Curriculum changes reviewed by board

Flexibility and less paperwork for teachers, within the mandates of state objectives, is proposed in a new curriculum guideline which was presented to the Hereford board of school trustees Tuesday night in a special meeting.

The board Curriculum Committee. according to chairman Bud Patterson, spent 40 to 50 hours reviewing ideas with approximately 85 to 90 percent of the teachers and all administrators. Margaret Marshall, a proponent of mastery learning, objected to the revised policy and acccused the committee of writing the policy first, then conferring with teachers.

She said in an overhead projector presentation that in the last three years test scores have shown improvement in reading and that it was accountable to mastery learning. She claimed that learning phonics was not wholly condusive to teaching reading comprehension.

Revision of current policy stems from over a year of controversy concerning implementation of mastery learning in the district. In the spring of 1985, a parent group formed to protest teacher overload of paperwork, excessive testing of students and a general dissatisfaction of the curriculum. Several meetings were held in the Hereford High Cafeteria for public discussion that spring.

Following election and placement of a full board this spring, the trustees appointed a committee to work on revision.

The board plans a vote on the policy at the August regular

The most apparent changes in the curriculum in the hot spot of the controversy --first grade reading placement- involved allowing more flexibility for teachers in reading placement. With testing in the first two weeks of school, teacher judgment would be used in placing children for basic reading instruc-

Grade level meetings would be held on each campus and students would be divided into achievement groups according to test results (Metropolitan Achievement Test), kindergarten performance, and teacher judgment.

An emphasis will be made toward application of learned reading skills. In other elementary curriculum, the major change is that pretesting is optional for the teacher.

Learning of the objectives, however, will remain the intent. Evaluation of what a student has learned is up to the teacher. A student who has not learned the objective will be retaught for reinforcement, however, sometimes a student may be moved on to another skill and later return to that unlearned objective if re-teaching has been unsuc-

Six-week report cards will indicate level work and parental feedback through conferenced, phonecalls, return of daily work and written messaged is encouraged.

In the proposal, daily work may affect pass-fail. Report card grades will be determined by a combination of 60 percent for post tests and 40 percent for daily work.

On the secondary level, teachers may weight daily work from 25 to 40 percent for six-week grades.

Pretesting also is optional at the secondary level.

In other business, the board accepted the resignations of Rebecca Flores, Nancy Cantu, Ralph Pickens, Greg Sandford, Mary Rita Soliz, Suzanne Duvall, Pennie Pierce Rich, Donna McGee, Mike McGee, David Wood, and Sylvia Hughes.

Approved for employment were,

tough decisions," said Smithee.

He pointed out that Gov. Mark White and House Speaker Gib Lewis have both taken a stand against new taxes, and both are facing tough election races. Smithee says he doesn't look for any new tax measures to come out of the special session.

"I believe there are a number of places we can make cuts without affecting services. The good thing about this revenue deficit is that, finally, we may be able to make some of those spending cuts that should have already been made," said Smithee.

If there is a tax increase-in the special session or next year, Smithee thinks the sales tax is the most likely target. He is against a state income tax and, in fact, has introduced a bill to make it a constitutional ban. Polls have shown some interest in pari-mutuel wagering and a state lottery as ways to raise new taxes, but a pari-mutuel wagering proposal would probably draw more support than the lottery.

"Many special interest groups have been pushing for race tracks for a long time. On the other hand, there are no lobbying groups for a lottery. It appears a lottery would produce more tax revenues, but there is strong opposition to any gambling proposal," he added.

About 20 interested citizens met with Rep. Smithee for a "dutchtreat" lunch at K-Bob's Tuesday at noon. While most of those attending expressed opposition to new taxes, they also seemed to agree that a sales tax increase would be the most acceptable if more tax revenue is an absolute necessity.

AUSTIN (AP) - A newly released opinion poll finds 53 percent of Texans surveyed favoring spending cuts, while just 10.4 percent support tax increases to balance the state government budget.

The survey was conducted by Arthur J. Finkelstein and Associates of Irvington, N.Y., for the Foundation for Education on Free Enterprise, which made a copy available to The Associated Press on Tuesday.

