

For nuclear waste repository possibilities

Neutrals say area needs preparations

By CINDY SMITH
Staff Writer

"Anytime if you talk about the Department of Energy, you're certainly not against it—you're for it," said Doug Manning, one of persons who feel neutral on the issue of a nuclear waste repository being placed in Deaf Smith County.

"Basically, what my feelings are is that there are a lot of people against it and that's fine. Whether I'm for or against it doesn't really matter—what matters is there is a whole lot of work that needs to be done in case it comes in," he said.

"I have wanted to see to it that 'IF' characterization or the repository comes in, that our community is protected in every way possible," Manning said.

"We will need, not just hope, to develop an independent scientific monitoring group that will represent us and that will look over the shoulder of DOE to report back to us," he added. "We just need our own independent group so we're not just taking somebody's word for it."

Manning and others are looking beyond the pro-con situation of the repository and are recognizing the fact that characterization is here.

They are more interested in how the community is going to adjust and what protection Hereford will get from the DOE during characterization process rather than dwelling on the repository site coming in.

"I don't really think in terms of for or against, I think in terms of methods for protecting ourselves in case either one comes in," Manning stressed again.

An ad hoc committee, organized about a year ago, is comprised of representatives from each taxing entity. Their job is to find out what negative impacts, if any, that the characterization process will have on taxing entities.

"We are working under the assumption that characterization is going to be done as required by law," said Troy Don Moore, Deaf Smith County Commission representative.

"This committee is neutral from this standpoint and it is not for or against the repository. This cannot be emphasized enough. We were appointed to study the characterization, not to be for or against it," he said.

"We've got to keep both sides of the coin covered and if there's any negative impacts, we look at that," added Tom Legate, the city commission rep.

"Some people take neutralization as a pro and that is not at all the occasion.

"Each person may have their own personal views, but as a group we have to look at both sides," Legate said.

"The Amarillo Chamber of Commerce's committee report was very wrongly misinterpreted," said Manning. "They basically said in their report that the characterization was inevitable and if it was inevitable there were some concerns that needed to be addressed. This was misinterpreted, some people thought that the Commerce came out in favor of the repository and really, they were just saying to be prepared if characterization comes in."

"What we need to do is get prepared. We need a monitoring service over all of the studies to make our requests to DOE known, to basically say, 'if you come in here—this is what we expect.' We need enough studies so we can say we want the area put back as near as possible the way it was before the characterization happened."

"I think we have an awful lot of work to do," he said. "Someone out there ought to be saying 'OK, if they don't get it stopped then what?'"

Manning also said that the local Chamber of Commerce is accused of being in favor of the issue.

"The local Chamber of Commerce simply received a report from the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce. They didn't pass it, whether they are for it or against it—they just received the letter without any comment," explained Manning.

Mike Carr, executive director of the Chamber of Commerce, said the Chamber definitely has not taken a position. "We have not made a stand for or against it. Economics is not the sole criteria one looks at but safety is," reminded Carr. "We have a very diverse membership—some for it and some against it, and we are trying to maintain open communication with all parties involved."

"It's a sensitive issue... Nobody wants something here that will damage the industry and we don't want this either. We're trying to represent everybody here."

"The thing we're looking at right now is a study and we're talking about several years, economically," said Carr.

"At this point, without having gotten into detail study, the commit-

Chamber offers ideas for Jubilee participation

Individuals and clubs stumped for an idea to use in the Town & Country Jubilee Junction now have the Chamber of Commerce as a resource.

The Jubilee Junction, set for Aug. 16 in Dameron Park, is one of many events slated for the T&C Jubilee Aug. 10-16.

In an effort to avoid duplication of booths, the Chamber needs registration for the Junction to be made early. Also, several books with ideas for booths and places to order inexpensive prizes are available.

Already planned for the junction are a petting zoo, endless food, a calf show, and many game booths.

Registration forms are available at the Chamber for the Junction and for the parade.

Parade chairman Hawk Kreig said floats are to be ready for judging at the high school parking lot by 9:30 a.m. that Saturday. Kreig can give further information at 364-2297 as can his assistant Greg Banner, 364-5487.

The parade will go south on Ave. F, west on Park, then south on Main at 10:30 a.m.

Few booths are left for the Jubilee of Arts, Aug. 15-16. Artists from several states are joining the show with a wide variety of artwork. The show will be from noon until 6 p.m. that Friday and from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m. on Saturday.

Jubilee events leading up to the weekend celebration include the Aug. 9 Greg Black Memorial 10K and Fun Run sponsored by the YMCA. Information is available at the Y.

The Hereford Fire Department will have its formal open house and "hose cutting" on Aug. 10 at 2 p.m.

On Aug. 14, the Merry Mixers Square Dancers will cut a rug at 8 p.m. on the parking lot of 801 N. Main.

Wrapping up the Jubilee will be the Hereford Riders Club Junior Rodeo. Performances are at 7:30 p.m. Aug. 15-16 at the Riders Club Arena.

Incumbent Brownlow files to keep city post

Emory Brownlow, a current city commissioner, this week filed for reelection to Place 4 on the Hereford City Commission.

A special election has been set for Sept. 13 to elect two commissioners, Places 2 and 4. The usual April election was postponed following a lawsuit which alleged the city discriminated against Hispanics by having four at-large council seats.

The city agreed to a redistricting system in an out-of-court settlement which was approved by the Justice Department in June, and the new election date was set. Bud Eades, the other incumbent commissioner, recently filed for reelection also.

Brownlow, 50, first served on the commission in 1975-77. After losing a race for the mayor's post in 1977, Brownlow was reelected as a commissioner in 1978. He has served since that time, recording five two-year terms in all.

Brownlow is vice president of Brownlow Bros., a general contracting and construction firm here. He and his wife, Dorothy, have five children and one grandchild. Mrs. Brownlow is a teacher at Tierra Blanca school.

Next Wednesday is the deadline for candidates to file for the commission posts. Citizens without voter registration cards have until Aug. 14 to register.

Local Roundup

Special school meeting called

Guidelines for the elementary and secondary curriculum is the first item on an agenda for the Hereford school trustees who have scheduled a special meeting for Tuesday at 6 p.m. in the administration building.

Also on the agenda are Margaret Marshall and a personnel report.

Smithee visits Tuesday

State Rep. John Smithee will be in Hereford Tuesday at noon to discuss the upcoming special session of the Texas Legislature.

Smithee, Republican representative for Randall and Deaf Smith counties, invites interested citizens to meet with him at a "dutch-treat" lunch at K-Bob's Restaurant Tuesday at noon.

Liquor tax refund mailed

Hereford and Deaf Smith County each received $2,174.42 as their share of the state's mixed drink tax collected during the second quarter, the state comptroller's office reports.

Total tax revenue on mixed drinks for that period was $17,395.38.

No expansion seen soon

Cattle industry facing hard times

WASHINGTON (AP) — The hard-pressed cattle business is still in the doldrums, with no major expansion indicated for the near future, according to a mid-year inventory report by the Agriculture Department.

Officials said Friday that an estimated 112.2 million head of cattle were on the nation's farms and ranches as of July 1, down 4 percent from a year ago and 8 percent fewer than two years ago.

The department's Agricultural Statistics Board said the July 1 tally was the smallest since USDA began keeping mid-year cattle figures in 1973.

Hard times in agriculture, including the cattle business, have forced many producers to liquidate breeding herds or to cut back sharply, often selling animals to raise money to pay debts or meeting current operating expenses.

Ron Gustafson of the department's Economic Research Service said record-large supplies of total meat, poor returns and forage problems, including the drought in the Southeast, have forced a continued liquidation of herds.

"More importantly, continued slaughter of the beef cow herd and a lower heifer retention (for breeding) are sharply reducing the base for future beef production," Gustafson said.

Consumer prices of beef and pork are expected to rise the remainder of this year because of production cutbacks, but USDA economists say the increases will be tempered by abundant supplies of poultry.

A related report showed July 1 feedlot inventories — cattle headed for the consumer beef market — at 7.95 million head in the 13 major beef states. That was the lowest mid-year feedlot count since 1975.

The 13-state feedlot report showed these July 1 inventories by state and percentage changes from a year earlier:

Arizona, 238,000 head on July 1 and 94 percent of a year earlier; California, 370,000 and 80; Colorado, 660,000 and 87; Idaho, 128,000 and 72; Illinois, 390,000 and 100; Iowa, 500,000 and 75; Kansas, 1,365,000 and 97; Minnesota, 255,000 and 84; Nebraska, 1,460,000 and 99; Oklahoma, 265,000 and 91; South Dakota, 245,000 and 83; Texas, 1,930,000 and 96; and Washington, 144,000 and 94.

This spring the supply of beef was kept up by the larger slaughter of dairy cows under the government's whole-herd buyout program designed to reduce surplus milk production, Gustafson said. However, additional government buying of red meat to offset the extra cow slaughter "should more than offset the impact of the dairy slaughter."

But Gustafson cautioned that the impact of the drought in the Southeast is still not known and that it could have an effect on where the U.S. cattle inventory will wind up next Jan. 1, another benchmark used by agency experts and the industry.

The July 1 inventory of 112.2 million head of cattle — which includes calves and dairy cattle as well as dairy stock — compared with 116.3 million a year earlier and 121.5 million on July 1, 1984.

