

Farm groups serious about fighting dump

By CINDY SMITH
Staff Writer

What are commodity groups doing about the Department of Energy nuclear waste repository situation? Plenty. They're not for it, that's guaranteed.

Carl King, president of Texas Corn Growers, said they were the first commodity group to oppose the repository back in March of 1983.

"And as far as I know, we've got all the commodities groups, including the farmers, opposing it," said King. "I hadn't had one farmer that's for it, that's for sure."

King had a skeptical opinion of those people supporting the repository. He said, "Some people think they're against it, but I think they ought to put their money where their mouth is, and donate to the cause!"

Recalling when the subject of the repository first came up, King said "We just met with the board of directors and told them we didn't want it and we still don't want it as much as the day we first met."

King said the corn producers made this resolution that they were adamantly opposed to the nuclear repository and "we feel just the idea of drilling a test hole anywhere would psychologically affect our markets."

"I really think it's the most asinine, stupid thing that can happen to a country," he stormed. "One of our top priorities in Texas Corn Growers is to oppose this insane idea of dumping any waste material—especially high level nuclear waste—through our precious water supply."

"I guess the most important thing that bugs me more than anything else, after attending several DOE meetings, is their complete lack of credibility and it further irritates me to think we have a few people with dollar signs in their eyeballs that want this repository," King blasted.

He considers this pure short-term selfishness. "To think people like the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce, who think there will be some short term financial benefits and to think they are not looking down the road to what could happen to the entire area, just blows my mind," raged King. "One —just one mistake or one accident— could pollute this water supply and not only will it be a financial crisis but a human crisis as well."

King explained that Amarillo gets its water from parts of the Ogalalla and that rainfall and runoff from the Ogalalla's springs into Lake Meredith furnishes Amarillo, Lubbock, and all the smaller towns in between.

He also mentioned a new industry to be added to the area that is being held up on account of the repository site.

"Texas Corn Growers is involved in all aspects of agriculture. Our job is to try to improve the farmer's plot," he said. "Right now, we're working on a corn grit plant and this could be placed in jeopardy if we

Election furor puts Juarez in unofficial martial law

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Military personnel in El Paso, Texas, have been advised to avoid this border city just across the Rio Grande during the weekend, when results from state elections are to be released, an official said.

At a city council meeting Friday afternoon, the Juarez acting mayor and the chief of police described how Mexican army soldiers took over the police department at about 1 a.m.

MDT Thursday. The acting mayor said Juarez was under "undeclared martial law."

Political tension has been on the rise since last Sunday's elections to elect a governor for the vast mining and ranching state of Chihuahua, 67 mayorships and 14 legislative seats. Official results are scheduled for release Sunday night.

The conservative, opposition National Action Party, or PAN, has accused the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party of massive government-instituted fraud.

PRI leaders have denied the charges, asked for proof of the allegations and suggested the PAN accept its defeat. City government in Juarez, the largest city in the state of Chihuahua and along the border, has been under PAN control for the last three years, as have been the state's most important communities.

Juarez Mayor Francisco Barrio, who resigned his post to run for governor on the PAN ticket, told several thousand people at a Friday night rally in front of city hall that there will be more protests.

"It's true, we've been confronted with one of the worst frauds of this century ... but we are more than them, much more," said Barrio. "We will not be silent against the monstrous fraud committed against the people of Chihuahua."

Juarez Bishop Manuel Talamas Camandari issued a statement Friday night saying his diocese is convinced there was electoral fraud in Juarez. He urged citizens to strive for their rights using non-violent measures.

"We want to stress this is not a partisan statement. Political parties are temporal things. But there was fraud against the citizenry and that is a sin," the bishop said.

U.S. Army Major General Donald Infante issued a recommendation Friday to the 22,000 U.S. military personnel under his command at the Fort Bliss facility just outside El Paso.

"This is not a direct order that they not go," said Fort Bliss spokesman Ralph Dohme. "They can take it or leave it. But if they're caught in a

Jubilee preparations ready for participants

Plans are well underway for Hereford's annual Town & Country Jubilee, Aug. 10-16, and residents of the city and county are invited to become involved in some of the activities.

Entry forms for the Jubilee Parade and for Jubilee Junction are available at the chamber office, it was announced this week by Jubilee co-chairmen Waldo Baxter and Mike Carr.

Whiteface Kiwanis Club is in charge of the parade, scheduled for 10:30 a.m. on Aug. 16. The club invites clubs, organizations and business firms to participate in this year's parade. Theme of the parade will be "Texas, My Kind of State."

Hawk Kreig will serve as parade chairman. For more information on parade entries, contact Kreig or Greg Banner, or call the chamber office.

Booth rental space is available for the big Jubilee Junction in Dameron Park on Aug. 16. Many local clubs and organizations are already making plans for their food or game booths. Registration blanks are available at the chamber office.

For those interested in the Arts & Crafts Bazaar, scheduled Aug. 15-16, Jolene Bledsoe is in charge of this Jubilee event. Those wishing to participate in the bazaar should contact Jolene at 364-7585.

The annual celebration actually starts with the annual Hall of Fame All-Girl Rodeo which is scheduled July 25-27. Plans for the rodeo are well underway, and this event will provide area residents with the opportunity to see some of the nation's top female rodeo performers. It will be held at the Circle A Arena.

Dr. Boren bills himself as president of the International Association of Professional Bureaucrats. He reports his mission is to help those inside the bureaucracy "bubble to the top of the cesspool through dynamic inaction, bold irresolution and learning how to cut red tape lengthwise."

Boren is a former state department foreign service officer and has five earned college degrees. In 1972, he ran for President on the platform of "More Red Tape." He gave it another shot in 1984 and ran as Honest Jim Boren with a slogan, "I

Just like the weather, everyone talks about the farm problem but no one seems to be really doing anything about it.

A recent issue of USA Today discussed the ag problem on its opinion page, with pro and con columnists. Some critics say the farm crisis is just not solvable. Rather than continue searching for answers, they say give up and let the troubled farms go belly-up.

One writer says we have too many farmers. "The more farmers who go bankrupt, the easier it will be for the surviving farmers to make an honest living," writes James Bovard, a free-lance writer on economic issues. "We have a choice of turning farmers into a permanent, slowly-sinking welfare class, or of allowing them to earn a living without politicians wrecking their lives," he concludes.

That, it seems to me, is a short-

Security blackout enforced at crash

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — The Air Force dropped a heavy cloak of secrecy around what is believed to be an experimental Stealth fighter that crashed in the Sequoia National Forest, killing the pilot and setting a 150-acre brush fire.

Military officials refused to divulge what kind of plane crashed, the base from which it took off, or its mission, but reports said the plane apparently was an F-19 Stealth fighter.

The secret experimental aircraft employs the latest electronic technology, materials and aerodynamic design to foil radar and infrared sensors.

Air Force guards armed with M-16 rifles and .45-caliber automatics barred people from the crash site a dozen miles northeast of Bakersfield, and civilian planes were prohibited from flying lower than 8,500 feet above the spot.

"It is clearly the F-19 that crashed," today's Los Angeles Times quoted an investigator on the House Energy and Commerce Committee's oversight and investigations subcommittee as saying.

The committee is investigating security leaks from a top-secret Lockheed California Co. plant in Burbank where the F-19 is being developed.

NBC News quoted a Pentagon source and The New York Times quoted military technology experts as saying the downed plane was a secret F-19 prototype. Andy Lightbody, editor of a defense technology magazine called International Combat Arms, said industry and government sources had told him the same thing.

An Air Force source, who spoke to the Los Angeles paper on condition he not be identified, said the explosion was witnessed by a pilot in a chase aircraft. The use of a chase plane would be normal procedure in flight testing, especially with a craft as secret as the F-19, the source said.

Gen. Michael McRaney, head of public affairs for the Air Force, said from the Pentagon that the plane had only one crew member and "was definitely not a bomber," but refused to say what it was.

"No weapons of any kind were on board," said 2nd Lt. Eric Schnable, a public affairs officer at Edwards

Air Force Base, where many combat aircraft are tested.

The crash, near 4,100-foot Saturday Peak in the western Sierra Nevada on Friday, set off a 150-acre brushfire that was under control six hours later.

Escapee surrenders

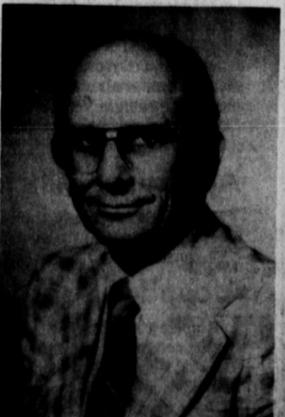

BIG SANDY, Texas (AP) — A murder suspect and convicted rapist tattooed "Death before dishonor for the Lonesome Loser" surrendered peacefully two days after he escaped from jail with a female deputy hostage and led police on a massive manhunt.

Jerry Walter McFadden, who calls himself "Animal" and is awaiting trial in the May slaying of an 18-year-old honor student, was returned to the Upshur County Jail late Friday after he threw down his weapon when police found him hiding in a vacant house. He was caught not far from the spot where his hostage escaped the night before after 16 hours captive in a boxcar with the fugitive.

"He knew that he was a loser, and he wanted to surrender as peacefully as he could," said Chief Deputy Rick Allen of Collin County, whose men surrounded McFadden about 10:30 p.m.

Rosalie Williams, 24, the Upshur deputy taken hostage, spent Friday with her husband, a state Department of Public Safety trooper, and her 4-year-old son.

Eades files for city commission seat

R.W. "BUD" EADES

R.W. "Bud" Eades has filed with the City of Hereford to run for his third term as a city commissioner for Place 4.

Eades has been on the commission since 1979 when he was appointed to fill a vacated spot.

Eades is the first to file for the September election. Places 2 and 4 are up for election this year.

Eades and his wife Helen have lived in Hereford for the past 16 years. They have one son, Roger, who lives in Hereford. Their other sons are Wesley of Louisville, Ky., and Brian of Dallas. Eades also has a daughter, Carol of Castro Valley, Calif.

Eades is the president of Plains Insurance of Hereford.

Commissioner of Place 2, Emory Brownlow, has not yet filed for reelection.

Devers, Haile offer counseling at new clinic

Counseling, intellectual testing and psychological evaluation services are available now in a Christian atmosphere through the Child and Family Guidance Center, the newest branch of Operation Good Shepherd Ministries.

Staffed by Elva Devers and Jim Haile, who have over 25 years of combined experience in the field, the center will provide professional services according to each client's ability to pay.

The counselors agree that the center is not to take the place of current services available, but to augment agencies, ministers and other referral sources which have heavy caseloads. Referrals are not necessary, and part of the center's objective is to serve persons who may feel uncomfortable about visiting a public social work agency. All counseling will be by appointment only.

Although the center is part of a ministry, Devers said the entire thrust will not be missionary — only balanced with the Christian approach.

"I see it from the realm of holistic: emotional, physical and spiritual healing," Devers said. "But, if the spiritual is void, they are not a whole person."

Haile said that often in secular counseling theories and practices are pushed which are opposite Biblical principals.

Approximately 15 persons have been in for counseling since Devers began sessions a month ago; Haile began this past week.

Individual and group counseling for all family members will be offered, but much of the focus will be on children.

"Children seem to be the symptomatic ones, who exhibit behavior," Haile said. Often a child's behavior is how family problems are first indicated.

Both counselors have extensive work with children's emotional problems.

Haile, currently operating a family farm, spent six years as a music therapist at Killgore Children's Psychiatric Center in Amarillo where he was responsible for providing music therapy to approximately 40 residential children.

After receiving his bachelor's degree in psychology (with a minor in music therapy) from West Texas State University in 1975, he obtained his M.Ed. degree there in counseling and social work.

He also has studied music therapy at the University of Georgia, and did post graduate study in marriage and family counseling at Pepperdine University.

From 1976 until 1981, he was clinical director for Borger's Community Mental Health Center, a branch of the Amarillo Mental Health-Mental Retardation Center. While there, he provided therapy, screening evaluation and referrals for persons requiring institutionalization, community education, intelligence and psychological testing and parent training classes.

Haile is a 1969 graduate of Hereford High and is married to the former Carol Turrentine of Hereford. They have two children.

Devers holds three degrees from WTSU. She received her bachelor's of music education in 1963, her certification in early childhood and handicapped education in 1973, and her M. Ed. in 1982 with a major in counseling and minor in psychology.

She has taught early childhood-handicapped in Hereford Schools for 13 years.

During the past four summers she has been employed by the Hereford Family Services center as a caseworker and in clerical positions. There she provided therapy and case dismissals. She was associated with Mike Moon, MSW, in group therapy in the Deaf Smith County Jail for three years and with Moon's After-Care clients.

For the last year, in addition to teaching, she has had a small private counseling service at First Christian Church which included marital parental and family counseling. She has given workshops on stress, marriage, parenting and communication.

She and her husband Bill have three children.

GROUPS

allow the repository to go in and everything these farmers are doing could be washed down the drain if this dump site is placed in the Panhandle.

"Every citizen in Texas and other states under the Ogalalla should be up in arms writing their congressmen and senators to protest this site," stressed King.

"Everybody's talking about the Deaf Smith County site, but the water situation will affect us all," added Delbert Devin of the Panhandle's Nuclear Waste Task Force, Inc.

Texas Corn Growers has donated an office for the force to meet and Devin works there daily collecting input on the nuclear repository situation. Devin explained, "nearly 500 names are run on the computer and people in Dallas, Fort Worth, Arlington, and Austin are helping us. And there are even people in Wichita Falls that are certainly interested because they're worried about nuclear waste transportation through their area, since they are not affected by the Ogalalla."

"The DOE said there will be a truck load every 90 minutes. My assumption is that the waste will be transported by barge down the Mississippi into the port facilities at Houston.

"Then it will be unloaded on trucks or trains and the interstates have been designated for truck trafficking. So, waste will travel down I-40 regardless of where the site will be, even if going to Nevada or Hansford, some will go down I-40," Devin explained.

And like King, Devin feels the same way about area attitudes on this repository. "All these economic benefits they're throwing out there are smoke screens and people need to be aware of it," Devin warned.

"Not one person across the state of Texas has testified in favor of this repository in Deaf Smith County and I believe if you're going to be against something you ought to stand up and speak up about it. I believe the DOE meetings were an opportunity for people to speak up and not one solitary person or organization did," he concluded.

What are these two men and their organizations doing about the current issue? King said the Texas Corn Growers are using monies to fight the nuclear waste repository.

"In everything we do, just remember we're here to help the farmer," he said. "We're committed all the way. We've got a consulting team in Washington right now and we've retained a Washington firm to represent us against this nuclear waste problem."

"Texas Corn Growers is a charter member and one of the founders of the Nuclear Waste Task Force and we need any funds that people can spare, but above all, we need people to write to (Rep. Larry) Combest, (Rep. Beau) Boulter, (Sen.) Lloyd Bentsen, and (Sen.) Phil Gramm, even if they don't have the money," King stated.

"We are all dedicated to one solution and that's to stop DOE and getting rid of the nuclear waste dump idea," said King.

The man said he was personally convinced that nothing should be done by DOE to bury nuclear material underground until technology is available to prove that it is definitely safe "and at this point DOE has not proven this."

"I say let the DOE nuclear plants worry about their own nuclear junk and not dump their junk on us," stormed King.

What are some of the other commodity groups that agree with King and Devin? The Texas Wheat Producers who are represented by Bill Nelson of Amarillo. Nelson is the second vice-president of the association and has held this position since 1970. He was also executive vice-president for Grain Sorghum Producers for 12 years and is very experienced in this line of work.

"We are supported totally by the wheat producers and we have no view on any subject other than that of the majority of the membership or the board," stated Nelson.

"Personally, our role has been to be supportive in the organizational aspects of farmers getting organized to project their views on the nuclear waste issue," Nelson said. He also added that he has not become personally involved with this issue but that Otis Harman, one of their directors, was keeping them informed with the group in Tulsa, (Serious Texans Against Nuclear Dumps). He also named Leo Witkowski of Hereford who is keeping them informed through the Nuclear Waste Task Force.

"Way before they became involved, I chaired a meeting of interested individuals at the request of one of our producer members, Alan Hartzog, who is now deceased, several years ago," recalled Nelson.

