The Senate set aside debate on the Panama Canal treaty Tuesday to pass an emergency farm relief package already branded by critics as an election year

The Senate bill offers the possibility of parity prices for some commodities, but the measure has been labeled as a "Christmas tree bill aimed at disgruntled farmers," and opponents claim the bill has "no chance of becoming law."

Opponents also allege that the package, approved 67-26, would add at least $100 a year to the average family's food bill through a system of payments to farmers for not planting.

A key element of the Senate version would allow farmers 100 percent parity prices for some commodities if they idle 50 percent of their land.

Parity is a measure of farm income based on the years 1910-1914, when farm income and costs were considered in balance. Attainment of 100 percent parity is the focus of current farm protests.

yesterday, the Senate approved a proposal to raise price supports and income guarantees for grain and cotton farmers by about 20 percent.

The proposal, sponsored by Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., was adopted 58-35 as an amendment to the emergency

The McGovern amendment would raise the target price on wheat from $3 to $3.55 per bushel; on corn from $2.10 to $2.50 per bushel; and on cotton, from 52 cents per pound to 70 cents.

The McGovern amendment would also raise the rate at which the USDA loans money on crops from $2.25 per bushel to $2.85 on wheat, from $2 to $2.25 a bushel on corn and from 44 cents to 50 cents a pound on cotton

The Senate package, which now contains numerous riders on the basic Talmadge farm bill proposed recently. will now go to the House, where it faces nearly certain overhaul.

The House earlier approved the Dole 'flexible parity bill', which would essentially allow farmers to set their own price according to the amount of land they idle. A 50 percent layout would

Ford Hints That He May Run in '80

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) - Former President Gerald Ford insists it is much too early to decide whether he'll make a run for the White House again in 1980. But he's sounding more and more like a candidate.

"I am healthy. I won't duck my responsibility and I'll be around one way or another in 1980," the former Republican chief executive said Tuesday in hedging questions at a news

Then, Ford blasted President Carter, the Democrat who defeated him in the 1976 election.

He said Carter's proposed energy program is insufficient and misdirected. Ford, who addressed a closed luncheon session of the National Petroleum Refiners Association, told a news conference the Carter administration "is going down the wrong road when they advocate total regulation" of oil and gas

He said lawmakers should take another look at the energy program he submitted to Congress in January 1975, which called for deregulation of prices for new natural gas and crude oil.

The Carter administration is wrong when they advocate a continuation of control over domestic crude oil prices. I don't believe that is the way for us to stimulate an incentive for greater production of domestic crude oil or new natural gas," Ford said.

"The Carter administration's energy program is basically unsound and insufficient and it could have a serious impact on the future security. economically as well as militarily, of the United States.'

Ford said that is what he told the 2,400 oil refiners at the closed luncheon.

The suntanned former president said he has received "considerable encouragement" to make the 1980 race but has told supporters an organized campaign for his nomination would be premature

Ford, who also attended two small. clsoed receptions Tuesday afternoon said he would be trying to raise money for a Gerald Ford Presidential Library and Museum at one of the receptions.

The other reception was a $100 per person fund-raiser staged by the political action committee of the San Antonio Chamber of Commerce. Local officials planned to use the money raised to support candidates in San Antonio's 1979 municipal elections.

PTSO, Candidates Discuss VRA

Managing Editor

Questions ranged from absenteeism policies to federal government intervention as members of the Hereford Parent-Teachers-Students Organizations interviewed three candidates for the scheduled April 1 school-board Tuesday night in the high school library.

Ten PTSO members and candidates Paul Rameriz, James Gentry and Clark Andrews discussed school policies and problems in rap-session style during the two-hour meeting consumed mostly by gripes concerning the application of the federal Voting Rights Act in the Hereford Independent School District.

One PTSO member called the Justice

Department's intervention "stupid," and nobody present disagreed with her.

The Justice Department, citing the Voting Rights Act of 1965 as amended in 1975 to include Texas, refused to approve the HISD's request to change from an at-large to place system of voting on the grounds that the new procedure might be discriminatory towards minorities.

Since once of the members of the three-judge panel appointed to consider the injunction was unable to attend the hearing, the other two judges postponed action until Tuesday, March 28.

"The legislature directed the college coordinating Board to develop guidelines for faculty workloads," Ashworth said. "I reached one conclusion. If we make the legislature happy, we make the faculty unhappy.

The Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System, will discuss faculty workloads Thursday as part of the guideline development.