The poll conducted June 14-19 found another 27.9 percent favored a combination of cuts and taxes, while 2.1 percent said the budget shouldn't be balanced and 6.6 percent either didn't know or declined to answer.

Reagan asked to urge elections

AUSTIN (AP) - Unrest in the Mexican border state of Chihuahua will escalate into revolution unless recent elections are voided, says the chairman of the National Hispanic Leadership Conference.

"I see a revolution resulting from it. Hopefully, if a revolution were to come, it would be a peaceful one. I don't know how realistic that is," Tony Bonilla of Corpus Christi said at a Tuesday news con-

Bonilla urged President Ronald Reagan to call on Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid to annul the July 6 election results in the states of Chihuahua, Durango and Baja California Norte. Supporters of Mexico's opposition party claim the elections were tainted by ir-

The protest led to a blockade of the Juarez-El Paso international bridge.

"Already we see a mini-revolution taking place along the U.S.-Mexico border," Bonilla said in a letter to Reagan. "These actions requesting justice, unless resolved, will have a profound impact on both nations."

'We as a nation have spoken out against voting irregularities and fraud in elections in the Phillipines and we have condemned apartheid in South Africa. Now, we as a nation should address irregularities in Mexico because it affects the destiny of the Americas," he told Reagan.

Hightower pleas for new industry

HOUSTON (AP) - State leaders need to attract small and medium-sized businesses from the food processing, electric energy generation, movie-making and tourism fields to decrease Texas' budget deficit, Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower

"Added up, these growth industries have a multibillion-dollar potential, representing an economic gusher greater than Spindletop offered 85 years ago," Hightower told an audience of 25 at the Public Affairs Roundtable meeting Tuesday in Houston.

Hightower said his agency already has been active in attracting new jobs to the state by forming cooperatives, seeking worldwide markets, encouraging farmers to grow new products and helping Texans process crops produced locally.

For example, wheat farmers around Dawn in the Panhandle soon will be processing their own grain into 300,000 pounds of flour a day, creating 14 new jobs, he said.

"It's the old concept if you got lemons, make lemonade," he said. "And we haven't been doing that."

Hightower said Texas is the second largest food grower in the country, yet processes only six percent of the nation's food products. "For every additional one percent of the national food processing market that Texas captures, the state's economy gains an additional

$3 billion in retail sales with a total economic impact of $9 billion," Officials attempting to cut the budget should not slash programs that encourage economic develpment, Hightower said. Hightower said his department already has cut about 13 percent of its staff in the last year. He said his staff may be reduced by an additional 8 to 10 percent after the special legislative session meets to tackle the state's projected $3.5 billion budget shortfall.

'Our state government's financial future cannot be made simply by slashing budgets or even by finding enough new tax revenues to cover the deficit," he said.

Committee considers Rehnquist

WASHINGTON (AP) - Supreme Court Justice William H. Rehnquist, warned he must confront "nastiness, hoopla and ... hysteria" in seeking to become the nation's 16th chief justice, says he is ready to answer a Senate committee's questions. He was to be the first witness appearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee today.

"I'm at the committee's disposal now," Rehnquist said at the end of a three-hour committee hearing Tuesday.

Tuesday's hearing was delayed until late afternoon so some of the committee's 18 members could attend services in New York City for elder statesman W. Averell Harriman, 94, who died Saturday.

Most of the three hours were consumed by committee members' opening statements - some including charges that Rehnquist, the Supreme Court's most conservative member for the past 14 years, is unqualified to replace retiring Chief Justice Warren E. Burger.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., wasted no time in saying he would vote to reject President Reagan's nomination of Rehnquist to become the nation's top judge.

"He is too extreme on race, too extreme on women's rights, too extreme on freedom of speech, too extreme on separation of church and state, too extreme to be chief justice," Kennedy said. Kennedy, who opposed Rehnquist's 1971 confirmation to the Supreme Court, attacked the justice's "cramped and narrow view of the Constitution."

"A court remade in the image of Justice Rehnquist would make the Constitution ... a lesser document in a lesser land," Kennedy

MOSCOW (AP) - The former chief engineer of the Chernobyl nuclear plant has been expelled from the Communist Party and a nuclear safety official disciplined for carelessness, a Ukrainian newspaper said.