Of importance to the future, the report estimated the 1986 calf crop at 40.1 million, down 2 percent from last year and 6 percent below 1984.

Shite Moslem kidnappers release American hostage

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite Moslem kidnappers Saturday freed American hostage the Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco in east Lebanon's Bekaa Valley where he was delivered "safe and sound" to Syrian authorities, Lebanese police said.

They said the 51-year-old Roman Catholic priest, who was kidnapped in Moslem west Beirut on Jan. 8, 1985, was taken to the command of the Syrian army intelligence in the Bekaa town of Anjar, 31 miles east of Beirut.

Moslem and Christian radio stations in Beirut said Jenco, of Joliet, Ill., was to be taken across the border to neighboring Syria before flying home to the United States.

Reports of Jenco's release came a few hours after the shadowy Islamic Jihad Organization released new snapshots of the Roman Catholic priest and said he would soon be freed "because of his deteriorating health."

Islamic Jihad, a group of Shiite Moslem zealots, believed to have ties to Iran, has claimed responsibility for kidnapping five Americans, including Jenco.

In statements sent to two Beirut newspapers, the group warned that Jenco's release would be its "last gesture."

"From then on the American government shall bear the full responsibility of the lives of the rest of the hostages," the statement said.

"There will be grave consequences unless our demands are met. We shall give Father Jenco a letter from the rest of the hostages to their families and the American people," the statement concluded.

Details on the group's demands are not known. An American hostage released by the Islamic Jihad 10 months ago has hinted that it wants the release of 17 comrades imprisoned in Kuwait for bombing the French and U.S. embassies there in December 1983.

The other missing Americans are:

Terry A. Anderson, 38, of Lorain, Ohio, the chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press; David Jacobsen, 55, of Huntington Beach, Calif., director of the American University Hospital; Thomas Sutherland, 55, of Fort Collins, Colo., acting dean of agriculture at the American University of Beirut; and William Buckley, 58, of Medford, Mass., a U.S. Embassy political officer.

Islamic Jihad claimed Oct. 4 that it killed Buckley to avenge alleged U.S. complicity in Israel's Oct. 1 air raid on the Tunis, Tunisia, headquarters of the Palestine Liberation Organization. No body has been found.

Anderson's sister, Peggy Say, has been in Damascus for a nearly a week, seeking the help of Syrian officials in getting her brother and the other hostages released.

Jenco was the second American hostage to be released by Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, in 10 months. The group released the Rev. Benjamin Weir, 61, a Presbyterian minister, on Sept. 14.

Neutrals

tee intends to establish and office and hire a director and a few others (someone experienced with the DOE) and study the impacts," said Moore.

Moore, Legate, and Frank Zinser all agreed that the committee was rather loosely formed up until recently when the characterization was announced.

Presently, the ad hoc committee has an interlocal governmental contract between the state and Deaf Smith County that will allow access of funds to support the groups activities and expenses they may incur along the way.

According to the committee, funds are generated through nuclear power generator plants that have to charge their customers to fund the disposal of their spent fuel.

"The alternative that we are pursuing are these private funds which flow through DOE, to the state, and back to the local community," said Moore.

"Again-- these are not tax dollars," pointed out Legate. "It's the money off the power plants that go to the Nuclear Program that we are using."

"There is another alternative of going directly to DOE and seeking the funds, but we are not pursuing this, we prefer to go through the state," Moore said.

"It essentially lets the left hand know what the right hand is doing," said Legate. "As long as it is possible to work with the state, that's what we're going to do."

The funds have been approved and the committee is waiting to get some of the money upfront to take care of some of the expenses such as staff and office needs.

"We agreed upon $230,000 with the state's nuclear program but that is considered tentative right now," said Moore.

"In determining a budget and not having been there before, it was a guesstimate," explained Legate. "In any event it's not set in concrete and if we determine that more funds are needed they are available."

The men said they figured what it would cost for overhead, rent, salary, office equipment, consultants, etc., when trying to reach an amount on the budget.

"We have been told that we can get on line with DOE information and that what is available to them can be available to us," Legate said.

But technically-qualified consultants are going to be needed. The men discussed several new positions that will be created when the office is opened.

They will need a public representative type person who knows how the DOE works, maybe a former employee of the DOE, but someone who can talk to DOE. The committee and Manning wants a group of Hereford's own geologists, hydrologists, sociologists, etc, to possibly be hired from some of the state's larger universities.

"I'm not even willing to take their word for the testing," said Manning. "I want our own monitoring group for the testing made up of scientists that are just as capable as their scientists in running the tests to find out what is actually being found out down there and what we're running into."

Moore said there will have to be additional committees assigned to detailed areas. "We hope to get local people in on sub-committees. We're thinking of training people for different positions as they arrive and will employ as many local people as we can," he said, although the committee will look to other cities for the highly technical positions.

"A lot of demands will be channeled through this committee," said Legate.

"We'll be one of the major vehicles that will be used," added Moore.

As for the committee's findings on negative impact of taxing entities, they are preparing now for the in-depth studies.

"I'm not sure we can detect any negative impacts at this time," said Legate. So far the committee has determined that the characterization wouldn't have a negative impact on the schools, the hospital, the city, etc.

"The only negative impact at this time from a taxing standpoint of view, is that it has affected property values in the nine square mile area. Land won't sell right now because they don't know what's going to happen," said Zinser, the hospital representative on the committee.

"With the idea of characterization taking place and the with the state's unemployment, we'll have a lot people...," said Zinser. "People at Texas Employment Commission have already ran into that instance. People are already asking them about possible employment."

"As for training programs, whether it's through Amarillo College or other schools, we would like to see it benefit the local people," said Moore. "We want to see this thing (the characterization-- not the repository) turn around to where it's a positive thing for Hereford," said Legate.

"We've had some extensive studies conversations with people from Oakridge, Tenn., where they proposed one of the Monitor Retrieval Storing facilities," said Moore.

"We had a conversation with Bob Peele who is head of their committee charged with studying economic and transportation impact," said Legate. Peele is also a nuclear physicist and city commissioner. "Our committee won't be involved with transportation as much as socioeconomic aspects. Because we're not dealing with any radioactive material in the characterization process, so our committee won't be charged with the transportation aspect of radioactivity.

"But if we get along in this thing and we are chosen as the repository site, it changes the complexion of this completely," he explained.

The men have consulted numerous times with Peele and his wife who is a sociologist. The couple has also worked with nuclear power plants for 15 years.

"The gist of our conversations with them was basically along the organizational lines, the way that their committee was organized and the way that they went about actually doing the studies," explained Legate.

"In this course of the conversation they introduced us to a man that was city manager of Oakridge, Tenn., who was their chief negotiator with the DOE," said Moore. "He will be out here to spend two days with us to outline these methods of negotiating with DOE."

"We feel like we more or less struck gold in talking with these people. Many of the studies they have conducted are basically the same as we'll have here," said Legate.

"From a socioeconomic standpoint and environmental aspect many of the studies will parallel," added Zinser. "There will be somewhat of a balance between technical expertise and local input," he said.

"We hope to get input from public meetings and it will be necessary to get consultants in here to answer the public," said Moore. He added, "We'll have to contract someone from somewhere else but we'll certainly have to hire local people along with it."

The committee is planning several meetings with people who have had major dealings with the DOE in their area before.

"The Tennessee area people have been dealing with DOE or its predecessor agencies since 1944," said Legate, hopeful of learning something.

"We've never walked this way before and we're going to have to get some people to help that have been down that path before because we're going to need help in some things that we have no idea of," added Moore.

"Somebody's going to have to walk on water to get the DOE to agree to what we want," chuckled Zinser.

Moore, Legate, and Zinser were the only three people from their committee who toured the WIPP (Waste Isolation Plant Project in Carlsbad, N.M.).

Zinser said, "You could find almost any impression you wanted to off the street. For the most part, people who had businesses stimulated by the activity were reasonably happy."

"The suppliers found it a bit difficult to deal with DOE, construction, the corps of engineers, in that there was a paperwork problem and compliances," he said.

Zinser also said the average citizen either had no opinion or was not dissatisfied, and Moore and Legate agreed.

"But you have to remember they are potash miners up there, they're used to that type of stuff," said Legate.

"They have an economy just as depressed as our's is and for related reasons," added Zinser.

Says Legate, "We're dealing with what is a reality and an announced fact and regardless of whether we're for or against the repository, these studies have to be completed."

"I think that there are a whole lot of questions that cannot be answered until there is characterization," stated Manning simply. "They're going to run an awful lot of tests and we really don't know what's down there until we look and find out."

"And yes, there will be economic benefits to site characterization but again that's another one of the concerns that needs to be addressed. We don't want a five year boom and then bust," concluded Manning.

Representatives, governor score low on current events

BALTIMORE (AP) — Two members of Congress and Gov. Harry Hughes were among Senate candidates who took a five-question quiz on current events, but don't look for them at the top of the class.

Neither Rep. Michael Barnes nor Rep. Barbara Mikulski could identify the leader of the African National Congress, the South African opposition group, or name both the Israeli prime minister and his designated successor.

Democrats Barnes and Ms. Mikulski each got 1 1/2 in the quiz, scores indicating they had one answer right and one answer almost right.

Hughes, also a Democrat, scored 2. The quiz was given by WJZ-TV to the 17 candidates seeking to replace retiring Republican Sen. Charles McC. Mathias.

