Officials say pre-summit meeting is possibility

WASHINGTON (AP) — American and Soviet officials are talking publicly about meeting to make arrangements for a summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, but both sides say specific plans for a preparatory session have yet to be completed.

A top Soviet government minister drew a warm response from U.S. officials Tuesday when he said "the Soviet Union has proposed to the United States to set up a preparatory mechanism for such a meeting."

But Deputy Foreign Minister Vladimir F. Petrovsky, who made the comment at a Moscow news conference, added that his government wants a meeting between the two superpower leaders to produce tangible results on curbing nuclear arms.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said he hoped Petrovsky's comments were evidence of a willingness by the Soviets "to move forward to preparations for a summit, which we would like to have."

State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman urged the Soviets to send Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze here to make preparations for the summit, which Reagan and Gorbachev agreed to when they met in Geneva last November.

"Let's get on with it," Redman

Discussing Petrovsky's remarks under conditions of anonymity, another U.S. official said the Soviets meant to send another "signal" of their interest in a summit meeting. But, he said, before agreeing to a date the Soviets also were trying to bring pressure on Washington in order to shape the summit agenda in ways that suit their position on arms control.

Yuri Dubinin, the Soviet ambassador, also made optimistic comments Tuesday when asked at a White House reception for the diplomatic corps whether a summit would be held.

"We are talking about it," he said. Asked whether there would be a meeting soon between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Sheverdnadze, Dubinin said, "I don't know exactly, but I hope.'

Dubinin went through a reception line and shook hands with Reagan, but the words they exchanged could not be heard by reporters.

Later, in an informal exchange with Shultz, he was heard to express

Speeding, drinking caused most accidents

Nineteen people were killed on Texas highways last Fourth of July, according to Sergeant Billy Don Scott of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Scott said Hereford had no fatalities during the July 4th holiday last year, just a few minor accidents.

Speeding and drinking drivers were the main cause of accidents during the holiday last year," said Scott. "Thirty-one percent of all traffic accidents were caused by a drinking driver, but that's not to say they were all killed."

Scott explained that the three main causes of fatal accidents were head-on collissions, collission with a fixed object- a bridge, tree, or lamp pole, and overturn accidents.

"Of the number of people killed in traffic accidents in 1985, 989 people were killed by drinking drivers," said Scott. "And 867 people were killed by someone driving over the legal speed limit."

Scott, a 24 year DPS veteran, said that over the years he has seen plenty of fatal accidents.

Tentative agreement reached with

Common Market by administration WASHINGTON (AP) - The Reagan administration today announced that it had reached a tentative agreement with the 12-nation European Community that will buy some "running room" for both sides agricultural products.

The agreement includes concessions by the Europeans that will permit continued U.S. shipments of corn and sorghum into Spain at current levels while negotiations on easing trade barriers continue.

The recent expansion of the European Community to include Spain and Portugal brought with it new limits on the levels of U.S. grain imports into those countries.

The Reagan administration had protested these limits by announcing new standby tariffs and quotas on a variety of European agriculural products, including wine, beer, cheese and chocolates.

That provoked threats of counter moves by the European Community, also called the Common Market, sharply escalating trade frictions between Europe and the United States.

"This agreement simply says that our farmers will not be hurt while the neogiations are proceeding." Baldrige said.

U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter, in a statement, called today's action "an interim solution."

Supreme Court upholds affirmative action rule

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court, handing civil rights forces a sweeping victory, today reaffirmed the legality of affirmative action in the American workplace to remedy past discrimination against blacks and other minorities.

The court's latest word on affirmative action came in two rulings.

In one, the justices approved a plan in Cleveland that reserves about half the promotions in the city's fire department for qualified minority candidates.

In the other, the court upheld a ruling that a union representing sheet metal workers in New York and New Jersey must significantly raise its non-white membership by August

The rulings represent a major defeat for the Reagan administration, which sought to limit on-the-job racial preferences.

By a 6-3 vote in the sheet metal workers case, the court rejected the administration's position that only actual victims of discrimination may benefit from court-ordered affirmative action remedies.

The justices said that more sweeping remedies do not violate federal civil rights laws or the Constitution's awarded after a trial.

equal-protection guarantees.

Justice William J. Brennan, in the court's main opinion, said, "We hold that (federal law) does not prohibit a court from ordering, in appropriate circumstances, affirmative raceconscious relief as a remedy for past discrimination."

Writing for the court's 6-3 majority in the Cleveland case, Brennan said agreements between employers and minority groups may provide racial preferences even more extensive than a federal court would have

Sesquicentennial Wagon Train rolls its last mile

EDITOR'S NOTE—The Texas Sesquicentennial Wagon Train rolled into Fort Worth today six months and 3,000 miles after it left Sulphur Springs on Jan. 3.

By MIKE COCHRAN Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - It was six months and 3,000 miles of wind, rain, mud, sleet, heat, dust, runaway horses and broken down

It was up before daybreak and rarely down before dark. It was Winnsboro today, Quitman tomorrow, Lufkin next week and Austin next month. It was Sulphur Springs to begin with and Fort Worth to end with and 150 or so Texas towns, cities and ranches in between.

Two people and perhaps a dozen animals died. Injuries and illnesses were too numerous to record.

But it was a happy and high-spirited group of adventurers who rolled into "Cowtown" this week on the final leg of a symbolic sesquicentennial journey that took them by wagon train and horseback up and down and across the state. "This trip is not only to remember the Alamo or Goliad or San Jacinto, but to remember Texas, America and our forefathers," observed Donna Neal Stepp of Fort Worth, who is chronicling her experiences for a

"...The old people reach out to touch us. The wagon train is a direct line to their mothers and fathers."

The Texas Sesquicentennial Wagon Train is not only a tongue twisting highlight of the state's 150th birthday celebration but a tribute also to Texas' western heritage. The conclusion this weekend coincides with America's own Fourth of July birthday party.

"It's been fun," said Wanda Noll of Henrietta.

"And exciting," added Mabel Thomas of Wichita Falls. "A really nice deal," said Gilbert Voss of Greenville.

All rode the train "off and on." Mike Lowrie of Bandera, an assistant wagon master who made the entire journey, noted wryly that one could hardly believe the "many interesting things to see in the state at four miles an hour from atop a horse."

And he liked the dinners and dances in the small towns of the Big Thicket, the Hill Country, the Panhandle, the South Plains and along the Gulf Coast.

The weather was something else. "We got sleeted on in Amarillo and nearly froze our tails off," he smiled. "Of course, it was 90 degrees the

"The most important thing, what the wagon train is all about, is the people on it and their relationships with one another...The wagon train is these people sharing the hardship and pleasure side by side."

He said the train began with some 80 wagons, dipped as low as 30, was now at 124 and would probably hit the

Supporters rally to cause of minister

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - The Rev. W.N. Otwell told 200 supporters rallying against state officials in a boys home licensing battle that, "The spirit of Hitler is ruling the state of Texas."

The minister held the rally at the Tarrant County Courthouse on Tuesday despite Attorney General Jim Mattox postponing until Aug. 5 the sale of property of Community Baptist Church, which operates Otwell's unlicensed boys home.

At the rally, supporters sang hymns and waved signs, one of which declared, "Let God's People Go."

"We must stand here," Otwell said. "Even if it means death we must stand. Even if it means imprisonment we must stand." Otwell says he will not leave the property even if it is sold. The property was ordered auctioned off to pay about $14,000 in fines that have accrued against the home for operating without a state license, state officials said. The auction was postponed because part of the buildings up for sale extended onto other church-owned lots, and the court order had to be rewritten to extend the sale to those lots. The sale now is to include all church property, including the sanctuary, officials said. About a dozen Fort Worth police officers and Tarrant County sheriff's deputies stood back from the crowd and across East Weatherford Street. Some out-of-state ministers, including the Rev. Everett Sileven of Louisville, Neb., stood on the courthouse steps with Otwell. Sileven served several months in prison during a nationally publicized church-state battle over his unlicensed church school.

Clements has 'plan' for fiscal woes

AUSTIN (AP) - Bill Clements has a "blueprint" for solving the state fiscal crisis, but the GOP gubernatorial candidate has no secret plan, according to an aide.

Democratic Gov. Mark White said Clements had left him with the impression that he had a secret plan.

"Bill Clements says he has a plan. I believe the voters of Texas deserve to see his secret plan," White said.

Throughout the spring, as he urged White to call a special legislative session to deal with the cash crisis, Clements said he knew how to make the needed spending cuts. But the Republican candidate would never reveal specifics.

"I'm not going to get into a detailed road map and blueprint of where and how you are going to cut that budget," he told reporters April 1.