The July 27 edition of Pravda Ukrainy reported that the Central Committee of the Ukrainian republic's Communist Party had expelled the former chief engineer at Chernobyl, identified only as Fomin, for mistakes that included conducting the experiment said to have caused the April 26 reactor accident there.

The newspaper said Fomin was expelled for "grave mistakes and miscalculations at work, committing negligence in guaranteeing safe operation of the electric station, for conducting an experiment on the No. 4 reactor which led to an accident with grave consequences without the required preparation and agreement with responsible organs."

A Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman said last week that the experiment being conducted on the reactor when it blew up was designed to see how long electricity-generating turbines could keep going in the event of a reactor shutdown.

The spokesman did not explain exactly how the experiment led to a power surge in the reactor and a chemical explosion which ripped the reactor open, releasing a cloud of radiation that evly sraaroundthe e die disaster and estimated direct costs at the equivalent

Tax talks show signs of progress

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congressional negotiations on revising the federal tax code are showing their irst signs of progress after Senate tax writers offered $30 billion in revenue-raising proposals that House bargainers called a positive he House negotiators planned to make a counteroffer, but it was unclear whether the 22 House and Senate conferees trying to draft a final vesion of tax-overhaul legislation would meet face-to-face today.

The new $30 billion offered by the Senate would hit corporations, especially banks, hardest and raises the issue of repealing the special tax treatment of corporate capital gains.

"This is the real first indication the conferees are very serious about getting a bill," said Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-III., chairman of the negotiations. "The Senate has made a very, very interesting and challenging offer to the House. It's very positive."

However, there were signs the Senate package was offered with great reluctance.

Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., said he went along with the Senate proposals only after "I choked and gulped and gagged and swallowed and was left blue in the face and lying on the

On a more serious note, Danforth said,""This whole approach is not good for the country. I am concerned that we are going to end up causing some real damage to the economy."

ed concern about raising taxes on banks at a time when a number of banks are failing. Sen. William Roth, R-Del., was unhappy with a provision in the new package that would reduce depreciation for business.

But the senators' discomfort is likely to increase because the House negotiators have served notice that their Senate counterparts must agree to a larger package if the hundreds of differences between the versions of the sweeping legislation passed by each chamber are to be resolved.

"It's the beginning of the beginning," said Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo. "We've got a long way to go."

The conferees have informally agreed on using the low top rates in the Senate-passed bill of 27 percent for individuals and 33 percent for corporations as the starting point for the talks.

The tax writers also have agreed that any compromise bill they approve should raise the same amount of money as present law. A new inflation estimate last week threw the Senate-passed bill $21 billion off that target and put the senators on the spot to come up with additional revenue.

The Senate's five-year, $30 billion package would eliminate the $21 billion shortfall and include about $5 billion the House wanted for giving more tax relief to middle-income people than does the Senate bill.

Fernando gets win 14

Lasorda raves over pitcher

By DICK BRINSTER AP Sports

When he speaks of Fernando Valenzuela, Los Angeles Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda spares few superlatives.

'He's a tough pitcher," Lasorda said Tuesday night after Valenzuela became the National League's first 14-game winner with a 2-1 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

"He's like a (Sandy) Koufax or a (Don) Drysdale," Lasorda explained, using two of the club's Hall of Fame pitchers as examples. "Those pitchers win the 2-1 games, and that is what you do when you are elassified as an outstanding pitcher."

Valenzuela, 14-6, pitched a sixhitter and struck out 11 for the third time this season as the defending NL West champions continued to make progress in a season that has seen them beset by several crippling in-

"This is what we need." Lasorda said. "We have to start pushing the cart downhill instead of uphill and they are the guys we have to beat. Now we have a little momentum going." The victory was the third straight for the Dodgers, who expect to get slugger Pedro Guerrero back next week. Guerrero has not played this season after sustaining a serious knee injury in spring training.

Los Angeles moved into fourth place in the West, 71/2 games behind front-running Houston and four behind second-place San Francisco, which has lost three in a row.