"That was one of the first times the core of engineers and the DOE spoke force through our directors is in no way different than we handle any issue whether it be trade, tax, marketing, or government policy," Nelson stated. "And that is involving our directors and keeping them informed and them, in return, keeping us informed of developments as they progress and when action is needed to call a meeting of the board or the farmers-membership for further direction."

Contamination of produce also being his fear, Bill Cleavinger, president of Texas Sugar Beet Growers, explained the financial involvement of Hereford in this industry, which would definitely affect other industries the same way.

Cleavinger has been the president of TSBG since 1977 and is presently serving his first year as first vice-president of the National Sugar Beet Growers. He will be hosting the national group during their first visit to Texas on a tour of our area next Thursday.

"We are very definitely against it," stated Cleavinger.

"With sugar being a food product that is marketed all over the United States, even the suggestion of being a contaminated product would severely curtail sales," he stated.

"The industry is worth a quarter-of-a-billion dollars annually. Twenty-five to $35 million dollars goes to the farmers annually and $12 to $15 million dollars is used for repairs, services, and to pay people's salaries in the area, annually," explained Cleavinger. "This turned over five times in the local economy would bring in $250 million annually."

"The loss of this industry alone would be greater than anything that might be added by a nuclear waste storage site which has the possibility of completely eliminating all agriculture in this area," he said.

Cleavinger said that in Chernobyl the first fear was contamination of the underground water. "And here we are proposing to store the nuclear waste from all over the world where it will be a constant threat to the only water supply we have," Cleavinger said. "This would create the same problem for other industries such as Frito Lay, Arrowhead Mills, and our vegetable industries."

"I just can't see how we could jeopardize the future, not only of our families and our industries, but of everyone. I think it is very poor judgement on the part of the national policy makers to endanger this future food and water supply of the entire nation," he said calmly.

Presently, an official statement is being worked out by a hydrologist and an attorney for the beet growers.

Recently returning from Colorado Springs, Colo., (Holly Sugar's corporate headquarters), and after spending the day visiting with the officials, Cleavinger said, "They can see nothing good come from this in their business. Holly Sugar has contributed $10,000 to the Nuclear Waste Task Force in Dimmitt." Cleavinger is also the Sugar Beet Growers representative in that group.

"We're not anti-technology, we're just trying to take a responsible stand — it's not an anti-nuclear group per say, but we do feel this is very dangerous," he said.

Cleavinger also noted that they haven't involved the national association yet. "But there are other states in the beet growing areas that were designated as second round possibilities and they are as opposed to the location of a nuclear waste storage site in any prime agricultural area as we are," he added.

"We are cooperating with all the other commodity groups and we have supported them in every way through the Nuclear Waste Task Force," he added.

"We're not anti-technology, we're just trying to take a responsible stand."

—Bill Cleavinger

to the group and at that time the repository was only an idea," explained Nelson.

"My role there was to bring out views from both participating sides," Nelson said. "I stressed to the DOE and those attending, that in the organized effort in keeping up with the repository was not just a farm issue and could not be funded or continued by farm organizations and commodity groups — that they could only be a catalyst and getting those interested in organizing support for what was then seen as continuing and growing concern."

In short, Nelson said at that meeting "We can help organize and support a group; but, again, they'll have to come up with their own funding and direction must come from a broader base if the shaping of the future is to be adequately directed."

"We have helped," Nelson said. "Our association has assisted financially in funding the Nuclear Waste Task Force, Inc. through Myers, White and Associates in Washington and our support has been to those opposing the nuclear waste repository."

Again Nelson stated, "We have no views other than the farmer's in that they are our members."

Nelson also said the group is chartered to do research, education, and market development for wheat. "Nuclear waste under wheatland is an indirect wheat issue, which we, of course, have an interest," he said. "We share the individual farmer's view of the potential ground water contamination, but even more we fear the physiological effect that both the domestic and foreign grain buyers might have relative to the products in the area whether their concerns are valid or not," stressed Nelson. The water contamination seems to be a very common fear among producers.

At the annual farmer-membership wheat producers meeting held Nov. 21, 1985, the following resolution was passed. "Texas Wheat Producers actively opposes the location of a high level nuclear waste repository in any site which contains 60 percent or more prime farm land and which penetrates any major aquifer."

"What we are doing with this nuclear issue is helping with the task bind over there, they're on their own."

U.S. Consul General Mike Hancock in Juarez warned American tourists who planned to visit the city this weekend.

"We are advising American citizens ... that there's a strong possibility of political demonstrations," said Hancock. "Americans should exercise due caution and avoid concentrations of people that might turn into political demonstrations."

Mexican army soldiers took over the city police department at about 1 a.m. MDT Thursday "at bayonet point," said city manager Sergio Conde Varela.

"They simply went in and declared themselves in charge," said acting Juarez Mayor Miguel Agustin Corral. "I have yet to be informed of this change of command in a formal manner."

There had been no reports of violence as of late Friday.

"We are under a state of siege, an undeclared martial law. This is unconstitutional," Corral added.

City council members at a meeting called early Friday afternoon were shown a crushed ballot box, torn ballots and other electoral documents stamped with what appeared to be the seal of the State Electoral Commission. Two city sanitation workers told the council they found the material in the trash outside a polling place.

"This goes to show the lack of honesty on the part of the elections authorities," Corral said.

Another columnist claims that farmers must devise strategies which provide them a much larger percentage of the food dollar. Wheat producers urge 'yes' on referendum

The Texas Wheat Producers Association is contending that the wheat referendum is an effort to increase wheat farmer's sales, prices, and income.

"In Texas, the ASCS said they sent 133,000 ballots and it is our belief that there are about 63,000 wheat farmers in the state," said Bill Nelson, executive vice-president of TWPA.

"We've cast our role of that as one of informing the directors and membership of our association of the issue and are urging them to vote."

"We are convinced that since this is a non-binding vote that many farmers may take the issue lightly and not vote, but we need these votes," stressed Nelson.

"We think it is important that they do vote because the outcome of the poll will, in our opinion, affect the administration of the current program as well as have an even greater affect as future legislative efforts are made to change the government farm policy," he added.

The deadline to vote which was originally set for July 11 has been extended to Monday, July 14. Anyone who did not send their ballot in or who did not receive a ballot is urged to contact the local ASCS office at 364-0630 by the end of the day.

Sons return home after being raised

By CINDY SMITH

Sending their last son out the door for college, George and Helen Butler, on the floor enjoying their time alone, were shocked to see not one, but two of their other sons burst through the door returning home.

Celebrating the Country Squire's 10th anniversary, son and daughter of John Wayne, Patrick and Marisa, are featured actors in this month's play "Alone Together". Performances will be given on Tuesdays through Saturdays at 8 p.m. Dinner is served at 6 p.m.

Patrick plays George Butler and the main character, Heien, is played by Kathy Lichter. The couple rejoices over the last of three sons leaving home only to find the other two, having failed at life on their own, returning to live with Mom and Dad.

The play centers around Helen who discards her wifely role to be her own person and do things like turn the patio into a studio where she can paint sea scenes.

The two have a unique but caring marriage that has focused on their sons. Now that the boys are grown, they plan to be alone without having to close the bedroom door. But it does not happen until Helen makes her husband finally stand up to the boys, which he does miserably.

Even so, George's tactics for getting the sons to leave are not as forward as they should be and fail.

Of the two sons who return, one is a math instructor and the other a businessman whose wife has kicked him out. The family learns the hard way that three—or four—really is a crowd.

Between the mathematician's experiments blowing up in the living room and the businessman's beer drinking and skirt-chasing, another person, enters the show—a blonde in a miniskirt, portrayed by Marisa Wayne, who was told by their other son that she could live there until she gets on her feet.

Chaos begins when two males and one female and two sensible parents who feel they've done their duty are living all under one roof.

When the blonde bounces from one son's room to another, Helen gets uneasy and wants the action stopped.

"Why doesn't she just choose one and stick to him?" she asks, only to find out that the girl is celibate and

Provenance is a kind of pedigree of everything that embodies the best of a piece of antique furniture: proof of authenticity, names of people who once owned it, exhibits and museums where it's been shown. This documentation can greatly increase the value of the piece. "The Almanac of Investments" says that the ultimate provenance would be evidence that George Washington sat or slept in the piece.

Lichter portrays the role perfectly, in a way which is almost a tribute to the everyday housewife who is fed up.

Last appearing with Larry Linville, in "Lunch Hour", she was a resident of Seattle for many years where she appeared in over 30 productions including "Richard III" with Richard Chamberlain.

Lichter has a featured role in the television movie "Divorce Wars" with Jane Curtin and Tom Sellick. Since moving to New York three years ago, she has appeared off-Broadway in summer stock and in numerous films including "Trading Places", "Falling in Love", and "Purple Rose of Cairo."

Her television credits include "The Equalizer", "Rage of Angels II", and the soon to be released Disney film, "Outrageous Fortune" with Bette Midler and Shelley Long.

Lichter will be one to watch for in the future as she can play most any of the women's plots to a tee.

Twenty-year-old Marisa debuts on stage as the co-ed who's on the verge of becoming a woman, but still clad in mini-skirt and pink ankle boots.

Raised in Newport Beach, Calif., she starts acting classes at 14 as part of her regular school schedule in Los Angeles.

After graduation she worked at ABC in Los Angeles as a page to discover what went on behind the screen.

She has appeared in many television commercials and is also a model. She recently appeared on an episode of "Scarecrow and Mrs. King" and was Mistress of Ceremonies for the first United States Men's Pageant, (the male equivalent of Miss America.)

"The pageant was held at Long Beach, Calif., and it was just like the Miss America's pageant, they had an evening attire competition, talent, interviewing, and bathing suit competitions," smiled Wayne. She said the men were required to wear the basic black suits for the last competition.

She said that she doesn't get into acting on her father's name, but has a lot of respect for his career.

Although she doesn't advertise that she's John Wayne's daughter, the fact always seems to work its way in to her advantage in tryouts.

She's currently taking acting and Approval denounced

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some leading Protestant and Roman Catholic officials have denounced approval by the House of Representatives of $100 million in aid to rebels seeking to overthrow the Nicaraguan government.

Executives of the United Methodist board of church and society said the action would "bring conflict, suffering, terror and death to the people of Nicaragua."

singing lessons from Jeff Corey and Robert Edwards, who also had worked with her father.

Tennis is her serious hobby and she recently from a benefit tennis tournament held in Hawaii for the John Wayne Cancer Clinic.

Other hobbies for the actress include riding bicycles and taking care of her dogs.

"I have two dogs both five months old; one a cocker spaniel and the other a Besengi Egyptian which looks like a great big rat," she said.

(They are in a dog college now to learn obedience.)

As for her actresses' aspirations, she wants to continue acting, singing and voice, and, perhaps, screenwriting.

From her experience, she suggests that anyone interested in acting should take as many acting courses as possible while still in high school. "That's the one thing I didn't do that I wished now I would have," admitted Marisa, but her brother definitely disagreed.

"I think when it happens it will happen," said Patrick Wayne, who came to Amarillo from Los Angeles. "I didn't take any courses in high school but that's the way I felt."

Prior to an acting job in Tulsa, Okla., Wayne spent time in Spain working on the movie "Rustler's Rhapsody."

"Timing is an incredibly important element of success, being at the right at the right time," he explained.

"You have to have the right tools at the right time," Wayne added. "What's does it take to be an actor? 'I wish I knew,' he replied.

"It takes a great deal of desire to stick to it in acting," Wayne said. "Right now there are 52,000 actors in Los Angeles which leaves 500 to 1,000 jobs a year. There are 52 people for every job and only one job.

"There's just not that much work," he said. "They're not doing many films and there's not that many jobs on TV."

Acting at age 11 in a movie called "Rio Grande", Wayne said he didn't really decide then to go into acting.

"I didn't know I wanted to make a career out of this until I was out of college," he said.

He has done roles in 25 films, three television series, and 97 commercials advertising anything from soaps, beers, cars, soft drinks, to candy bars, clothes, and dogfood.

His advice to people wanting to get into acting, "Don't."

55 mph is farce

If you've logged many miles on Texas highways the past few months, you must know that the 55 mile-per-hour speed limit is a farce.

It is the law, of course. Secretary of Transportation Elizabeth Dole has recently announced that the federal government will not send any more money to Arizona and Vermont because a check has shown that more than half of their traffic exceeds the 55 mph limit.

Mrs. Dole is merely enforcing the law, but singling out these two states is not quite fair. No state in this union could stand the test because not many motorists are sticking to the 55 mph on any state highways. The federal monitors solemnly declared that they measured more than half of the drivers in these two states going 59.749 mph, which is enough to disqualify the entire state.

A driver going 59.749 on the Stemmons Expressway in Dallas is in danger of being run over. A driver making that speed between Canyon and Amarillo might have his rear bumper dented. The 55 mph speed limit is not only unrealistic, it is ignored.

There are those who observe it, of course. But it is very difficult to drive 55 miles per hour on an open highway in Texas because traffic from the rear approaches rapidly and drivers throw hard looks at the law abiding 55 mile drivers.

Drivers who make 60 are tolerated very well and those who drive 65 seem to be more in the flow of traffic. Those who roar by at 70 or 75 like we did in the old days when the speed limit was 70 are apt to receive disapproving glances today.

In Nebraska last month the legislature voted to raise the speed limit to 70 and let the federal money be withheld.

The sponsor of the Nebraska bill pointed out that the federal data indicates that the national driving speed on rural interstates is 66 mph.

These same statistics show that highway patrolmen last year issued ten times as many tickets to people going more than 65 mph than they did to those exceeding 55 mph.

This coincides with national figures which show that the real national speed limit is 65 miles per hour instead of 55.

Modern automobiles are built to drive 65 as easily as 55 and most people use them that way. All of the national statistics showing that speed kills have to point out that excessive speed means drivers going 80 and 90 miles per hour, certainly an imprudent speed.

Most Americans obey the law. But the speed limit is one that is generally disobeyed. It just might be a time for a change to a more realistic speed limit, say 65 miles per hour.

War on drugs

It is time for professional sports to declare war on drugs. And that is exactly what National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle has done in a sweeping package of proposals aimed at getting illicit narcotics out of pro football.

The league hopes to curtail widespread drug usage among players by conducting at least two random tests during the year. Players who test positive for drugs would be sent to rehabilitation centers and be fined two game checks — or about $25,000. A second offense would carry a fine of as much as $50,000. And those players found to be using drugs a third time would face a potential lifetime suspension from the NFL.

These are tough rules. They are sure to be protested by the NFL Players Association. But tough measures are needed to deal with a problem that is said to be reaching epidemic proportions in professional athletics.

Farm Aid

None of us, individually, can solve the problems of the world, but Texan Willie Nelson is using the talent and resources he has to do what he can — attacking one major problem facing our society today.

Farm Aid II was a huge success, in that, once again, it shed light on the plight of the American farmer, raising millions of dollars to boot.

It was also good to see that the Texas Department of Agriculture was involved with sponsoring Farm Aid II.

The American farm emphasizes the importance of self-sufficiency as the backbone of our country's strength.

Fewer things are as important as providing food for our families, and the Farm Aid effort is something we should all take pride in.

The Penultimate Word

TECHNICAL ILLITERATE

I have often heard the term "Functional Illiterate". I don't know if that means the person qualifies as an illiterate or if they function fine even though they are illiterate. In my case they need to create a new term: "Functional Technical Illiterate". I function in a world gone nuts over technology and, believe me, my illiteracy is well founded.

This week I stayed in a hotel with new digital alarm clocks mounted in each room. They want the guest to think these are there as an added service. The reality is the motel got tired of furnishing wake-up calls or tired of getting cussed out over forgotten wake up calls so they put a clock in each room.

The clock idea would have been O.K. but these folks sprang for the latest in technology. They heard an ad that said G.E. brings good things to life, and believed the ad. G.E. may not have brought good things to life but they figured out how to add the bells and whistles to that clock. Someone set the thing for 4:30 in the morning. I broke my toe looking for the light and my glasses. Then I spent 30 minutes trying to figure out how to shut the alarm off. There was a snooze bar (it would shut it off for 10 minutes at a time), there were buttons for setting the time and the alarm, there were buttons for A.M. or P.M., but there was no button for off. The best I could do was get the buzzer off and the radio on. At breakfast I was moaning about my ordeal. A nice little housewife asked, "Why didn't you unplug the radio?"