"I think the voters understand my modus operandi very, very well. When I tell them that detailed road map will be forthcoming prior to the legislative session of 1987, they believe me, they understand me and I have credibility with them.

"Just like I used to tell my children: Santa Claus will appear on Christmas Day. Christmas is coming. Thanksgiving is coming. And November (election day) is coming," Clements said.

Now, White says he will call a special ses leaders come up with a spending cut plan. And the governor said it is time for Clements "to lay your cards on the table."

U.S. says allies getting tough on Libya

WASHINGTON (AP) - The State Department, citing the expulsion of more than 100 Libyans from Western Europe in the past two months, says America's allies are making serious efforts to isolate the government of Col. Moammar Gadhafi.

At the same time, a department spokesman says it's hard to judge whether the Western response has had any moderating influence on the Libyan leader.

"It's a difficult call," spokesman Charles E. Redman said Tuesday. "There are a number of things which we believe may have had an impact on his behavior, but the extent of that impact ... I think is just too difficult to evaluate."

Here is a country-by-country list of European actions cited by the State Department:

Italy: Expelled six Libyan diplomats and 13 staff members from the People's Bureau in Italy and arrested a former Libyan diplomat in connection with an alleged plot to kill the U.S. ambassador in Rome. Another four dozen "non-official" Libyans were also expelled. Italy is also investigating Libyan investments and reviewing legal status of about 3,500 Libyan residents.

West Germany: Expelled 17 Libyan diplomats and ordered the People's Bureau to cut six non-Libyan employees from its staff. The three Western powers in Berlin - the United States, England and France - have banned People's Bureau diplomats in East Berlin from visiting the Western sector of the city.

France: Expelled two Libyan diplomats for their alleged involvement in a plot to attack people waiting for visas at the U.S. Embassy Turkey: Filed charges against the consul general and two other members of the People's Bureau for involvement in an abortive bombing of an American officers club in Ankara.

Belgium: Announced the expulsion of seven diplomats and two staff members of the People's Bureau in Brussels and said the remaining staff cannot travel outside the city without permission.

Denmark: Ordered the bureau to reduce its staff by five. Britain: Expelled 20 Libyan students. The People's Bureau in London was closed in 1984 after a policewoman was killed by bullets fired from the embassy.

Spain: Expelled six members of the People's Bureau, five Libyan teachers and three students.

Portugal: Reduced by five the number of officially accredited Libyans at the bureau and has required Libyan diplomats to seek authorization for travel 18.8 miles (30 kilometers) outside Lisbon.

Experimental airship crashes

LAKEHURST, N.J.-(AP) - A massive experimental airship built from a blimp and four helicopters crashed after one copter malfunctioned, killing a crewman during a test flight near where the Hindenburg exploded 49 years ago.

Four other crewmen and a firefighter on the ground sustained only cuts and bruises when the 343-foot-long, 10-story Heli-Stat crashed Tuesday night at the U.S. Naval Air Engineering Station, authorities

The craft, sponsored by the U.S. Forest Service, was designed for logging remote areas with a minimum of environmental damage. But some federal agencies criticized it for structural problems and for running behind schedule at a cost of $34 million, more than three times the original projection of $10.7 million.

The Heli-Stat, which had never flown horizontally, was hovering at about 40 feet when one of the four helicopters malfunctioned and lost power, said Nick Grand, a U.S. Naval Air Engineering Center

Hereford can be considered similar to any Panhandle community. This town of almost 18,000 people has two major banks, three pharmacies, three new car dealers, one radio station, and as of this morning, two newspapers.

The Hereford Chronicle, located at 128 Main, held its ribbon cutting ceremonies this morning with members of the local business community and Chamber of Commerce present.

The Chronicle's publisher, Joe Soliz Jr., said that the publication will be a tabloid size paper printed entirely in Spanish. The paper will be published weekly and Soliz plans to distribute the paper free throughout the city. Plans also have been made to distribute the paper in Friona and Dimmitt.

"I felt that there was a communications gap between the community leaders and the Hispanics of the community, hopefully we can bridge that gap with the Chronicle,." said the 22-year-old Soliz.

Smithsonian insect zoo seeks huge cockroach

DALLAS (AP) - A Smithsonian Institution insect zoo official wants to see if Texas' reputation for producing bigger and better breeds is true.

Sally Love, a curator in Washington D.C., has requested first shot at the burly champion of a Texas roach contest for an entomological exhibit.

The winner of the "Largest Cockroach" contest, which carries a $1,000 grand prize, will have to size up to more than 200 of its kin entered before the deadline Monday, said sponsor Michael Bohdan of The Pest Shop-Bizzy Bees Pest Control Co. in

Ms. Love said the zoo already has about four species of cockroaches.

She said one specimen now on display, known scientifically as megablabberus, grows to more than 4 inches long.

The insect zoo attracts about 4,000 over him and stack heavy books on kinds of insects, she said. The Texas contribution will get special billing with a label explaining its history, she said.

Monday was the last day to enter contestants and Dallas-area residents brought the creatures in popcorn tubs, peanut butter jars and beer mugs, Bohdan said Tuesday.

"What's come out of the woodwork is people have written poems about this contest," Bohdan said. He quoted a few lines from one of the roach odes, "In size or in significance - they hatch out by the score - why them hearty little critters - they've outlived the dinosaur." One captive, named "Roach" was brought in a shoebox.

"To catch ours we had to put this people daily and exhibits 60 different top of it ... We were late for church trying to run around and catch him," said Laura Graul, 26.

A strong contender was "Homer" who was nabbed in a Texas Woman's University kitchenette. Homer measured in at about three inches.

head the advertising department, and Joe Mendez Jr. to work as the business manager for the paper.

This is not the first business venture Soliz has tried. He is currently the owner of Joe's County Club on East Highway 60. Soliz has owned the club for just over a year.

"Our main interests will lie in local news, we will also dedicate pages to Friona and Dimmitt news. I feel that people are interested in local news."

Soliz plans to print his first paper on July 16, and plans to feature a business person of the week, local news and sports, and local events.

The paper will be printed at North Plains Printing in Hereford.

"The business person of the week feature will emphasize successful local businessmen. There are a lot of local successful Hispanics in the community," said Soliz.

"While I was growing up in this town, I could see the successful people work. I think I am successful because of them." Soliz said that the Chronicle will be a totally non-political, non-biased newspaper. "We just want to give everybody a chance to find out what is going on in our community.'

Guerrillas blamed in bombing

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) - The government blamed the outlawed African National Congress for a bus-stop bomb explosion that injured six woman and two small children. It was the 10th bombing since a nationwide state of emergency was imposed June 12. Injured Tuesday were five white women, a black woman and two white children - a 2-week-old baby, reported badly hurt, and a 3-year-old, slightly injured.

The ANC, the main guerrilla movement trying to topple the South African government, has refused to confirm or deny responsibility for any of the recent explosions that have killed three people and in-Bureau for Information spokesman Leon Mellet said Tuesday's attack was "in line with the adopted policy of the ANC of indiscriminate attacks." Police said the bomb was placed in a garbage can. A motorcycle shop was wrecked, and windows were shattered.

Irrigation legislation urged by farm subcommitteee

AUSTIN (AP) - The 1987 Legislature must do something about a $200 million irrigation program tentatively approved by voters, a Senate subcommittee was told.

"This comes up next year because the bond program was written to expire in 1989 if the Legislature does not act," Dr. Herbert Grubb, diector of planning for the Texas Water Development Board, told the Senate Subcommittee on Agriculture Tues-

Already under way, he said, is a $5 million pilot program to help Texas farmers and ranchers be more efficient in irrigation methods.

Grubb said the 1985 Legislature passed the constitutional amendment as part of the Texas Water Plan, but did not pass a state law that would put it into effect. The law change must be approved by twothirds of each house before bonds could be sold for the irrigation improvements.

Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Amarillo, chairman of the subcommittee, asked if loans would be available to farmers who want to conserve water by changing from irrigation to dryland farming methods.

Grubb said the legislation creating the pilot program apparently was intended to allow loans for dryland farming as well as brush control but lawyers told them the way the bill was written the loas can be given only for regular irrigation.

Land Commissioner Garry Mauro told the the subcommittee he would not ask for any changes in the new Farm and Ranch Finance Program, which is administered by the Veterans Land Board.

Under the bond program, approved by voters in 1985, eligible farmers and ranchers could borrow up to $100,000 at long-term, low-interest rates for the purchase of land. The borrower must be a Texas resident for at least five years and have made at least 35 percent of his income the last three years from a farm or

Mauro said his department would begin accepting applications Sept. 1 and "we expect to place the first loan this fall."

Sarpalius asked if Mauro would recommend to the Legislature that the loans be used for operating costs as well as purchase of land.