The top score went to Republican Linda Chavez, a former Reagan administration aide, who answered four correctly. The highest-scoring Democrat, with three correct, was Debra Freeman, a follower of extremist Lyndon H. LaRouche Jr.

The ABC affiliate interviewed the candidates over three days so none would have time to prepare. Their responses were broadcast Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights.

The candidates were asked on the day of scheduled campaign interviews to participate in the quiz. Although some objected, all agreed to answer the questions.

The candidates also were given the chance to say on the air whether they believed the quiz was fair. Ms. Mikulski was the only candidate to didates' inability to answer the question, saying, "I don't think word game questions are really the criteria for what determines who's going to be a United States senator."

The station received more than two dozen telephone calls about the quiz from viewers, most of whom said they were alarmed by the cautions, assistant news director Ross Mason said Friday.

The station got the idea for the quiz from a Boston affiliate, said Mason, who added, "We weren't trying to embarrass people."

"We thought it would be a good way to find out a little bit about what they knew of foreign affairs. We thought they were darn basic questions."

"A U.S. senator should have a pretty basic knowledge of what's going on in the world today."

On the question of who heads the African National Congress, the station counted as correct either jailed leader Nelson Mandela or exiled president Oliver Tambo.

Ms. Mikulski named Jonas Savimbi, leader of a Reagan administration-backed resistance group fighting the Marxist-led government of Angola.

Barnes, a subcommittee chairman on the House Foreign Affairs Committee who is promoting himself on the campaign trail as a leader on foreign policy, said: "The name slips my tongue."

Hughes said simply, "I don't know the answer to that."

Lawyer George Haley, another Democratic candidate in the Sept. 9 primary and brother of "Roots" author Alex Haley, identified the head of the ANC as "Sambo."

When asked to identify Israel's prime minister, Barnes correctly noted that leaders of two major parties in the country's coalition government will alternate in the top post. But he incorrectly identified Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir as the current prime minister.

Ms. Mikulski knew that Shimon Peres is the prime minister, but she did not know that Shamir will succeed Peres in October.

The candidates also were asked what incident directly linked to Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi precipitated the U.S. attack on Libya.

The answer the station was looking for was the bombing of a discotheque in West Germany.

Tent city built at Juarez bridge

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — A multi-colored tent city has emerged on an international bridge between this border city and El Paso, Texas, occupied by opposition party supporters who say they'll stay until the government grants new elections.

Other crossings between Mexico and the United States will also be taken over to protest alleged fraud in state elections, said Francisco Barrio, who resigned as Juarez mayor to run for governor of Chihuahua for the National Action Party, or PAN.

"We'll be here indefinitely, until our desire for justice is satisfied... or until they send in the troops," Barrio told a flag-waving crowd Friday at the Bridge of the Americas linking El Paso and Juarez.

The blockade of the bridge was to have ended Friday evening, 24 hours after it started. But at a rally, 3,000 people cheered wildly when Barrio asked if they were determined to continue the protest.

"We are aware of how effective this blockade is to pressure the government into finding a solution to our problem," said Barrio. "The government will soon realize this is just the beginning of a fight in which we'll neither give nor ask for quarter."

The Bridge of the Americas, one of four linking the two cities, is the only one available to tractor trailers hauling parts between assembly plants in Juarez and factories in the United States. About 700 loaded trucks and another 400 empty ones pass through the bridge each day, said Nicholas Goldstein, U.S. Customs service supervisory inspector for cargo in El Paso.

Customs in El Paso had designated two other bridges as alternate routes. But late Friday Mexican customs officials still were not issuing exit permits for trucks.

Jose Rios, 33, and another truck driver, both of whom work for a Tucson, Ariz., firm found themselves unable to take their mortar cargo back into the United States because of the blockade. Rios called his company Friday night and was told to leave the trucks in Juarez and stay at an El Paso hotel overnight.

The Mexican customs officials said they wouldn't give our export papers until this bridge is freed," said Rios. "The sale of the load I was supposed to bring (to Tucson) will be lost because we can't deliver on time."

Barrio met Friday night with PAN representatives from the states of Durango and Nuevo Leon to plan a concerted strategy to force the government to grant new elections. PAN leaders have charged massive, government-instigated fraud in July 6 state elections.

Nazarene Academy welcomes director

Ethel Bailey will open her office as director and first grade teacher at new Nazarene Christian Academy on Aug. 15 at the Hereford Church of the Nazarene.

Bailey moves to Hereford from Clovis, N.M., where she was a first grade teacher for three years and principal for two years at Clovis Nazarene School.

Her husband Harrison is a retired insurance underwriter.

She is an alumnae of Olivet

Nazarene College in Illinois and finished her bachelor's degree at Eastern Oregon College in LaGrand, Ore. Her elementary education major has a strong emphasis in music. She has approximately 30 hours in post graduate work.

In addition to her experience in public schools, Bailey has written and edited kindergarten Sunday School curriculum.

Bailey said the new academy will use the A Beka curriculum, that she used at Clovis, which has a strong phonetic reading program. The curriculum has a Christian emphasis which stresses Bible knowledge instead of doctrine. A Beka is strong in the three basics of reading, writing and math, plus science and social studies. Kindergarteners also will use the A Beka program.

The academy will adapt the Hereford school district calendar, except grading periods will be every nine weeks, Bailey said.

She also will be working toward obtaining school accreditation from the Association of Christian Schools International by adding a grade a year.

Her office hours will be from 8 a.m. until 2 p.m. prior to school.

Kindergarten registration will begin Aug. 11, and additional first grade enrollment will continue.

Woman's philosophy includes facing everyday challenges

By SANDY PANKEY
and
Staff Writers

"Hardships should be considered as challenges. If one can face life with a positive outlook, then that person has found the key to happiness."

Kay Crismon has had several traumas in her life but she has used her experiences as learning tools not only to strengthen her own character but to help others deal with tragedies.

"I am a firm believer in support groups. There are excellent programs available for those who need assistance," Crismon explained.

Among the groups that she is personally involved in are the Stephen's Ministries, Beginning Experience, Alcoholics Anonymous and Al-Anon.

Each of these programs is designed to help the individual cope with various problems stemming from divorce, death, drugs, alcohol, etc.

Although Crismon radiates an image of tremendous self-confidence and self-assurance, she is quick to explain that these attributes were not easily obtained.

"Reality is not always a pleasant thing to face but once I decided to meet my difficulties head-on, and to seek help to cope with my emotions, I became a much better person," she stressed.

"One program in particular was an asset to me. A friend introduced me to Beginning Experience," she continued. "This support group consists of persons who have encountered divorce, death and separation.

"The B.E. is designed to help people make a new beginning in their lives. But in order to do that, they must face their emotions through self-discovery."

One facet of the unique program which was instrumental in helping Crismon was the journalism aspect. "I wrote down all my feelings and then examined them. I had to ask myself was I experiencing anger, frustration, rejection?"

"Group leaders are also quick to point out that you are not alone. There are others who have the same disappointments and hurts that you have. They emphasize in learning from experience."

Crismon also has a deep love for God. "I know everything that happens to me is God's will and that I must accept the circumstances in life. With His help, I can overcome anything, and with Him, I have a peace of mind and security that nothing is too big to handle. I simply turn my problems over to Him."

counseling. In participating with the ministry, I get closer to people. I can share feelings and hopefully help them learn from my experiences."

Crismon not only speaks to the individual but enjoys sharing with groups such as Alcoholics Anonymous and Al-Anon. She explained, "These programs work because people share emotions. There is no reason to have to hide feelings. If they are shared, we can have a better understanding of ourselves and one another."

Although Crismon's parents are still living, as a teenager he was reared by various aunts and uncles and was forced to make her own living at an early age.

"Because of family problems, I had to make my home with a number of relatives. By the time I was 14, I was working to help support myself," she said. "I was fortunate that I had good foster homes and for that reason I have always felt that it was important to have foster children in my home."

Crismon related several instances of children that were in her care including a 16-month-old child who was burned with cigarettes by his parents. "It's difficult to see abuse children whether they are mentally or physically mistreated. I fostered children not only because they needed me but because I love children. It's a wonderful feeling to know that I could be a positive influence in some child's life," she said.

Crismon lives by a quotation that is displayed in her kitchen, "There is only one corner of the world I can be sure of improving—and that is my own."

All In A Day's Work

Although she's employed full-time at First National Bank, Kay Crismon makes time in her busy schedule to help a neighbor build a fence. She also speaks to several local support groups and is actively involved in the Stephen's Ministries.

KAY CRISMON

Crismon has the philosophy of giving back everything she's received in her own life. "I truly enjoy helping others. Isn't that what it's all about?"

She has been actively involved in the Stephen's Ministries, a group of people which assists people to cope with personal crises. "This ministry was fashioned for people to get free

Accent on Health

Newlyweds who dream of living happily ever after should weigh the reality that there are about half as many divorces as marriages each year in Texas, according to the Texas Department of Health's Bureau of Vital Statistics.

W.D. Carroll, Bureau Chief, said the ratio of marriages to divorces has been fairly consistent for several years.

Last year 201,632 marriages were performed and 100,394 marriages were dissolved in Texas, according to Carroll. In 1984 there were 210,978 marriages and 98,958 divorces in the state.