I tried one of the new-fangled telephones in the airport. This one has a little screen to give instructions and your AT&T credit card inserts so there is no need to dial in all of the number. The last phone I was good at was in Custer City, Oklahoma when all I had to do was wait for Gert to get caught up and tell her who I wanted to speak to and she would find them. Man, I needed Gert at the airport. The only thing I ever got from that phone was that my card did not record and the number I was trying to reach was no longer in service. I don't know about the card but the number was my home phone.

I was ready to tear the phone off the wall when a little 13 year old girl walked up. The thing worked perfectly for her.

There are no super people in this world. All of us are retarded in some areas. Einstein could not remember whether or not he had eaten lunch. They called that eccentric but it was not eccentric—it was dumb. We all have areas of dumb. My area of dumb happens to be an area that may prove fatal either to me or to some clock radios and new-fangled phones.

Warm fuzzies,

The lady is a hero

It was last December and it was cold and snowy in Chicago and a woman I am not going to name was walking toward her parked car on South DesPlaines.

This woman was holding down two jobs—as a therapist for handicapped children—and a night job at a law college.

There is a reason I am not naming her but I can tell you this much about her. She's 29.

She's comparatively tiny. Five feet. Ninety pounds.

She has to walk five blocks to her parked car. She is followed.

She gets her car keys out of her knapsack and is opening the car door when a hand from behind strikes the side of her head and her head is then thrust to one side so that she could not see her attacker.

I can tell you this much about him. He was a big thug. Six-foot-four, 210 pounds. More than twice her size.

In an instant he has forced her into the back seat of her car and is tearing off her clothing.

But she is fighting him every minute.

And his cruel blows to her face and body did not stop her kicking and scratching and fighting with all her might.

He is grappling with her, growling obscenities, determined to rape her.

But she is altogether as determined that he will not.

For almost half an hour they fought, if you can imagine this mismatch lasting that long.

For 25 minutes by the car clock he is seeking to force himself upon her...and the gusty little lady is kicking and scratching and flailing away until he gives up.

He gave up.

And he grabbed her knapsack and jumped out of the car and ran.

Now that knapsack contained some papers she uses in her therapy work and forty dollars in cash and she is not going to give up those, either, without a fight.

Stark naked in the freezing weather she jumps from the car, chases the fleeing felon, jumped onto his back and hangs on.

He flung her off and she got back to her feet continued to chase him until an off-duty state policeman saw what was happening and stopped and held the attacker at gunpoint.

Willie Holmes, twice previously convicted for rape, goes to prison for 30 years.

The woman suffered minor frostbite and cut feet and a broken blood vessel in her eye and a cut on her neck but she has recovered — except for the haunting fears which may disturb her rest for the rest of her nights.

I am not using her name because he might have friends and because who knows how long is a 30-years sentence anymore.

But she deserves recognition as surely as any hero of any war — if only this.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Deaf Smith County grass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek has an idea he thinks will help small countries.

Dear editor:

Despite the fact Mexico is head over heels in debt, has borrowed $103 billion it can hardly pay the interest on and unemployment and poverty are widespread, the people there, according to television reports, forgot all their troubles while the world soccer championship games were being played there.

The people in Argentina, whose team won the soccer championship, forgot their internal struggles and the memory of losing the Falkland war to England and went all-out celebrating.

Or take Boston, where people are wrought up over race problems worse there now than they were in the South 50 years ago. When the Boston Celtics won the national basketball championship, a million people there forgot their differences and swarmed out into the streets celebrating.

Since most countries' and cities' problems are rarely solved, just shifted around from one administration to the next, it's clear the world needs more championships to get people's minds off their troubles for a few brief shining moments.

To do this we've got to have more world championship games to let the smaller countries in on it.

For example, why not the world championship in horseshoes? Breathes there not the country that'd celebrate a winning team in washers? Or marbles? Or jacks? Or mumblety-peg? Wouldn't the people of Chad forget Kadafi and throw their hats in the air if their team won the world championship in tidlywinks? Would the people of Beirut come together if one side or the other won a shooting match?

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Letters

Dear Editor:

A few months ago the curriculum committee of the Hereford School Board undertook the task of revamping the curriculum guidelines. It is not surprising that this work is taking a great deal of time and energy. What is surprising is that actions are being taken on the changes proposed by the committee without these proposals ever having been voted on or even discussed in a public board meeting.

The proposed guidelines for the reading program were finished and approved by the committee two weeks ago, but they chose to wait to present this document along with guidelines for other subject areas. However, sometime in late April, books were ordered from the state to accommodate the committee's insistence on a stronger phonics program. The need for a stronger phonics program has never been established; stronger phonics was an unquestioned given that has led the committee to create a contradictory and unclear document which will produce confusion, inconsistency, and lower the educational quality available to children of this district.

Test data shows that students within the Hereford School system do better with mechanical type skills than with the application or integration of those skills. For example, our scores are consistently higher for phonics, a mechanical skill that can be easily isolated on a test, than they are on identifying the main idea, an integrated skill that requires comprehension of the whole reading. Since this data is available to the board and has been explained in public sessions, it is difficult to imagine why the committee feels that every child in grades 1-3 needs to spend a third of the reading instruction time on phonics.

The proposed guidelines say that in addition to a third of the time being spent in specific phonics instruction, another third will be spent in the basal textbook. The remaining third will be for "global reading," the integration and application of all the skills in the act of reading. Basal readers are designed to provide the basics of reading instruction. They are not necessarily great literature, but they teach the skills that beginning readers need. An analysis of the basal reader currently used by the district shows that 51% is devoted to phonics, 15% to vocabulary, 14% to language and study skills, and 19% to comprehension. With the emphasis already on phonics, why should students and teachers be forced by this committee to neglect reading for the sake of more phonics?

Clear communication, consistency and reducing busy work for the teacher have been the stated objectives of this school board. Requiring teachers to use a second basal to teach phonics is not only busy work, it is unjustified and unexplained busy work. Furthermore, the time and energy spent on phonics means less time for real reading, something our children desperately need. The committee includes the provision for above-level children to spend more time with higher cognitive skills (the application to reading and the development of thinking). Surely the committee does not believe that only top group children should read or think.

Throughout the proposed guidelines, teachers are allowed to use their own judgement without being required to justify or substantiate their conclusions. Teachers may even choose not to use supplemental materials available for enrichment. However, the guidelines specifically prohibit the teacher from using her own judgement in regards to phonics. It seems the only consistency will be in teaching a double dose of phonics without considering the children's needs. We certainly can't expect to be consistent in anything else.

The school board faces several difficult issues. Quality education with a reasonable cost, teacher morale and discipline are all complex problems that will require clear thinking, hard work, and creativity. To allow a committee of three people to design curriculum based on faulty assumptions and ignore the facts is not in the best interest of this community. To permit such a committee to act on their recommendations before these recommendations are made publicly goes against the accountability of government agencies that this country prides itself on. We will never even get to the difficult issues that face us, let alone solve them, if this is type of illogical thinking and secretive behavior we can expect.

Sincerely,
Margaret J. Marshall

Assault victims have copper on their side

HOUSTON (AP) — Crime victims in this town have a cop on their side.

Detective Art Woolery, a sex crimes investigator for the Harris County Sheriff's Department, believes there is more to law enforcement than catching criminals. "It goes beyond that to doing whatever it takes to help the victim," Woolery says.

As an officer of two victims' rights organizations and the sheriff's liaison to the state attorney general's Victims' Compensation Office, Woolery is concerned with victims of all types of crimes.

For example, he recently started an outside fund for a family that had experienced an incredible chain of bad luck, including the murder of their son. "They were such super nice people so down on their luck that I had to do something," Woolery says.

But over the years his main work has been with sexual assault victims. When they need help that Woolery cannot provide as the investigating detective, he steps forward as a concerned citizen to organize people, lobby the Legislature, and change the system that is sometimes unresponsive to crime victims' needs.

Sexual assault victims may not know how much better they are treated in the courts, hospitals, and police stations because of reforms Woolery helped to bring about. They just know that he was there when they needed him, says Cassandra Thomas of the Houston Area Women's Center.

"For many sexual assault survivors, it is such a relief to find a detective like Art Woolery," Ms.

Thomas says. Rape victims have seen the movies about others who went to police, only to be treated like criminals, she said. This may make them afraid to report the crime at all. But when they go to Woolery, they find a gentle, caring officer who gives them the support they need, Ms. Thomas said.

"I have seen Detective Woolery working with sexual assault survivors, and he is excellent," Ms. Thomas says. "Many have told me that he just became their best friend. He's real loving in a very professional way. He really does go the extra mile. He has gone out on a limb for sexual assault survivors many times."

Woolery admits that he has a soft spot for people who have been victimized by a crime. "I can't say no," he explains. "I can't sit at my desk with a victim and see this look in her eye and know she is reaching out for help without doing what I can for her."

That can give the crime victim time to cry and talk about her feelings before asking for the hard facts he needs for his investigation. It can mean referring her to counseling, making sure she has a safe place to stay. It can mean giving her a hug if she needs one, or offering a cup of coffee.

It also means being there when she needs him, Woolery says. He tells the rape victim what to expect from the investigation and trial process, then keeps her up to date about the case. Woolery often encourages her to call him at home if she has a question or just wants to talk. "Sometimes she just wants to call and cuss you out because she's had a bad day and nothing is going right and you're there to take the heat," Woolery says.

Concern for the victim makes sense from a law enforcement point of view, says Woolery, who has been a detective since 1979. "The most important thing about sex crime investigations is establishing a rapport with the complainant, because 90 percent of your information come from her," Woolery says.

Cooperation from other law enforcement agencies is also required, Woolery says. In 1982, Woolery formed the Texas Interagency Council on Sexual Assault to give officers from all over the state a chance to compare notes. "Rapists don't care if they're in Bellaire or Houston," Woolery points out. "When you have as many jurisdictions as Houston, it is important to work together. Houston may have one bit of information and Bellaire may have another bit. Alone, neither bit is enough, but if you add them together, you might get a conviction."

The council is now defunct, Woolery says sadly. "It really was heartbreaking to see attendance drop and drop at those meetings. We got so much accomplished together."

Woolery was much more successful in his campaign to get sexual assault victims treated more humanely by police and hospitals. Until the changes were effected in 1983, sex crime victims were treated as low priority, and victims' advocates considered the evidence collection procedures to be uncivilized.

Although police would meet gunshot victims at the hospitals to get information and collect the removed bullets for evidence, the sexual assault victim was on her own. Through trial and error, she had to find out which hospitals would collect the physical evidence for police. Then she had to carry home a bag, clearly labeled, containing evidence. She was supposed to keep this evidence in her refrigerator until the day of her appointment with the investigating detective.

Not surprisingly, victims often threw the unpleasant reminder away, Woolery says. Only one-third of the crime victims who had evidence collected ever turned it in to police.

In 1983, when Woolery was appointed sheriff's liaison officer to help the Harris County Medical Society develop new evidence collection procedures for hospitals, he saw a chance to revamp the whole system, he recalls.

Several groups had been trying to address the concerns, but the solo voices weren't being heard. Woolery brought everyone into chorus by organizing the Sexual Assault Issues Coalition, which included representatives of Mayor Kathy Whitmire, Harris County Judge Jon Lindsay, state legislators, health professionals, women's advocates, and law enforcement officials.

The coalition worked out a new procedure requiring police to send the rape victim to a designated hospital, then meet her there to attach her statement to the evidence and drop it into a lock box that is taken to the lab daily.

Woolery and Dr. Carroll Boone, then president of the Harris County Medical Society, also won other changes from the sheriff's department and the Houston Police Department. Both agencies readily agreed to respond to sexual assault victims more quickly. Police officers who first respond to the crime scene are now trained to guide the victim through the system in a supportive, professional manner.

Designated hospitals agreed to cooperate with these procedures. In addition, they would provide faster treatment for the victim and have a social worker on call around the clock.

One glitch remained in the system: Local police agencies must all use a standard evidence collection kit. A subcommittee of law enforcement officers and lab technicians, chaired by Woolery, had already decided what the kit should contain. The medical society called it the "Woolery Kit." But inquiries revealed that it could not be commercially manufactured for a reasonable price.

Woolery was urged by the committee members to make the kits himself. He now operates the Med-Law Company, and he and his family often spend evenings filling the kits. Woolery says the kit is now used in five surrounding counties and in cities across the country.

Woolery has received many honors and awards as a law enforcement officer, but he remains modest, refusing to take all the credit for anything he has done. "When people work together, good things can be done," Woolery says. "A lot of officers get involved and really feel for the people they work for. A lot of detectives really put their heart into what they're doing. I'm just lucky to have been recognized."

Woolery treasures the grateful letters often sent to him by victims. A note from one reads, "Without you, I would still be living in a nightmare." That's the best reward there is, Woolery says.

Religious coalition backs Catholics

NEW YORK (AP) — A broad religious coalition, ranging from Baptists to Mormons, have filed a friend-of-court brief backing the Roman Catholic Church against a federal suit seeking to revoke the church's tax exemption.

The suit, pressed by Abortion Rights Mobilization, a New York organization, claims the church violated Internal Revenue Service rules for tax-exempt organizations by campaign activity based on church opposition to abortion.

An appeals court, which heard arguments last week, has yet to rule on a district court's contempt citation and heavy fines imposed on the church for refusing to supply extensive records sought in the suit.

The Rev. Dean M. Kelley, church-state officer of the interdenominational council, says:

"We have a vital stake in the right of churches to stand on what they believe to be moral and religious issues without being deprived of tax exemption or being hauled into court by third parties."

The noted German astronomer Johannes Kepler was born in 1571.

TEAMWORK

TEAMWORK noun a joint action by a group of people in which each person subordinates his individual interests and opinions for the unity of the group.

When the word "teamwork" is mentioned, the most obvious thought is that of football or another sport. While it is true that a football team must have unity, teamwork also applies to business.

If you have a financial need, you need a good bank on your team. You need a financial institution that understands your situation and that can help you complete your project.

In cycling at Goodwill Games

Resident's granddaughter is silver medal winner

The granddaughter of a Hereford woman won a silver medal in cycling at the Goodwill Games in Moscow on Thursday.

Melinda "Mindee" Mayfield, a resident of Michigan and a granddaughter of Roberta Caviness of Hereford, lost the gold medal in the three-kilometer individual pursuit finals by 1.10 seconds.

Mayfield defeated Edith Schoenenberger of Switzerland in the semifinals, 3:53.635 to 3:55.879. Sportscasters of WTBS Sports, which is broadcasting the Goodwill Games, said Mayfield's time was four seconds off the world record.

Then Mayfield competed against another cyclist from Switzerland, Barbara Janz, in the finals. Janz won the finals in a time of 3:49.38, compared to a time of 3:50.48 for Mayfield.

In an interview televised on WTBS Thursday night, Mayfield said this about the finals and her final opponent: "I came in hoping to win. Basically, I rode according to schedule.

"I rode tough, and she rode tough. She had a better kick than I did, and I can't hope for any better than to try my best. I gave it 100 percent."

Mayfield is a native of Lubbock and a graduate of Lubbock Monterey High School. She participated in track in high school, and also at North Texas State University for one season. Mrs. Caviness said her granddaughter is living near Detroit where she is continuing her college education.

Mayfield has been training at the U.S. Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, Colo., this summer. She qualified for the U.S. team with a qualifying mark four and one half seconds off the world record.

Mayfield, in winning the silver medal, became the first U.S. woman to win a medal in cycling at the Goodwill Games.

Some knee problems meant Mayfield has to discontinue her track career, after nine years of running track. She took up cycling through some encouragement of her father.

Last year, Mayfield said running 60 to 70 miles was "just burnout, I guess." She continued, "I got on a bike with the intent of touring, but then some people suggested I start racing."

After she began racing, others told her she could become a world-class rider in one year.

Mayfield has competed in road races, and on criteriums or short courses. She said she prefers criteriums because of her build.