"I would hope it would always be a land program, like the veterans land program, where the loan is secured by the land," Mauro said. "I am not for changing it to operating expenses. There are other funds for "This is something you may want to ask the Legislature to amend as soon as possible to get these programs," Grubb said.

WASHINGTON (AP) - New guidelines have been issued to help the $65 billion Farm Credit System lower its interest rates to hardpressed borrowers.

The Farm Credit Administration, which oversees the national system, said each of the system's banks or districts can offer "a wide choice of lower loan rates with more attractive terms to qualified borrowers."

However, the FCA's board said Tuesday, the weighted average rate to all borrowers must not decline by more than one-half of 1 percent from current loan rates.

The guidelines require the system's institutions, which include federal land bank and production credit operations, "to reduce rates as cost-effectively as possible to stem losses in loan volume and to correct borrower relations problems and deficiencies" cited by the FCA.

Frank W. Naylor Jr., chairman of the FCA board, encouraged the system's banks and districts to submit their interest rate proposals as soon as possible.

Naylor also cited a need for system lenders to improve relations with borrowers by adequately informing them of policies on loan restructuring and on elibibility requirements for different interest rates.

The lower interest rates are not required by the new orders, but if a system bank or district chooses to lower its rates the guidelines must be followed, Naylor told a reporter. "We expect all of them to do so," he said. "This is what they asked for."

Bob Poteet, executive vice president of the Texas Cotton Association, one of the building's remaining tenants, remembers visiting the exchange in the late 1950s.

Last merchant moves

"It was a very bustling place," he said. "When I was growing up in West Texas on a cotton farm I used to hear the growers talk about taking their samples to the Dallas cotton exchan je."

The exchange was closed in the mid-1960s when advances in technology meant cotton traders could punch up the markets on desktop computers, Poteet said. "The cotton firms that are here, of course, still operate, but not many of them are left."

Officials with the last big trader, Esteve Brothers & Co., selfdescribed as one of the top 20 merchants in the country, said Monday they will move out to a new building in August.

In its heyday, the cotton exchange floor hummed with activity. Western Union was set up on one side of the floor to transmit the latest information from the New York Cotton Exchange. The information was posted up on a big board and principals from the firms watched the market.

Another wall held a bank of telephones used to give orders to buy

Poteet credits the decline of cotton's influence in Dallas to technological advancements making it possible to harvest cotton with fewer workers, the boll weevil, imports, synthetic fibers and the development of new grasses making cattle grazing popular in East Texas.

Poteet said Texas cotton output has stayed stable, with the state's crop comprising about one-third of the national total at 4 million bales annually.

"It merely takes less people to handle the bales than it used to," he Synthetics cut into the cotton market during the 1960s and 1970s, but the population expanded, keeping the demand for cotton level, he said.

The natural fiber craze of this decade has boosted domestic demand, he said. In the early 1970s, cotton was used for 29 percent of domestic apparel. Figures released this week show cotton making up 40 percent of all apparel produced in the United States, he said.

But the industry has shifted from the blacklands surrounding Dallas, partly because of the scourge of the boll weevil and partly because of the development of new strains of grasses making cattle grazing a more attractive option, he said.

Midyear prompts look at crop situation

WASHINGTON (AP) - It's midvear on the calendar, but not in much of agriculture, where time is counted by crops. The new wheat marketing year began on June 1, but the 1986-87 corn year doesn't commence until Sept. 1, for example.

However, when July 1 rolls around it prompts a look at where the crop situation may be headed. The Agriculture Department will issue new winter wheat output figures July 11, but for corn, soybeans, cotton and many other crops it will be August before official 1986 production estimates are ready.

Meanwhile, the government keeps tabs through its Joint Agricultural Weather Facility, which is operated by USDA and the Commerce Department's National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The facility's weekly report does not include production estimates, but it does give some general information about weather conditions and how certain crops are coming along.

In this week's report, issued Tuesday, the facility noted the drought was still hanging on in the Southeast during the last week of June, causing crop stress and stunted growth.

The winter wheat crop, which was planted last fall across much of the Midwest, Great Plains and South. was said to have been 57 percent harvested by July 1, compared with 51 percent a year ago and the normal pace of 30 percent.

Corn, planted this spring, was reported to be 5 percent silked, a critical stage of development in which pollination occurs and kernels form. Normally, only 2 percent of the corn is silked at this time.

"Corn was mostly good to fair in the Corn Belt and central and northern Great Plains," the report said. "Crop conditions declined rapidly in the Southeast to mostly poor to fair."

This year's soybean crop was said to be 96 percent planted, slightly ahead of normal. Seeding lagged in Wheat supports for the 1986 harvest were cut to $2.40 per bushel from $3.30 in 1985. The reductions were authorized by Congress late last year in the Food Security Act.

According to the strategy designed by Congress and supported by the Reagan administration, the lower grain prices will encourage foreign countries to increase their purchases of U.S. commodities. With larger exports, surplus U.S. stocks would be reduced and prices increased at the farm level.

SWC officials plan to start or revamp drug testing

DALLAS (AP) - Southwest Conference officials say drugs on campus is a growing problem and it's time to do more to combat it.

Officials from five of the nine SWC schools told the Dallas Morning News on Tuesday they will either revamp or augment their drug testing programs this fall.

Three are still working out details for new drug-testing programs that will be ready by August.

Information at the University of Texas was not available.

Recent cocaine-related deaths of Len Bias, first-round draft choice of the Boston Celtics, and Cleveland Browns defensive back Don Rogers may have heightened the awareness of drug abuse in athletics, officials

More than a third of the 284 NCAA Division I schools have drug testing programs. But NCAA executive director Walter Byers said last week that not enough is being done by the universities to prevent drug abuse.

About 20 to 25 percent of college athletes use marijuana and-or cocaine an average of once a week, said Dr. Robert Murphy, chairman of the NCAA committee on drug education.

"I'd love to tell you that figure sounds high, but I'd be naive if I did," said Texas Tech athletic trainer Ken Murray.

TCU athletic director Frank Windegger said its more than just a

"Maybe what we need is a fear concept," Windegger said. "A lot of people are fearful of a nuclear war. But I don't have any greater fear than that of drugs and what they are

Arkansas is entering its fifth year of drug testing, longer than any other SWC school except Texas A&M.

Dean Weber, athletic trainer at Arkansas, said he typically finds 10 percent of Razorback athletes test positive for drug use. "But there's probably another 10 to 20 percent you don't find," he said.

Weber said the key to a successful drug testing program is not the incoming test administered to all athletes, but the random tests during the school year.

"Not too many kids are dumb enough to get high on something right before they come in to take that test at the beginning of the year," Weber said. "In our August tests in the last two years, only two athletes have tested positive out of the 320."

Arkansas basketball players William Mills and Kenny Hutchinson tested positive and were admitted to a drug and alcohol rehabilitation center in Fayettville.

Five A&M football players were dismissed from the team in 1980 after an alleged search of their rooms for illegal drugs.

Former TCU wide receiver James Maness was cut by the Chicago Bears after twice testing positive for Officials say that confidentiality is important in conducting tests.

'What we're trying to tell the athletes is that, if we catch you, we're going to put you in a program, not kick you out," SMU trainer Cash Birdwell said. "Because of that, we've had some athletes voluntarily come forward to accept counseling.'

Show pitches Padres to 7-4 victory over Astros

By The Associated Press

San Diego Padres manager Steve Boros says Eric Show still isn't pitching at full speed because of a sore elbow, but the Houston Astros wouldn't want to see him pitching any better.

Show pitched five innings Tuesday night and his Padres teammates pounded out 12 hits to take a 7-4 victory over the Astros and move to within 21/2 games of the San Francisco Giants in the National League West rollercoaster race.

Show's elbow has been giving him problems for the past three weeks and the Houston Astros have given him problems throughout his career.

"The Astros have been the toughest team on me over the years," said Show, whose liftime record against Houston improved to

"He still didn't throw the way he can," said Boros, who pulled Show after five innings. "He's not the real Eric Show."

Asked about his tender elbow, Show said, "I knew I was going to have to hit the corners. I wasn't going to overpower anybody. It's sometimes more fun to see if you can get people out when you have to trick

The Padres broke game open in the sixth with a one-out walk by Tim Flannery, followed by three consecutive singles that knocked Houston starter Mark Knudson out of the game. San Diego scored four times in the inning.

Astros manager Hal Lanier agreed that the National League West is hec-

"Nobody told me the race was going to be easy, but then nobody told me it would be like this either," quipped Lanier after the loss, the second in two nights to Padres.

"It doesn't matter who is in first in July," Lanier said, "but who is in first at the end. It's too early to be watching the scoreboard."

Garry Templeton collected his fourth three-hit game of the road trip and his second in a row against Houston while raising his RBI total to 19 in the last 19 games.