The most numerous age group of people getting married was 20-24 for both males and females (62,745 men and 63,842 women). Divorces were more common in the 25-through 29-year-old age group, where 22,329 men and 23,082 women were divorced in 1985.

The musical theorist Gioseffe Zarlino was born in Italy in 1517.

Inter-Faith Hunger Project relocated

Rev. David Harp, Director of Development and Community Services of Catholic Family Service, Inc. of Amarillo, announced today that the agency's Inter-Faith Hunger Project has been relocated to a new facility at 310 W. 16th Street in Amarillo.

Harp states, "As the Project has grown in scope since it began in early March, the space and parking necessary to meet our client's needs has changed. It is our hope that the new facility, in addition to meeting our current requirements, will continue to allow the project to expand as additional needs are encountered."

Sponsored by Catholic Family Service, the Inter-Faith Hunger Project is staffed by volunteers who provide food and referral services to people in need in a grocery store-like setting. The efforts of the Project emphasize the needs of two groups: 1) People 55 years of age and older and disabled persons whose income is fixed at or below poverty levels; and, 2) Families seeking emergency assistance.

This program (as with all programs associated with Catholic Family Service) will accept clients solely on the basis of need, without regard to the person's race, religious affiliation, or background.

One of the very specific reasons for the establishment of this program is to make available to the churches of Amarillo a direct referral source on weekends for individuals and families of whom church leaders become aware who are in need of food.

Farm Aid

A Band-Aid doesn't do much good if an artery has been slashed.

And, Willie Nelson's Farm Aid shows were more of a musical spectacular than an instrument for helping farmers. No doubt the entertainer was sincere in trying to raise some money to help the nation's farmers, but what happens to the money?

Farm Aid I raised some $9 million, while Farm Aid II raised about $450,000 in cash and pledges. Not many of the pledges have come in and nobody knows how much money was really raised.

After the first project, some $60,000 went to Illinois farm agencies and after handling charges, only $40,000 has been passed out to a total of 138 Illinois farms—about $250 per farm family.

The National Council of Churches got a great deal of the money and is supposed to disburse it. Much of the Farm Aid money has gone to lawyers, accountants and public relations firms, and some went to entertainers for their expenses.

A bulk of the money raised in these concerts has gone to lobbying for increased price supports and other federal programs that have little to do with the basic problem of supply and demand which prevents farm products from commanding a price high enough to support those who raise them.

These entertainment events may serve to publicize the plight of farmers in some respect, but they also serve to publicize the music stars and provide an excuse for a lot of people to have a good time. An estimated 40,000 attended the bash in Austin and about 200 spectators were carried out of the arena stoned on alcohol or drugs.

The farmers continue to be the forgotten people when it comes to realizing real cash to help a bad financial situation.

Right to offend

Maybe the cycle has ended.

Common sense tells us one person's rights end where the next person's rights begin. The Supreme Court wisely has applied that to the use of vulgar language in a school setting.

It upheld on a 7-2 vote the 1983 suspension of a suburban Tacoma, Washington high school senior for giving an assembly speech filled with sexual allusions and obscene language.

School officials yanked him off the stage and suspended him for violating a school rule banning disruptive conduct.

In earlier times this kid would have been hauled into the principal's office and given a sound paddling to get his attention. In our present enlightened age, where we are so preoccupied with our civil rights, this student no doubt expected to be able to say whatever he wanted to say regardless of any school rules.

As was expected, the student and his parents filed suit against the school administration and school board, claiming that they had undermined his right of free speech.

The U.S. Constitution does guarantee the right to free speech. It does not, however, guarantee the right to use vulgar and obscene language in public.

Most high school students have enough good taste and sense of propriety to refrain from such conduct. Apparently the Washington student considered himself above this kind of restraint.

The free speech debate can get into some complex situations such as defining what is vulgar and obscene. But the Supreme Court upheld the right of the school board to set the standards by saying "schools, as instruments of the state, may determine that the essential lessons of civil, mature conduct cannot be conveyed in a school that tolerates lewd, indecent or offensive speech or conduct."

It is true that vulgar speech has invaded our publications, our radio and television shows, our books and our speech. This does not make it acceptable.

In addition to displaying poor taste, the Washington student also defied school authorities to do anything about it, thus spotlighting another problem in this enlightened age.

School discipline, once considered simple when no student challenged the authority of a teacher or administrator, has slipped in recent years under various court decisions to the point where lack of discipline is considered one of the greatest problems and hazards of school teaching.

Somehow, in our quest for individual freedoms, we have allowed our society to become unraveled. The old days of authority and discipline and good manners need to be restored.

Cocaine deaths

For those Doubting Thomases who question the deadly effects of cocaine, the tragic deaths of super athletes Len Bias and Don Rogers should provide a clear answer.

The general public, particularly the young free spirits who indulge in cocaine as another mundane function of society, must appreciate and understand the real danger of cocaine and its use.

We... have a responsibility to our children to make them aware of the horrors of drug abuse: to safeguard their future and that of other Len Biases and Don Rogers.

Paul Harvey

My longtime secretary is never clumsy or careless, yet, dusting the top of a framed picture while standing on a filmy stepstool, she fell and sprained an ankle.

The plastic feet on that stepstool skidded on the tile floor, sending her sprawling.

Most everybody to whom she explained her limp said, "You should sue!"

I suppose she would have a case. The stepstool maker really should have non-skid feet on his product.

But it never occurs to people like June Westgaard "to sue"...

On the other hand... In Chicago a woman lost both legs when she rode her bicycle onto railroad tracks into the path of a train and she sued...and she got $1.5 million.

And while her injuries were grievous, the out-of-court settlement indicates how reluctant corporations are to go to court.

Now... If anybody can threaten to sue any corporation alleging some grievance of injury however unworthy—and if the corporation chooses to "settle" rather than to hire lawyers or tie up its own legal staff interminably during the process of litigation—then it's open season! Anybody can sue anybody for anything and get something!

Some corporations have wearied of blackmail.

They are fed up with costly settlements for nuisance lawsuits.

A woman in El Dorado, Kan., said she found a dead fish in her can of beer.

The beer and/or the sight of it "caused her to become violently ill," she said.

She demanded $10,000 from the Coors company.

The Coors company elected not to pay the $10,000.

Then the lady offered to settle her claim for $5,000.

The Coors company declined to pay the $5,000.

The company said there was no evidence there ever was a fish in the beer.

But the case has gone to court with the plaintiff now demanding $10,000, alleging "the negligent failure of (Coors) to properly inspect and package said can of beer."

The Coors company said when this case is out of litigation the company will have more to say in response to the allegation.

It's an interesting turn, a corporation refusing to pay what it considers "hush money" and letting the allegation be ventilated in public forum.

It's a precedent of potentially far-reaching implications.

The Penultimate Word

THE GRANDSON

I am convinced that the wrong people have children. Grandparents are the only ones emotionally prepared for the ordeal. Young folks are too uptight to enjoy them and too intent on making them perfect to relax.

I took my grandson to a restaurant this week. He howled out loud. As a parent I would have been mortified. I can't remember how many times I have hauled one of my children out of a restaurant in total embarrassment. I would worry over what folks thought. I could just hear them talking about how rotten my children were and what a terrible job I was doing in raising them. As a grandparent I was not bothered in the least. Let the boy holler. It is good for his lungs. If he hollers the folks in the restaurant will have to look at the source of the noise. They need to see a perfect baby. If the noise bothers them let them eat in a different restaurant.

When I finished my meal I carried the lad around in the restaurant. I told myself that I was relieving the mother so she could eat in peace. In reality I was showing the boy off and, besides, nothing feels better to a grandpaw than a grandchild cuddling next to his neck.

When we got home he never touched the ground. He wanted me to carry him around. He is a smart little bugger. He knows if he shows preference for me there is no way he will miss anything he desires. As a parent I would have been in fear of spoiling him. As a grandparent I think spoiling him is my inalienable right. Sure it is past his bed time but he is playing so nice and laughing when I tickle him, bed times don't matter.

There are some problems with my theory about grandparents. One day of carrying him around and my back hurts for a week. There is also the fact that the best thing about being a grandparent is that after we get him good and spoiled we can send them home for further training.

Someone has said fish and company both begin to smell after three days. With grandchildren it takes about a week. Grandparents may be the right ones to raise children but, frankly, I am not physically able.

Warm Fuzzies,
Doug Manning

Congress panders to elderly

By Richard L. Leshar
President

WASHINGTON — Long before he got to the White House, John F. Kennedy wrote "Profiles in Courage," an inspirational book about politicians who sacrificed careers for the sake of principle.

If one were to write a book about Congress today, an appropriate title would be "Profiles in Pandering." In a time when our country is beset by runaway budget deficits, Congress is scrambling to make the problem worse in a transparent attempt to buy votes with money it doesn't have.

At issue are Social Security benefits, which for more than a decade, have been indexed to increases in the cost of living. The law says that if inflation is less than 3 percent, no increase is triggered. Mind you, retirees do not lose ground against inflation; benefit increases would merely be deferred until the following year.

Well, it now appears inflation for 1986 will come in under 3 percent! This is—or at least should be—a most favorable development, knocking billions off the deficit at a most opportune time.

But Congress cannot abide good fortune. It is determined to raise benefits despite the law, and the Reagan administration has indicated it will not stand in the way.