Legislators want to tie ors to a strict num courses to be taught each semester. The Faculty Senate's report said that was unrealistic and suggests that all faculty be held merely to a 40-hour work

There are probably very few abuses by the faculty." Ashworth said. "Professors in well-established departments very often will end up teaching small classes and junior faculty members will end up carrying larger sections.

We can come up with standards and reports. But those who have been abusing it will be the first to find a loophole," Ashworth said. The faculty report agrees.

"Either we create a formula so simple that it requires distortion of the professor's activities, or we create one so complex that it precludes bility," the study says.

The UT-Austin faculty's worst critic is one of its own. Dr. James Sledd, professor of English and member of the Faculty Senate.

"We are playing out an elaborate charade. The faculty is literally incapable of edd said at a recent Faculty Senate meeting in which he rejected the proposed 40-hour work week.

"The university says you can't get promoted unless you do research and publish. The professors instituted the system. It's our own racket," Sledd said during a later interview.

He partially blames the low number of faculty teaching undergraduates on a surge during the 1950s of federal grants, which have since run out of funds. Grants funded research, he says, and at the same time allowed graduate students to take over teaching responsibilities.

Sledd doesn't fault professors from making a good situation better by relying on graduate students to free them for research. He says the faculty does not really want to change the system but is only trying to get the legislature off its back.

Tired Whitefaces Drop Two at Tournament

David Ashby, first-year coach of the Hereford High School baseball team, was tired. You could see that his mind wasn't on the basketball game on television as he habitually went through the motions of discarding his dip in a small, hand-held spittoon.

'If there were any worms in the ground there, we killed every one of them," he said shaking his head. "We just beat the ball into the ground."

The Whitefaces, fresh off a three-game sweep to the Hereford Tournament title last weekend, had just returned rom a two-game slump at a Pampa tournament.

The host Harvesters, who eventually won the tourney in a 13-9 decision over Dumas in the three-team affair, nipped the Herd 6-5 in the first tourney game. The Demons, sparked by the one-hit pitching of Garv Wingo, drubbed the 'Faces 7-0

"Chris (Herd senior Chris Hill) should have won the first game," Ashby contended. "He pitched well enough to win."

Hill, now 2-2 on the year, struck out seven Harvesters in the game while issuing just one base on balls. Errors afield on three key situations allowed Pampa five unearned runs.

"Those errors just killed us when it counted," Ashby said, furtively glancing at the tube as the NIT finals raced by.

Seven Whitefaces picked up a hit apiece in the contest, the same number of safeties given up by Hill. Singles by Hill and like Culp in the Vecond inning gave HHS an early 2-0 lead, but the Harvesters came back to tie it in the bottom of the inning. Larry McNutt. Donald Johnson, and John Wagner collected their hits in the fourth to make it 5-2 Hereford lead, but again Pampa matched that output to knot the score.

In the fifth, an error afield followed by an RBI single by Gary Free spelt defeat for the 'Faces, who by then were

Kids, Inc. Needs Pee Wee Coaches

Hereford Kids, Incorporated will be needing coaches for Pee Wee boys baseball teams this summer it has been reported. In addition, there may also be a need for some coaches in the ninor league as well.

The Pee Wee classification will include boys seven and eight years of age, and will employ the "T-Ball" format of play for the first time here. This seven year-olds will be allowed

The Minor League will contain players ages 9-10, while the Major League will be comprised of players 11-12.

Interested coaches may contact either Mike Dodson at Hereford Janitor Supply or Buddy Peeler at KPAN for information.

Player applications will be distributed through the schools March 29, with tryouts set for April 10-11 at the baseball parks at 15th and Ave. H.

New, Old Mentors Shocked by Change

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) - "This is probably the biggest shock in my entire baseball life," said Roger Craig when the San Diego adres named him to replace Manager Alvin Dark. "But it is also the best shock I ever had."

The Padres fired Dark Silk Corsages Tuesday in a surprise move, telling him the team's players felt he couldn't communicate. Craig, a pitching coach for nearly a decade, was named interim manager when Padres Vice President Ballard Smith announced Dark's ouster. And at a later news conference, Padres owner Ray Kroc said Craig would be his manager.

The 47-year-old Craig was offered a one-year contract with undisclosed terms following San Diego's 9-8 exhibition victory over San Francisco. "I've been a darned good pitching coach over the years," said Craig, "and I feel I can be a darn good manager, too." Dark was stunned by the firing. "It was such a quick thing," said the 56-year-old "born again" Christian who had two years remaining on the contract he signed last May 30 when he succeed John McNamara.

