 500 institutions hold shares of stock in firms ranked 1 through 15. Only 55 hold shares in the bottom 15.

Because they are well known and well-researched by professional analysts, the largest stocks tend to be fairly priced. The mass of data, the research of analysts and the give and take of trading make prices "efficient."

A lot less is known about smaller companies. They are much less visible. They aren't as efficiently examined. And, according to small-company theories, they are therefore more variable in price. And so they provide opportunities.

They are less visible for another reason too. While Perritt found the Fortune top almost static, the bottom changed often. In 12 years, only 22 companies resided in the top 15, while two-thirds of the bottom were newcomers.

In dollar terms, the lesser-known bottom 15 did remarkably better. Assuming an initial investment of $10,000 in the bottom 500 beginning in June 1975, the value on May 31, 1986 would have been $91,706, versus $46,800 for the top 15.

Ordinarily, Perritt focuses on strong small companies that aren't likely to make it into the top 500 for a long time to come. But he still believes in having big companies in a portfolio, partly for the stability they offer.

Yes, it is true, he says, that shares of the smaller and less well-known companies are more volatile year to year. That is one reason why he chose a portfolio of 15 stocks rather than concentrating on perhaps five.

But with a diversified portfolio over a longer period of time, he suggests, investors should be able to enhance their total returns by concentrating on the stocks of relatively smaller and less visible companies.

Packrat prizes passel of pens above other junk

By GRAHAM UNDERWOOD
Wichita Falls Times

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — A golden board hanging on Leon and Ruth Wyche's kitchen wall typifies the rest of their home. Wyche calls it his "junk art" because he's glued years of trash there instead of throwing it away.

A briar root, the key to Room 401 at the Holiday Inn East, a cigar butt, a mousetrap, his father's glasses — all these are part of the collage.

"You name it," he said. "It's up there."

But, Wyche keeps his real prize in a spare bedroom. Pasted on about a dozen boards hanging on the walls are ballpoint pens disguised as jack-o-lanterns, dollar signs, bass fish and thermometers. The last count showed about 3,000 pens in all, he said, but the collection has had time to grow.

"I had a cigar box full," Wyche said. "(and I) just decided to put them on a board, and I just got started."

That was 20 years ago, just after the Wyches moved to Wichita Falls from Azle. Since then, friends and relatives have kept the retired electrical wholesaler supplied with samples of "gimme" pens from wherever they've traveled. Danish and Dutch pens came to Wyche's collection from the most distant point, but his pride is a board of antique fountain pens.

"I guess that's my favorite because they're more valuable," he said.

Wyche said pen collecting is a rare pastime and it's tough to find someone to trade with. He said he's had other frustrations, such as the time a friend split with her husband, then left town before she could leave Wyche the Saudi Arabian pens she'd saved for him while she lived there.

Usually, he said, he can look at a new pen and instantly know whether he's got a duplicate. That ability, he said, came from all the long moments he's spent poring over his holdings.

"I don't have that kind of mind," he said, "but I've studied them so long."

Wyche is also remarkably neat for a packrat, and co-workers at AM-FAC Electrical Supply Co., from which he is retired, say he was always that way.

His small house in southwest Wichita Falls is an unlikely spot for a museum. Nevertheless, the Wyches share their place with thousands of oddities they've picked up.

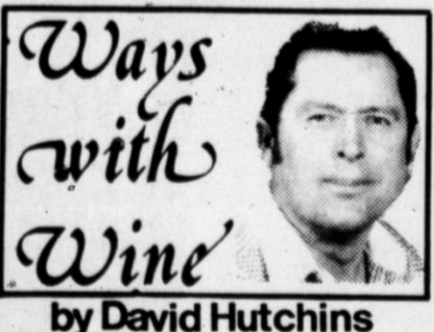

On the wall hang mounted knotholes Wyche's father cut from rotted trees. Mrs. Wyche has the pistol her mother kept when the family ran a cafe in Burkburnett's boomtown days. Under the dining room table is a chamberpot handed down by somebody.

"It's supposed to go under the bed," Wyche said, laughing.

The couple has found treasures in trash, and the loaded shelves of cow bells, dinner bells and china bells collected by Mrs. Wyche face another wall covered by a herd of ceramic, wooden and blown glass elephants she has been gathering.