Elsewhere, it was Philadelphia 12, St. Louis 7; Atlanta 1, Houston 0, and San Diego 2, Cincinnati 1. New York and Chicago split a doubleheader, with the Mets winning the opener 3-0 and the Cubs taking the nightcap 2-1. Pittsburgh at Montreal was rained

Despite his gaudy 11-3 record, New York's Ron Darling hasn't always pleased Manager Dave Johnson. But things are changing.

"Ron's really developed because of the split-fingered fastball," Johnson said after Darling blanked Chicago on six hits in the opener. That pitch allows him to be more aggressive in the strike zone and challenge the hitters."

Darling got all the support he needed when Len Dykstra singled in two runs in the fourth and Tim Teufel followed with an RBI double. The Cubs won the nightcap on an unearned run in the seventh when New York third baseman Howard Johnson made a pair of errors.

Darling is 5-1 over is last 10 starts with a 1.50 earned-run average, lowering his ERA for the season from 3.88 to 2.62. It was his second shutout and fourth complete game of the season. He struck out eight and walked none.

Phillies 12, Cardinals 7

Von Hayes is beginning to pay dividends on a 1982 trade which saw Philadelphia send five players to Cleveland to get him.

"I'm definitely a lot more confident hitter than I've ever been," Hayes said after he hit his second career grand slam and drove in five runs as the Phillies ended the Cardinals' seven-game winning streak and climbed to the .500 mark.

Braves 1, Astros 0

Atlanta managed only three hits off Mike Scott, and David Palmer was happy one of them - Dale Murphy's 15th homer, in the seventh inning - went just far enough to make him a winner.

"Games can't get any closer than 1-0 with a home run that scrapes the top of the fence, the only run," said Palmer, 7-8, who allowed just four hits in 7 2-3 innings. Gene Garber got the last four outs for his 13th save.

Scott, 10-7, retired 16 straight batters before Glenn Hubbard singled with one out in the sixth for the Braves' first hit. Scott struck out 10 in eight innings to increase his major-league leading total to 197. Padres 2, Reds 1

Garry Templeton, who said he'd been hitting as if he had a hole in his bat, found one in the Cincinnati defense. He hit it where they weren't, lining a two-out single for a gamewinning hit in the ninth inning.

"I've been struggling lately," said Templeton, who entered the game with a .225 average.

The Padres' shortstop was 0-for-13 as he faced the Reds Ron Robinson, 8-2, with the winning run on second. He had just six hits in 35 at-bats when he walked to the plate and was 3-for-22 against Cincinnati this

Cowboy security is no easy task

By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) -Former FBI agent Larry Wansley's job is THE security of the Dallas Cowboys. He gets some help this week from Scotland Yard and the U.S. State Department in London.

The Cowboys fly to England Sunday for their NFL exhibition against the Chicago Bears in Wembley Stadium on Aug. 3 and Wansley will have mixed emotions. He's happy the Cowboys are going but he'll be relieved when it's over.

As an FBI agent, Wansley worked on the Patty Hearst case, the Watts riots in Los Angeles, and the ambush murder of a federal judge.

He worked his way up from a patrolman in Compton, Calif. to the FBI where he retired after a successful and sometimes pulsepounding career.

No FBI case gave him sweaty palms like the responsibility of making preparations for the Dallas Cowboys' sojourn to London.

Although Wansley is listed in the Cowboys' media guide as director of counseling services" it should be 'director of health and welfare' of the team's officials, players, and their families.

"I feel confident everything will go well," Wansley says. "I've been working with some very competent people. Those guys at Scotland Yard know what they're doing. London is a very international city and they are old hands at the security business."

For six months, Wansley has been putting together a security game plan for the Cowboys' week-long visit to Europe. He's had "tea" at 3 p.m. with top Scotland Yard officers in brainstorm sessions.

"At first there was a lot of concern over international terrorism," Wansley says. "There were a lot of questions to be answered. There was a lot of legwork to be done."

A big headache for Wansley is to make sure everyone gets a proper passport.

"You'd be surprised how many we've had who have forgotten that little item," he says. "I'm still scrambling around trying to get everyone lined up."

Wansley said he was confident things would go well on the trip.