Some members of Congress contend that an increase this year will actually save money in the long run, but this is political doubletalk. The so-called "savings" would come out of the pockets of taxpayers who would pay Social Security taxes on a larger proportion of their income.

If Social Security recipients were in dire need, an increase might be justified. But the fact is senior citizens are better off economically than any other demographic group, and for good reason. For more than 10 years, they have been made whole against the ravages of inflation. In the same period, working people who pay the tab have seen their inflation-adjusted earnings decline by 9.4 percent.

But one-seventh of the population receives Social Security benefits, and this is an election year. Conventional wisdom says anyone who obstructs an increase is political dead meat.

The conventional wisdom is wrong. The elderly know full well that they are least impoverished of any age group and that they, like the rest of us, have a vested interest in fiscal responsibility. They care about our country and its future, and understand the danger of runaway deficits more than most.

But no one is asking their advice. Rather, Congress is falling all over itself to pander to the elderly, assuming all they care about is their benefit checks. This dreary spectacle is not only bad for our country, it is an insult to our senior citizens.

Bootleg Philosopher

Cost of junkets over $4 million

Editor's note: The bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek ponders a travel problem this week.

Dear editor:

According to figures just announced, about two-thirds of the members of Congress and the Senate took government-paid trips last year to study conditions in other countries of the world.

As it turned out, conditions in Paris and London and Tokyo needed far more study than conditions in South Africa or Afghanistan. Conditions in Iceland also weren't worth examining.

As I understand it, Congressmen say these trips are worthwhile because the world is getting smaller, countries are interlinked, and you need to know what's happening around the globe in order to vote more intelligently on legislation in Washington.

For example, how would a Congressman know how to vote on a U.S. farm program if he hasn't studied the menus in French restaurants in Paris? We're dealing in food, aren't we?

Or how can he explain the deficit to the people in his own district if he hasn't found out how politicians in other countries explain theirs to their people?

The cost of those Congressional junkets abroad last year was over $4 million, all charged to taxpayers.

It has been argued that if we raised Congressmen's salaries they could pay their own way abroad without charging it to taxpayers.

I have examined this argument carefully and I believe there's a hole in it somewhere.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Turmoil in Mexico

The United States must hope that the change that must come in Mexico comes peacefully. The challenge posed to the PRI by the National Action Party appears to offer that possibility. But if PAN and other reformist elements are unable to gain power and influence in the government through the ballot box, the frustrated populace could resort to other means.

The danger of revolution in Mexico is such that this country cannot ignore it. The United States, however, cannot run the risk of appearing to be trying to interfere in Mexico's internal affairs. Somehow, this country must identify with the reform movement in Mexico without thoroughly alienating the powers that be there at present.

For corn crop

Storage woes may be historic

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some members of Congress and agriculture experts are warning that storage problems for this fall's corn crop may be the worst in the nation's history.

Out of 20.7 billion bushels of total on-and off-farm storage capacity, 19.2 billion bushels is already being used, or 93 percent of capacity, Merrill Marxman, a consultant for commercial grain warehouses, told a House Agriculture subcommittee Thursday.

The corn crop to be harvested beginning in early September could total around 7.9 billion bushels, the fourth largest on record, according to USDA projections.

The tightest storage situations are in Michigan, Arkansas, California, Illinois, Ohio and Indiana, Marxman said.

The Agriculture Department is looking at unused river barges as temporary storage bins. Ships also have been used, but USDA so far has not proposed those for the current glut.

The USDA has announced a long list of steps designed to relieve storage space pressure, including approval of 250 million bushels of emergency or temporary storage, cutting of paperwork for moving grain and soliciting 1,000 river barges to press into service as grain warehouses.

"We feel ... there will be near adequate storage capacity, although we do recognize there is a potential for temporary localized tight situations, principally in the major corn production areas," said Richard Goldberg, deputy undersecretary of agriculture for commodity programs.

"All our data indicates that we should be able to handle it."

Several lawmakers said the situation should prompt the Reagan administration to take extraordinary steps to move grain into export channels, including expanding the current $1 billion Export Enhancement Program to include "unfriendly" countries such as the Soviet Union.

Earlier this week, the Senate approved language directing the administration to expand the program to include such traditional customers as the Soviet Union and to eliminate current administration restrictions.

Etter field day slated Aug. 20

AMARILLO — The Annual Field Day at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station Research Field at Etter, Texas will be Aug. 20 starting at noon with a dutch treat barbecue lunch. The field day was announced by Dr. G.B. Thompson, Director of Research at the Texas A&M Center in Amarillo.

After the lunch, there will be a discussion on the Russian Aphid by Dr. Jerry Michels, TAES Entomologist. Dr. Steve Winter, TAES Agronomist from the USDA Research laboratory at Bushland, will tell visitors about his work on the effect of grazing termination date on yield of wheat.

Later in the day, a field tour will enable visitors to see research plots according to Cecil Regier, manager of the Research Field. Corn and sorghum hybrid trials will be observed.

In addition, research with surge irrigation will be discussed by Tom Marek, TAES agricultural engineer and Leon New, TAEX agricultural engineer.

Insect control experiments in sorghum and corn will be explained by Dr. Jerry Michels, and the effect of short irrigation sets on water use efficiency under conventional and no-till cropping systems will be discussed by Dr. Allen Wies, TAES Weed Scientist.

The event is sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, North Plains Water District and North Plains Research Field Committee.

Heat scorching some, hastens other growth

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Daytime temperatures soared into the high 90s, and above the century mark in many areas, and stressed pastures, ranges, field crops and livestock in much of Texas this week, while hastening maturity of southern cotton, corn and sorghum crops.

The extremely hot temperatures that are scorching ranges and pastures have increased the number of range and grass fires in many areas, including the West Central (San Angelo) area and Rolling Plains (Vernon) area, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The high temperatures and lack of rain also have caused some city officials, including those in Austin, to impose mandatory water conservation measures.

Many agricultural producers, and particularly peanut growers in counties around Stephenville and in Atascosa, Frio and Wilson counties near San Antonio, are actively irrigating their crops, while dryland peanuts are starting to suffer from lack of rainfall, Carpenter said.

The hot weather has speeded the maturity of early crops and accelerated harvesting activities in the southern half of the state. The sorghum harvest is 99 percent complete in the South District around Weslaco and is nearing completion in the Coastal Bend area around Corpus Christi, where yields are down from last year, noted Carpenter.

In the Rio Grande Valley, the cotton crop is 5 percent harvested and defoliation is increasing in preparation for rapid harvesting activity.

The corn crop there is 20 percent harvested and sugarcane is making moderate growth. Citrus trees, with a good fruit crop in prospect, are being treated for insect and weed control, Carpenter added.

Soybean harvesting also is in full swing in Southwest Texas, along with harvesting of seed corn. The commercial corn harvest is under way in southern counties of the district, and the first hay cutting is about over with some excellent yields reported. The sorghum harvest is moving forward rapidly along the Upper Coast, parts of South Central and Central Texas as well.

In the Texas Panhandle, the onion and potato harvests are continuing in Deaf Smith County and several counties of the South Plains. The corn crop is in the tassel stage in the Panhandle and cotton is making good progress over the South Plains, although bollworms have been spotted in many cotton fields. Irrigation of corn and sorghum is active in the area.

Forrest to be honored

COLLEGE STATION — Bedford Forrest of Amarillo, who spent 23 years reporting farm and ranch news on radio and television, has been named a "Man of the Year in Texas Agriculture for 1986" by the Texas County Agricultural Agents Association.

One of seven Texans selected for the honor, Forrest was nominated by county agents in the Panhandle District of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The award is presented annually to outstanding leaders in agriculture and related industries who have supported educational programs conducted by the Extension Service.

The award recognizes contributions made by these leaders to improving levels of living and economic growth in their communities, counties, state and nation.

Forrest will receive his award at the TCAA annual meeting Aug. 3-6 in Fort Worth.

"I've Got It!!!"

And he did get it — John Burkhalter, a member of the YMCA team in the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA co-ed softball league. The league playoffs, which began on Tuesday, are scheduled to finish on Sunday afternoon when the league championship game is played. (Brand photo by Gary Christensen)

In YMCA co-ed league

Softball championship set Sunday

The Hereford and Vicinity YMCA co-ed softball league championship will be decided on Sunday at 3:10 p.m., and if a second championship game is necessary, it will be played at 4:20 p.m.

In games played Friday night, Tri-State Feeders defeated the Foul-Ups 19-11 in a winner's bracket contest, and YMCA beat First National Bank 13-10 in a first-round game.

Saturday's schedule was to have included two winner's bracket contests and four loser's bracket games.

The Foul-Ups held a 4-1 lead over Tri-State Feeders after one inning of play. Hits for the Foul-Ups in the first inning were a single by Gustavo Vasquez, a two-run homer by Christie Culp, and doubles by Erasmo Gonzales, Edward Martinez and Pete Madrigal.

Mike Fields hit an RBI double for the Tri-State run in the first inning.

Tri-State Feeders moved ahead 8-4 in the second inning. Kirk Proctor began the inning with a home run. The other hits were singles by Vanessa Sims and Vernon Kosub, a triple by James Payne, a single by Brenda Reeh, a home run by Fields, a single by Natalie Sims and a double by Proctor.