"We collect anything but dollars," Wyche said.

LAGER VS. ALE
Beer is a low-alcohol beverage made from fermented barley, water and flavorings (principally hops). The overwhelming majority of American beers are called lagers. It comes from the German "lager bier" for storehouse beer. Lager is light in color and flavor due to the fact that the yeasts drop to bottom of the fermenting tank. They are mellowed by aging. By law, beer may not be brewed with more than four percent alcohol. With ale, yeasts ferment at the top of the tank. This produces a tangier, yeastier drink. Ale is hardly aged at all. Ale continues to be the best-selling beer in England and Ireland. It is not seen as often in this country.

Are you planning a cookout? If you would like some assistance in estimating the quantity of ale, beer and/or wine you will need don't hesitate to ask one of us at THE STORE. We stock a wide variety and will be happy to answer any questions you have about them. Stop in and see us at 400 N. 25 Mile, 364-7802. Ann Landers

Parents weren't smart

DEAR ANN LANDERS: One more word on wills. My parents both passed away recently. It turns out they left everything to my husband and me without specifying any division.

Last month, my husband told me he plans to use "his half" to start over—without me. I don't know whether I'm angrier at him or my folks for making it so easy to dump me—and walk off in grand style.

If this was their idea of a "lovely gesture," or a vote of confidence in our marriage, it certainly backfired. If it was meant to thank him for the yardwork and putting on the screens they would have been smarter to have named a dollar amount.

Our marriage has been rocky for several years. I thought I was saving my folks unnecessary heartache by shielding it from them, especially since we were trying to work things out.

I'm not asking for any advice, Ann. I just hope I might prevent other parents from making the same mistake. I never dreamed I would find myself in this position and I am — BURNING IN MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR MPLS: Your parents meant well but they weren't very smart. Too bad. I hope you taught somebody something today.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You were right when you said a lot of Western Illinois University students would reply to the girl who insisted that all she wanted was a hug from her fellow (male) students and was unable to find even one who was willing to settle for just a hug.

I, too, went through the problem of wanting to find male friends and finding nothing but sex maniacs. I discovered that I was searching in the wrong places. As soon as I stopped looking in bars and at fraternity parties, I found several male friends and very good ones.

The right places for me were: at work in the cafeteria, in the library, and social activities sponsored by the university.

When the guys needed dates, they would ask us. On graduation day we hugged and cried, and vowed to keep in touch. We have. We exchange Christmas cards, attend each other's weddings, and send birthday cards.

My advice to anyone who wants a good friend of the opposite sex is to look under your nose. The people you spend every day with don't want to risk a lifetime of friendship for one night of passion.—A WIU GRAD

DEAR GRAD: Your letter could have come from any of a number of campuses. Thanks for sharing some concepts that are mature, sensible and practical.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My daughter was killed by her ex-husband and we are getting Social Security benefits for raising our grandson.

When the killer gets out of prison, if he should succeed in getting legal custody of his son (our grandchild), is it possible that he would also receive Social Security benefits for the child? Please respond at once. We are—WORRIED SICK

DEAR W.S.: Never mind the Social Security. You need a lawyer to make certain your former son-in-law does NOT, repeat, NOT, get custody of the boy. This is the most important issue.

Discover how to be date bait without falling hook, line and sinker. Ann Landers' booklet, "Dating Do's and Don'ts," will help you be more poised and sure of yourself on dates. Send 50 cents along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Burford named champion

Christy Burford, daughter of Bill and Joyce Burford, was named state strutting and second baton champion recently during the State Twirling Championship held in San Antonio.

Burford has received the baton champion for a fourth consecutive year and she placed first receiving trophies for strutting-advanced, flag routine, parade majorette, and sweetheart presentation.

Burford was first runner up for Miss Majorette of Texas and she won the sweepstakes trophy for advanced twirlers, 16-20 year olds.

Burford also brought back medals for placing in advanced solo, hoop routine, advanced basic strut, advanced military, modeling, and best costume.

She will represent Miss Majorette of the Southwest at the National and World Twirling Championships to be held July 22-26 at Notre Dame in South Bend, Ind.