"There is always the chance some flake might try something," Wansley says. "But I'm very confident the metropolitan police have things in hand. They have tremendous experience dealing with visiting dignitaries. Nothing is absolute but I feel good about all the plans I've

"There are some places that will be off limits to the players." Wansley said. "We're relying on the metro police to identify those areas for us. We don't want our people to be touring in the wrong area." For Wansley, who once arrested a sniper in a building after the guy had taken a pot shot at him, the next week won't be a vacation in Europe.

He's ready for tamer stuff back in Texas — like keeping groupies away from the Cowboys' practice field.

Now You're Cookin'

By CINDY SMITH Staff Writer

For a lady on the go with two teenagers, museum board work, and a part-time job, Paula Edwards said she doesn't cook three meals a day anymore. Living 22 miles north of Hereford, Edwards said, "I spend most of my time out on the road taking the kids to town, as far out as we live," she laughed.

Working at the Church of the Nazarene two days a week leaves little time for civic clubs.

'Since I started working part-time and going with the children like I have been, I'm not active in any clubs right now, except for the museum board," said Edwards. This is her first year on the Deaf Smith County Musuem Board and she's averaging at least three committee meetings a month, "But I love it," she added.

Edwards said she thoroughly enjoyed helping with the museum board's Sesquicentennial luncheons held this past April and will be sharing the recipes the club prepared.

"Really, the purpose of the luncheons was to get area clubs to come to the E.B. Black House and to the museum to see what Hereford has to offer," she explained.

Part of her volunteer work for the board includes setting up displays. "Right now, we're trying to fix a permanent display for the hand-carved circus, and maybe even puppets, of Abe Martin," she said.

Edwards explained that Martin was a barber in Hereford during the 1940s and after the war years he had time to carve between customers because business was so slow.

"He modeled the circus after the Barnum and Bailey Circus and every Saturday he would set this display up outside on his lawn playing calliopian music and invited the neighborhood kids over to see it," Edwards explained.

Edwards said the display is really worth preserving and she is excited about the possibility of getting the puppets donated to the museum. "The more you look at the displays, the more you can appreciate the time and talent he had put into it," added Edwards.

"We're also working on a Children's day at the museum in commemoration of the Sesquicentennial. We're hoping to have wagon rides, someone churning real butter and showing them how to mold it, and we may have someone making sour dough biscuits," Edwards said noting that the board of directors thought it would be nice for the children to see the way of life that some of these chores represent.

"There's a lot going on in the club," she said. "I was amazed at how much there is to do in the museum and the Black House. Some of the women have worked so hard in that flower garden out there and it took many, many, years to get the Black House and museum in order.

"If you knew how many people worked on refinishing the house and finding the original pieces to restore it, you would appreciate it much more," she said.

Future projects for the museum board include making a bridal room for changing attire in the Black House, a puppet show at the museum, and renovating the basement of the museum.

Another group Edwards makes time for is the youth group at the Church of the Nazarene. "I've worked with the youth group and attended several trips this year," she said. The group, including Edwards as a sponsor, meets every Wednesday. This year they have gone snow and water skiing, and river rafting. "I think working with the youth I have learned that we've got some outstanding young people in our community. They're very caring and very talented, but that's not only in our youth group, that's true of all the youth groups in Hereford," Edwards

For Edwards, cooking and hobbies have taken a back seat lately- but for a very good reason.

"My priorities are not cooking and hobbies; my priorities are being free to go with my children and be involved with their activities right now," explained Edwards.

"Time is a very important thing and that's the most important thing you can spend on your children," she

Following are recipes that the mother-on-the-go has helped to prepare at the Historical Society's Sesquicentennial luncheons.

HEAVENLY STRAWBERRY ROLL

3 eggs 1 cup sugar 1 cup self-rising flour

1/3 cup water 1 tsp. vanilla extract

powdered sugar 2/3 cup sugar 2 tbs. cornstarch

2 tbs. strawberry-flavored gelatin 1/2 cup of juice from fresh strawber2 cups fresh strawberries, sliced 1 (3-ounce) package cream cheese,

14 cups sifted powdered sugar

Grease a 15x10x1-inch jellyroll pan, and line with foil. Grease and flour foil and set aside.