"A roadie is a skinny and wiry person who can climb hills forever, while I have a more muscular body type. I blow up. What I mean by that is my muscles get filled with blood more quickly. I can do well in road racing, but that's not my forte."

Mrs. Caviness said about her granddaughter, "We are very proud of Mindee and think she has represented the U.S. well in Russia. She is a very good sport.

"She conceded beautifully and had great poise when interviewed on international television. I just want her to come from from Moscow with fond memories and the feeling of good will."

Great Pitching Effort

Jason Scott of the Hereford Kids Inc. Babe Ruth League 14 and 15-year-old all-star team cooled down the Plainview bats Friday night in the first game of the district tournament. Scott pitched six innings, allowing only three hits and recording nine strikeouts. He also hit a two-run homer for the first two runs of the game in a 12-4 victory over Plainview. Hereford all-stars beat Plainview 12-4

By GARY CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor

Home runs by Jason Scott, Robby Collier, Todd Collier, Roger McCracken and Kyle Andrews, plus an outstanding pitching effort by Scott, powered the Hereford Kids Inc. Babe Ruth League 14 and 15-year-old all-stars to a 12-4 win over Plainview Friday night.

The game was the first contest of the district tournament being played at the Hereford Kids Inc. Babe Ruth League field in Hereford.

Hereford was scheduled to play Friona at 5 p.m. Saturday. The losers of Friday's and Saturday's games will play at 5 p.m. Sunday.

The winners of the Saturday and Sunday games will play in the district championship at 8 p.m. Monday.

If a second championship game is necessary, it will be played at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Jason Scott hit a home run over the leftfield fence to score Glenn Parker ahead of him, giving Hereford a 2-0 lead in the top of the first inning. Parker hit a double for the first hit of the game.

Roger McCracken then walked, and Robby Collier lined a home run over the left centerfield fence for a 4-0 Hereford lead. Todd Collier hit a bases-empty home run over the centerfield fence to round out the first inning scoring for Hereford.

Scott pitched six innings for Hereford, striking out nine batters and walking five. He allowed only three hits, but all three of those Plainview hits came in the third inning when Plainview sliced the Hereford lead to 5-3.

Those Plainview hits were a double and two singles. The first run was scored on an RBI single, and the second run was scored on an error. The third run was scored with an RBI single.

Hereford loaded the bases in the fourth inning on singles by J.T. Heaton, Keith Brown, and Parker. Robby Collier hit a double deep into left field to drive in two runs, and increase Hereford's lead to 7-3.

Todd Collier tripled in the fifth inning and scored on a sacrifice fly by Heaton.

A pair of two-run homers in the sixth inning made the Hereford lead 12-3. McCracken belted a home run over the centerfield fence, and Kyle Andrews stroked a home run over the leftfield fence.

Plainview scored one run in the bottom of the sixth inning without getting a hit. The bases were loaded with two walks and a hit batsman. The run scored on a wild pitch.

Fidel Ceballos pitched the final inning of the game to help preserve the Hereford victory. He struck out the first batter he faced.

The second batter flied out to leftfield, and the third batter flied out just past the infield near second base.

Probably the most outstanding fielding play of the game for Hereford came in the fifth inning. Hereford leftfielder Keith Brown made a running catch of a line drive off the bat of a Plainview batter, recording the third out of the inning.

In the Canadian Football League, the offensive team has three downs to make a first down.

Pelluer not thorn in side of White

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — With Gary Hogeboom out of the picture and an enthusiastic Steve Pelluer throwing his full support behind Dallas Cowboy Danny White, the quarterback controversy may be a thing of the past.

"I am going to support Danny White until the cows come home," Pelluer said. "I feel that's my job. Danny and I don't have any real conflicts with each other."

There was friction between White and Hogeboom last year as both vied for the starting quarterback post.

But Hogeboom was traded to Indianapolis in April and if Pelluer holds any aspirations of being the No. 1 quarterback, he isn't hinting at it.

"You've got to understand that my personality is a little bit different from Gary's," Pelluer said. "When it comes to football, I try to do my business on the field because the coaches will make the ultimate decision. So I have to prove to them more than anyone else what my abilities are."

"The way I approach it is that I could be the No. 1 quarterback by the end of the year. Danny could get hurt, or I could beat him out. But why worry about it?" he told the Dallas Times Herald.

The White-Pelluer relationship is much like the Roger Staubach-White camaraderie of the 1970s, when White was more like a caddy to the top man than a thorn in his side.

During the off-season, White and Pelluer play racquetball, although White spends most of his free time with his family.

The plan this season is to groom Pelluer for White's job making sure White is comfortable as No. 1, Cowboys coaches say.

"The single-most important thing this season will be to focus on one leader," passing coordinator Paul Hackett said. "The nature of the game of football is to have one leader. But that doesn't mean that when Pelluer is in there, we won't be a good football team."

Last year, with both quarterbacks injured, Pelluer led Dallas to its winning touchdown drive in the final quarter against the Giants.

"If there was ever an example of the value and importance of a third-string quarterback, it was last year. A lot of teams don't have that kind of depth at quarterback," Hackett said.

Cowboys coach Tom Landry said he wants White to feel secure with his job.

"I want Pelluer to compete to a certain extent. But I also want Danny to have the best season he's ever had with us," Landry said.

White, 34, missed two starts last year because of injuries. Aches and pains followed him all season.

Pelluer also led a 77-yard touchdown drive against San Diego that won the preseason game for Dallas.

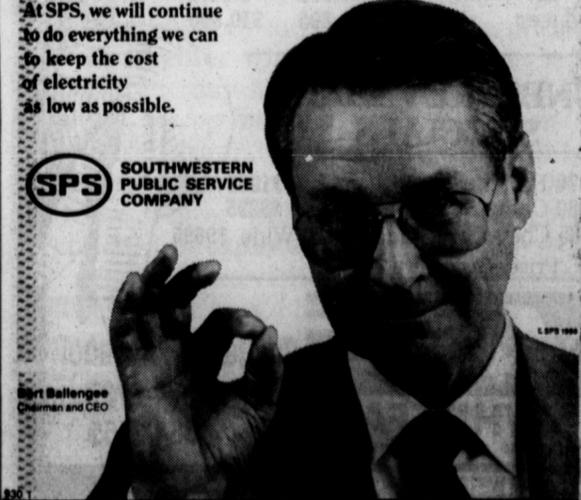

We worked hard to keep electricity costs down . . . and, WE DID IT!

In the last three years, while national electric costs went up 12.7%, we held the line. Most SPS residential customers pay about the same for electricity as they did in 1983 . . . some even less.

At SPS, we will continue to do everything we can to keep the cost of electricity as low as possible.

BUILDING HEREFORD SINCE 1939
344 E. 3rd 364-3434

First indoor mid-season classic played there in 1968

Astrodome is site of '86 All-Star Game

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
P Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — When it opened its doors for the first time April 9, 1965, the weather forecast called for rain, thunderstorms and possibly strong winds.

But that was no concern for the fans who poured into the sparkling new Astrodome, billed as the Eighth Wonder of the World, to witness the first indoor major league baseball game.

Their team, then called the Colt .45s, beat the New York Yankees 2-1. In the 21 years since then, the prototype stadium has been the scene for many memorable sporting moments.

The Major League Baseball All-Star game will add its glitter to the Astrodome's history Tuesday when it returns to the stadium where the first indoor mid-season classic was played in 1968.

The building was only three years old when the National League All-Stars won the 1968 game 1-0. It was the only 1-0 score in All-Star history and the last shutout.

The Astrodome, officially called the Harris County Domes Stadium, has provided memorable entertainment for millions.

The Houston Astros and Philadelphia Phillies battled for the 1980 National League title in the Astrodome in one of the most exciting playoff series in league history.

The Houston Oilers and Pittsburgh Steelers staged tense struggles for American Football Conference supremacy in the Astrodome, where former Oiler Coach Bum Phillips once decreed that the Dallas Cowboys were America's team but the Oilers were Texas' team.

The Astrodome's first-of-its-kind $1 million scoreboard still lights up with a snorting bull and fireworks after each Astros home run and Oiler touchdown. But it's telescreen has been modernized.

The Dome's massive 6,600-ton air conditioner still pumps out a constant 72-degree temperature but batters now seldom blame the Dome's circulation system for a lack of home runs.

A $42 million renovation project recently was completed and workmen have been scrubbing the aging AstroTurf to make it suitable for viewing by millions of fans throughout the world.

All-Star Week begins Sunday with an oldtimers game before the Houston-Philadelphia game. Willie Mays, Johnny Bench, Warren Spahn, Yogi Berra and Bob Feller are among former players who will participate.

Tuesday's All-Star game will give Houstonians a chance to forget their economic problems and double digit unemployment rate. The city's economy has been hard hit by the oil slump. Astros home attendance also could get a boost by having the national spotlight on baseball in the Astrodome.

The Astros' attendance is down this season although the team has been in first place most of the season. At one point, owner John McMullen threatened to move the team to Washington if fans didn't start supporting it.

The Astros have averaged 16,000 through 39 home dates this season.

The game also will provide a generous contribution to a Houston youth baseball league and to The Sunshine Kids, a group that sponsors activities for children with cancer.

Minneapolis, Minn., which hosted the event last year, added $20 to $30 million to its economy and local charities received another $100,000 from the All-Star workout preceding the game.

The Houston Visitors and Tourism Council said it is uncertain what financial benefits Houston will reap from the game.

There will be 25 Sunshine Kids sitting in Commissioner Peter Ueberroth's box at Monday's All-Star workout. The Karl Young baseball league also will benefit from the workout proceeds.

Also planned Monday is a home run hitting contest between the rival All-Stars. The American League won last year's contest 18-17.

The game is a sellout at 45,000.

Ladies Golf Association plans Tuesday meeting

The Ladies Golf Association will hold a meeting Tuesday night after "Drive and Putt Ladies Night" competition.

The meeting will be a regular business meeting to discuss the annual Couples Scramble which is scheduled for Sept. 13-14.

Anyone wanting to participate in the "Drive and Putt Ladies Night" is asked to call the Pro Shop at 364-2782. Top finishers of Ladies Golf Association events this season have been the following:

Scramble, May 27: Helen Ann McWhorter and Ann Combs; Theresa Albracht and Alice Rahfs.

Change Your Partner, June 3: Pat Goforth and Alice Rahfs; Juanita Sims and Norma Hendon.

Drive and Putt, June 10: Alice Rahfs, Bernice Orel, Norma Hendon, and Sherri Mines.

Low Putt, June 17: Joy Stagner and Martha Jones; Joyce Aycock, Bernice Orel, and Rose Marie Robinson.

Hugh Duffy of the Boston Braves set a major-league record for batting averages with a .438 mark in 1894 and also had 49 stolen bases.

son. Poker Scramble, June 24: Lillie Shipman and Alice Rahfs; Martha Jones and Rose Marie Robinson.

Alternate Shoot, July 1: Sherri Mines and Rose Marie Robinson; Theresa Albracht, Lillie Shipman, and Joyce Aycock.

Match Play, July 8: Sherri Mines and Martha Jones; Mary Shelton and Cindy Simons; Norma Hendon and Bernice Orel.

Ladies Golf Association officers said these women need to attend Tuesday night's meeting to accept their prizes.

Also many problems in 1986 season

Astros have good times

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston rookie manager Hal Lanier has been smiling all season at his surprising Astros, although at times it's been between clinched teeth.

The team he took to spring training five months ago was expected to spend the season in mediocrity and finish near the bottom in the National League Western Division.

Instead, the Astros have been in first place much of the first half of the season.

They have the leading strikeout artist in the National League in Mike Scott and a solid 1-2 relieving combination of middle man Charlie Kerfeld and stopper Dave Smith.

Bob Knepper has provided another steady starter in the rotation. First baseman Glenn Davis is developing into the power hitter long missing from the lineup.

Those pleasant developments put Lanier in a good mood.

But the other side of the Astros performance, lack of hitting, recent base running lapses and a key collapse in the bullpen, now are cause for concern.

The Astros rallied briefly last month after Los Angeles Manager Tommy Lasorda suggested the Astros were only renting first place.

But Houston began last week with eight losses in 10 games and Lanier's smile was fading.

"I'm not going to pat them on the back and say it's OK," Lanier said after the Astros lost three of four games in New York. "That's not me. That's not the way I manage. We stunk. That's all here is to it, and they need to know it."

The outspoken Lanier has cajoled his players to be more aggressive baserunners. And no one ever has to guess where he stands with the boss.

"It's the only way I know," explains Lanier, who learned his managing skills as a coach for St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog.

Pitching has been the team's strength and a lack of timely hitting its weakness through the first half of the season.

Houston's combined 3.19 earned run average at the start of the week ranked second in the major leagues to the New York Mets.

Scott and Bob Knepper have been consistent forces among the starting pitchers. Starters Nolan Ryan and Jim DeShaies both have spent time on the injury list.

Kerfeld, an overweight starter last season, has become an efficient, trimmed-down middle reliever. He had a 6-1 record, 1.72 era and two saves to start the week. Smith led the team with 16 saves.

The pitching staff has had to scratch for every victory because of the team's anemic hitting attack. Houston's hitters started the week tied for 22nd in major league hitting with a .245 average.

"Our offense has been sputtering for the last month," Astros third baseman Phil Garner said. "It looks like we're ready to bust loose, and then something happens to us."

Scott tries to take the positive approach to the pitching staff's lack of support.

"You have to bear down on every pitch of every game when it's 0-0 or 1-0," Scott said. "I'd say it's helped me, but a couple of runs might help too."

Through his first 20 starts, Scott received an average of less than three runs per game.

In his last three starts, going into a weekend series in the Astrodome, the Astros scored 25 runs for him.

Ryan has had injury and pitching problems this season. He went from April 25 to June 24 without a victory and spent time on the injury list with an elbow problem. He's also been a victim of the hit drought.

"The cold hard fact of the matter is that when you walk away from one of those hard-luck games, you've still got a loss," Ryan said.

Off-injured right fielder Terry Puhl, shortstop Dickie Thon and left fielder Jose Cruz also have spent time on the team's injury list.

Catching has been a problem too. Mark Bailey, the team's starter the past two seasons, was sent to the minors with a .173 batting average and a 10-game hitless streak in early June.

Still, the team has been a winner over the first half a season.

One year makes a big difference

By ALAN SAYRE
Associated Press Writer
ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — What a difference a year can make.
A year ago, the Texas Rangers already had written off the 1985 season and were aiming toward making 1986 a respectable year. Manager Bobby Valentine, who came on board in May, spent much of his time experimenting while the front office was busy unloading unhappy veterans.
Last April, the Rangers left Pompano Beach, Fla., with a team that could be charitably described as green and a 1986 goal that General Manager Tom Grieve expressed as trying to be "the most improved team in baseball."

The Rangers spent most of the first half of the season near or at the top of the American League West and appear to have succeeded — to considerable disbelief. Even Grieve recently said it was a bit surprising to find the club looking down instead of up.
"They've put in a lot of hard work," Valentine says. "They've got the conviction and it's paid off."
Much of the Rangers' improved offense has come from outfielders Pete Incaviglia, Oddibe McDowell and Gary Ward and infielder Scott Fletcher.

Incaviglia, who a year ago had just wrapped up his senior season at Oklahoma State, skipped the minor leagues and had hit 16 homers by mid-week. Oddibe McDowell, in his second season, had a dozen homers, while Ward, a notoriously slow starter, was hovering around the .300 mark.
Steve Buechele, who replaced Buddy Bell at third base after the longtime Ranger was traded to Cincinnati last summer, has shown increased defensive skill and was hitting in the .260s.

Fletcher had a 20-game streak before the All-Star break during which he hit .357.
The Rangers' designated hitters already have hit more home runs this year than during the entire 1985 season.
The youthful Ranger pitching corps perhaps was the biggest question mark coming out of spring training. Rookies Bobby Witt, who didn't win a single game in Class AA last year, and Edwin Correa have shown some improvement despite periodic outbursts of wildness.
Veteran knuckleballer Charlie Hough and Mike Mason, whom the Rangers had been waiting on to show his full potential, had combined for 14 wins by mid-week despite both missing large chunks of the season to injuries.