The Astros made early noise, loading the bases in the first on two singles and a walk, but Tony Gwnn made a great one-handed catch in the alley on Jose Cruz' liner to end he notentially his inning for the Astros. times," said Astros first baseman Glenn Davis, whose eighth inning homer gave him 17 for the year.

"If we just keep playing consistently, we just have to forget about the day before and give that extra little notch," Davis said.

The Padres had their second straight 12-hit night. In two games against the Astros, San Diego has scored 16 runs on 24 hits with 16 men left on base.

In other National League games,

Philadelphia edged Pittsburgh 5-4, San Francisco defeated Atlanta 9-6 in 10 innings; and New York edged St. Louis 2-1. The Montreal-Chicago game was suspended after seven scoreless innings because of darkness and the Los Angeles-Cincinnati game was rained out. Phillies 5, Pirates 4

In a game that had just about everything, including a trick defensive formation by the Philadelphia Phillies, the Pittsburgh Pirates were left with nothing but another number in the loss column.

"We had our chances," said Pirates Manager Jim Leyland, whose team stranded 15 runners in Tuesday night's 5-4, 12-inning loss to the Phillies. "They tried to give the game to us and we wouldn't take it."

Before Mike Schmidt decided things with a 12th-inning homer off Larry McWilliams, 1-5, the Phillies used an unorthodox five-man infield to turn a double play in the 10th, after reliever Steve Bedrosian had wildpitched home the tying runs on successive pitches.

The Phillies eventually overcame two rally-killing baserunning mistakes, four errors and three runners caught stealing to hand the Pirates their 26th loss in 41 home

Giants 9, Braves 6

Candy Maldonado, who forced extra innings with a pinch-hit homer in the ninth, singled in two runs with two outs in the top of the 10th to lead San Francisco over Atlanta.

Maldonado's single made it 8-6 and another run also scored on the play when the ball got past right fielder Terry Harper for an error. The victory snapped a two-game losing streak for the Giants and a five-game winning streak for Atlanta.

Jeff Robinson, 5-2, got the victory with two scoreless innings of relief. The loss went to Joe Johnson, 6-7. Mets 2, Cardinals 1

Mookie Wilson hit a home run and New York took advantage of baserunning mistakes by St. Louis to beat the Cardinals for the sixth straight time at Busch Stadium.

The Cardinals' baserunning mistakes helped New York lefthander Sid Fernandez, 10-2, weather four hits in the fifth inning and extend his winning streak to five games. Roger McDowell pitched the last two innings for his seventh save...

The game between Montreal and Chicago will be resumed prior to the start of today's regularly scheduled game. The contest was delayed for 20 minutes in the fourth inning and continued in mist and fog while Montreal's Andy McGaffigan and Chicago's Scott Sanderson were locked in a scoreless pitching duel.

McGaffigan allowed four hits and struck out seven while Sanderson, who was lifted for a pinch hitter inthe bottom of the seventh inning, allowed two hits and also struck out

Rangers regain A.L. West division lead

The Texas Rangers were back in first place today in the American League West thanks to some basics, good pitching and defense, on their part and a little help from the Chicago White Sox.

The Rangers, who had lost six of their last eight games, snapped out of their doldrums Tuesday night with a 5-0 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Thet moved back into first place about two hours later when the Chicago White Sox defeated the California Angels, 5-3.

Veteran knuckleballer Charlie Hough, 8-3, provided the pitching and the Rangers infield turned four double plays and made four other spectacular plays in the victory over Min-

Hough, notching his first shoutout in more than a year, was backed by home runs by Pete O'Brien, his ninth, and Pete Incaviglia, his 14th, in snapping the Twins' four-game win streak.

Hough allowed five hits, walked three and struck out two in besting Twins right-hander Mark Portugal,

"I don't think Charlie had his real good stuff in the first few innings," said Rangers manager Bobby Valentine, "but he got better as the game went along, and the defense played great behind him."

The infield turned four double plays in the first five innings to keep the Twins off the board.

"I didn't throw the ball all that well," said Hough, winner of six of his last seven decisions, "but the harder they whacked it, the better the defense was behind me. They made some spectacular plays."

Twins manager Ray Miller gave an exasperated sigh when discussing the trouble his players had in handling Hough's knuckler.

"We did everything we could against him," said Miller. "You try everything you've got and nothing seems to work. Guys like him are frustrating.

"When it comes time to pick the pitchers for the All-Star game, I hope they've got him in there. He deserves

O'Brien, who had a tough June. gave Hough all the runs he needed with a 2-run shot in the fourth. The Rangers got a run on three singles in the sixth, and Incaviglia homered with a man on off reliever Neal Heaton in the eighth.

"We don't usually get Charlie too many runs to work with," said O'Brien. "But we got him six in the first inning against Seattle and he kind of went to sleep. We didn't want to get him in his comfort zone too early tonight." Hough didn't allow a hit over the final four innings, retiring 12 of the last 13 batters he faced.

"It was great to get an effort like that out of him tonight," said Valentine, "because our bullpen needed a

At 41, and admittedly on the last stop of a brilliant major league career, Tom Seaver suddenly is one of the boys on the Boston Red Sox.

Winless since April 23 and emotionally drained by prolonged trade talks, Seaver proved to himself and the Red Sox Tuesday night that he still can pitch.

"You don't feel part of a club until you actually contribute, and now I have the feeling I belong," Seaver said after pitching seven innings to earn his 307th career victory in the Red Sox' 9-7 decision over the Toronto-Blue Jays.

These guys have a very good thing going for them here and it's nice to show I can contribute," said

"Sure, he's lost something with the years, but he's still a surgeon at his craft," Boston Manager John McNamara said.

Seaver, acquired from the Chicago White Sox in a trade for outfielder Steve Lyons on Sunday, was given a standing ovation by a crowd of more 32,000 as he walked in from the bullpen after pregame warmup.

"The reception was very warm, nothing short of spectacular from the teammates through the fans," he said. "It's like everyone saying, 'welcome to our world.' I've been down this road before and you try to block things out. However, if you're not emotionally moved in such a situation, you never will be. I was very aware of what was going on."

With the crowd cheering, Seaver, 0-4 lifetime against Toronto, took the mound with a 2-6 record and a 4.38 earned run average, compared with a 2.84 lifetime ERA for 20 years in the majors.

Physically fine, but worried about his emotional state on the mound, Seaver had to battle his way through a rough first inning, allowing one run, a double, a single and a walk.

"I told him when he got back to the dugout that would be the worst inning he'd have all year with us because of all he has been through the last couple of days," McNamara

"When I got through that inning, I three more runs to score, thought, 'Thank goodness, that's over," Seaver said. "Then several of the guys came up to me and said, 'OK, that's out of the way. Now let's go get 'em."

That's exactly what the Red Sox did, taking a 4-1 lead on Dwight Evans' three-run double and Rich Gedman's double with two out in the Boston first. The Red Sox added three more runs in the third and two unearned runs in the fifth, when Willie Upshaw tied a major league record for first baseman by committing three errors in one inning.

Seaver, once a power pitcher with major league records of 10 seasons with 200 or more strikeouts and 10 consecutive strikeouts in a game, was tagged for two runs in the fourth and one in the fifth. He retired the Blue Jays in order in only one inning, the sixth, but was tough in the clutch as Toronto left nine runners on base before he retired with a 9-4 lead after seven innings.

'This is very gratifying," Seaver said. "My goal is to pitch seven innings and allow three runs or less. I: missed by one run, but I'm pleased. At this stage of my career, I'm very happy to pitch seven innings. It means I've kept the club in the game."

Softball tournament set

A softball tournament has been scheduled in Plainview on July 11-13 to benefit a Wayland Baptist University athlete stricken with the Guillain-Barre Syndrome.

The slowpitch softball tournament will benefit Deanna Shelton, a sophomore from Fritch and a member of the Flying Queens basketball team.

Shelton is a 5-3 guard who has been hospitalized at High Plains Baptist Hospital in Amarillo since May 10. She was in the hospital's intensive care unit until just recently.

Guillain-Barre Syndrome, medical experts note, is a paralyzing disease, from which full recovery time from the rare affliction varies from patient to patient.

Wayland Baptist University student Scott Green, who is helping organize the tournament, said, "Deanna's extended hospital stay has left her family with tremendous hospital bills and no insurance. We're encouraging all area softball teams to help us help her family by participating in the tournament."

NEW YORK (AP) - Boston Red Sox pitcher Roger Clemens, who was 6-0 with a 1.44 earned run average in June, and Minnesota Twins first baseman Kent Hrbek, who hit .400 with eight homers and 27 RBI, were named the American League's Pitcher and Player of the Month.