Beat eggs at high speed of an electric mixer until foamy. Gradually add one cup sugar, beating until mixture is thick and lemon colored. Fold flour, 1/3 cup water, and vanilla into egg mixture. Spread batter evenly in prepared pan. Bake at 375 degrees for 10 to 12 minutes.

Sift powdered sugar in a 15x10-inch rectangle on a linen towel. When cake is done, immediately loosen from sides of pan and turn out on sugar. Peel off foil. Starting at narrow end, roll up cake and towel together; let cool completely on a wire rack.

Combine next four ingredients in a medium saucepan; cook over medium heat, stirring constantly until mixture is thick, about five minutes. Cool completely and stir in strawberries.

Beat cream cheese until fluffy. Gradually add 11/4 cups powdered sugar, beating until smooth.

Unroll cake and remove towel. Spread cake with cream cheese mixture, then strawberry mixture and reroll. Place on serving plate with seam side down. Chill until serving time. Yield: 8 to 10 servings.

Local curriculum director receives award

Leslie Paschel, curriculum director for Hereford Independent School District, was one of 40 hand-picked Texas school administrators to complete Texas Christian University's first Academy for Educational Leadership in June.

Paschel earned six hours of graduate credit during 10 days of studying under such educational leaders as Dr. William Kirby, Commissioner of Education, Texas Education Agency, and his assistant, Dr. Richard Swain; Dr. Linus Wright, superintendent, Dallas Independent School District; along with Dr. Jared Hazleton, president, Texas Research League, and education professors from TCU and universities of Alabama, Wisconsin, Missour/Kansas City and Houston.

Members of the academy, all highly rated practicing administrators preparing for superintendent-level positions, heard Dr. Kirby identify the basic problem in Texas education today as teacher morale, mainly because of the unpopular TECAT test.

"TECAT was the political price teachers had to pay for salary increases," the state's top educational administrator declared. The teachers should have banded together to get the law changed in 1985, he added.

Ann Landers

Dying of skin cancer

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Every year you print a letter from a dermatologist about suntanning and plead with sun worshippers to cut it out. Yet millions of people continue to work very hard to get a deep tan. Perhaps hearing from me will convince someone, somewhere that a tan can be deadly.

I am 33 years old, the mother of three wonderful children, and am dying of melanoma, a lethal form of skin cancer. I spent many years of my youth and most of my young adulthood in pursuit of a tan. In the process I have brought about my untimely and imminent death.

I did not acquire this cancer recently. The damage was done while I was young. It was aggravated by my continued exposure to the sun. My skin did not build up a tolerance (a myth sunbathers love to perpetuate) and now I am paying for my foolishness with my life.

I am having a hard time facing the fact that I will be leaving my children motherless because of my vanity. The pain and grief I am causing my family could have been avoided. Now I will not be here to see my children grow, graduate from high school and college, marry and have families.

Continue to urge people (especially the young) to stay out of the sun. Suggest that they use No. 15 sunscreen if they insist on risking it. Tell them suntanning parlors are no better,

Harry L. Everett, D.D.S.
Specialist in Orthodontics is pleased to announce the opening of his office at 309 E. 6th Street Hereford, Texas 79045 364-6621

If no answer, please call regardless of what the ads say.

Please, Ann, never stop crusading against suntanning. My own per-against suntanning. My own personal hell is knowing that all this anguish could have been avoided if I had used some commons ense.—C.J.

DEAR C.J.: Thank you for giving my readers a first-hand account of what it is like to die, needlessly, and much too soon.

I am convinced that some people are addicted to the sun. They know intellectually they are flirting with disaster (same with smokers) but they are hooked. My advice to all of you: If you want to live-get counseling and put an end to the self-destructive behavior.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I decided to write to you beause I was upset by a recent news release claiming that "Yankees" are rejoicing about the high rate of unemployment in Texas. That is an absurd and divisive statement. I don't know anyone in Ohio who is happy about joblessness in Texas or anywhere else. We worried too much and too recently to be lad about anyone losing a job.