The bullpen — a chief source of past Ranger miseries — also has improved. Greg Harris had posted 15 saves by mid-week and the club was fourth in the AL in saves.
Mason and Hough aren't the only key names Valentine has seen on the disabled list. Catchers Don Slaught, who was hit in the face by a pitch from Boston's Dennis Boyd, and Darrell Porter were out at the same time. Designated hitter Larry Parrish also spent time recuperating.
Slaught is back in the lineup, complete with a football-type face protector on his batting helmet.
To Mason, the difference between this Ranger club and the doormats of the past is simple.

"With Bobby Valentine and his enthusiastic attitude, the emphasis is on winning," he said. "It's getting real contagious."
Valentine says his job merely is to "make them comfortable playing the game of baseball."
Before a game last week at Arlington Stadium, Yankees Manager Lou Pinella, who has spent a frustrating year trying to get his team on track, came over to Valentine and told him, "You're doing a great job."

The fans apparently agree with Pinella. The Rangers crossed the 1 million mark in home attendance Tuesday night against New York — the earliest that milestone has been reached in the club's history.
As Mason, who's had more than ample opportunity in past years to count empty seats, says, "It just proves that if you provide a winner, they'll come out."

Running back Larry Moriarty says he considers the team a family business.
"We're not walking around smiling at each other all the time," Moriarty said. "But it is like a family in that we're working hard together to produce something. It's like a family business."
Glanville wanted all the players to take part in his Operation Headstart, a voluntary workout program that started in February.

He was not pleased that backup quarterback Oliver Luck missed some of the early sessions due to law school classes.
"I suppose if this is a family I'm the black sheep right now," Luck said.
"But I think they understand that I had to finish up my law studies. I've been doing it in the off season for three years."

"But the idea of family is a good one. The coaches are trying hard to create the feeling. They are around here every day to help us. It helps to know they're interested in what we are doing."
Adams asked Oiler "family" members not under contract to take a 1 percent pay raise earlier this year because of tough economic times in the oil business, the cornerstone of Adams' empire.
"It doesn't seem fair," an Oiler employee told the Houston Chronicle. "The Oilers made money last year but we get this because of problems in the oil business. One percent is almost an insult."
But so far, the family has stayed together. They'll reassemble July 22 in San Angelo to begin preseason drills.

Glanville wants Oilers to be 'one big happy family'

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — When Jerry Glanville became Houston Oiler head coach early this year, owner Bud Adams and General Manager Ladd Herzog announced there would be no more divisiveness in the organization.

They were going to be one big happy family.
Glanville and his coaching staff picked up on the family approach and they've carried it onto the field through Glanville's "Operation Headstart" program that will lead to the opening of training camp later this month.

So how is the family getting along these days?
Glanville says the philosophy is working perfectly, from the owner to the janitor.

Other are skeptical, including non-contract employees who received only 1 percent raises this year.

"You can feel it," Glanville said. "It's not something we're going to get. It's something we've got."
"Bud Adams has sat at the locker of every player here. He's been to the workouts and he's had a barbecue for the players. This starts with the boss and goes all the way down to the janitor."
The Oilers have tried just about everything else to produce their first winning season since 1980. Glanville finished out last season's 5-11 finish after Hugh Campbell was fired.
Adams, the Oiler owner since its inception in 1960, had faded into the background in recent years, allowing Herzog to face the media and fans' questions about five straight losing seasons.
Players like the idea of a close group. It's obvious management is trying, but many are waiting to see it in action.
"The only thing that will help us be close is to win some games," cornerback Steve Brown said. "All families have arguments. I think we'll get along much better if we win some games."

"Losing causes people to start pointing fingers."

Astros' pitcher says it is winning combination

Baseball, religion are Knepper's life

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Port Arthur News

HOUSTON (AP) — Not many things distress Bob Knepper any more. Life's disturbances still exist. Knepper just handles them better.

Knepper is becoming a consistent winner on and off the field. He was the National League's first 10-game winner this year. But he can take or leave the wins.

While the 32-year-old Astros' lefthander has developed a winning pitcher's pattern, he's accomplished something he said is more important to him — strengthening his Christian faith — even though he's frequently been jeered for it.

Baseball and religion crossed paths for Knepper shortly after he became a Christian in 1977, he said. He was at San Francisco then, and won 17 games for the Giants the next season.

Then, the following two years, the Giants slumped miserably, and Knepper's pitching record plummeted along with it. He went 9-12 in 1979 and 9-16 in 1980.

Knepper is convinced six or seven Christians on the team — and especially him — took the brunt of public criticism for the Giants' slump.

Knepper's stock in San Francisco dropped after he gave up a game-winning homer for the Giants one day. Giants manager Dave Bristol came to the mound to replace Knepper, and San Francisco newspapers reported that Knepper told Bristol on the mound that the home run "was just God's will."

Giants fans never let Knepper hear the end of it, and on Dec. 8, 1980, they were delighted when Knepper and a utility man went to Houston for infielder Enos Cabell.

"I know it never happened and that I never said that remark, but it completely devastated me," Knepper said. "But it completely devastated me. You have to understand San Francisco is a very anti-Christian environment. There's no question the incident turned into a real stumbling block for me. I became a real introvert."

Knepper turned into a recluse, struggling to protect his identity. He struggled on the field, too. As Knepper's lanky body hinted of his great pitching potential, his mental approach needed to mature.

"I definitely had to learn to relax," he said. "I was so excited about being in the big leagues at first. Then, once the newness wore off, I started putting pressure on myself."

Only over the past three years has Knepper overcome his problems as a pitcher and a Christian. When he first joined the Astros, the Christian comments followed him.

"When I came over here and got off to a slow start in 1982, the same stories went around," Knepper said. "The owner was supposedly believing stuff like I just didn't want to win bad enough, that I was too much of a Christian to compete."

The 6-2 southpaw reversed his performance level with an impressive 3.19 earned run average in 1983. But the Astros rarely gave him any support and his 6-13 record looked dismal. Finally the wins came — 15 apiece in the last two seasons with 3.20 and 3.55 ERAs.

With a winning record this year, Knepper is closing in on the .500 mark for his career. He was 97-106 at the end of last season but is not far from pulling even.

"There were times in the past when I was lost out there and didn't know how to get out of it," he said. "This year I've got my rhythm down and my mechanics straight."

When he's effective, Knepper's fluid motion never gets rushed. His windup enables his long arms and legs to contribute, especially on a wide, sweeping breaking ball. If he's keeping the ball down, opponents must hit Knepper early or accept defeat.

After a typical Knepper victory, the Astros' lefthanded pitching ace claims there's more proof he's a loser — the Houston media think he's a boring interview. At least Knepper believes so.

When he wins, Bob Knepper is merely thankful to God for the ability and talent to pitch his way, he said, adding that he isn't trying to pedal Christianity. He's just being Bob Knepper.

"Ninety percent of the members of the media don't want to hear about it," he said. "I've had lots of reporters put down their pads or click off their microphones if I say 'I'm thankful to God for my ability' or if I say something like that. As far as they're concerned, I'm a boring interview."

Bar-None Rodeo set in Plainview July 24-26

Three nights of rodeo action and The Maines Brothers Band are set for July 24, 25, and 26 in Plainview.

The KKYN Bar-None Rodeo promises to draw contestants from throughout a four-state region compete at the Bar-None Arena. Performances begin at 8 p.m. nightly.

Mercury recording group The Maines Brothers Band will play for the dance after the Saturday evening rodeo performance. The dance will be held at the outdoor dance floor just north of the Bar-None Arena. Admission is $8 single, $15 couple.

A parade is scheduled for 2:30 p.m. July 26 in downtown Plainview. Individual civic groups, or riding clubs who wish to have an entry in the parade may call 293-2661.

Books open for the KKYN Bar-None Rodeo on July 22 from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Anyone desiring to enter the rodeo events should call 817-937-8401.

Ticket prices for the rodeo are $4 for adults and $2 for children. Tickets may be purchased at the gate, or in advance at Ragland's Western Wear in Plainview.

AVERAGE PAY
NEW YORK (AP) — Figures released by organized baseball fixed $431,521 as the average major league salary on opening day this year.

According to the Players Relation Committee, there were 656 players on the payrolls of the 26 teams, 34 being on the disabled list. The total payroll was $283,941,298, an increase of about $31 million over 1985.

Rodeo, men's softball tourney set in Tulia

A semi-pro rodeo and a men's 3-2 softball tournament are scheduled in Tulia this month as part of the Wisher County Activities Association's 96th Picnic Celebration.

The TCRA semi-pro rodeo has performances on Friday, July 18 at 8 p.m., and Saturday, July 19 at 8 p.m. at the Cobb-Wheeler-Mote Arena. Awards include an all-around cowboy buckle.

Books open for the rodeo on Monday. For more information on the rodeo, call 995-2598. Open horse racing is scheduled east of the arena before each rodeo performance.

The 10th annual men's 3-2 softball tournament will be held July 18-20. As many as 32 teams may enter the double-elimination tournament. Team trophies will be awarded to the first, second and third place teams, and individuals on the first place team will receive trophies.

Entry fee for the tournament is $80 per team. For more information on the softball tournament, call 995-2132.

Other activities in the 96th Picnic Celebration on Saturday, July 19 include a children's parade and an adult parade in downtown Tulia at 10 a.m.; an old timer's luncheon at 11:30 a.m. at Conner Park; a barbecue lunch at noon at Conner Park; a fiddler's contest at 1 p.m. at Conner Park; and class reunions throughout the day.

Leaving For Convention

Hereford Pilot Club President Donna West, second from left, will be attending the 65th Pilot International Convention July 26-29 in Washington, D.C. The local club, which was organized in September of 1984, has been named as one of the most successful breakfast clubs in the United States. There are currently 48 active club members. Preparing information with West for the "Carnival of Ideas" program to be presented at the convention are from left, Margie Waddell, Brenda Thomas and Martha Jones.

Invitation extended to Pilot Club

The Pilot Club of Hereford has been cited for its outstanding service and has been selected to share ideas on growth for Pilot International with other Pilot Clubs at the 65th Pilot International Convention July 26-29.

Approximately 2,000 Pilot members from around the world are expected to attend the event which will be held at the Washington Hilton Hotel in Washington, D.C.

According to Donna West, local club president who will be attending the convention, the Hereford chapter is one of the most successful breakfast clubs in the United States.

The "Carnival of Ideas" program, under the theme "In Tune With Tomorrow Today", will be presented by President Elect Jorja Turnipseed of Starkville, Ms. who will be installed as the 1986-87 president of Pilot International at the convention.

Pilot International is a classified, civic-service organization of executive and professional women with 21,000 members in more than 600 clubs in eight countries. It was founded in Macon, Ga. in 1921.

Beginning Experience group to meet Friday

The Beginning Experience, a weekend for separated, divorced and widowed individuals, is scheduled for July 18, 19 and 20 at the Bishop DeFalco Retreat Center.

The purpose of the weekend is to help widowed, separated, and divorced people to start over, to help wounds to heal and make a new beginning in their lives. The program stresses that divorce doesn't mean failure. It is planned to emphasize self-discovery, and to help people come to terms with themselves.

A specially trained team of peers leads the participants through a simple program of presentation, private reflection and group dialogue. Priests and ministers are available for counseling if desired.

The weekend is structured so that freely with others if they wish to. If a person prefers to be quiet, no one will intrude on his privacy.

The retreat will begin at 7 p.m. July 18 and close at 4 p.m. July 20. It is open to people of all denominations. The cost, including tuition, room, and meals, is $55.

Ann Landers

A wonderful letter

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have been a firefighter for five years. I wish I had a dollar for every time I've heard someone say, "It took those firemen 20 minutes to get here." Actually, the average response time in our city is five to seven minutes.

The other famous line is, "Why are those firemen just standing around? Don't they care?"

The fact is we DO care or we would have taken easier jobs. When you see firefighters standing around you can be sure there are plenty of us working inside and taking a beating. Those standing around are there to relieve the ones who drop from exhaustion.

Do you have any idea what it is like to be a firefighter? Let me tell you. You go into a building that may have been torched by some creep who was paid a few bucks by an owner anxious to collect the insurance. Or someone thought it would be a good way to get back at a person he didn't like. Or, even worse, a little kid was left unattended and decided to play with matches.

You get inside after most likely climbing three or four staircases. Sometimes it's eight or 10 flights while wearing 30 pounds of gear and equipment. Once inside you search for people. The first place you have to look is where the fire is and you can't see your hand in front of your face. Have you ever been in a room full of fire? I have. The heat is so intense it feels like someone is squeezing your earlobes with a pair of pliers. The temperature is so high you become instantly soaked right down to your shorts.

When you've done the best you can and your body gives out, you have to find the strength to get outside. You thank the Lord that you made it.

Now all those firemen who are "just standing around" take over where you left off, until the job is done. If you're lucky you don't fall through a floor or have a wall or a ceiling cave in on you.

The worst is when we have to carry out the dead—especially children. It tears the heart right out of you, especially when a parent survives and sees these kids.

I hope you will print this letter in your column, Ann. There's a lot more to our job than sitting around and playing cards. Just sign me—J.D., NEW YORK

DEAR J.D.: Thanks for a wonderful letter. Recently I saw a Chicago firefighter on the news. He was at the scene of a fire where six people died. The man was sobbing. He kept repeating, "It was awful. There was nothing we could do to save them."

It brought home to me what a difficult job these people have. I say God bless the firefighters all over the world. They are truly heroes—often unsung and under-appreciated.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Why do people make such comments as, "Gee, you look tired. Do you feel OK?" As far as I'm concerned they might as well say, "You look lousy." It's the same thing.

I was feeling terrific yesterday until a friend made that kind of remark. It took hours before I was able to shake it off. Comment, please.—K.B. IN VAN NUYS

DEAR K.B.: People who make such remarks are either insensitive, stupid, thoughtless, mean-spirited or all of the above.

If it happens again, say, "Thanks for the day-brightener," and keep walking.

A Flair for Design

Art mediums such as watercolor, charcoal and pastel are usually placed behind glass in the framing process for protection against soil, air pollution and handling. Matting is usually considered decorative, but was originally created to form a layer of air between the glass and the surface of the art. The painting or drawing surface, if pressed against the glass over a period of time can stick to the glass, and ruin if ever pulled apart. Mats prevent this from happening and also can be used to enhance the painting by the colors chosen.

Mats are not limited to color only, but can provide texture and pattern, as well. Your own fabric can even be mounted onto a mat for a personal touch in your room.

All types of matting and framing are available to you at FINISHING TOUCHES at 501 E. Park Ave or call 364-8870.

Lack of supervision tied to 300 drownings

Shocked by the drowning of nearly 300 young children each year in residential swimming pools and spas, government safety experts are warning parents and pool owners to maintain constant, alert supervision of children in and around pools and spas.

According to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, lack of constant supervision is one of the reasons why drowning is the fourth leading cause of death to children under five years of age. The agency said that of the 600 drownings in residential pools in 1982, nearly 300 were to children under five, and almost one-third were children below two years of age. Another 3,000 children under five were involved in submersion accidents, some resulting in permanent brain damage.

"It is vital that parents and caretakers be aware of steps they can take now to help reduce the high number of annual child drownings," said CPSC Commissioner Carol G. Dawson. "The most obvious precaution is constant supervision. Children are naturally curious and have the ability to crawl or walk quickly to the water's edge. One moment you have a healthy child, full of life, and the next minute that precious life is lost or damaged permanently. Continual supervision of children around swimming pools and spas is critical."

CPSC offered the following safety precautions for parents and pool owners:

-Never leave a child unsupervised near a pool. Be certain that children do not have access to the pool area through an open gate, open door or through an open window. Fence in the pool area completely, and install self-closing and self-locking gates. Latches should be located out of reach of young children.

-Flotation devices are not a substitute for adult supervision. Don't consider children "drown proof" because they have had swimming lessons. They should be supervised at all times.

-Keep toys and other objects attractive to children away from the pool area because a child playing with such toys could accidentally fall into the water.

-Never use a pool with the cover partly in place. Children could become entrapped under the cover.

-With above-ground pools, remove the steps leading to the pool whenever the pool is not being used.

-Do not leave children unsupervised around a pool. A portable phone near the pool area should be considered during the outdoor pool season.