Driving classes scheduled

Texas State Technical Institute will offer three classes in defensive driving during July.

Classes will meet at the American Legion Building, 617 W. 7th. Evening classes are offered from 6 to 10 p.m. July 8 and 9, and July 22 and 23.

A one-day class will be from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. July 19.

Graduates of the course receive a

DR. GOTT

Peter Gott, M.D.

See neurologist about injuries

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My husband has been in two car accidents in the past year. In both, he either hit his head on the steering wheel or went through the windshield. He sustained no spinal injury, but continues to have blurred vision, severe headaches and nausea, and sometimes glass fragments come out of his forehead. Could remaining fragments cause his symptoms? He refuses to see a specialist, but he might take your advice.

DEAR READER — Without knowing the exact nature of your husband's injuries, I cannot comment on his visual difficulties and headaches, except to say that a concussion (brain bruise) would be a common cause for his symptoms. Glass fragments can appear in a healed wound for many months after an accident. Unless the shards caused internal damage, I doubt they are the source of his problems.

I think that he should see a neurologist for two reasons:

First, the specialist needs to define the extent of your husband's injuries. Was there a simple concussion or did he have a fractured skull? Was there bleeding to the brain that might contribute to his blurred vision and headaches? What other structures in the head might have been damaged? There are lots of questions that need answers.

Second, I'm concerned about why your husband had two serious car accidents within the past year. Did he have a small stroke or cardiac irregularity that might have affected his motor skills or judgment just before the accidents? Could his blurred vision and headaches be due to an underlying medical condition, and not at all to the accidents? Is there some health problem that should be corrected so that your husband can avoid further accidents in the future? Why does he refuse to see a specialist? Could this reflect a subtle change in his thought processes that might have come either from the accidents or from some undiscovered illness?

I hope that your husband will take my advice, because continuing symptoms after head injuries may be caused by treatable conditions.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My son, 12, had a 102-degree fever, white spots on his throat and was pale. The doctor did blood tests and said he had some kind of hepatitis — not A or B, but another kind. He didn't explain it too well. Will his blood be like that of people who have had hepatitis A or B? Why didn't my son turn yellow? What effect will this have in the future?

DEAR READER — You describe a throat infection associated with fever and, I assume, blood tests indicating liver inflammation. In my experience, the most likely diagnosis is infectious mononucleosis, a type of virus infection that can affect the lymph glands and spleen, as well as the liver. Patients with mono rarely become yellow or jaundiced because — despite the liver inflammation — the liver itself continues to function reasonably well.

Hepatitis is unusual in children in this situation. Moreover, if your son had hepatitis, I would expect type A (infectious). Type B (serum) is not common in youngsters. Apparently he had neither, so the doctor is left with two possibilities: non-A, non-B, which is very rare in children; or delta hepatitis, which is always seen in conjunction with hepatitis B.

I put my money on mono. This can be diagnosed — sometimes weeks after the infection has cleared — by a blood test. See if your son's doctor checked him for this common illness. Incidentally, if your son did have mononucleosis, he should recover completely and be relatively immune to catching it in the future.

Local student is selected to represent school, church

Whitney Whitaker has been selected to represent First Baptist Church and Hereford High School in The Society of Distinguished American High School Students.

Whitney, a junior student at HHS, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Randy Allmon. She was nominated for the honor by church sponsor, Randall Stotts.

Only those students who demonstrate academic excellence, participate actively in civic affairs, or display leadership in extracurricular activities are eligible for this national award.

Whitney's membership will be announced in the 1986 edition of "The Society of Distinguished American High School Students." Her high school biography of honors and accomplishments will be featured in this year's membership registry along with those of other outstanding young achievers across the nation.

Since 1968, The Society's primary goal has been to honor and recognize America's young leaders. As an added benefit to the honor, members are also offered the opportunity to compete for college scholarships through the National Awards Program and unrestricted cash prizes that can be used at any college in the United States.

The National Awards Program, designed specifically for members, is supported by 140 colleges and universities throughout the United States. This year alone these colleges have earmarked $700,000 in scholarship funds for members meeting their selection criteria.

Little difference in cholesterol levels

Red meat is getting a bad rap from misinformed health-conscious consumers.