Clemens has a 14-0 record, only the fifth time a major league pitcher has opened a season with that many wins. Hrbek had five doubles and a triple to go along with his eight Frome runs, giving him 69 total bases for the

Becker fined for over-sized advertising

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) -Wimbledon men's champion Boris Becker, who signed a contract at the start of this year's championships to promote Coca Cola, has been fined $1,000 for displaying an over-size advertisement on his shirts.

Tournament officials said the advertisement was on two shirts the 18-year-old West German wore during his fourth round victory over Mike Pernfors of Sweden on Monday. He also wore an over-size advertisement on his jacket during the warmup, officials said in a report on the in-

BIRD'S BULLSEYE

BOSTON (AP) - Bird-watchers in Boston, and they include his Boston Celtic teammates, insist there is nothing that Larry Bird, the multitalented basketball star, can't do.

On one occasion in the 1985-86 season,

K.C. Jones of the Celtics scheduled a practice session but stipulated that he would cancel it if any member of the team could sink a shot from mid-court.

Bird asked for the ball, went to midcourt and let fly with a long rainbow shot. It went through the hoop. "Nobody likes to practice," Larry said,

NFL executive testifies

Bidding wars caused USFL financial woes

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Football League is trying to prove that the United States Football League caused its own financial problems by forcing a bidding war for Longtime NFL executive Jim Finks testified that quarterback Vince Evans was an example of how USFL policies, rather than NFL efforts, brought on the younger league's economic woes.

Evans, who Finks described as "an average NFL quarterback," had his salary increased $446,750 when he jumped from the NFL's Chicago Bears to the USFL's Chicago Blitz in 1984, Finks said Tuesday.

Finks claimed the outlandish spending by the younger league had "a very dramatic impact" on its clubs.

"Either it forces the teams to try to spend a lot of money and keep up with the Joneses, or they go out of business," he said.

Finks, a long-time executive with the Minnesota Vikings and Bears and now the president and general manager of the New Orleans Saints, testified that Evans' 1984 salary with the Blitz, including bonuses, was

With the Bears, Evans was paid $180,000 a year.

In its suit, the USFL claims the NFL tried to force the younger league out of business by keeping the USFL off television and trying to bankrupt financially weak teams by driving player salaries upward.

Finks, the NFL's third witness since it began presenting its defense last Thursday, said the bidding war was declared from the inception of the USFL and it was the younger league offering the high salaries.

He said that, following the 1984 season, Evans' salary again jumped with the Denver Gold to $726,750 in

During his testimony, Finks told the court of conversations he had with former Oakland Invaders coach and general manager John Ralston. Finks said Ralston told him that the USFL owners wanted to play in the spring and needed to have a salary cap and he was upset when some clubs failed to follow the reported $1.5 million spending limit set before the first season.

Finks also became the third former NFL executive to testify he was offered the USFL commissioner's post, joining NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle and Oakland Raiders managing general partner Al Davis, both of whom were called to the witness stand by the USFL.

Earlier in the day, current New Orleans Coach Jim Mora said the Saints, which had a 5-11 record last season under Coach Bum Phillips, were better than the 1984 Philadelphia Stars, who Mora coach-

Mora, named as coach of the Saints in January, coached the Stars into all three USFL title games, losing in 1983 and winning in 1984 and Under cross-examination by USFL attorney Harvey Myerson, Mora conceded he previously had proclaimed the USFL a "class operation" with "excellent caliber" players.

U.S. basketball team defeats Uruguay 98-88

LYON, France (AP) - North Carolina guard Kenny Smith, one of four players who missed the team bus and had to run over a mile to the arena, led the United States with 21 points in a 98-88 victory over Uruguay in a tuneup game for this weekend's world championships.

In addition to Smith, Tyrone Bogues of Wake Forest, Derrick McKey of Alabama and Armon Gilliam of Nevada-Las Vegas missed the bus after not receiving wake-up calls. Coach Lute Olson of Arizona had the team bus leave without the four players and played the first half of the game with just eight players as the Americans took a 47-45 lead.

New drug for hypertension causes fewer side effects

Hypertension specialists at Baylor College of Medicine's DeBakey Heart Center report that a new drug for treaiting high blood pressure, enalapril, is easier to take and causes fewer side effects than previously used drugs.

More than 90 percent of Baylor patients given enalapril have responded well to the drug since its approval by the Food and Drug Administration in February 1986, said Addison Taylor, M.D., associate professor of medicine.

"The number one problem in treating high blood pressure is that patients forget, or don't think it is important to take their hypertension medication regularly," Taylor said. "Enalapril offers a tremendous advantage in that the patient only has to remember to take it once a day rather than two or three as with

Also, he said, enalapril does not contain the chemical found in other anti-hypertension drugs of its type that can cause kidney and bone marrow damage.

other commonly used drugs."

"Another appealing feature of enalapril is the absense of side effects like depression, lethargy, nightmares, headaches and memory loss, which occur frequently with high blood prsesure medications that work in the brain," Taylor said.

Baylor was one of the first centers to begin testing enalapril in 1981. Taylor said that since then the drug has become widely available and is gaining in popularity. It is expected to eventually replace many other high blood pressure medications.

Sold under the brand name "Vasotec," enalapril is an ACE (Angiotensin Conveting Eynzme) inhibitor, which means it decreases the body's production of angiotensin II, a protein that produces hormones that retain salt and cause blood vessels to constrict.

"In our quest for the ideal high blood pressure drug, we can expect the development of more ACE inhibitors like enalapril," Taylor said. "In fact we believe the 1980's will be the decade of the ACE inhibitor, since there are already eight similar drugs being studied right now."

Beginning Experience planned July 18-20

The Beginning Experience, a weekend for separated, divorced and widowed individuals, is scheduled for July 18, 19 and 20 at the Bishop DeFalco Retreat Center.

The purpose of the weekend is to help widowed, separated, and divorced people to start over, to help wounds to heal and make a new beginning in their lives. The program stresses that divorce doesn't mean failure. It is planned to emphasize self-discovery, and to help people come to terms with themselves.

A specially trained team of peers leads the participants through a simple program of presentation, private reflection and group dialogue. Priests and ministers are available for counseling if desired.

The weekend is structured so that a person can talk and discuss things freely with others if they wish to. If a person prefers to be quiet, no one will intrude on his privacy.

The retreat will begin at 7 p.m. July 18 and close at 4 p.m. July 20. It is open to people of all denominations. The cost, including tuition, room, and meals, is $55.

Contact Beginning Experience, P.O. Box 3993, Amarillo, Tx. 79116, 806-374-4800, or the Bishop DeFalco Retreat Center, 2100 N. Spring, Amarillo, 806-383-1811.

Words that make doctors tremble

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

The French sometimes are a dotty lot. In 1975, they passed a law forbidding the use of English words to sell or promote products. I see this as an extension of a peculiar tendency: an absolute refusal to speak anything but French to foreigners. I used to have a fair grasp of French, but I can remember struggling with a declension in we'd be. We are not victims of a psysation shrugged his shoulders, pursed his lips and cast his eyes heavenward. "Je ne comprend pas, monsieur," he exclaimed, but I knew darned well he spoke English and French better than Anyhow, the French passed thislaw, and I would not have bet a sou that it would be enforced. But enforced it was, primarily through the efforts of a powerful group of private citizens. According to news reports, the group has collected civil damages from about 40 sources, including the Paris Opera (for selling English-language programs at a performance of 'Bubbling Brown Sugar'') and Trans-World Airlines (for distributing boarding passes in English).

Judging from the degree of foreboding and trepidation, the French perceive English words as semantic termites, literally nibbling away at the supporting beams of Gallic culture. Americanisms may force the Republic "to lose our identity as a nation - give up our very soul" was the way Jack (not Jacques!) Lang, minister of culture, put it. Mon dieu!

Each month, the Secretariat for Technology and Communication publishes a blacklist of banned English words — as many as 100 a month. French TV and radio are urged and expected to favor French-speaking entertainers. The High Commission for the French Language labors mightily to mint new words to replace the imported variety. "Disc-jockey," "computer," "joystick" and "blackout" are words that are now fini. The French are making an heroic effort to avoid what has been termed "Anglo-Saxon

I think the whole situation is amusing, because Americanisms aren't go-ing to be wished away; let's face it, the words are catchy, blunt and to the

I believe this Franco-paranoia is be-ginning to affect increasing numbers of U.S. doctors. On our side of the Atlantic, many M.D.s would like to see lantic, many M.D.s would like to see certain words banned from English: "malpractice," "incompetent" and "impaired," for instance. "Malpractice" is a dreaded word; it makes the skin crawl, the juices flow and the gut contract. "Incompetent" and "impaired," when applied to physicians, are adjectives that are truly terrifying the terms provoke fear because ing; the terms provoke fear because each and every doctor is a potential candidate and the profession, as a whole, has been alternately unwilling and unable to do much about colleagues who are impaired or incompe-tent. "Mistake" is another word that doctors would like to see stricken from the language; every practicing physician is only one step from that one each day. Some doctors, who would like to ban the clauses "I am sorry" and "I don't know," believe that if they say these words, the patient's next visit will be to an attorney.