Players have complained that Dark was distant, called pitches from the bench and was unwilling to bend.

they have to catch the ball. But they executed this fly pattern just perfectly. Ron Baxter throws that pass so well." Krivacs, whose point production was the highest in the 41st NIT, was on the receiving end of many of Baxter's passes and hit barrage of breakaway field goals throughout the contest as the Longhorns raced to their 26th victory in 31 decisions.

Lemons, of course, chose to go to this running game for obvious reasons.

"I was worried about North Carolina State's inside game," said Lemons. "We're a short, frail team and when it gets rough inside, we have to get out. We just don't have the bench that North Carolina State has. They threw a lot of players at us and I had to basically stay with five guys."

That would be Krivacs. Baxter, Moore, Tyrone Branyan and Gary Goodner. But as far as Sloan was concerned, five was all Texas needed Tuesday night. "Everything they did, they executed well," noted the North Carolina State coach. I have great respect for Lemons and that team. Before the tournament, I knew they were a good team. But now I think they're a great team.

"They challenge every defensive pattern that you throw at them. The way they can shoot, it's almost suicide to try a zone. They are an excellent tournament team. They never get shaken. Our size was not ready for them and they just out-quicked us at every position. What it boils down to was that reflected the way the Longhorns played throughout this NIT. They had advanced to the finals with runaway triumphs over Temple, Nebraska and Rutgers.

Lemons noted that his Longhorns did all right for a team that was picked in pre-season polls to finish fifth in the SWC.

"No one hurt us bad all year," he reflected. "The guys do their job."

In an earlier consolation game for third place, Rutgers whipped Georgetown 85-72 as James Bailey scored 27 points. The Scarlet Knights finished their season at 24-7 while Georgetown completed the season with a 23-8 record.

HOUSTON (AP) - A hearing has been set for Monday in a suit filed by an 18-year-old girl who wants to play on her school's baseball team.

The suit, filed Tuesday by Wheatley High School senior Linda Williams, seeks to prevent the Houston Independent School District and the University Interscholastic League from barring her from the school's competitive baseball program. Miss Williams is seeking a temporary order and preliminary injunction against HISD and the UIL so that she can play on the baseball team before the season ends May 14.

U.S. District Judge Woodrow Seals set the Monday hearing on the request.

The suit said Miss Williams joined the team in January after the school's varsity baseball coach, Lorenzo Jones, requested she come out for the

The suit stated that the UIL then informed HISD's Joe Tusa, HISD athletic director, that she was to be barred from the team because girls playing on a boys team would be in violation of the league rules. As a result of her exclusion, Miss Williams said in the suit, she has been "denied, based solely on her sex, to participate in the sport of baseball in which she is very competent and denied her chance....to increase her chances of receiving an athletic scholarship."

Bailey Marshall, director of the UIL and one of the defendants named in the suit, said if Miss Williams is allowed to play on the boys team it would hurt the girls teams.

"If the judge rules in favor of girls playing on the boys teams, then boys could play girls teams," he said. "That would be detrimental to the girls program which we have fought and scrambled to achieve."

NEW YORK (AP) - Ron Baxter and Jim Krivacs of the Texas Longhorns don't mind sharing a Most Valuable Player trophy as long as a victory goes along with it.

After Baxter and Krivacs were deservedly named co-winners of the MVP trophy in the Longhorns' 101-93 triumph over North Carolina State in Tuesday night's finals of the 41st National Invitation Basketball Tournament, they exchanged pats on the back with each other and their teammates.

Baxter expressed surprise at his selection, although Krivacs didn't. But both agreed on one thing: the entire Texas squad deserved the accolade after their "team victory" at Madison Square Garden.

With Baxter and Krivacs sharing the MVP award, it marked the first time that there have been co-winners in the NIT since 1952 when Tom Gola and Norm Grekin of La Salle both gained MVP honors.

Baxter, a 6-foot-4, 225-pound sophomore forward, and Krivacs, a wiry 6-1 junior guard, were instrumental in the Longhorns' easy victory over the Wolfpack. The dynamic pair keved the Longhorns' offense from the outset and Texas built an insurmountable 54-39 half-

COMMENTARY

Donald F. Graff

Honesty, as Congress is wont to impress upon the likes of Tongsun Park and Bert Lance, is the preferred policy.

Except sometimes in its own houses.

It is public knowledge that Congress has long been less than fully honest with the public in reporting House and Senate-proceedings via its official journal, the Congressional Record.