Newly appointed Texas Tech University Animal Science Chairperson Robert L. Long said there is unwarranted concern over the amount of fat contained in red meat, a concern he says his department is working to correct.

"The public seems to carry the opinion that chicken and seafood are healthier," Long said. "In fact there is very little difference in the fat and cholesterol levels of those foods and red meats."

Long said red meat is usually evaluated on carcass quality rather than the quality of the actual meat cuts found in the butcher case.

"The fat content of most beef carcasses is around 35 percent, Long said. "But people don't eat the carcass. They eat steak and roasts that are only about 8 to 12 percent fat. It's the same principle as when people remove the skin and underlying fat from a chicken breast before measuring its fat and calorie content."

Because of the misconceptions about beef, pork and lamb, Long said the research program in the Animal Science Department is aimed at finding consumer-attractive products at a profit to the producer.

Long said emphasis is placed on how genetic potential determines animal composition and weight. The traditional theory states that what an animal is fed determines the eventual grade of the meat. Long says that is untrue.

"Carcass characteristics are not determined by how an animal is fed, but by genetics. Animals should be slaughtered at the optimum weight for their genetic potential," he said.

Long said the research program is also focusing on more efficient utilization of crop residue on the high plains such as gin trash, cottonseed hulls, straw and stover. Physical or chemical treatments which would make more net energy available to ruminants from these waste products would be a boon to producers and consumers alike.

Long points to the new multi-million dollar Burnett Center for Beef Cattle Research and Instruction as a prime example of how the research program is working to reduce the cost of producing consumer acceptable beef.

"The major cost of feeding any livestock is feed," Long said. "The entire College of Agricultural Sciences focuses on the efficient production of feed, its utilization by superior livestock, the healthfulness and safety of livestock products for human consumption and the processing, preservation, packaging and marketing of these products at reasonable cost and at a profit to producers."

Long said this research effort by the college coupled with the teaching program which prepares students to take their place in the industry serves the producer, the consumer and the overall economy of Texas and the nation.

King's Manor Announces Child Care Center

King's Manor Methodist Home, Inc. is proud to announce that after a perfect inspection rating by the Texas Department of Human Resources, we are now taking enrollments for our Child Care Center. We will begin operation on July 14, 1986.

The Center is a non-profit, interracial and non-political institution, owned and operated by the Northwest Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church, to serve children of all religious faiths. Our purpose is to provide quality care that will benefit the child, the parent, and the community.

The Center will be open 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Children may be in continuous care for a maximum of 12 hours. Drop-ins are welcome when space is available. Children from 3 Weeks to Age 13 will be accepted for care. Hot meals and nutritious snacks will be served.

The Center will provide a safe, caring environment for children to explore.

We welcome visitors any time. Please come by the Center, through the new administrative entrance to King's Manor, to complete the enrollment forms necessary and to visit with the Child Care Director, Martha Rickman. The phone number is 364-0661.

Local Church News

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

"Not Gonna Bow" is the theme for the summer youth extravaganza planned from Monday until Friday, July 7-July 11. Each night one of the youth will be leading Bible study.

To sign-up for the trip to Six Flags July 28-30 contact the church office. The trip will be limited to the first 40 that register.

FIRST CHURCH OF THE NAZARENE

Janie White and daughter, Re-Jana, will be presented during the morning worship service which will begin at 10 Sunday. There will be no Sunday school.

White has been ministering in music across the country for over 11 years. She and her daughter sing a variety of music, from Southern Gospel to contemporary. White will also share her family testimony.

At 11 a.m. Sunday the regular service will be held. Following the service, there will be a dinner on the church grounds. This will be a pot luck dinner, so bring enough food for your family. Drinks will be provided.

The church youth will be operating a "For Sale Cheap" store called "The Life Store." Location is the former L&B store on Park Ave. All profits from sales will go to the teen missions program.

If you would like to help with vacation Bible school, meet at the church July 13. Dates for the Bible school have been set from Aug. 4-8.

Bike night will be from 7-8:30 p.m. Friday, July 11, for children ages fourth through sixth grade. There will be a program on bike safety.

The children will have a pool party Sunday following the evening service at Green Acres Pool.

Rev. Bob Huffaker will be showing slides taken on his recent trip to Israel at 6 p.m. July 13. Everyone is invited to attend.