The Foul-Ups scored five runs in the top of the third for a 9-8 lead with a double by Gonzales, a double by Cindy Fields, singles by Martinez and Madrigal, and a home run by Tony Benavidez.

Tri-State Feeders gained back the lead, 11-10 in the bottom of the third. Kosub and Renee Zinser each singled.

Then in the fourth inning, Reeh homered, Fields tripled, Natalie Sims hit a home run, and Proctor singled. Those players and three others scored in the inning to boost Tri-State Feeders' lead to 16-9.

Four straight singles by Gonzales, Carolyn Rieves, Madrigal and Nancy Moreno helped the Foul-Ups get a run in the fifth.

Payne hit a leadoff home run for Tri-State Feeders in the bottom of the fifth, and Proctor hit a two-run homer. Fields and Amy Coneway also doubled in the inning.

Vasquez doubled and scored in the sixth inning for the final run for the Foul-Ups.

In the second game Friday night, the YMCA team went ahead 2-0 on a home run by Chet Bunch in the top of the first inning. Vinita Wright, who had singled, scored ahead of him.

A home run by Norma, a double by Monty Cochran, singles by Brenda Parker and Steve Bartles, and a triple by Martha Ramirez helped First National Bank moved into a 4-2 lead in the bottom of the first.

The YMCA came back with five runs in the top of the second. The hits, in order, were singles by Denise Kelly and Richard Stengel, triples by Roger Albracht and Wright, and a home run by Bunch.

YMCA added two more runs in the top of the third on a single by Darwin Manning, a double by Kelly, and a single by Albracht.

Paul Kilpatrick doubled and scored on Bartles' single to give First National Bank a run in the bottom of the third. Monty Cochran moved First National within three runs, 9-6, with a solo home run in the fifth inning.

The YMCA scored four runs in the top of the sixth. Bunch hit another home run, this time driving in Albracht and Wright, both who had singled. Jerry Brock also hit an RBI double in the inning.

First National Bank saw a rally fall short in the bottom of the sixth. Four runs were scored, three of them on a home run by Greg Hromas.

Bartles and Martha Ramirez singled before Hromas hit his home run. The other run was added when Julian Zamora doubled and was batted by Cochran who singled.

Key Club benefit golf tournament is held Friday

A score of 61 was the winning total in the Key Club Benefit Golf Tournament, a four-man scramble, Friday at Pitman Municipal Golf Course.

The winning team was T.R. Sartor, Tommy Bowling, Bob Huffacker, and Berniece Orel. Another team also shot a 61, but came out in second place according to a tie-breaker by card, decided before the tournament.

The other team with a score of 61 was Paul Hubbard, Hugh Blakey, Rocky Lee, and Dean Herring.

Coming in third place with a 62 was a team of five players — Terry Russell, Berniece Orel, Bill Allen, Blake Allen, and Scat Russell.

In the Key Club members competition, a two-man scramble, six teams participated. The team of Nathan Flood and Arthur Valdez came out on top with a score of 72.

In second place was the team of Tim Long and Scott Simons with a score of 76, and in third place was the team of Sha Gearn and Billy Burnham with a score of 78.

Eight special awards were given at the tournament — four for closest to the hole, three for longest drives, and one for the shortest drive.

Closest to the hole winners were Max Leon on hole No. 3, Bill Dirks on No. 6, James Self on No. 10, and Tommy Bowling on No. 14.

The longest drive winners were Mike Clevenger on hole No. 7, Terry Russell on No. 11, and Mike Fields on No. 16. The winner for the shortest drive of the tournament was Dean Herring.

Key Club officers who organized the golf tournament included Casey Daniel, president, and Kelby Hagar, tournament chairman.

The Key Club netted $1,275 in the tournament effort. Of that total, $1,000 will go to Senior Citizens, and the other $275 will go to Big Brothers-Big Sisters.

Gene Brock said, "We give a big thank you to all who supported our tournament — the golfers who participated and the merchants who donated the prizes. We felt it was a great success."

Sixty-one people played in the tournaments — 49 in the four-man scramble and 12 in the two-man scramble.

All tournament scores were as follows:

FOUR-MAN SCRAMBLE: 1. Paul Hubbard, Hugh Blakey, Rocky Lee, and Dean Herring, 61; 2. T.R. Sartor, Tommy Bowling, Bob Huffacker, and Berniece Orel, 61; 3. ### MORE SEATS

IOWA CITY (AP) — A change in the makeup of the seats at Kinnick Stadium, where the University of Iowa plays its home football games, will increase capacity by 2,000 this fall.

Parts of the east and west stands and a portion of the north stands still have wooden seats. They will be replaced by fiberglass seats, which take up less room.

The overall project will cost $576,000 but capacity for football will rise from 66,000 to 68,000.

Individual Alpine ski events were first held in the Winter Olympics in 1948 at St. Moritz, Switzerland.

Pro Basketball Hall of Famer Nate Thurmond had his greatest game in 1974 when he led Chicago to a 120-115 overtime victory over Atlanta. Thurmond scored 22 points, grabbed 14 rebounds, made 13 assists, and blocked 12 shots.

To attempt to gain competitive edge

Tricks of the trade common in baseball

By PAUL HAGEN

Fort Worth Star-Telegram
ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Just above the centerfield fence, just below the bleachers, almost invisible without close inspection, there used to be a television camera at Arlington Stadium.

When the Texas Rangers were home, the camera would focus on whomever happened to be catching for whatever team Texas was playing. There was only one viewer for this private, closed-circuit showing, a player sitting in manager Billy Martin's office.

When he had deciphered the catcher's signs, he would communicate to the dugout via walkie talkie. That allowed time for the batter to be alerted as to what pitch was coming.

If someone hollered from the dugout, for example, "Look for your pitch," it might mean fastball. "Take a good swing" could mean a breaking pitch was coming.

That sort of gamemanship ended at Arlington Stadium after Martin was fired, more than a decade ago.

"But," says current Rangers Manager Bobby Valentine, "not a game goes by where teams don't try to get a competitive edge."

Call it tricks of the trade. Call it cheating. Where do you draw the line? The general attitude toward stretching the rules, or at least bending them to your advantage, seems to be that anything goes if you are cunning enough not to get caught.

The vast majority of the time, trying to get an edge is more mundane than electronic surveillance.

It is a first baseman coming off the bag just a little early on a close play. It is a shortstop dancing over second base before he gets the ball on a double play.

It is a second baseman pretending to be waiting for a throw, hoping to trick an unwary runner into sliding, or at least slowing down.

It is a runner tagging up and leaving just a little early on a fly ball.

It is a pitcher who knows what he can get away with throwing to first, even if the move is technically a balk.

Grantland Rice once wrote that it's not winning and losing that counts, it's how you play the game.

In the big leagues, it's winning and losing that counts.

That's why there are pitchers around who will look for an edge when they need just a little something extra on a pitch. They will push off maybe six inches in front of the pitching rubber.

"Watch Phil Niekro," one American League official said of the Cleveland Indians knuckleballer. "Sometimes, with two strikes, he'll move up a few inches and throw the ball. And he's never been caught."

Pitchers, of course, have other ways of trying to get ahead of hitters. A scuffed baseball can be made to sink or sail. Some pitchers, such as Don Sutton, are suspected of carrying small pieces of sandpaper in their glove to make their mark.

Former Rangers lefthander Rick Honeycutt, then with Seattle, was suspended after a thumbtack was found bandaged to his thumb.

One time, the umpires came to the mound to search for sandpaper while Sutton was pitching. They didn't find any. They did find a note that Sutton had tucked into his glove. "Nice try. You're getting warmer," it read.

Sometimes pitchers don't even have to do their dirty work. Infielders can scuff a ball while throwing it around after an out. A catcher can sharpen a buckle on his shin guards to nick the cover.

A favorite trick of the late Elston Howard when catching for the New York Yankees was to pretend to lose his balance while squatting. He would put out his right hand, with the ball in it, to steady himself while grinding it into the dirt.

Gaylord Perry was best known for throwing a spitball. In Cleveland one night, though, he smuggled a special resin bag to the mound. It had flour in it, and on several occasions Perry got a handful of it, then released his pitch into a distracting puff of white powder.

"First they say my pitches are too wet. Then they complaint they're too dry," he shrugged, innocently.

And how did Perry load up his wet one? A former catcher of his once confided that after Perry released a pitch, he would draw his hand back across whatever part of his anatomy was hiding his Vaseline that night. While everybody was watching the ball, Perry was loading up.

The grounds crew also can lend a hand. Teams with third basemen or shortstops that lack range keep the infield grass high to slow ground balls. At Tiger Stadium, visiting teams swear you could hide small animals in the grass.

Base lines can be manicured so balls will roll fair or foul. Teams with hard-throwing pitchers may build the mound a little higher than the regulation 10 inches.

"No question about it," says one scout and former manager. "Shea Stadium (New York Mets) has one of the highest mounds in baseball."

A high mound makes hard throwers like Dwight Gooden seem even more fearsome.

When Maury Wills managed the Seattle Mariners, he ordered the Kingdome batter's box to be outlined a foot forward of where it was legal.

Rick Langford was pitching for Oakland that night, and Wills wanted his hitters to be able to move up and try to hit his curve before it broke down. It didn't work. Martin, then managing the A's, noticed it right away.