As I was sitting in a staff meeting at the hospital last month, I listened to one of my associates define doctors as one of my associates define doctors as

"a bunch of uptight guys wondering who's going to s---w them next." I swear that's a quote. Aside from being mouthwatering hors d'oeuvres of Anglo-Saxonism, the statement says a lot about the type of fare now being served up at doctors' professional tables. In my opinion, many of us are angry, resentful and frustrated, a far cry from the dedicated and considerate healers we once upon a time thought from a medical-industrial complex. We live in the Era of Exasperation. Some doctors say that medical practice is no longer fun. Fewer physicians are encouring their children to enter Careers in medicine.

However, things are tough all over.

Everyone has problems. Nobody I know seems to be having an easy time. Nonetheless, medically, unpleasant words are no more likely to go away than the short, punchy Anglo-Saxon guerrilla words that continue to infiltrate the Gallic establishment. I'm afraid we doctors and the French are iust going to have to accept reality and learn to adapt to change. N'est-ce as, guys?

DEAR DR. GOTT - Quite often I pass gas both ways. During these attacks I get sore gums and a burning sensation up through my chest, have hemmorhoids and pass a light-yellow stool. Could this be an ulcer or a diet problem?

DEAR READER — Your problem is probably dietary. However, your symptoms are somewhat unusual, so check with your doctor.

DEAR DR. GOTT - I am a 78year-old woman and have been hav-ing problems with yellowish vaginal discharge. My Pap smear and pelvic exam were OK. My doctor says this is normal for older women. What do you

DEAR READER - Although some whitish vaginal discharge is common in postmenopausal women, a discharge of the type you describe does not sound normal to me. In my opin-ion, you need further testing to define this troublesome problem. If your doctor is convinced your discharge is "normal," request a referral to a gy-necologist for a second opinion.

DEAR DR. GOTT - What problems can occur because of a reduction of white blood cells? Does this condition indicate a serious disease?

DEAR READER - White blood cells are the body's infection fighters; therefore, any reduction in their number is cause for concern. There is dayto-day variation in white-cell counts, and some innocuous viral infections (like mononucleosis) are associated with temporary reduction in the white-cell population. Physicians take very seriously any severe or longstanding low white-cell count, because such a reduction can make the patient extremely vulnerable to any and all infections. In my opinion, a persistent low white-cell count requires medical evaluation.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have had a problem with my ears for two years. They are damp and itchy deep inside. My doctor says he can't see anything wrong. I do have allergy problems. Could this be the cause of the itching and earaches?

DEAR READER - Allergies could certainly be the cause of your ear problems, as could a chronic skin infection (like yeast).

Now You're Cookin'

By CINDY SMITH Staff Writer

The Fourth of July is here and it's popping with good things to eat.

Summer being officially announced, the Fourth is a time to celebrate the ancestry of America, including good ole' down home cookin', one of America's best.

William Mandrell, 28, holds an associate degree as a chef in culinary arts. What does he plan on making for the Fourth? Food, and lot's of it.

Working as salad chef in various specialized restaurants, Mandrell averaged 23 different variations of salads a day.

"I kept 23 salads such as your basics, pasta, egg, macaroni, pea, strawberry, and mixed fruit in stock to be served regularly. And usually, depending on what the establishment wanted to offer, I would make seven or eight feature entree salads to add to the basics each day," explained Mandrell.

He said one of his favorite salads is strawberry romanoff and fruit salad. "The sauce on the fruit salad is called poppy seed dressing and it's a lot of fun to make and it tastes great," smiled Mandrell.

"The poppy seed dressing is made of poppy seeds, molasses, sugar, lemon juice and sour cream giving it a rich flavor," he explained.

The poppy seed is drizzled over most of one's fruit salad, "but watch out," said Mandrell, "it's very rich and sweet!"

Mandrell admitted that he mostly enjoys experimenting with food but added that a restaurant is no place to experiment. He said the best place for this is in one's own kitchen.

Mandrell has also been noted for his culinary arts demonstrated at Sam's Town Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas, Nev., which many residents here may have been.

In a nearby town, Mandrell as head chef said he had truckers who became big tippers and regular customers because they preferred his preparation of good ole' beef

Working for different eating establishments, Mandrell noted that ling something, she has her own each employer had thier own way of preparation down to the way the food is served.

"Table arrangement is very important," he said, "making sure everything is in place and is just right.

"You'd hate to serve a fabulous meal and it turn out sorry simply because you didn't take time to set the table right," he said disgusted by the thought.

"The table would just have to be right or it wouldn't be right at all," Mandrell added. "When it comes to cooking. I'm very much a perfectionist or I wouldn't be cooking at all."

Mandrell explained that people are going to be eating that food "and you shouldn't have to say 'well, try thisthis is great'. Let them see for theirselves and that's the biggest compliment to me.

The man doesn't like to have to prod his guests into trying a dish, he thinks the way looks at first glance should make them want to try it. Mandrell's highest compliment that makes his ears ring is, 'I've never tried anything better,' or, 'there's no comparison,' as most chefs feel likewise.

This chef doesn't go by a'recipe and said he never has. He also mentioned that he has a secret ingredient in everything he prepares.

Mandrell grinned wickedly as he recalled the best dinner he had served. "I served shrimp cocktail for the appetizer, then a shrimp salad, and for the main course, I served shrimp creole."

He laughed and added "My guests were so stuffed they didn't want any desert- and I'm glad because I had made Napoleon and it didn't go with the dinner." Mandrell laughed some more while remembering what a close call that was.

"Everybody has mistakes," he chuckled, "and that was mine."

Being honest, he said he didn't know what went with a shrimp dinner. "I don't know- maybe a shrimpy alamode?"

Hobbies for Mandrell include an assortment of things. "My first hobby is messin' with food," he smiled. His second hobby is gardening which, of course, is related to his love of cooking. Gardening for Mandrell includes growing a wide selection of flowers, plants, fruit trees, and yard

Growing up in the 1960's he is also intrigued with poetry and music. "Being alone in the woods I can write my tail off, but mainly I feel close to God."

For every person there is a dream. "My dream is to someday, hopefully, open my own restaurant," Mandrell

"It's going to take a lot of selfdiscipline and enthusiasm but it's also going to be a lot of hard work for the kind of restaurant I want to open," he added.

Mandrell said his most peaceful moments have been spent with his grandmother who lives in Dimmitt. She is also responsible for his interest in cooking.

"She's taught me a lot about cooking. My grandmother's always canngarden and always sends the home with hot peppers, pickled carrots, and pickled celery," said Mandrell admiring the woman.

Right now she's also working on preserves to send with her grandson. Mandrell boasted of respect for his grandmother's skills by saying she had taught him how to make gravy where it wasn't lumpy.

He recalled when he learned about the difference between store bought and fresh laid eggs. "She has her own chickens too. I thought eggs were eggs, I didn't know there was a real difference," laughed Mandrell.

Mandrell is looking forward to learning canning techniques from her this summer. "I think the best way to learn about cooking is going by an elderly person like that who has their own ways instead of learning from a recipe card," Mandrell

"I think it's a darn shame that young people today don't have time for the older generation. If they'd sit down with them for even half a minute they could learn a lot," he

"The older generation has a lot of secrets about life in general because they learned it the hard way- from scratch."

Mandrell is presently working with the elderly at King's Manor Retirement Home where he is employed.

Consultant hired to address racial sensitivities in movie racism has its trends, and right now, Asians seem to be the target of choice.

In the movie "Sixteen Candles," appearances by a character named Long Duk Dong were accompanied by a gong. What if the character was black and a banjo plucked a few bars from "Gone Are the Days?"

In "Year of the Dragon," New York's Chinese community was displayed as cowardly and gangdominated. A beautiful Asian television journalist falls in love with a white cop who doesn't even pretend to hide his contempt for Orientals. A Chinese-American cop can't seem to figure out how to drive a car.

Both movies were made in the enlightened 1980s.

So when the Los Angeles-based Japanese Citizens League heard that "Gung Ho," the Paramount Pictures movie about a Japanese car com-

> Paramount Television agreed and hired the Los Angeles consulting firm of Hirano, Hokoyama & Associates to review the pilot's script, checking it for correctness of detail and any possibly offensive passages.