WESLEY UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

At 7 a.m. Saturday, the Wesley United Methodist Men will meet for breakfast at the church. Wives are invited to attend.

Beginning at 6 p.m. Sunday, there will be a U.M.W. family Fourth of July celebration. Refreshments will include ice cream, cake, and cookies.

The Rev. Lanny Wheeler's sermon Sunday morning at 11 a.m. will be entitled "One Leaf." The scripture lesson will be I Cor. 10:14-17. A special sermon for the children will also be delivered.

Also, music by the Rev. Wheeler will be presented entitled "In Remembrance of Me" and Holy Communion will be observed.

Sunday school begins at 10 a.m. each Sunday.

POLLY'S POINTERS Freeze, for parsley of all seasonings

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — To freeze fresh parsley, I pick and wash it, then snip off all the large green stems. I drain it overnight in a strainer to get it really dry, then pack in plastic sandwich bags as tightly as I can. I usually do six or eight of these packages for winter use. I pack the sandwich bags into a heavy bread bag and fasten it shut to keep the individual packages from scattering throughout the large freezer. To use, just pour out the desired amount of parsley. I use the parsley in meat loaf, potato soup, vegetable soup, salads and other dishes. — MRS. L.J.B.

DEAR POLLY — Here's my simple method for removing a heavy crease from clothes (such as an old hemline). Cut a large brown grocery sack — a good, heavy one — into a size large enough to cover the area you want to press. Lay the brown paper over the crease. Using a regular hot iron (no steam), press over the area of the bag covering the crease. Let the iron get very hot and be sure the crease is lying smoothly so no more creases are pressed in. Press over the crease several times, staying on the paper bag. The crease should disappear. — E.B.

DEAR POLLY — A most important childproofing suggestion is to keep the bathroom door closed when there are very young children in the home. Our neighbors lost their one-year-old grandson in a tragic bathroom accident. A little caution — and a closed door — may save some babies. — EVA

ABC's Liberty Weekend will be Hollywood production

NEW YORK (AP) — Liberty Weekend is a David Wolper Production, which means ABC's 17½ hours of coverage is bound to be Hollywood-size huge.

Wolper helped hatch the miniseries form with the top-rated "Roots," then followed it with the No. 2 "The Thorn Birds." He also orchestrated the red-white-and-blue opening and closing ceremonies for the 1984 Summer Olympics, and he took it as a compliment when Tass ridiculed them as decadent.

Wolper says he doesn't do programs; he does events.

And that's exactly what the four-day celebration for the Statue of Liberty's combined birthday and coming-out party will be. If the Soviets thought rows of baby grand pianos and covered wagons were outlandish for the Olympics, what will they say about some of this weekend's coming attractions?

They include: — A sports salute to Lady Liberty on Sunday, including a tug of war between the New York Jets and New York Giants.

— Closing ceremonies Sunday that will include a 20-tiered stage, waterfalls, 300 tap dancers, 150 banjo players and 200 Elvis Presley lookalikes.

— A July 4 fireworks display Friday that will make previous lightning-and-thunder spectaculars pale in comparison. When the Brooklyn Bridge celebrated its 100th birthday in 1982, nine barges of fireworks marked the occasion. "This one will be 40 barges," crowed Wolper, promising "the largest fireworks display in the history of the United States."

Some have called these festivities overkill, complaining they obscure the spirit and meaning of America's symbol of opportunity and freedom.

"I love fireworks and large bands. The celebration is important, but it's being done to excess and drowning out the Statue of Liberty," said Ken Burns, whose 1985 PBS documentary on the statue was nominated for an Academy Award. "There are millions of stories about somebody's grandfather or uncle, but the event has become so big, it's pushed everything of value out of the way."

However, ABC, which outbid NBC and paid $10 million for the exclusive broadcast rights to Wolper's entertainment events, is satisfied the weekend will be a meaningful celebration of patriotism, spectacle and news.

"A large part of the weekend is a news event," said ABC News President Roone Arledge. "Parts of it are spectacle, parts of it are genuine news."

Last month, a controversy developed over what was news, and therefore available to all news organizations, and what was entertainment and the paid-for, exclusive province of ABC.