We are a united nation. When one segment suffers, we all suffer. I do not believe Texans were happy about recent Northern unemployment. Every state has its share of big mouths and the media have always been eager to create animosity.

Believe me, we in Ohio wish all Texans well. We are one nation, under god, indivisible. That is our pledge. Please print this.--AN AMERICAN FROM OHIO

DEAR OHIO: Here's your letter with a word from Yours Truly.

Here and there you can always find some lone nut who rejoices at the misfortune of others. But to ascribe such base feelings to whole segments of society is ridiculous.

Joblessness is a horrible plight wherever it occurs. At this moment, Texas is having a tough time because of oil prices. I am sure I speak for millions of Yankess when I say we are sad and sorry about your trouble and hope the end is in sight. You've risen above dust storms, drought and floods. You'll come out of this, too. Chin up down there.

Men can now buy an expensive gadget to shave with that leaves the stubbly look that's now so popular — or they can simply use old blades.

In 3-hour documentary

ABC surveys sexual revolution

can't have it all?

Nearly everyone who appears tonight on "After the Sexual Revolution." a three-hour documentary from ABC News, seems to dispute that silly question which is endlessly posed by that beer commercial.

Take Judy Kramer, for instance. She's 36, has a good career and is looking forward to the birth of her first child. She's not married, however; the baby was conceived by artificial insemination. She worries about having to explain her decision to her child some day.

"You can't have it all," she says. "No one can."

"After the Sexual Revolution," reported by the husband-wife team of Betsy Aaron and Richard Threlkeld with an assist from network anchor Peter Jennings, does a much better job of saying what has happened than why it happened.

The flurry of statistics scattered through the program shows that

SO I DON'T HAVE A

DO YOU THINK I'M

DUMB CHUCK?

TUTOR, ANYMORE, CHUCK

NEW YORK (AP) - Who says you women have expanded their foothold in what was a man's world. Women now represent 18 percent of the lawyers, 17 percent of physicians and one-fourth of all MBAs, although they have barely cracked the highest levels of business.

> A sign, surely, that maybe you can have it all?

That was the promise of the 1960s, but the reality is stark: 70 percent of all working women are single, divorced, widowed or married to men making $15,000 a year or less. Forty-seven percent of the single mothers live below the poverty line. Overall, the documentary notes, women are not better off economically than they were nearly 30 years

"After the Sexual Revolution" is at its grimmest in talking about children, especially the children whose parents are divorced. Childsupport payments are often inadequate, even when the former husband pays, and single mothers may

THAT'S NICE, CHUCK ..

THAT'S REALLY NICE ...

THAT'S SWEET AND

have to go to work and let the children fend for themselves part of the day.

The documentary blames some of women's problems on the law. For instance, 100 countries have laws safeguarding maternity leave for working women, and 50 have laws requiring adequate day-care programs for children. The United States is not part of either group.

The strongest conclusion the documentary makes is that the government should do something, although the specifics again are vague.

It's a huge subject, way too big even for an anchorman to settle in a few hours. If the program is weak on analysis, it's pretty strong in laying out the situation. After all, you can't have it all.

READ THE

METER
NEW YORK (AP) — Learning to read your electric meter is helpful when trying to cut down on electricity consumption.

By monitoring usage, you can, for example, see how much it costs to run the air conditioner for several days straight, or how much you save when the water heater is turned off for a day compared with leaving it on.

EL PASO, Texas (AP) -As if did for millions of others, World War II changed

Laura Blackmon's life. She always had planned to teach. She even earned a degree at West Texas State Teachers College and a job teaching that paid $67 a Superintendent of Schools month. 136 Avenue F It was a meager salary, she Hereford, Texas 79045 said, but, it still was the (806)364-0606 Depression, and Mrs. W-S-19-2c Blackmon was happy to be able to pay her debts. Then came the war and a better-

> Not an exicting job, the young woman thought. Mrs. Blackmon, now crowding 70, remembers sitting in an office and thinking to herself that she would remain a quiet shadow in some typing pool the rest of her life. Suddenly her supervisor appeared at the door of the room with a young lieutenant paying job as a clerk-typist at

in tow. "Have any of you had any art training?" the lieutenant asked the women who filled the room. Mrs. Blackmon said she remembers her head jutting upwards. She looked about the room and thought, "Well, I guess they're talking to me." She said her hand went up and they motioned her into the hall.