"I was not critical of the portrayal of Asians in the movie," said Irene Hirano, a partner of the consulting firm along with J.D. Hokoyama, director of Asian Pacific American Student Services at University of Southern California.

The firm normally serves a number of corporations doing business in Asia.

"The movie made the executive from Japan seem very human," Ms. Hirano said, and it "tried to look at

The television pilot was bought by ABC, according to Paramount Television, but the network will make several revisions on characters and concept before the first show is broadcast in January. One decision will be whether to retain the services of Ms. Hirano's firm.

The consulting job was significant for a medium that has in the past gone with the flow of racial attitudes. There are a long string of characters from television's past to haunt minority groups.

"Amos 'n' Andy" remains the most glaring example, but there are characters within other shows that now cause viewers to squirm, such as Pepino, the hat-in-hand Mexican farm worker in "The Real McCoys."

Residents' daughters honored

Christina and Clarissa Simon, 16-year-old twin daughters of Jim and Joyce Simon, have been selected as Academic All-American Scholars by the National Secondary Education Council.

Christina and Clarissa, Hereford High School juniors, were nominated for the award by Coach Donnie Henderson, girls athletic coach.

Their names will appear in the Academic All-American Scholar Director which is published nationally. They were selected for the award by recommendation of their teachers, coaches and counselors.

Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Simon of Amarillo and Mrs. Modena Stallings of Kingsland.

Elderly most often impaired by disease

Among the most destructive myths about aging are that people will become senile, lose interest in sex, deteriorate physically and end their days in a nursing home.

Most of the changes that occur with age will not result in any significant loss of physical or mental abilities for most people, said Robert Luchi, M.D., a geriatric specialist at Baylor College of Medicine and the Veterans Administration Medical

What does impair the elderly is disease. And many illnesses such as heart disease, diabetes, high blood pressure and osteoporosis (brittle bones) can be treated.

One myth of aging is that older people lose their minds.

"That's as far from the truth as can be," Luchi said. "Most people do not lose their minds, become senile or develop Alzheimer's Disease. Studies of older people suggest that in some aspects intellectual function can actually increase."

decrease with extreme old age, but is usually associated with disease, not age alone, Luchi said.

Mental ability does sometimes

Another myth is that the elderly lose interest in sex. Studies indicate that there is no major decline in interest or ability to perform sexually if a person is healthy. If illness impairs sexual activity, in many cases the disease process can be reversed and sexual activity returned, Luchi said.

"People can have reasonably successful sex lives well on into old age and that includes people age 90 and beyond," he said.

A frightening myth for many people is that they will end their lives in a nursing home. Although as many as 25 percent of the elderly may spend some time in a nursing home, at present only about five percent of people age 65 and older are in nursing homes. And, many of them are there for only short periods of time for rehabilitation after an accident or illness.

"The truth is that children are taking very good care of elderly parents," Luchi said. "Most of the health care is given in family homes by relatives who are willing to shoulder the responsibilities of providing 24-hour-a-day care to older individuals."

More than 25.5 million people in the United States are 65 years of age and older, according to the 1980 Census Bureau report. This represents 11 percent of the American population. And, as the baby-boomers age, the number is expected to grow to 20 percent in the next 15 to 20 years.

The later years can be some of the best and most productive for senior citizens, but good health care is essential, Luchi said.

"Rest equals rust, and that is exactly what can happen if people believe the myths on aging and allow themselves to stagnate.'

The more active people are, the better prepared they will be physically and mentally for the normal changes that will occur with aging, he said.

For example, the heart rate will slow with age and the heart will work harder to pump blood to all parts of the body. The immune system will weaken, leaving individuals more susceptible to infections. Bones will become more brittle as the body loses its capacity to absorb calcium ando ther minerals.

None of those things need be a reason to become less active, Luchi said.

Other myths about aging say that older people are: -sick all the time,

-need more rest,

-Lose interest in work, -grouchy and depressed.

His advice on aging is to get good medical care, follow a nutritious diet (with vitamin supplements if needed), exercise regularly and stay mentally active. "None of the myths about aging apply to the elderly any more than for the young," Luchi said.

POLLY'S Kids can make thank you notes POINTERS

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — So many people make excuses for their small children make excuses for their small children not acknowledging gifts when there is no excuse. No matter how small, there is a way to say "thank you." My infant says thank you by Mommie tracing her hand on a piece of paper and adding "X" and "O" for hugs and ing idea. The room had to be empitied. and adding "X" and "O" for hugs and kisses, plus her name. Toddlers are old enough to scribble with crayons and have a parent help them trace Preschoolers can print and color somewhat, so why not have them col-or a pretty picture and print their name on it. By the time the reach school age, the children will be able to write notes. No matter how they make a thank you note, it is always appreciated. We usually see our children's thank yous hanging on the refrigerator during our next visit!

DEAR J.D. — This is an excellent way to get the kids into the habit of sending off their thanks. It also suggests to them that a little creativity can be far more meaningful as a can be far more meaningful as a thank you than a forced, mechanical note. Your helpful Pointer earns you the Pointer of the Week award, a copy of my book "Polly's Pointers: 1081 Helpful Hints for Making Everything Last Longer." Others who would like this book can order it for $6.50. Make check payable to POLLY'S POINT-ERS and send to POLLY'S POINT-ERS, Box 1216, Dept. 55, Cincinnati, OH 45201. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY - Here's my favorite way to use some of the surplus cheese some of us are receiving. Put some of the cheese through a food grinder, then mix in chopped pickles, ing idea. The room had to be emptied of furniture. He merely stood the long couch on end in the dining room, therefore making more room for the other living room furniture. - MRS.

With once fatal disease

Survival rate highly increased

LUBBOCK -- Modern chemotherapy and improved methods for early detection of the spread of testicular cancer have radically changed survival rates in a once highly fatal disease.

The cancer is one that typically originates in the testes of men ages 19 to 34, according to Davor Vugrin, M.D., chief of oncology at Texas Tech University spreads to the draining lymph glands in the abdomen and later to the lungs and other bodily organs.

"Once it spreads to other organs, this disease, if not treated, is uniformly fatal in a relatively short period of time," Vugrin said. "Although this is basically a rare form of cancer, this tumor used to be a very common cause of cancer deaths in these young men."

In the 1960s, he said, a hope for cure was found in chemotherapy. But it was not until the mid-to late 1970s that physicians made significant progress toward conquering the disease.

The

"At that time, we and men with embryonal carothers introduced new drug combinations into treatment of this tumor, and the magnitude of this disease will never be the same again," he

Although initial results were excellent, progress in health care is measured only by long-term improvement in survival, Vugrin noted. Therefore, he and several colleagues studied patients from Health Sciences Center. It . 21 comprehensive cancer centers who were registered into the national centralized cancer patient data system.

The results of this study were presented in May in Los Angeles at the annual meeting of the American Association for Cancer Research.

The study focused on 1,784 cancer center patients with newly diagnosed cancer of the testes. Because one form of testicular cancer, called embryonal carcinoma, was one of the most lethal cancers, Vugrin and his colleagues chose to analyze it for progress achieved.

"Until the 1970s," Vugrin said, "sixty percent of young

WOULD IT MAKE A BELIEVER OF YOU?

One day as these men were worshiping and fasting the Holy Spirit said, "Dedicate Barnabas and Saul for a special job I have for them." So after more fasting and prayer, the men laid their hands on them -- and sent them on their way.

Directed by the Holy Spirit they went to Seleucia and then sailed for Cyprus. There, in the town of Salamis, they went to the Jewish synagogue and preached. (John Mark went with them as their assistant.)

Afterwards they preached from town to town across the entire island until finally they reached Paphos where they met a lewish sorcerer, a fake prophet named Bar - Jesus. He had attached himself to the governor, Sergius Paulus, a man of considerable insight and understanding. The governor invited Barnabas and Saul to visit him. for he wanted to hear their message from God. But the sorcerer, Elymas (his name in Greek), interfered and urged the governor to pay no attention to what Saul and Barnabas said, trying to keep him from trusting the Lord.

Then Saul (who is also called Paul) filled with the Holy Spirit, glared angrily at the sorcerer and said. "You son of the Devil, full of every sort of trickery and villany, enemy of all that is good, will you never end your opposition of the Lord? And now God has laid His hand of punishment upon you, and you will be stricken awhile with blindness." Instantly mist and darkness fell upon him, and he began wandering around begging for someone to take his hand and lead him.

When the governor saw what happened he believed and was astonished at the power of God's message. Acts 13:2-12 cinoma of the testis were dead within two years from diagnosis."

Embryonal carcinoma accounted for 27 percent of newly diagnosed testis cancer in the survey. In 75 percent of those cases, the diséase already had spread to other organs, attesting to the malignant nature of the tumor, Vugrin said. Patients were treated with surgery and/or chemotherapy, depending on the extent of the disease.