An agreement was hammered out by which ABC will pool 16 minutes of speeches and introductions by government leaders, including President Reagan, who will unveil the statue and then light the torch in tonight's opening ceremonies. In addition, ABC agreed to pool coverage in the event of any news emergency.

Cable News Network plans 18 hours of coverage over the weekend, while CBS and NBC each will provide five hours of special reports tonight and Friday.

Along with the $10 million rights fee, ABC is spending $4 million on production, but the network has recouped its investment by selling out its full allotment of commercial time for $30 million, at $165,000 a spot in prime time and $30,000 for daytime.

Broadcasters halt rumors

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (AP) — The head of the National Religious Broadcasters Association has issued a plea for a halt to persistent, false rumors and protests about a non-existent petition by atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair.

The Rev. Ben Armstrong, executive director of the Morristown-based association, says that contrary to the rumors, the Federal Communications Commission is not considering any proposal by O'Hair, or anyone else, to restrict religious broadcasting.

The FCC has been flooded with more than 16 million letters protesting the supposed O'Hair petition since false word of it began circulating in 1975.

Quartz refers to a range of lovely gems. It may be clear and colorless or tinted in delicate shades. Colorless quartz is called rock crystal or Lake George diamonds.

Churches recommend mutual communion

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Based on Lutheran-Reformed theological dialogues, the council of the American Lutheran Church is recommending full communion with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and the Reformed Church in America.

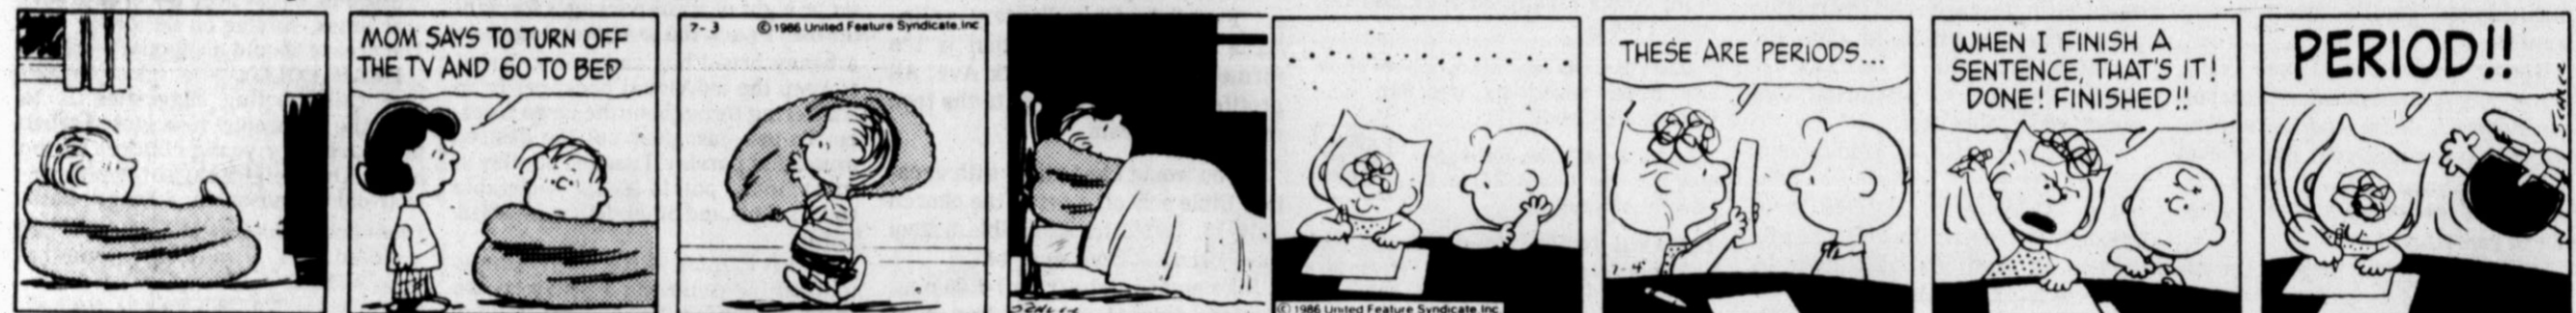

The step would involve mutual recognition of validity of each other's ministers and celebrations of the Lord's Supper, allowing sharing in worship and ministers.