-Finally, learn how to perform cardio-pulmonary resuscitation (CPR) in the event of a pool emergency. Never assume the victim is dead.

"We must all be alert to the dangers associated with pools and spas, and be sure we are prepared to handle an emergency should a drowning accident occur," Commissioner Dawson added.

Division Chairmen Announced

United Way division chairmen are busily planning events for this fall's United Way fund drive campaign. Each chairman will be organizing their division to get captains and workers for the drive to be held Sept. 8 through Oct. 10. Chairmen from left, stand-

Executive committee meets with chairmen

The executive committee of Deaf Smith County United Way met recently with division chairmen of the 1986-87 United Way campaign.

Opening remarks were made by Helen Langley, campaign chairman, expressing appreciation to division chairmen for their willingness to accept the responsibility of the fund drive campaign.

Orientation was given by Wayne Amstutz, executive secretary, M.D. Gentry, president of Deaf Smith County United Way, and Bobby Owen, vice-president of United Way.

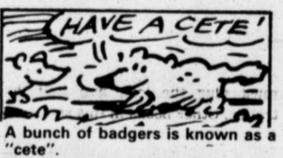

The goal for this year's drive was set at $110,000 and the theme will be "Up, up, and away with United Way."

The campaign will begin Sept. 8 to be held through Oct. 10 and LaJean Henry will be acting as publicity chairman.

Members present at orientation were Betty Drake, chairman of the general division; Leona Kimball, chairman of golden age division; Buddy Peeler, chairman of major division; Carol Sue Legate, chairman of metro division; Margaret Bell, chairman of pacesetters division; Donnie Houle, chairman of special division; and Tony Calkins, chairman of Whiteface division.

Unable to attend but accepting responsibility as division chairmen were Mrs. Violet Reinauer, chairman of agriculture division; and Mrs. Margie Mims, chairman of professional division.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Say goodbye to soggy pie crusts

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — My problem? Soggy pie crusts! I have tried the slightly beaten egg white, but it didn't help. Do you have any other solution? — R.D.

DEAR R.D. — Here are two more techniques to try:

For juicy fruit pies, try sprinkling the bottom of the crust with a thin layer of bread crumbs before putting in the fruit mixture. The crumbs absorb some of the moisture, preventing the juices from soaking into the crust. Result: less-soggy crust.

Slightly pre-bake the crust before putting in the filling. This should work for any pie that is baked in its crust. Try a 10- to 15-minute pre-bake at 425 degrees. Be sure to prick the crust all over with a fork to prevent it from puffing up, or line it with foil and fill with dried beans such as when you fully bake an empty pie shell. You might also try brushing the crust with the egg white before this prebaking to seal it. After the short pre-bake period, put in your filling and finish baking according to recipe directions.

Hope one of these will help. Good luck! — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — When giving a bridal or baby shower or a graduation party, purchase either appropriate thank-you notes or simply a package of envelopes. Before participating, each guest should self-address her envelope, which will be presented to the showeree for use in sending out thank-you messages. Saves so much time for gift recipient in scrounging for addresses, and is much appreciated.

To use up leftover cake, make any flavor pudding. Cut cake into serving pieces. Spoon pudding over each piece, add a dollop of whipped cream and a maraschino cherry or pecan or dash of chopped nuts. Presto! Luscious dessert; no wasted cake! — M.C.D.

Painting Texas Kites

The weather Tuesday may have been a little hot and muggy but these children didn't seem to mind. Approximately 280 members of the Deaf Smith County Library's annual Summer Reading Club met in the museum parking lot to paint Texas kites. The children's mothers assisted library employees with the endeavor.

Legion, auxiliary members to meet Tuesday evening

Members of the American Legion Post No. 192 and the Auxiliary will meet Tuesday evening to hear reports from the Boys and Girls State representatives.

A salad dinner will be served beginning at 7 p.m. to members and guests of both organizations. Boys State delegates who will report are Dale West and Jesse Castello. Girls State delegates are Shannon Hacker and Christie Powell. Shannon will report Tuesday and Christie will report on Tuesday evening, Aug. 5. She has a conflict with 4H Congress.

Boys State is a demonstration in democracy at work. Representatives are sent from Legion post all over Texas. Officers are elected to run the government in all levels of government, beginning at the precinct level and state and county officers. The session is held in June in Austin for one week. The delegates stay in the university dorms.

The Girls State session has a similar program. It is held in Seguin Lutheran College for 10 days.

The Boys and Girls State program is one of the most popular programs of the Legion and Auxiliary. We encourage each member to come out to the Legion Hall on Tuesday, July 15, 7 p.m. Bring a salad and enjoy an entertaining evening. Families of delegates are encouraged to attend.

BOOKS

"High Jinx" by William F.

Buckley, Jr. and "Barrier Island" by John D. MacDonald are the books featured this week at the Deaf Smith County Library.

"High Jinx" is a novel with Blackford Oakes, the singular, sophisticated superspy. The year is 1954. Stalin has died in Moscow and a deadly earnest power play nears its conclusion. Meanwhile, British and American commandos; their mission to liberate a Soviet satellite country, have met a disastrous end. The communications system between English and American intelligence has been penetrated. There is a Spook in their midst.

The team with the track record which includes Rufus, the veteran counter-intelligence strategist, Anthony Trust, CIA station chief in London, and Blackford Oakes. They must plug the leak and find the traitor. Other books in this series include "Marco Polo," "If You Can," "Who's On First," and "See You Later Alligator."

"Barrier Island" is a powerful story of the confrontation of two determined men. It is one of the strongest novels yet from one of America's most admired and prolific writers.

Health, car insurance should be purchased

When you're unemployed and worrying about how to pay bills, one of the last things you may want to think about is health and automobile insurance. But it should be one of your major concerns, says a family economics expert.

"Without insurance, a major illness or accident could lead to financial disaster for your family," cautions Dr. Marjorie Marman.

The best time to check on insurance coverage is before you become unemployed, says the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service specialist.

Find out if your health insurance would continue for any period of time after your last day of work. Depending on your employer's policy, you could be entitled to a grace period during which you may convert your group coverage to an individual policy.

"Keep in mind that the same benefits may cost you more," she says. "However, one advantage of converting a group policy is that you usually don't have to pass a physical examination again."

Another possible option is to investigate an "interim" or "short term" policy, notes the Extension home economist.

These policies usually require no physical examination and can provide coverage immediately after applying. Coverage is for a limited

DISASTER INSURANCE

NEW YORK (AP) — Have you looked at your homeowner's insurance policy lately?

Most Americans don't — until a disaster strikes and they discover the house they insured for $30,000 in 1971 is going to cost about $80,000 to replace.

You may think you're covered against any disaster that might destroy your house, but this can cause a rude awakening when the time comes to take stock.

Check your policy, says insurance expert Mary Rowland in Family Circle magazine. She says there are 17 common "perils," or types of damage, such as fire, theft, smoke, storms and vandalism. While many policies cover "all risks," others cover only certain perils. No standard policy, she says, covers floods, earthquakes, war or nuclear accidents.

Residential Beauty Spots

Two residential beauty spots have been selected this month by members of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Women's Division beautification committee. In top photo is the Jay Eubanks' home located at 326 Hickory. Another outstanding beauty spot is the Earnest Langley's home at 502 Star.

New exhibit to open at Discovery Center

Discoveries of all kinds await visitors to a new exhibit - The Discovery Center - being prepared at The Museum of Texas Tech University.

The progression of life on earth can be studied on a mural, artifacts from other museum exhibits can be scrutinized, computer and video programs will play a variety of educational tapes, all kinds of reference books will be available for identifying birds, rocks and reptiles and a robot will greet you as you enter.

Museum Director Gary Edson said The Discovery Center, which is the initial development of the DeVitt Wing into an exhibit area, will be open some time this fall.

"We want the center to be a place where people, both young and old, can learn and be entertained," said Edson, who is one of two creators of the 1,200-square-foot mural - the centerpiece of the exhibit.

"The mural tells the history of the universe, particularly of life on the South Plains, while the observation cases give examples of what can be found elsewhere in The Museum. The reading area will allow people to teach themselves about a variety of topics."

The first draft of the mural was drawn on paper by David K. Dean, exhibits design manager for The Museum. The drawing was transferred to the wall with an opaque projector and is now being painted with acrylic house paint by Dean and Edson.

The mural begins with a picture of earth and space, suggesting the creation of the universe, Edson said. Dinosaurs, pterodactyls and all kinds of reptiles occupy the large central portion of the mural. A tepee and covered wagon suggest the advent of man late in the mural. The scene ends full circle with a launch of man's investigation of space.

"We want the mural to be as realistic and scientific as possible and yet entertaining," Edson said.

Besides telling the progression of life on earth, the mural shows many of the changes which have taken place in the environment, Edson said. The red skies of a fiery creation give way to the calm, blue skies of today's South Plains and the terrain, at first craggy and rugged, gradually levels into mesa.

"The mural implies that man is relatively new on the scene," Edson said. "It was millions of years before

VITAMIN-RICH VEGETABLE

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - What's your asparagus IQ? Asparagus is a vitamin-rich vegetable, with vitamins A and C, according to Del Monte USA, a producer of canned asparagus. The vegetable is also high in potassium and low in calories. It comes from the lily family, which includes onions, garlic, leeks, hyacinths and tulips.

man appeared and that is shown by the very short space mankind is given in the mural."

Reference books are being used as guides for the drawings to make them as lifelike as possible.

Observation cases and drawers will be built in around the room to highlight offerings of The Museum, including costumes, art, artifacts, rocks, insects and butterflies, native American objects and farm tools. Some of the items can be viewed close up, while others can be taken to study tables.

A reading area will house reference books, slide shows and computer programs on a variety of subjects.

A robot will welcome visitors, Edson said, either with a generic message or a personalized one when a group visit is scheduled in advance.

DESIGNERS GET ROYAL TREATMENT
NEW YORK (AP) - The desire for status has created a licensing industry so profitable that many famous designers would find it hard to exist without it.

One famous designer reported that last year more than 90 percent of his income came from royalties on licenses. And few, if any, designers actually design every item sold under their names.

But whether the designer is personally involved or not is not the issue, according to the executive director of an industry association. "The customer knows the designer doesn't design everything that his name goes on," he said. "It's a guidepost, an image."

AID TO SCIENCE
BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) - One of the obstacles to medical research is the high cost and scarcity of certain yeast and bacteria cells for experiments.

Phillips Petroleum says it has engineered a technology that allows extremely high levels of such organisms to be produced rapidly and cheaply, allowing scientists to pursue their studies.

Extension service to train day care providers

The home economics program of the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX) will offer a training program for home day care providers beginning in August.

Dr. Lynn White, Extension family sciences project supervisor, says the program is designed for care providers who do not have training opportunities available in their area, or those whose home day care businesses and family responsibilities keep them too busy to attend outside classes and workshops.

TAEX specialists developed the self-instructional child care manual and videotape series on nutrition, health and safety, child development and home business management which will be available through county Extension offices.

Development of the program has been funded in part by grants from the Texas Department of Human Services and the Corporate Child Care Fund for Texas.

White says that more than 469,000 Texas families rely on some type of child care outside the home, with the majority of very young children receiving care from women who care for children in their family homes. "Further education for family day care providers is a step toward greater professionalism for them and toward quality child care for young children in Texas," White remarks.

Diane Welch, extension family life specialist and program coordinator, says there are over 18,000 family home day care providers registered with the Texas Department of Human Services and estimates of an equal number of unregistered providers.

She explains that extension home economists will initiate the program for these family day care providers in 29 counties during late summer and fall. By January 1987, the program will be available in all Texas counties.

Scotland

Scotland is a kingdom now united with England and Wales in Great Britain. It occupies 37 percent of the main British island, plus the Hebrides, Orkneys, Shetlands and other small islands. It is approximately 275 miles long and 150 miles wide, with a population of slightly more than 5 million.

Red Cross Update

The water safety Instructors class will begin Monday at the City Pool. The class will begin at 6:30 p.m. and finish about 9 p.m.

Those interested in taking the class must be at least 17 years of age and have a current advanced lifesaving card. Debbie Black will be the instructor for the class. Those interested should contact the Red Cross office.

The basic rescue and water safety (junior lifesaving) class will begin Monday at the City Pool. Those interested in taking this class should be good swimmers and be at least 11 years old. Those interested should register at the first class meeting. Cost of the class is $3.50 pool fee and $1.35 for the book.

The Uniformed Volunteers met for their regular luncheon meeting. Jubilee plans were discussed. Plans were made to attend a training session at the Amarillo Chapter House July 30. The next meeting will be a workday Aug. 7 at the office. Those attending were Audine Dettman, Nell Culpepper, Mildred Brown, Olivia Brown, Ken Brown, Lesvia Brown, Alice Gilleland, Aaron Gilleland and Betty Henson.

A CPR class will be held Wednesday from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. and finish Thursday. Both classes will be held at the Red Cross office.

A first aid class will be held Monday, July 21 from 2 to 5 p.m. at the Red Cross office. The class will finish Monday, July 28 at the Red Cross office.

Special thanks to all of those volunteers that have helped with water safety classes this summer. More than 30 volunteers have assisted with the classes.

The last session of water safety classes is scheduled to begin July 21 and finish Aug. 1. Registration for the classes will be held Saturday, July 19 from 9 to 11 a.m. at the City Pool. Cost of the classes will be $3.50 pool fee. Children should be at least six years old to register. The adult classes will be held 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. with registration at the first class. Instructors, aides and a babysitter for the instructors children are needed.

The Red Cross Volunteers swimming party will be held Monday, Aug. 4, 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., at the City Pool. The Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross is a United Way Agency.

Special thanks to Jack Rodgers of Jacks Marine. Jack has donated two children's sized life jackets or P.F.D.'s to be used in our water safety classes. Jack had previously donated five adult sized jackets. We really appreciate his concern for teaching students how to be safe in the water.

MELISSA ANN MENDEZ, JOE SOLIZ JR.

Medical careers to be topic of discussion by counselors

Counselors from West Texas State University will hold a special information session on July 31 for the benefit of those interested in training for medical careers.

The information session will run from 3:30-6 p.m. on Thursday, July 31, at Northwest Texas Hospital, 1501 S. Coulter. Interested persons may drop by any time during these hours.

The session is designed to inform adults of their options, whether they are considering career advancement or training for a new career in a medical profession. WTSU's counselors will give person-to-person answers to any questions regarding programs available, financial aid, or just how to get started.

WTSU has a strong record in placing its students in medical, dental, physical therapy, optometry and medical technology programs. Last spring, 17 of 22 WTSU grads who applied to health professions schools were accepted, far above state and national averages.

For further information contact Gracie Chrusic, 656-3871.

Association executive to address Board of Realtors

John Walton of Lubbock, Region I vice president for the Texas Association of REALTORS (TAR), will address the Hereford Board of REALTORS at 11:45 a.m., Tuesday.

The luncheon will be held at the Hereford Country Club. Walton will update members on the events of TAR's 66th Annual Convention in El Paso, June 17-21.

Walton is president of Century 21-Big State Real Estate Inc. in Lubbock. He is a longtime member and past president of the Lubbock Board of Realtors. In 1983 he was named Realtor of the Year by the board. Walton has been a TAR director for two terms and served on the nominating and multiple listing committees.

As Region I vice president, Walton serves the 11 Boards of Realtors in the Panhandle region, including Lubbock, Amarillo and Hereford.

TAR is the largest trade association in Texas with a membership of over 50,000. TAR is dedicated to increased professionalism in the real estate industry. TAR also belongs to the National Association of Realtors.

Halford selected

The United States Achievement Academy announced recently that Kristie Halford has been named a United States National Award winner in physical education.

Kristie, a student at Stanton Junior High School, is the daughter of Marie Halford. Her grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. W.H. Walser of Hereford and Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Barnett of Amarillo.

The youth was nominated by Coach Kathy Rundell, a physical education teacher.

The academy selects USAA winners upon the recommendation of teachers, coaches, counselors or other school sponsors and upon the standards of selection set forth by the academy.

DR. GOTT Are doctors heels or healers?