It hasn't been necessarily so that the speeches recorded therein are actually uttered in spirited debate on the House or Senate floor. Often they reach print via a procedure—"Extension of Remarks"— which permits members to revise their statements. Intended as a means of correcting errors and clarifying points for the public record, it has become a vehicle for inserting everything from speeches straight from the typewriter to letters from constituents and clippings from the home-town press in what is supposed to be a record of actual proceedings.

The privilege has contributed no little bit to the bloating of the size and consequent cost—$317 per page to print—of what has become an officially sanctioned blend of Chided for years for this deception of the public.

Congress is at last facing up to the situation — sort of.

As of March 1, material which has not first been uttered on the floor will be so indicated in the pages of the Record by a bullet (*) preceding and concluding the passages in

But wait — there's more. A senator or representative need speak only the opening sentence on the floor to have an entire speech inserted, bulletless, in the Record. The more things change .

Carter Urban Policy Resembles Kennedy's

WASHINGTON (AP) - The major initiative in President Carter's urban policy bears far broader approach was mstriking resemblance to the strategy adopted by John F. Kennedy before he decided it wwouldn't solve the problem.

When Carter unveils his urban policy March 27, the big new effort will be to foster economic development and encreate permanent jobs.

The argument for this emphasis was starkly stated in an Office of Management and Budget paper last December:

"The problems of America's cities, as of its lagging rural areas, are not problems of housing, or transportation, or social services, or community facilities. They are at base approblems of economic develop-needed. Michael Harrington's book, "The Other America," had described a cycle of poverty in which addressing one problem like jobs did little good because others - poor housing, health care, transportation, illiteracy - simply dragged people back into poverty.

Kennedy set in motion the war on poverty. A host of social programs followed under Lyndon Johnson, culminating in the Model Cities program which gave each city its own mix of solutions for problems. Beginning in 1969, Richard Nixon dismantled many of these programs and turned others into flexible block grants giving local officials more freedom in spending the money. But total funding grew, and in the last decade the federal share of local general revenues rose from 10 percent to 50 percent. Carter's decision to prepare a

Only two months ago - fairly late in a year's work on urban policy - did Carter order a systematic analysis of existing federal aid.

Sources say he will propose altering some existing programs in ways similar to action taken by his Department of Housing and Urban Development even before urban policy work began. One White House official argued the administration had learned from history but implicitly acknowledged the new policy will not address all the difficulties uncovered since Kennedy's time.

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) distraught mother said Tuesday her 9-year-old boy was in the hospital with serious burns because she could not pay her electric bill.

Michael Gray remained in serious condition in the intensive care division of Brackenridge Hospital from burns received in a Sunday night apartment fire.

Fire investigator Lt. Mike Noe said a candle used for illumination fell from a night-stand near the door to Michael's bedroom and ignited Michael's brother, Jim, awoke and tried to awake his brother before he ran from the room. Michael finally came through the flames after Jim stood in the hall shouting to wake him.

The boys' mother, Dee Dee Howell, dining room manager at an Austin restaurant, said the candle was being used because she could not afford to pay $86 a month for electricity. She said electricity for the apartment was turned off for the third time Friday.

Gutmon Phillips, manager of the city utility services, said Mrs. Howell failed to pay even one bill since last July when she signed up for electric service. He said that city servicemen have twice found meter boxes at the apartment had been tampered with to provide the electricity.

He was like a kid with a new toy--completely wrapped up in it. Next thing I knew he was invited to a get-together. (They call it an "eyeball.") Just a bunch of guys with a common interest, is the way Art put it.

These "eyeball" parties turned out to be weekly events at which they traded dirty literature with instructions on how to turn it into CB lingo.

Last week I got into my car and followed Art to his weekly "meeting." I waited outside for about 20 minutes and then walked in and introduced myself. There were several women present. My husband was so embarrassed he would like to have died on the spot. We left together shortly after.

Now Art is mad at me for tailing him and humiliating him in front of his CB buddies. I say he has no right going anyplace he would be ashamed to be seen. Things have not been too cozy at our house lately. Any suggestions?--Over And Out

Uncovering old brass By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — I was given an old brass bed that has been painted over with shellac or varnish. We have tried to polish the brass but cannot remove the covering over it. Can you suggest a way to clean and preserve the brass? — C.F.