Now that he's retired, Amos Otis admits he used a corked bat for years while playing with the Kansas City Royals. Cork is supposed to make the ball jump off the bat.

St. Louis Cardinals shortstop Ozzie Smith occasionally will trick a runner who isn't paying attention. Say there's a runner at first who is going with the pitch. The batter pops the ball up, but the runner doesn't know exactly where it is. Smith will pretend he's going to take a toss from second baseman Tommy Herr to start a double play. The runner slides and is easily doubled off first.

Dodgers catcher Mike Scioscia is known in the National League for the way he gets runners at the plate. He'll stand behind home, then at the last moment step into the baseline. If all goes the way Scioscia has it planned, the runner will trip and miss the plate and be tagged out.

However, when most fans think about tricky, it inevitably comes back to stealing signs.

"Every day, it's tried," Valentine said. "I'd say we know what the pitcher is going to throw in about every fourth game. Usually you get that from something the pitcher is tipping off." "Stealing signs from the third base coach is done, but not as often as stealing the sign the manager gives when he wants a pitchout," Valentine said. "A lot of managers want to call the pitchouts these days."

Some teams will go to great lengths to figure out the catcher's signs. Years ago, according to lore, the Cleveland Indians hitters at home had only to look at the Indians logo on the scoreboard. If both eyes were open, it was a fastball. If the mascot was winking, a breaking ball was on the way.

Bernie Brewer, Milwaukee's mascot who used to sit in a perch above center field, was suspected of picking up the signs and letting the batters know by clapping. It may have just been a coincidence, but he wore white gloves that made his hands easier to see.

Valentine, then a Mets third base coach, swears the Cubs stole signs at Wrigley Field in 1984. He says the center field camera man would alert the hitters by the way he raised and lowered his arms.

There has been a longstanding suspicion that Bobby Thomson's home run off Ralph Branca, Valentine's father-in-law, that gave the New York Giants the pennant in 1951, came after Thomson was tipped off what pitch Branca was about to throw.

"Imagine that," Valentine said. "One of the most famous games in baseball may have been decided by a stolen sign."

Abundant Life

OUR LIFE MOVEMENT
By Bob Wear

ALL OF US are being carried along with the movement of the stream of time, because we are just caught up in this situation. There is, however, a forward movement over which each person has control. This movement does not require a sustained maximum effort, but there must be adequate effort to meet current needs. Some folk may move along at a faster pace, and some seem to do better than others; but this is of no particular significance.

SOME PERSONS seem to be overly ambitious and eventually fall by the way, they give up or burn out. They are not satisfied with a sensible pace, but constantly over-extend themselves. Others are reasonable and wise and durable, and thus maintain themselves in a satisfactory direction of movement. This is usually living at its best.

SOME DROPPING OUT occurs because the people are not willing to put forth sufficient effort to maintain the necessary life movement. They, for different reasons, slow down, and drop out. Some may be quitters, and some are too easily discouraged. Whatever the reason, they no longer maintain the life movement essential to the best of living.

LIFE MOVEMENT must not be away from the true, and the good, and the decent; but the successful movement is sustained by these time-proven sources of light and strength. It is not drifting; not some type of destructive competition; but is uniquely the pace best suited to each individual. This is the way of personal success.

WE KNOW that life is to be lived in the present, today, but that it is constantly moving toward the future. Abundant living is neither static, nor regressive, and is not digressive; but is progressive within the best available structure for one's life.

THE DISTANCE we have gone is not very important, but it is very important that our movement, whatever the pace, is in the right direction. We certainly have a choice about the direction of our life movement.

The rank was established by Congress for George Washington in 1799, and he was promoted to the rank by joint solution of Congress and approved by President Gerald Ford on Oct. 19, 1976.

Flores, Valle vows exchanged Saturday

MRS. ANTONIO VALLE JR.
...nee Rachel Flores

Rachel Flores and Antonio Valle Jr. were united in marriage in an early Saturday afternoon ceremony held in St. Joseph's Church with Father Joe Bixenman, pastor, officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Juan Flores of 107 W. 9th St. and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Valle of 427 Ave. I. Fresh yellow and white flowers decorated the main church altar which was flanked by brass stands. Pews were marked by yellow ribbons.

Marivel Valle served as maid of honor and best man was Felix Cano. Bridesmaids were Paula Claudio, Angie Barrientos and Jackie Urias. Serving as groomsmen were Benny Gonzalez, Richard Barrientos and Richard Reyna.

Train bearers were Adam Valle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Valle, and Monica Cano, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Cano.

Flower girl was Melva Valle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Valle, and Jessica Tijerina, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jessie Tijerina.

Lighting candles for the ceremony were Dominic Guerrero and Alonzo Rameriz.

"Aniyos de Compromiso" was played by Raul Guerrero.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal white silk wedding gown fashioned with a fitted bodice and Victorian neckline. A deep lace ruffle formed a V-shape on the bodice and back of the gown and fell over Bishop sleeves. The full, sheer sleeves were gathered at deep lace cuffs.

The circular skirt was adorned with layers of appliqued bridal illusion which were edged in lace and miniature seed pearls. It swept into a semi-cathedral-length train.

She wore a chapel-length veil of bridal illusion which was attached to a headpiece decorated by wax beads and pearls.

She carried a bouquet of yellow and white carnations with glass outlining entwined with ribbons, greenery and lace.

Further enhancing her bridal ensemble were pearl and diamond earrings and a white pearl necklace.

Bridal attendants were attired in yellow and white silk dresses trimmed in lace. They carried beige fans trimmed with white lace and centered with yellow carnations tied with matching bows.

Rosa de la Paz invited guests to register at the reception held in the Latino Ballroom.

Angie Balderaz served cake, and punch and coffee were poured by Margarita Cano. Other members of the houseparty included Gloria Alaniz and Natalia Morales.

The bridal cake, which was decorated by yellow and white roses and centered by a water fountain, was placed on the main refreshment table covered by a white and yellow cloth.

Leaving for a wedding trip to Padre Island, the bride wore a white silk street-length dress fashioned with short sleeves.

The bride is a 1986 graduate of Hereford High School where she was a member of the VOCCT Club for two years.

The bridegroom graduated from HHS in 1984 where he was in building trades. He is currently employed by Griffin and Brand.

Out-of-town wedding guests included the groom's grandmother, Juana Ruiz of San Benito; the bride's aunt and uncle, Lupe and Efrain Rodriguez of Wellington; and Mike and Elosia Hernandez of San Benito.

Hershey family meets for reunion, pot luck dinner

Approximately 60 descendants of the late Ray and Ella Hershey family gathered recently for a reunion.

The Hershey's moved to Deaf Smith County in 1910 from Ohio. They were active in community affairs and the Methodist church. Mr. Hershey was instrumental in securing the first home demonstration agent for the county.

They raised six children here, Horace Hershey and Howard Hershey, who both still live in Hereford; Katherine Klegg of Portales, N.M.; Margaret Conklin of Fort Smith, Ark.; Mary Ella Ricketts of Texico, N.M.; and Arnold, who is deceased.

The oldest daughter, Margaret Conklin and her children Ben Conklin of Hereford, Julia Rodebush of Fort Smith, Ark. and Susie Conklin of Lubbock hosted this year's gathering.

Horseshoe pitching contests begin at 11 a.m. Saturday and a barbecue dinner with beans and all the trimmings will be served at noon by the local Chamber of Commerce.

Registration of pioneers and guests will begin at 1:30 p.m. with the welcome, introduction of guests and honored pioneers to follow immediately.

Goat roping competition begins at 4 p.m. and the fun-filled days are topped off at 8:30 with a square dance on the street.

The local Chamber of Commerce will offer hamburgers, and all the trimmings from 10:30 a.m. until the crowd leaves Saturday night.

Everyone is invited to come and join in Olton's old-fashioned celebration.

Following a pot luck dinner, the group visited and looked at pictures and had a family sing along.

During the business meeting, Fay Hays of Lubbock was recognized as a guest; Bob Clark of Hereford, grand son-in-law of Mary Ella Ricketts, for attending the first time; and Dustin Anthony, great-grandson of Katherine Klegg, as the youngest present.

A NEW FOOD BAR

DALLAS (AP) — Have you skipped any lunches lately and tried to compensate with a candy bar?

It could hold you over until dinner, but you might be missing some nutrition. At an expo here put on by the Institute of Food Technologists, a prototype food bar was introduced. The manufacturer claims the bar can replace a full meal for the average person, while providing a nutritious, low-calorie, high-protein snack.

The bar was developed by Oklahoma State University and Provesta Corp., a biotechnology firm. The key ingredient is dried yeast protein.

In 1895 there were two cars registered in the state of Ohio. They collided.

A Flair for Design

Photographs are some of our most important artworks because of their personal nature. Therefore, care should be taken in their framing. Once again, Matting will enhance the photo while keeping the glass from touching the surface.

If you are planning a grouping of family photos for a wall in your home, it's wise to frame them in coordinating, not matching, mouldings. That way if you want to add to the grouping years from now, you needn't be concerned about the availability of the same moulding. Variety makes any grouping more interesting, as well, so frame pictures that you love and that make you feel good. Our lives are made up of snap shots as well as portrait quality photographs, and we are happy when we are surrounded by our memories.

We, at FINISHING TOUCHES, want to help you to create your own wall of memories, so call 364-8870, or come by and see us at 501 E. Park Ave.