Analysis showed that the five-year survival rate has increased from 60 percent to 88 percent. In addition to the effect of therapy, Vugrin said, the extent of tumor dissemination in the body at the time of diagnosis influenced long-term survival

In patients in whom carcinoma was confined to the testis, 98 percent showed a five-year survival rate. The rate for patients in whom cancer had spread to the abdominal lymph glands was 96 percent. Patients with the most advanced disease (spreading to distant parts of the body) had a lower survival rate, 76 per-"However, before the introduction of effective

chemotherapy, such advanced disease was almost universally lethal," Vugrin said. "Consequently, this is a group in which the most dramatic success has been achieved." Vugrin said a longer followup is unlikely to produce significant differences. "The good results attest to the effectiveness of newer drug combination treatments," he said, "In addition, more effective use of chemotherapy has allowed shortened treatment periods. and therefore, less exposure to toxicity."

High rates for complete remission and short duration of treatment ensure rapid return to a productive life, thus fulfilling the most important goal of the treatment, Vugrin said.

"In the 1980s," he said, "we have concentrated on improving the quality of life during the treatment, shortening duration of treatment, eliminating unnecessary treatment and minimizing any long-term residual effect of the malignancy or its treat-

Mosquito population increases

LUBBOCK - The unusually wet weather experienced by much of the state during June may be causing more than a general waterlogged feeling. It could be causing an increase in the mosquito population.

Texas Tech University Entomologist Harlan G. Thorvilson said city control projects can be greatly aided if people will just empty containers of standing water. "Most cities and towns have good mosquito control projects," Thorvilson said.

'But people can help a lot by dumping the standing water from containers in their yards and alleys." Emptying containers of standing water is important because mosquitos will lay their eggs in water or close to where water will be, he said. "Mosquitos will lay their eggs around the edge of a pond, in a kid's tire swing, empty cans or anything else that will catch and hold water," he said. "The best way to control mosquitos is to kill them before they reach adult stage and are still living in the water."

Mosquitos go through several development stages, he said. From the eggs, they hatch into larva or wrigglers. The wrigglers are active and feed on microorganisms in the water. From the larval stage, the mosquito develops into comma shaped pupae which are not as active and do not feed. From that stage they emerge as adults.

Thorvilson said it takes about two weeks for the larva to become adults, depending on the weather. If the temperature is hot, the development stages will be speeded up. Thorvilson said there are more than 80 different species of mosquitos in Texas, the most common being the Aedes and Culex. "Mosquitos are mostly just annoying, but they can carry diseases like malaria, yellow fever, varous kinds of encephalitis and even can give your dog heartworms," Thorvilson said. "The most common disease threat from mosquitos in Texas is encephalitis."

Thorvilson said the female mosquito is the biggest trouble maker for humans and animals.

"The female is the one that bites," Thorviolson said. "She has to have a blood meal before she can lay fertile eggs. The reason the bite itches is that she injects saliva containing an anticoagulant into the w nd and that causes a sligm swelling and irritation."

Thorvilsons aid semi-arid and arid areas of the country like West Texas have fewer mosquito problems than wetter areas like coastal regions. "Total mosquito control isn't possible, but they can be reduced by following simple sanitation procedures and getting rid of standing water," he said. "The most we can really hope for is to eep them away from our bodies."

Adolf Hitler became Reichsfuehrer of Germany in 1934 and began a campaign against all opposition, even within his own party. Hundreds of influential Nazis were murdered, and Hitler was soon arming troops for the European invasions which would eventually bring about World War IIs

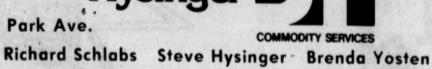

The alembic, an onionshaped potstill, was used by ancient alchemists in their effort to create gold. It is used these days to double-distill cognac. The alembic was introduced to France's Cognac region some 400 years by invading Moors who had used it to distill perfume.

TCU professor says adults often complain of back pain

Lower back pain is a major com- muscles as well as a lack of flexibiliplaint of adults in this country. Experts say billions of dollars are lost each year by workers who stay home due to back problems. Dr. Alan Lacy, assistant professor of physical education at Texas Christian University, believes that much of the pain could be avoided with proper conditioning. "I've seen estimates that as much as 80 percent of all lower back pain is the result of a weak abdominal region, weak abdominal ty in the lower back," Lacy said.

> BLACK IS FASHIONABLE

NEW YORK (AP) - Black is turning up on fashionable tabletops.

Lacy agrees that back problems become more prevalent as individuals get older." When we don't stress our abdominal strength and lower back flexibility, there's a greater susceptibility of straining something when we pick up a heavy object," he noted.

It's a mistake to try to find a simple solution to cure back pain. "There's evidence to support the idea that if people have strong abdominal muscles and good posture and reasonable flexibility in the lower back and hamstring area that great many of the minor back discomforts could be avoided or at least reduced," stressed Lacy.

According to Lacy, it's much smarter to try to prevent the problem with proper conditioning than to wait for something to happen and then seeking help.

Ann Landers Great book

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a middle-aged woman who has a wonderful family and everything to live for. I take good care of myself, have frequent checkups and do everything I can to stay healthy, but my doctor says I have bad genes.

My father died young from heart trouble. My mother and two of her sisters had breast cancer. My doctor has advised me to take hormones for my osteoporosis. Frankly, I am terrified by all the things I am susceptible to.

Where can i find a reliable source to help me live right? I read health magazines, but very few of the articles are written by experts. I feel the more I know, the better my chances. Please give me some advice.--HARRIET FROM DOBBS FERRY, N.Y.

DEAR HARRIET: Have I got a book for you! Between these covers you will find a wealth of information in language that everyone can understand. It tells how to prevent or reduce the risk of AIDS, asthma, birth defects, cancer, common colds, constipation, heart attack, hepatitis, kidney stones, shingles, ulcers and many other problems.

Impotence is discussed in detail, making it plain that often this problem is not "all in the head." It is made clear that certain medicines may produce impotence, and substitutes are suggested.

This book belongs in every family library. The highly respected physician writes with authority, clarity and humor. He is Dr. Isadore Rosenfeld, Cardiologist and Clinical Professor of Medicine at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center. His book, "Modern Prevention-The New Medicine" was published by Simon and Schuster. Price $18.95. If your bookstore doesn't have it, shame on them.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a single mother, raising a beautiful 3-year-old daughter alone. I hope my letter can save just one woman from making one mistake I made. How I wish someone had written such a letter for me to read four years ago.

Jack was handsome, sexy, intelligent and hardworking. I knew he had left his wife with two small children, but from his description she sounded impossible to live with. He was self-centered but always made time for me. Our sex life was terrific. Jack had a quick temper and few friends. I told myself I could teach him to be more diplomatic and understanding.

A year and a half into our relationship I found myself unexpectedly pregnant. He said whatever I wanted to do was OK with him. When I decided "no abortion," he said, "You're crazy, but I'll stand by." I asked only that he give me emotional support throughout my pregnancy.

Within two weeks he found another sweetheart. They left for a vacation in Hawaii 10 days before my child was born.

Please tell your female readers that if they think they can change a man who is badly flawed by loving him a lot, they are mistaken. He does not have to change. There are plenty of screwed-up women who will take him as he is and make excuses for everything that needs fixing. And God help them all.-LEARNED THE HARD WAY IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR CALIF: Thanks for a frank and honest letter of confession. I'm sure you have caused many women to ask themselves, "Is she talking to me?" If you're wondering, ladies, the answer is "probably."

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50 cents with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

School children are unfit, but trend is reversible

Recent statistics show that one of every two deaths in this country is attributed to heart disease. Even more alarming is the fact that as many as 50 percent of public school children already show signs of coronary heart disease. The good news is that the trend can be reversed with the teaching of proper health fitness.

Dr. Douglas Hastad, chairman of kinesiological studies at Texas Christian University, co-authored a teachers' manual published this spring entitled "Fitness in the Elementary Schools." Hastad stresses the need for an individualized fitness program which "emphasizes fitness for a lifetime and as a lifestyle."

"There are three particular areas we must be concerned about," Hastad said. "Number one is cardiovascular, to keep and to maintain a healthy heart. Number two is body composition, the amount of body fat. Estimates say that as many as six out of ten children in our country are fat. Number three is flexibility, especially of the lower back."

Hastad believes too many physical education programs concentrate on team sorts and games activities. While this can be fine for the child who is a natural athlete, it does little to encourage the non-active student toward a lifetime of physical fitness.

"If I could create the perfect situation I would have a program of physical education every day, five days a week, for a half-hour period," Hastad concluded. "It would be a diverse and dynamic program, one in which they are moving continuously, but also one in which they learn why they do what they do."