POLLY'S PROBLEM

DEAR C.F. — You have to remove the coating on your bed before trying to polish it. I am presuming this is a real brass bed (not plated) since you say it is antique. Paint thinner or even turpentine might remove it. Experiment on an inconspicuous place. The ideal way would be to take it to a professional brass cleaner and polisher. It would be well worth the cost if your bed is a real antique.

To do it yourself, wash brass with soapy water and the cost if your bed is a real antique.

To do it yourself, wash brass with soapy water and as you dry it let your hands touch the brass as little as possible. Apply denatured alcohol to all the brass surface and let dry before spraying on a transparent, colorless metal lacquer. Then wipe off with a soft cloth. That will be all that is necessary for quite some time. When lacquer shows signs of wearing off, remove with alcohol, repolish with brass polish if need be and then re-lacquer. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with the lax service one receives in some of the large department stores. One has to find the place in the store where the cashier is and then stand in a line for 15 or 20 minutes. The stores cry about all the shoplifting and I am not surprised since there are so few salespeople about. Often I have wanted to try on some dresses and there was no one around to even show me the way to the dressing room. — GERTRUDE

DEAR POLLY — My husband is a construction worker and is often laid off during the winter when our bills are the highest. To compensate for this I try to keep a severalmonth supply of staples (food and cleansers) on hand and never buy any of these items except when they are on sale. Over a year's time this makes for big savings. If money gets tight we spend a week or more using up things on hand and not making any major purchases. The same principle is used for buying home furnishings and clothing. I hope to win one of your clippers so I can more easily cut out more coupons and thus do some additional saving. — D.V. DEAR POLLY - My husband is a construction worker

DEAR POLLY - I find dental floss is excellent for sewing on buttons. It does not wear out or break as quickly as ordinary thread. — ${\sf EVA}$

Retort Pouches New Packaging Idea

COLLEGE STATION - Consumers may soon be reaching for certain products on their rocer's shelves that are packed in flexible foil pouches, called retort pouches."

The pouches will not require freezing or refrigeration but will still have the same shelf life as conventional containers such as cans and glass jars.

"The development of the retort pouch is definitely one of the most significant advances in food packaging since the advent of the rigid can more than 150 years ago," contends Al B. Wagner, Jr., food technologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The retort pouch is composed of three layers of materials, including an inner layer of a polyolefin blend, a middle layer of foil, and an outer layer of

Initially, the pouch will be inserted into a paperboard carton for added protection and ease of merchandising.

The retort pouch has been approved by the Food and Drug Administration and the U.S Department of Agriculture after being in the development and planning stages for more than 15 years.

"This type of packaging concept is not new as European food firms currently market and sell more than 150 million retort pouches annually," points out the food technologist. "In Japan, the sale of food in retortable pouches exceeds 600

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - Attorney General John Hill said Tuesday that two signs have cropped up that Gov. Dolph Briscoe is waging a losing campaign.

"First," said Hill, "a losing campaign usually tries to blame its demise on the press. . . Next, your campaign workers start getting crossways with each other when the walls start closing in on a losing campaign."

"The only poll which does not show them losing is their own survey," Hill added.

those for cans. "The pouch will play a significant role in our food packaging system in the future," believes Wagner. "Or course, canned and frozen foods will not continue to occupy a share of the market although frozen foods may decline due to high energy costs for frozen

AP Religion Writer Act II, Scene 1: Nisan 8, 30 A.D., six days before the spring Passover celebration. Place: A hilltop overlooking sunsplashed Jerusalem with its high walls, terraced houses, bridges, towers and alabaster spires of the Temple.

Two disciples, the brothers
James and John, lead a young ass to the site, throw a goat-hide blanket on his back. Their rabbi, Jesus, waiting with other disciples, swings astride. He gazes affectionately over the

The Jewish crowd of friends and the curious increases about nim, and excited cries of others come from milling people down the hill. Jesus leans over and whispers in Matthew's ear.
Matthew frowns

comprehendingly but nods, me-chanically repeating the words: "What was spoken by the prophet — Behold, your king is coming to you, humble, and mounted on an ass. On a colt, the foal of an ass."

Jesus starts riding down the hill, trailed by followers, others billowing in front, children holding up flowers, darting about to get closer. Jewish crowd: "Blessed be the king who comes in the name of the Lord. Hosanna! Save now! Blessed be the king-dom of our father David that is Jesus, flint in his voice: "I tell you, if these were silent, the very stones would cry out." Many of the Jewish throng fling off their shawls and cloaks and lay them in his path. Other pull down palm and e u c a l y p t u s branches and spread them before him.