Waddell selected to serve as chairperson

Troy Waddell has been selected by the Panhandle Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society as chairperson for their new comical fundraising project MS arrest, Jail and Bail, which will be held this September in Hereford.

The MS Arrest, Jail and Bail, gives everyone an opportunity to put his friends, relatives, bosses, teachers, city officials, fellow students and workers...All those you love to hate...in JAIL. (Temporarily, of course).

Everyone has fun with this project while helping to raise much needed funds to support the services offered in the Texas Panhandle. MS, a disorder of the central nervous system, generally strikes men and women between the ages of 15 and 50.

Nationally, 200 new cases are being diagnosed each week, many of whom live in the Texas Panhandle.

The disease usually affects the patient's ability to talk clearly, to walk, or to see clearly.

Although there is no known cure, there is much that can be done to help individuals function at their best level on a daily basis through counseling to reduce emotional stress, exercise programs, physical therapy, diet and adequate rest.

For further information concerning multiple sclerosis, please contact the MS office at 1416 W. 8th in Amarillo or call (806)372-4429.

If you wish to help with MS Arrest, Jail and Bail, please contact Troy Waddell, Southwestern Public Service Company, at 364-3121 or 364-4515.

Committee members serving are Sue malamen, Marilyn Leasure, Lanette Leasure, Olivia Denning, Mysedia Smith and Tricia Workman.

Others had a chance to supply our rural areas but chose not to. Then the member-owned Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative was organized. These rural pioneers brought electric power to anybody, anywhere who didn't have power.

Complications arise from using pain killers

Prolonged use of pain-killing drugs after surgery can lead to complications such as respiratory depression, itching, urinary retention and addiction to the narcotic agent.

But researchers at Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center (TTUHSC) and a Helsinki, Finland, teaching hospital are combining efforts to find an anesthetic that retains pain-suppressing abilities even after the anesthetic wears off.

Dr. James E. Heavner, who directs anesthesia research at TTUHSC, has been awarded a Fulbright senior fellowship to continue studies on the anesthetic in collaboration with colleagues at Helsinki University Central Hospital.

Heavner is one of about 2,500 Americans being sent abroad for the 1986-87 academic year under the Fulbright exchange program. The program was established to allow people in the United States and other countries to share information. It was set up in 1946 under congressional legislation introduced by former Sen. J. William Fulbright of Arkansas.

Heavner began his work in the pharmacology and toxicology of local anesthetic agents at the University of Washington School of Medicine in Seattle. There he began combining his efforts with work being done in Helsinki on spinal cord anesthetics that block pain.

Staying in Helsinki for three months beginning Aug. 1, Heavner will continue studies on how spinal anesthesia works.

The research centers on an enzyme called monoamine oxidase, which is believed to play a role in stopping flow of pain signals through the central nervous system. The researchers are looking at ways to prevent signals of pain stimuli, called nociceptive information, from getting to the brain.

"Certain local anesthetic agents prevent this enzyme from destroying natural substances in the nervous system which control the processing of nociceptive information," Heavner said.

"All local anesthetics prevent pain by blocking the flow of electrical signals along on the nerves. But some may also prevent pain in another fashion by inhibiting monoamine oxidase."

Heavner, who is also a board-certified veterinary anesthetist, said the research is aimed at helping humans but may also be applicable to animals.

Heavner noted that the work in Helsinki will involve a more purified molecular system than has been used before.

"This agent would provide analgesia beyond what local anesthetics normally provide and thus reduce the need for opioids (narcotics) later," he said. "By lessening the use of opioids, we reduce the risk of complications that go along with them."

Read fine print before committing to offer

Have you ever responded to an ad for a "free trial" offer and then been surprised when you received extra non-ordered merchandise—and a bill?

Some companies count on fact that many consumers mistakenly believe they are obligated to pay for the merchandise or to return it at their own expense, says Nancy Granovsky, a family economics specialist.

"If you're sent things in the mail that you did not order, you have a legal right to keep the shipment as a free gift, according to Federal Trade Commission (FTC) rules," explains the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economist.

Although it's not necessary as a requirement for keeping the merchandise, you may want to write a letter to the company saying you plan to keep it as a free gift, she notes. This may discourage the seller from sending you repeated bills or dunning notices, and from sending you other unrequested merchandise in the future.

Granovsky says if you don't want to keep the merchandise as a gift, you can write "Refused-Unordered Merchandise" on the package and return it to the sender. You don't have to pay postage to have the package returned.

The specialist points out that some "free gift" offers come with strings attached, that the consumer doesn't find out about until the merchandise has been received.

Under FTC rules, all conditions and terms for receiving a free item must be sent out with the original offer.

"Before you sign up for this type of offer, be sure to read the fine print, she advises, "you'll probably find out that you have to pay something or do something in order to get the free item."

Ann Landers

Stop smoking

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Keep up your campaign to get people to quit smoking! If you save just one person from the ordeal my husband went through it will be worth it.

Hank was a heavy smoker. When we discussed quitting he said it would be impossible because he had smoked nearly 50 years. Then the nightmare began.

First the husky voice and sore throat, the biopsy (cancer) followed by weeks of radiation, radical surgery, chemotherapy, an emergency tracheotomy, then a laryngectomy. (I never heard his beautiful voice again.)

Months in the hospital, many more surgeries, the last taking his jaw, teeth, and part of his tongue. He was unable to swallow. We fed him through a tube.

After Hank suffered horribly for 25 months and nearly became blind, the Lord saw fit to take him. He left behind a family emotionally and physically exhausted, and financially drained.

You cannot remind your readers too many times about the dangers of smoking. Don't ever stop.—CANCER VICTIM'S WIFE IN IOWA

DEAR IOWA: I'm sure I'm beginning to sound like a broken record, but thanks for the opportunity to say it again. My heartfelt condolences to you and the family and to other family members who are destined to suffer a similar fate.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: After reading in your column about the kid who was worried that his mother was getting a bit dingy because she talked to herself, I agree with you that talking to oneself is a good way to relieve stress.

I have always felt that if you can't talk to yourself, who can you talk to?

A few years ago while on vacation in Estes National Park my brother walked into the room while I was watching the TV and caught me talking to myself. He asked, "Mike, are you talking to yourself?" I replied, "Yes. Do you mind? It's a private conversation." Sign me—IF YOU THINK I'M CRAZY, YOU OUGHTA MEET MY BROTHER

DEAR FRIEND: Thanks for the offer. I know enough dingbats already.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When you were a young girl in Sioux City, Iowa, walking down the street with a boy, I'm sure you remember that he always walked on the outside, nearer the curb, to protect you, I believe, from the "dangers" of the street.

Today, if the boy and girl are under 30, he invariably walks on the inside. Why? We had a reason for our tradition — protection. What's the reason for the new twist? Is it just another way to flout the establishment? I thought they had gotten over their belligerence in the mid-'70s. Your contact with the youth of the nation should enable you to find out what has happened.

I have watched this phenomenon carefully—in fact, it has become an obsession. Do you have an explanation for this radical change in behavior?—OVER 50 AND IRRITATED IN LINCOLN, NEB.

DEAR OVER 50: I, too, have noticed that young men are not as wedded to this custom as they were when I was growing up, but the "flouting" is not nearly as widespread as you claim, at least not in Chicago.

To test your theory, I counted yesterday on Michigan Avenue. Out of 27 couples, 21 males walked closer to the street. Why is the count so much lower in Lincoln? Can any of you Cornhunkers enlighten me?

Finale

Tuesday, July 29, at 10 a.m. will be the final program for the library's Summer Reading Club. It will be held on the library parking lot from 10 until 11 a.m. We will be judging the best "Texas hero" costumes and drawing for the "Texadillo."

Also, summer reading club participants (second grade and older) will be preparing a "Celebrate Texas" float at the Bull Barn from 2 until 4 p.m. Parents will be responsible for the child's transportation to and from the Bull Barn. The "Celebrate Texas" float will be presented in the Town and Country Jubilee parade.

BOOKS

Two non-fiction bestsellers are featured this week at the Deaf Smith County Library. "The Rotation Diet" by Martin Katahn and "Spirit Of Survival" by Gail Sheehy are the books available this week. "The Rotation Diet" by Katahn is the result of 10 years of research and clinical experience at the Vanderbilt University Weight Management Program. For the first time you can achieve quick, comfortable, permanent weight loss while avoiding the long-term hazards and failures common to other low-calorie diets.

Two-thirds to one pound a day for women, and even more for men. This means that women can drop a dress size and one or two pants sizes in just three weeks. The author, director of the Vanderbilt Program, has designed a simple plan that varies the daily intake of calories. Because the diet lasts just three weeks there is no tendency for the dieter to get bored, lose motivation or cheat. If you have more weight to lose, you may begin to diet again after a rest/maintenance period. Here at last is an easy-to-use, no-fail diet.

"Spirit Of Survival" is by Gail Sheehy, author of Passages. Halfway around the world from Cambodia, Gail Sheehy, a successful journalist and bestselling author, found her life going through a passage she had written about but could not control. Then, on a journalistic assignment to do a story on child refugees, Gail Sheehy met Phat Mohm. Nine months later, Mohm arrives in New York with Gail to become part of her fast-paced life. This story of one woman and one child illuminates larger questions of history and human nature. This is a book that changes the way we look at ourselves.