The proposal goes before the 2.3 million-member denomination's convention in August, with a similar proposal before the 111,000-member Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches.

Both also are to decide on a merger plan with the larger 2.9 million-member Lutheran Church in America, before which more limited terms of relationship with the Presbyterian and Reformed bodies are being proposed.

 Classified advertising rates are based on a minimum of 20 words. One day is 15 cents per word or $2.00 minimum. Rates below are for consecutive issues, no copy change, and apply to solid ad lines only.

TIMES	RATES	MIN.
1 day per word:	15	2.00
2 days per word:	22	4.00
3 days per word:	31	6.20
4 days per word:	40	8.00
5th day FREE

Add 9 cents per word for additional days: 10 days (2 free) is 15.20 minimum; 15 days (3 free) is 22.40; month 77.80.

Classified display rates apply for special captions, paragraphing, bold type or larger type, and ads not set with full lines. $2.00 per column inch, $2 a column inch for additional insertions, or $1.75 a column inch per month.

LEGALS
 Advertising rates for legal notices are $3.50 per column inch for the first insertion and $3 per column inch for consecutive issues.
 Deadlines for classified ads are 3 p.m. daily for the next day's edition; 3 p.m. Friday for Sunday's edition.
 Cash is required on advertisements under $10.

ERRORS
 Every effort is made to avoid errors in Classified Ads and legal notices. We will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. Advertisers should call attention to any errors immediately after the first insertion. In case of errors not the fault of the advertiser, an additional insertion will be given.

Central Americans fleeing to the north

LUBBOCK - The United States' southern border may have an illegal alien problem, but a Texas Tech University professor says it's nothing compared to Mexico's.

Political scientist Neale J. Pearson, who just returned from a four-month trip to Central America, found many Central American males he interviewed, especially in El Salvador, desired to come to the United States.

"The people trying to get into the U.S. come through Mexico," Pearson said. "There are no guards, fences and checkpoints on the southern Mexican border like we have, so there is a free flow of people into a country that doesn't have the resources to support its own people."

Pearson said while some Central Americans are fleeing from political persecution, most are coming north for economic reasons.

"Central American countries just don't have the natural resources to provide jobs for their people," Pearson said. "Almost anything they produce, like sugar cane, coffee or raw agricultural products, can be produced elsewhere in the world at lower cost."

Pearson said besides the steady flow of people, both legal and illegal from Mexico, thousands of Central Americans are coming into the U.S. illegally each year.

Despite current headline-making conflicts, Pearson said there is more political stability in Central America than in recent years.

"Because there is more political stability, people can move around easier, can get to Mexico and ultimately the U.S. without much trouble," he said.

Pearson compared the delivery of public services of the current civilian governments of Honduras and Panama with the former military governments. Public services include primary schools, health care, water and sanitation systems and family planning.

"All governments are hampered in raising the quality of public services by the high birth rate," he said. "Honduras, for example, has a population increase of 3.4 percent per year. With improved health and sanitation services, people are also living longer. With more Central Americans living longer, coupled with a depressed economy, it is difficult for any government to improve the quality of life very much."

Pearson said it is difficult to say which of the two governments has done more for the people in the past 20 years.

"It's fair to say Suazo Cordova did more for the rural section of Honduras than his civilian counterpart in Panama, but then Honduras had further to go than Panama in the number of schools and health services," Pearson said. "While Panama may have more schools and a better pupil to teacher ratio, they still have both urban and rural schools that do not have enough textbooks for school children and few of those have library facilities."

Despite ongoing political conflicts in many Central American countries, Pearson said he and a Danish journalist companion saw very little troop movement and experienced little trouble crossing borders.

"I think it is really pretty safe to travel in Central America," he said. "I would recommend that any driving be done in the daytime not because of the crooks, guerrillas or criminals but because of two car wrecks we had, one at night and the other during the day. I would warn motorists to look out for buses unexpectedly backing up and sugar cane carts and animals on the road which don't carry lights or reflectors."

The Aleutian Islands are the farthest west extension of the North American continent and the farthest east, too, because in mid-sweep the archipelago crosses 180 degrees into east longitude.