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

I'm often criticized by colleagues for exposing the negative qualities of doctors. I'm told that what I write is unfair; it characterizes only a small portion of the medical community. My writing is said to sensationalize a black-sheep minority. My associates sometimes would like to shear me for grazing on a plot of grass that doesn't represent the whole pasture. They tell me that the overwhelming majority of physicians and surgeons are caring, skillful, compassionate and more dedicated to diagnosis than to the dollar. I used to admit that this was true. I'm not so sure anymore.

Medical journals devote increasing space to editorials headlining the fact that doctors are in deep trouble. Dr. George Lundberg, writing in the Journal of the American Medical Association, states: "Never in modern history has the medical profession been weaker. To a great extent, physicians are becoming seen as highly successful businessmen who are functioning with the business ethic rather than the professional ethic." In a 1985 AMA study, 67 percent of the public believed that doctors were too interested in making money; only 27 percent thought that physicians' fees were reasonable. More than 50 percent said doctors were deficient in explaining things.

Dr. David Hilfiker, author of "Healing the Wounds: A Physician Looks at His Work," claims that "we physicians have been seduced by money; we have been bound to it. Money has become the measure of what we do, the yardstick of our work. In a consumer society such as ours, we doctors are not alone in our idolatry, but our seduction is such a major change from the roots of our profession that it should not go unnoticed."

You bet it hasn't gone unnoticed. Most patients have noticed it. As doctors have become more knowledgeable about disease, they've also become more conspicuous in their devotion to money. Perhaps it is this conspicuousness that rankles the public.

Dr. Hilfiker suggests that physicians should "base their income on their own need rather than on what the market can bear." This argument is flawed. Doctors have many needs and, for some, financial needs are paramount. That's the issue. How much is enough?

Dr. Lundberg urges physicians to follow 11 steps, including being more open about explaining medical fees, exercising better office management and trying to change their image — "thereby becoming viewed again primarily as pro-active rather than reactive and as promoting rather than opposing progress."

This sounds reasonable. The trouble is that greedy doctors are precisely the ones who are least likely to be influenced by such appeals.

I think that conspicuous avarice is a major character flaw in many of today's M.D.s. Somewhere along the line, we get our priorities mixed up. If we are, indeed, in trouble as a profession, it may be because we want the best of two worlds. We want to be seen as financially comfortable — even affluent — yet we also hanker to be perceived as dedicated, sympathetic and understanding. Our profession contains a wide divergence of outlooks. Some doctors want above all to help the sick and infirm; others, quite frankly, look on medical practice as a way to become wealthy. I don't believe that we can have it both ways.

Corporations are being raided and destroyed; towns and municipalities have difficulty finding insurance; farmers are desperate. I think that we doctors would feel better about doctoring if we worried less about ourselves and paid greater attention to more seemly conduct. The world is fundamentally hostile to doctors, as well as to truckdrivers and teachers, but this is no reason to be piggy.

The answer won't come from the ranting of medical leaders or the raving of government bureaucrats. You, the consumer, can make the choice between the Honda-healer and the Mercedes-MD. For our part, we physicians have to acknowledge which flag we follow: ministry or materialism. Do we administer caring with our care or, on the other hand, do we regard patients as things to be fixed for a service charge?

In reality, doctors rarely embrace one extreme or the other. We vacillate and try to grope our way in the gray area in between. We want our children to be well-educated. We want to be able to afford vacations. We expect fair remuneration for our 60-hour workweeks. We hope to have an adequate retirement income.

However, none of us, during our training years, could have predicted the many ways in which financial concerns corrupt our altruism. Experience teaches us to walk a fine line. Apparently, for increasing numbers of doctors, that fine line is becoming less distinct.

JOYCE ACKER, THOMAS SCHLABS

Engagement announced

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Acker of Nazareth announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Joyce Lynn Amarillo, to Thomas Wayne Schlabs of Hereford.

The prospective bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Schlabs of Route 4, Hereford.

The couple plan to be united in marriage Sept. 6 at the Holy Family Catholic Church in Nazareth.

Miss Acker, a 1979 graduate of Nazareth High School, received a B.S. degree in medical technology in 1983 from West Texas State University. She is currently employed at Northwest Texas Hospital Laboratory.

Schlabs, a 1975 graduate of Hereford High School, received a B.S. degree in plant science in 1979 from WTSU. He is presently engaged in farming near Hereford.

To clean a badly stained broiler pan, sprinkle heavily with dishwasher detergent or dry laundry detergent. Cover with dampened paper towels and let stand an hour or so.

Progressive Reunion set July 20

The 27th Annual Progressive Reunion is planned for Sunday, July 20, at the Hereford Community Center. All former residents and friends are invited.

Those attending are asked to bring a basket dinner. Cold drinks and paper plates will be provided.

According to Clyde Russell, president of the reunion, the center will be open at 10:30 a.m. and a program is scheduled that day.

BREATHE RIGHT

NEW YORK (AP) — People can suffer from hundreds of different phobias, such as a fear of flying, fear of heights or just driving alone on the expressway.

A specialist in phobias advises that the way you breathe and the way you sit can help to manage one's fears.

"It is always better for you to swallow your saliva a few times, which facilitates effective breathing, and keep both feet flat on the floor about 12 inches apart," says Kolman Korentayer of the Humiston Holistic Health Center here. "This is the first step toward interrupting the panic buildup."

Auxiliary meets for supper

The Ladies Auxiliary to VFW Post 4818 met in regular session Monday night with Marie Goheen presiding. The meeting was preceded by a salad supper for VFW and Auxiliary members.

During the business session, minutes were read and approved, correspondence read and bills paid. Plans were begun for the District 13 Convention which will be held in Hereford Aug. 23-24.

Members present were Helen Bishop, Betty Boggs, Martha Bridges, Leone Buckley, Doris Coffin, Marie Goheen, Maisie Heath, Ruth Morris, Erma Murphey, Sadie Shaw, Doris Wilson and Vicki Yocum.

The next meeting will be July 21 at 8 p.m.

Westway Reunion scheduled

All former and current residents of Westway are invited to the community's annual reunion July 27 in the Westway Community Center.

Those planning to participate in the day's activities are asked to bring a basket lunch. Drinks and breads will be furnished.

A short program is on the reunion's agenda. Also, special recognition will be given to the oldest and youngest persons in attendance and those who have traveled the furthest.

A honorary mayor will be named to succeed Lola Landers.

MR. AND MRS. HENRY KIRVIN STRINGER II

Marriage announced

Catherine Renee Rison and Henry Kirvin Stringer II were married June 17 at White Rook Lake in Dallas. The Rev. Leroy Summers, associate pastor of Park Cities Baptist Church in Dallas, performed the ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Richard L. Rison of Ardmore, Okla., Marie Stringer of Hereford and H. K. Stringer of Pineville, La. Honor attendants at the ceremony were Laura Weatherbee of Dallas and David Gregory of San Antonio. The bride attended schools in Ardmore, received a degree in sociology from Colorado Woman's College in Denver and a degree in accounting from the University of Texas in San Antonio.

The groom, a 1975 graduate of Hereford High School, received a degree in journalism from Southwest Texas State University at San Marcos.

The couple is residing in Dallas where she is an accountant for Candy and Schonwald and he is a manager for Diversified Human Resources Group, Inc.

Advisory service renamed

DALLAS — A unique national advisory service that provides personal self-assistance to the general public through hundreds of banks and thrift associations across the nation has been renamed National Resource Network, Inc.

The service is provided in Hereford through Hereford State Bank. It was originally formed as Special Organizational Services (SOS).

The privately-held company has also realigned its administrative and marketing policies to further increase the value of its various products and services, it was announced by the president, Beverly Redfean.

The company was first initiated to assist widows and other surviving dependents to organize and regain control of their financial planning for changed-life circumstances.

"Through the years, those services have evolved into multiple programs and educational aids for benefit of anyone who needs assistance in developing a systematic program of personal planning and money management," Ms. Redfean explained.

From company headquarters in Dallas, National Resource Network is enhancing and expanding its various educational aids and personal-financial programs. These changes are in response to meeting the growing needs of people in local communities. National Resource Network awards sponsorship to qualified banks and other financial institutions within defined geographical areas. This sponsorship permits these agencies to offer individual guidance as well as a variety of record-keeping forms, booklets and other information to the general public.

Some of the educational aids or programs offered by NRN are: Personal money management; procedures to follow after divorce, disability, death of a spouse; retirement; record keeping of vital information, and career redirection.

"One objective of the NRN is to assist people all across the country to identify and organize their personal affairs and financial records, no matter what the circumstances," said Ms. Redfean.

Two attend annual meeting

B. J. Gilliland and Steve Nieman of Hereford were among 6,000 members of the Million Dollar Round Table (MDRT) gathering in Orlando, Fla., this past week for the exclusive life insurance sales association's 59th annual meeting.

Forty countries around the world were represented, making MDRT the most comprehensive sales forum in the life insurance industry.

During the five-day meeting, 100 professional speakers discussed subjects of vital concern to those in the life insurance and financial planning fields. Experts in such areas as estate planning, taxes, business and law shared their knowledge in a series of intense seminars and general sessions.

Displayer of the Month

Helen Gregory was chosen displayer of the month at Deaf Smith County Library. Gregory's display consisted of family Indian artifacts made of turquoise, amethyst, tiger eye, garnet, mother of pearl, and other stones. Gregory strings her own necklaces and also has a display of two candelabras made of mesquite root. The candelabras date back to 1897 and are believed to have been used by the first pioneers in New Mexico.

Accent on Health

Wind-blown hair and the fast lane of the open road, from astride a powerful two-wheeler, may sound exciting to some. But for all too many, a motorcycle ride ends with an ambulance trip to the hospital—or to the morgue.

A recently completed Texas Department of Health (TDH) study shows motorcyclists, especially those who do not wear safety helmets, are at high risk of disabling or fatal injuries.

The study also shows that accident victims without helmets have more serious head injuries, spend more time in the hospital, and cost the taxpayers more money for treatment and care than those who wear helmets.

Dr. Robert Bernstein, Texas Commissioner of Health, said "This study reinforces something we already knew—motorcycles and dangerous. Motorcyclists, even those wearing helmets, are among the most vulnerable people on the road. But the study also clearly shows that choosing to ride a motorcycle without a helmet multiplies the risk of serious injuries and the ultimate cost to us all."

Since the state law requiring motorcyclists to wear protective helmets was repealed in 1977, fatal injuries to bikers have increased. During those nine years, motorcyclists accounted for 10 percent of all traffic fatalities, although motorcycles constituted only 3 percent of all registered vehicles.

In 1976, the year before the repeal, with 267,419 registered bikes on the road, there were 186 motorcyclists killed and 8,173 injured. By 1985, with 309,008 bikes registered, 361 bikers were killed and 10,236 injured.

An average of 12 motorcyclists per 10,000 bikes die each year now, compared to an average of seven per 10,000 bikes in the years before the helmet law was repealed.

Texas, and about half of the other states in the U.S., repealed its helmet requirement under pressure from motorcycle enthusiasts who claimed the law violated their personal freedom. Since then, in view of rising accident rates and soaring insurance rates, many states have reinstated the law. Attempts to revive the law in Texas are still opposed by motorcycle clubs and individuals, although some opinion polls among bikers and the majority of motorcycle dealers support reinstatement.

"Our (TDH's) study is the most comprehensive piece of evidence yet compiled for Texas that motorcycle helmets save lives and reduce the severity and expense of injuries," Dr. Bernstein said.

In conducting the study, TDH used statistics from the Texas Department of Public Safety and from the trauma registry at Brackenridge Hospital in Austin. The hospital's records show that between February 1985 and January 1986:

-Injured cyclists who had worn helmets stayed in the hospital an average of 10 days, at a cost of $7,211; while unhelmeted cyclists averaged 22 days, at a cost of $17,155;

-Forty-one percent of the unhelmeted cyclists, compared to 27 percent of helmeted cyclists, had no hospital insurance; and

-Injuries, especially to the head and nervous system, were dramatically more severe (4.27 on the hospital's scale of 6) among unhelmeted victims than among those with helmets (1.77 on the scale of 6).

"The needless human damage and death is shocking, but the fact that so many of the victims have no insurance to pay their expenses also should be important to everyone," Dr. Bernstein added. "The average taxpayer ends up with these hospital bills. Even when a victim has insurance, his bill helps boost insurance rates for all policy-holders."

"These findings clearly show that the risky preferences of a few can become burdensome to us all. The price paid by victims, their families, and society as a whole far outweighs any possible loss of freedom. Law or no law, I strongly urge motorcyclists to do themselves and others a simple favor by wearing a helmet for protection," Dr. Bernstein said.

Reception set today for couple

A 50th wedding anniversary reception is planned for 2:30-4:30 p.m. today in First Christian Church to honor Mr. and Mrs. John Hunter of 237 Ave. J.

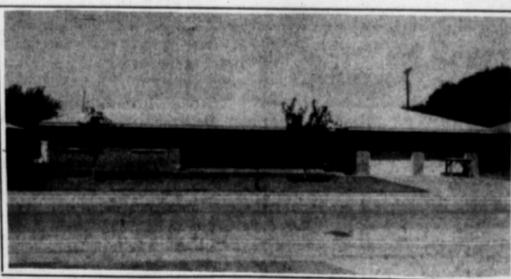

All friends and relatives are invited to attend the observance hosted by their children and grandchildren.

WHEN TO SHAVE?

BOSTON (AP) — When do men shave?

According to a Gillette survey, about 50 percent of men who shave do so after a bath or shower, 40 percent shave before a bath or shower, and the rest shave during a bath or shower.

"The study also shows that two-thirds of blade shavers spend less than 30 seconds in preparing their beards for shaving," says Derek Coward, a Gillette official. "Half of these individuals spend less than 15 seconds for this ritual."

In 1928, a hurricane killed 1,836 people at Lake Okeechobee, Fla.

Although 35 countries produce silk, their combined production adds up to only 0.2 percent of the world's total production of textile fibers. China, India, the Soviet Union and South Korea are the leaders.

The United States began manufacturing silk products in the early 1800s and by 1915 was the biggest importer of silk, mostly for stockings. But World War II, which diverted silk for military uses, helped turn silk stockings into luxury items.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Researchers working on the Strategic Defense Initiative report progress on the electromagnetic rail gun, which one day may be based in space to fire "smart bullets" at intercontinental ballistic missiles.

The gun uses vast amounts of electricity to create a magnetic field to accelerate each bullet.

The rail gun is one of many possible weapons under research within the SDI, which President Reagan says is designed to allow U.S.

policy-makers to decide in the early 1990's whether to deploy advanced missile defenses.

According to information released by the Pentagon, and compiled by the American Federation of Scientists, the most extensive rail gun contracts have gone to the University of Texas at Austin, $33 million, followed by General Dynamics, $21 million; Boeing, $20 million; Ford, $16 million, and Rockwell, $10 million.

Despite some reported progress, former Defense

Secretary Harold Brown, writing in the magazine Foreign Affairs last winter, described research on rail guns as "too preliminary" to include them in early designs for space-based defenses.

Brown, who has been critical of SDI, known popularly as "Star Wars," wrote: "Rail guns may be useful, but only if they meet very ambitious goals" for the speed the bullets would travel, their weight and the rate at which they could be fired.

Two Star Wars backers, Fred Seitz, president emeritus of Rockefeller University, and Robert Jastrow, professor of earth sciences at Dartmouth College, are more optimistic about rail guns, but point out some problems.

Researchers, they said in an October 1985 article, are developing switches capable of handling the vast amounts of electricity needed to accelerate the bullets. However, it is not clear whether a generator capable of producing that much electricity could be orbited.

Another problem cited by Jastrow and Seitz is "building a computer for the brain of the 'smart bullet' that can withstand the tearing stresses of this acceleration," which they estimate at 100,000 times normal gravity.

Petroleum center continues work

By MATT MYGATT Associated Press Writer

SOCORRO, N.M. (AP) — Solar panels stand neatly in rows atop the two-story building — billboards advertising alternative energy sources amid fears of oil shortages.

A pump jack poises in front of the building, a frozen reminder that oil is still king.

The energy crisis of the early 1970s gave birth to the New Mexico Petroleum Recovery Research Center, which studies methods of squeezing more oil from rock once Mother Nature has done all she can.