"I didn't know a T-square from a triangle. But the lieutenant told he thought he could make a draftsman of me, and so we drove in a staff car to the post warehouse district. We went into a tremendous warehouse with some offices to one side and one lone drafting table."

The lieutenant picked up an instrument, waved it in her face, and told Mrs. Blackmon, "This is a T-square."

Mrs. Blackmon said she watched the young man intently as he began taking her through procedures and equipment used in engineering drawing.

" 'You know what? I said to myself, 'I like this. I'm gonna go to school.' I found some night courses and have a certificate for engineering drawing from a branch of Texas

Within two years, Mrs. Blackmon, still in her early 20s, had earned recognition for her inventions and received several top awards. She remembers two well: a printing process and a safety device used in repairing tires on the B-17 bombers. The bomber tires "were awful," Mrs. Blackmon said. 'They would blow up on the servicemen."

She later was offered a job with another division where she became head of the drafting deparment. After marriage and the birth of two sons, Mrs. Blackmon's inventiveness turned homeward. She continued painting and won numerous awards. But as she carried around her suitcase with paints, she became disgruntled with its clumsiness.

"It opened wrong.

Everything spilled out." So she began using her technical training to design an artist's case and in 1969 received a patent for her work. Although it was marketed and Mrs. Blackmon began receiving royalty checks, she said the wrong material and advertising strategies were used. Instead of something light, the manufacturer made the case out of aluminum. It cost nearly $90. Since a patent is good for 17 years, Mrs. Blackmon decided to renew hers, except that this time she labeled the design a "multisectioned storage case." She received that patent in 1984 and plans to market it in lightweight plastic for $20. The mold alone will cost $60,000. Meanwhile, she designed a desk for herself that would allow her to pursue both her art and inventions. "I had it measured just so," Mrs. Blackmon said. "I took it to a carpenter who insisted I didn't want the specifications I had drawn." When it came, the drawers were too shallow and she she sent it back and told him to redo it. The desk has a folding easel on one side and a folding cork bulletin board on the other. The painter's side is lighted by natural light from a picture window behind

She also has designed a device that unfolds and can be attached to a car window when parking in a big lot. The car spotter can replace the radio antenna, which in new cars disappears into the front end when the engine turns off. You can decorate your car spotter any way you want to keep it recognizable. But her inventions worry Mrs. Blackmon.

"There are vultures out there," she said.

People who create and invent should protect their products with patents. But obtaining a patent is not easy, she said.

Texas toast, fresh fruit.

Peter Gott, M.D.

Surgery shouldn't cause weakness

DEAR DR. GOTT - Two years ago I had carpal tunnel surgery of the right wrist, and I developed a staph infection before the stitches were removed. Since then I've had progressive motor neuron disease involving the entire right side. There's increasing weakness, and I can't do anything that requires dexterity. A neurologist suggests it might be muscular dystrophy. Could the surgery have triggered this? Do you have any other suggestions?

DEAR READER — Carpal tunnel syndrome is a form of nerve entrapment. The nerves to the hand become pinched by an overlying fibrous band that encircles the wrist. Surgery re-leases the band. Neither the surgery nor the carpal tunnel syndrome is, in my opinion, the cause of your present right-sided weakness. There are many possible causes for your problem. Seek a second opinion from another neurologist.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have had epilepsy for 22 years, but feel as if I'm getting out of it. Can an EEG test really tell if this is so?

DEAR READER - Often an encephalogram (EEG), which measures electrical activity in the brain, can be abnormal without the person having seizures or epilepsy. Conversely, in a small percentage of epileptics, the EEG may be normal. Therefore, the brain-wave test is not always a reliable indicator as to whether a person has outgrown the condition. Obviously, it can help. In a situation where the epileptic has a distinctly abnormal EEG, discontinuation of therapy is probably ill-advised. Your neurologist is the best judge of the state of your epilepsy.

To give you more information, I'm sending you a free copy of my new Health Report on EPILEPSY. Others who would like a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to mention the title.