Times were good to the center. Higher oil prices and anguish over oil shortages caused oil companies to invest more money in research to improve recovery of the black gold.

Then oil prices started falling last year. Dollars for research began drying up and competition for money stiffened.

But the center is unique and the researchers are top-of-the-line, so it still attracts research money from those still aware that oil is a finite resource and much of it cannot be recovered without advanced techniques.

"There is nothing exactly like this in the United States," said Dr. Joseph Taber, director of the center that was started in 1975. "We do a mixture of applied work and good academic research."

The companies and organizations that have supported work at the PRRC read like a who's who in the oil business — Texaco, Mobil, Exxon, ARCO, Marathon, Shell, Tenneco, Conoco.

They also come from other countries — Abu Dhabi National Oil Co., Japan National Oil Corp., Societe Nationale Elf Aquitaine of France, Petro-Canada Resources.

Between 200 and 300 people visited the PRRC from July 1985 to June 1986. They came from 40 foreign countries including Norway, Australia, Hungary and, most recently, from Red China's Xi'an Mining Institute.

"They came because they were aware of our work," Taber said. "Good research will attract good people."

The PRRC has a budget of from $1.4 million to $1.5 million a year — approximately 40 percent from the state, 35 percent from industry and 25 percent from the U.S. Department of Energy.

"Times are more difficult for us," Taber said. "Two or three of the major oil companies have said it would be more difficult to support our work as they have in the past."

"Some will try to fill out their contribution by donation of equipment because oil companies are just cutting back very severely in their own research efforts," he said.

"However, the far-seeing companies still are enthusiastic about support," Taber said.

"As they are forced to cut back, they can only work on their own specific oil reservoir problems," he said.

"The hope is that we are working on more generic solutions that can be applied to various reservoirs and companies that can't support too much research on their own," Taber said.

Smaller companies, consortiums and the larger companies all can benefit from research at PRRC, he said.

"They can get their results for much less than if they can maintain that kind of research level in their own laboratories," Taber said.

The DOE has been cutting back on its funding of enhanced oil recovery at the university level, he said.

"This is very short-sighted, I think, on the part of our national government," Taber said. "International funding has been going up markedly in the last several years."

"In about 1977, if you totaled all the research in all of those countries, it would be similar to the research in the United States," he said.

"Through the years, their funding has increased and ours has decreased," Taber said. "That is a very difficult thing for us because the United States Department of Energy has been saying, 'Let's let oil companies do it.' But the problem is oil companies must work on their own specific problems."

"They feel they have been paying more than their share of taxes anyway," he said. "A lot of this research needs to be funded by the government for the help of all the oil technology — to address problems all companies can benefit from."

Taber said he has not lost his optimism that PRRC will do more research, "but we accept the (current) level. I predict a steady and vigorous but very modest growth."

"We have to work hard to continue the funding from several sources," he said. "New Mexico still provides a base budget for administration and a nucleus for some research.

"That kind of seed money, along with some major U.S. DOE projects enabled us to produce some very high quality work which was published in scientific and technical journals," he said.

The PRRC work is done by 35 engineers, scientists, technicians and support staff. Another 25 to 35 student part-time employees also work on projects that often are related to their academic degrees.

They work in 22 laboratories equipped with gauges, tubing, high-pressure metal cylinders, sophisticated electronic equipment — some manufactured by staff and students — elaborate microscopes and all shapes and sizes of scientific glassware.

They look for ways to improve oil recovery once natural underground pressure, which drives oil to the surface, is exhausted.

"Primary recovery is just opening the valve and allowing the pressure within the formation to force the oil out of the rock and into the well bore," Taber said. "They'll eventually install a pump."

Nature's pressure, with a little help from pumps, allows 15 percent to 20 percent of the oil in an underground reservoir to be recovered, he said.

Secondary oil recovery involves injecting water underground into the reservoir, forcing the oil to the producing well, Taber said.

"We can recover another 15 to 20 percent by water flooding," he said. "But that leaves more than one-half the oil still underground. The last half we try to get out with tertiary recovery."

Nationally, it is estimated "that of all the oil discovered, there's still about 327 billion barrels downstairs," Taber said. "Our proved reserves are listed at about 28 billion barrels."

"There's almost 10 times as much oil that presently is not considered recoverable unless these newer methods can be implemented."

Peanut butter not a hit with guerrillas

INDURMAR GHAI, Afghanistan (AP) — Peanut butter is not winning the struggle for hearts and stomachs in Afghanistan.

The all-American food, in olive-green plastic combat ration packs, is reaching Moslem guerrillas fighting the Soviet-backed communist regime. But many of the guerrillas are less than enthusiastic about the foreign delicacy.

"I don't like it. It is not good to my stomach," said a guerrilla named Amarullah.

Dozens of unopened packets of peanut butter from Visalia, Calif., dotted the hillside of the insurgent base here.

It took a while to find a guerrilla who admitted to liking the stuff.

"I like it because it has vitamin A, vitamin B, vitamin C and other good things," said a guerrilla named Narullah.

"It does not taste so bad," said the fighter, apparently impressed with the food's nutritive qualities listed on the pack.

Part of the problem seems to be that no one has explained to the guerrillas that peanut butter is better spread on bread than eaten by itself.

The oversight is not unusual. Neither have the rebels been told to add water to dehydrated peaches and fruit salad also supplied in combat packs.

But the guerrillas said that even dry, the peaches from Edinburg, Texas, and the fruit salad from Albany, Ore., tasted a lot better than peanut butter.

The peanut butter and dehydrated fruit, sent by the U.S. government to Afghan refugees in Pakistan, have found their way to the guerrillas, who are fighting Afghan government forces and an estimated 115,000 Soviet troops.

U.S. Embassy officials in Pakistan said the supplies are given to the refugees as humanitarian assistance and are not intended for the guerrillas.

The rebels, most of whom cannot read the English on the packs, seemed a little confused about where the peanut butter came from.

"It comes from China," said a guerrilla called Sharah Khan.

"No, Saudi Arabia," said a friend.

Samuel Morse gave the first public demonstration of his magnetic telegraph in 1837.

Computer management short courses offered

COLLEGE STATION — Farmers and ranchers wanting to learn more about using computers as management tools can select from a wide range of computer short courses being conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in the coming months.

Three-day short courses are being conducted throughout the year at the Stiles Farm Computer Training Center at Thrall, about 6 miles east of Taylor on U.S. 79. Cooperating with the Extension Service in this training are the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and the Department of Agricultural Economics at Texas A&M University.

"The short courses are designed to provide in-depth subject matter training and hands-on microcomputer use of software available from the private sector and Texas A&M," points out Dr. Jim McGrann, economist with the Extension Service and Experiment Station. "Participants also have an opportunity to see ongoing computer applications in a commercial agricultural environment, so this presents a unique learning situation."

Dates and topics of the upcoming short courses are as follows:

1986

- July 15-17, —Rice Management with Microcomputer Decision Aids.
- July 15-17, —Records and Management Decision Aids for Beef Cattle Producers (High Rainfall Areas)
- Sept. 23-25, —Records and Management Decision Aids for Beef Cattle Producers (High Rainfall Areas)
- Oct. 21-23, — Electronic Spreadsheets and Their Use in Agriculture
- Dec. 9-11 — Farm and Ranch Accounting

1987

- Jan. 6-8, —Farm and Ranch Office Applications of Microcomputers
 - Jan. 13-15, —Crop Production and Financial Management
 - Feb. 10-12, —Cotton and Grain Marketing Strategies for Texas Farmers
 - Feb. 17-19, —Farm and Ranch Financial Planning and Analysis
 - March 5-7, —Records and Management Decision Aids for Range Livestock Producers (Low Rainfall Areas)
 - March 24-26, — Electronic Spreadsheets and Their Use in Agriculture
 - April 7-9, —Beef Cattle Performance and Health Management Records and Analysis, Nutrition and Economic Decision Aids
 - May 12-14, —Advanced Electronic Spreadsheet Development and Applications in Agriculture
 - July 14-16, —Farm and Ranch Accounting
- To register for the short courses, contact Rosemary Schoenfeld, Department of Agricultural Economics, Texas A&M University, College Station, Tx. 77843-2124 or call 409-845-8792.

Insemination clinic set

An artificial insemination and palpation clinic will be held in Tullia, July 21-24, at the Courthouse Annex Building and the Tullia Livestock Auction. Classes will begin at 8:30 a.m. and conclude at 4:30 p.m. each day.

For information contact David Gibson at 995-3726.

Interested persons should contact Gibson by noon on July 17. All participating persons will receive classroom and practical instruction at the clinic.

Scent signal jam may save crops

WASHINGTON (AP) — If some Agriculture Department scientists are successful, it might be possible one day to jam the scent signals received by destructive insects so they don't chew or suck the life out of the nation's farm crops.

The scientists are inserting tiny probes into the antennae of Mediterranean fruit flies, cotton boll weevils and more than a dozen other voracious pests, the department's Agricultural Research Service said Monday in a report.

Eric B. Jang, an agency entomologist in Hilo, Hawaii, said the probes record electroantennograms or readings on an electronic screen that indicate whether a medfly can detect a specific odor. Other work is being done in Mississippi and California by agency researchers.

The goal is to devise powerful new ways to disrupt what seems to be the medfly's unerring ability to use "chemical communication" or scent for finding potential mates, and to respond to fruit odors in finding places in which to lay eggs.

"The female fruit fly will attack certain fruits only when conditions are right for laying eggs inside the fruit," Jang said. "This means the fruits must be at just the right stage of ripeness. What if we could confuse flies by spraying the ripening fruits with a harmless scent of unripened fruit?"

At the agency's boll weevil laboratory in Mississippi State, Miss., Joseph C. Dickens uses single-cell recordings from the insects. When an olfactory or scent cell responds to a specific scent, it sends a signal to the brain, he said. In the case of the medfly, for example, some signals may indicate to the female that conditions on a fruit are right for her to begin laying eggs within the fruit.

Another scientist, Douglas M. Light at the agency's laboratory in Albany, Calif., inserts probes in specific regions of an insect's brain and uses recordings to learn how the individual brain cells receive and process the scent information coming in from the antennae.

Jang said the scientists hope "to take what we learn and use it against insects that cost farmers money."

Energy guidebook developed for lots

COLLEGE STATION — Guidelines for feedyard energy management have been developed by agricultural engineers with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The Extension Service cooperated with the Texas Cattle Feeders Association to develop a comprehensive energy management guide for cattle feedyards due to changes that have occurred in ownership, management and facilities since the Texas cattle feeding industry evolved in the early 1970s.

The Texas cattle feeding industry, which leads the nation, was built around cheaper energy, points out Dr. John Sweeten, Extension agricultural engineer in waste management, who worked with Extension agricultural engineers Henry O'Neal and Richard Withers Jr. in developing the energy management guide. Significant changes relating to energy and energy management have occurred in the last 15 years, and these guidelines address the current state of the cattle feeding industry.

The 278-page text features 18 chapters that describe how to analyze feedyard energy use, how to establish an energy management program, principles of electrical energy management and major feedyard components that can be better managed for energy efficiency, such as lighting, watering, steam production, feed processing and handling, and manure handling.

Also featured are checklists for different feedyard components that will assist operators in analyzing present systems and deciding on specific measures ranging from inexpensive and profitable to relatively costly.

A survey by the Texas Cattle Feeders Association last year showed that feedyard energy requirements, excluding liquid fuels, were 1.32 million BTUs per year per head on feed (average occupancy).

Information on purchasing a copy of the book on feedyard energy guidelines is available from Sweeten in the Department of Agricultural Engineering, Texas A&M University, College Station, Tex. 77843 or call 409-845-9795.

Water pollution may be a big problem for the future. Charles Benbrook, executive director of the National Academy of Sciences' Board on Agriculture, predicted water quality protection will be a major national resource issue for agriculture. This may cause conflict since soil conservation and water problems don't necessarily complement each other. Benbrook said "The United States is ahead of most developing nations in facing fertilizer and pesticide problems." He believes facing these problems will give the U.S. a greater competitive edge in world food markets. Several states are all ready monitoring the quality of groundwater. And a better data base with which to measure the problem should be available after the Environmental Protection Agency conducts the first national survey of ground water this summer.

WILLIAM KAUTZ

Kautz promoted at Holly plant

COLORADO SPRINGS — Lloyd L. Neville, Senior Vice President - Operations of Holly Sugar Corporation, has announced the promotion of William H. Kautz to Maintenance Supervisor at the Torrington, Wyoming, factory.

Kautz, a native of Mitchell, Nebraska, is the son of Mrs. Wilma Kautz and the late Victor Kautz of Morrill, Nebraska. He graduated from high school and served in the United States Marine Corp from 1958 to 1962.

Prior to joining Holly, William was employed by Tri-Good Oil Company in Midwest, Wyoming, from 1962 to 1967. He joined the former Great Western Sugar Company in January 1968 and was employed by Great Western until February 1985. During this time, he held several positions, including Lime Kiln Operator, Drier Operator, Mechanic, Assistant Master Mechanic and Shift Superintendent. Kautz joined Holly as a Welder at the Hereford, Texas factory in 1985 and served in that position until his recent promotion and transfer to Torrington.

Kautz and his wife, Judith, are the parents of two daughters, Renee and Rhonda. The Kautz family now resides in Torrington.

Trotter chosen to attend conference

Johnny Trotter, has been selected by the Texas Cattle Feeders to attend the annual Young Cattlemen's Traveling Leadership Conference, July 12-18, to be conducted by the National Cattlemen's Association (NCA).

The Texas Cattle Feeders, in cooperation with NCA, is sponsoring Trotter participation in the conference which is designed to assist in the development of future leaders for the beef industry.

Trotter operates a Feedyard near Summerfield.

Trotter will join 23 other young cattlemen from across the nation in Denver on July 12 for the beginning of a tour that will take them across the nation from Denver to Chicago, New York City and Washington D.C.

During the conference the young cattlemen (between ages 25-40) will be traveling with, and meeting some of the top leadership in the beef industry. The program planners also hope to expose the participants to timely problems, and issues, and possible solutions facing the industry.

Lake land bids open until July 21

UMBARGER — The Buffalo Lake National Wildlife Refuge has 320 acres available for farming in the dry lake bottom. The permittee will be selected on a bid basis and the highest bidder will be awarded a special use permit to farm the area. The successful bidder will be required to plant the land to winter wheat and there are special regulations that apply to the program.

Bid forms may be obtained from the refuge headquarters three miles south of Umbarger or at the Soil Conservation Service office at 304 15th St. in Canyon. For more information, contact the Refuge Manager at 499-3382. All bids must be received by July 21, 1986.

Holly sets directors' meeting

COLORADO SPRINGS — The Directors of Holly Sugar Corporation will hold their regular monthly meeting in Santa Maria, California, and tour the Union Sugar plant at Betteravia on July 24 and 25.

They will host a luncheon on July 24 for Santa Maria officials, community leaders and the press. That evening they will host a dinner for the heads of sugarbeet grower groups who provide Union with its raw material.

On July 25, the Directors will host a luncheon for Union Sugar's management operating committee and for top local and international members of its labor union.

On July 3, Holly announced that it had purchased from Sara Lee Corporation the business and certain assets of Union Sugar Company, a sugarbeet processor.

SEVIN[®] INSECT ALERT

BRAND CARBARYL INSECTICIDE

Grasshoppers attack area crops and rangeland

Reports confirm that a major outbreak of grasshoppers is under way.

If grasshoppers get a foothold in your crops and rangeland, they'll eat up your profits in no time. Starting on tender young foliage, these hungry pests can destroy crops and forage in a matter of days.

But you can make a grasshopper's first meal his last one with SEVIN[®] brand carbaryl insecticide. Applied when grasshoppers hatch or move into your fields or rangeland, SEVIN[®] brand stops grasshoppers fast. SEVIN[®] brand carbaryl insecticide is even available in formulations that resist washing off from rainfall or irrigation. So it keeps working up to three weeks when you follow label directions and allow the spray to dry.

So ask your dealer for SEVIN[®] brand carbaryl insecticide from Union Carbide. It's the best way to get grasshoppers... before they get your crops and rangeland.