Crowd: "Hosanna! Save now! Hosanna to the Son of David. Blessed be he! Even the King of Israel!"

Jesus, his eyes brimming with tears: "O Jerusalem! Would that even today you knew the things that make for peace. But they are hid from your eyes."

Jesus, to assembled listeners: Beware of false prophets who come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly are ravening wolves. You will know them by their fruits ... Not everyone who says to me, 'Lord, Lord,' shall enter the kingdom of heaven, but he who does the will of my Father who is in

"Is not this the man whom they seek to kill?" "And here he is speaking openly."

Jesus: "Whatever you wish that men would do to you, do so to them . . . He who is faithful in a very little is faithful also in much; and he who is dishonest in a little is dishonest also in much ... No servant can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or he will be devoted to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and

Listeners: "He is a good man." "No, he is leading the people astray." "How is it that this man has learning when he has never studied?"

Jesus: "Every one then who hears these words of mine and does them will be like a wise man who built his house upon the rock; and the rain fell, and the floods came, and the winds blew and beat upon that house but it did not fall because i had been founded on the rock." Jewish crowd: "He is really from Galilee?" "Never was anything like this seen in Israel."

Jesus: "Think not that I have come to abolish the law and the prophets; I have come not to abolish them but to fulfill them ... Do not lay up for yourselves treasures on earth where moth and rust consume and where thieves break in and steal, but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven . . . For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." Voice: "What is the kingdom of God like?" Jesus: "It is like a grain of mustard seed which a man took and sowed in his garden; and it rew and became a tree, and the birds of the air made nests in its branches ... It is like leaven which a woman took Temple officers pick up stones to pelt him, but are re-strained by the resentment of the Jewish crowd, muttering, "Bosheth!" "Shame!" "Shame!" Abruptly a commotion breaks out on the edge of the crowd, where other officers have dragged a ragged, formerly blind beggar up against the wall. Officers, demanding: "How were your eyes opened?"

Beggar, frightened: "The man called Jesus made clay

Officer: "This man is not Beggar, trembling: "Whether he is a sinner, I do not know; one thing I know, that though I was blind, now I see." Officer, accusingly: "You are his disciple."

Beggar, plaintively: "If this man were not from God, he could do nothing."

Officer, flinging the beggar aside: "You were born in utter sin, and would you teach us?"

Jesus, dryly: "Why do you see the speck that is in your brother's eye, but do not notice the log that is in your own eye?"

Officer: "You have a de-Crowd voices: "Will he kill himself?" "Who are you?" Jesus: "I have told you . . . I and the Father are one." Officers again pick up stones to pelt him, but the crowd wrangles with them, forming a phalanx against them.

Matthew, pleased: "They feared the multitude."

Jesus smiles at two little girls looking up at him, tousles their hair and picks both up in his arms. "To such belongs the kingdom of God." They giggle.

Scene 3: Two days before Passover, inside the Temple's outer Court of the Gentiles, paved with varicolored stones, nearly 400 yards long and 200 yards wide, bounded by tall pillars, a noisy scene of commerce — stalls selling couped pigeons and lambs, coin-exchange tables, booths displaying rugs, prayer shawls

Jesus, his arms about the shoulders of two men: "Do not be anxious about tomorrow, for tomorrow will be anxious for itself. Let the day's own trouble be sufficient for the day."

Scene 4: Same day, in the Hall of Hewn Stones, adjoining the central Temple. The turbaned high priest Caiaphas in robes and jeweled breastplate sits on a raised chair at one side. Other Sanhedrin councilors pace about or sit in muf-fled talk on circular benches. A priest, to an officer at the door: "Why did you not bring Officer: "No man ever spoke hearing?"

Caiaphas: "Are you from Ga-lilee, too?" Another councilor: "What are we to do? For this man performs many signs."

Another: "If we let him go on thus, every one will believe in him, and the Romans will come and destroy both our holy place and our nation."

Caiaphas: "You know nothing at all." He node his head knowingly, looking about at the others. "You do not understand that it is expedient for you that one man should die for the tion should not perish."

Dam Damned

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - General manager Charles Herring of the Lower Colorado River Authority says a proposed dam on the Colorado River above Lake Buchanan could reduce Austin's supply of drinking water.

Herring said the propo Stacy Dam would impound 500,000 acre-feet of water approximately half the size of Suchanan - and would divert as much as 191,000 acre-feet a year from the chain of Highland Lakes. An acre-foot is 325,851

The dam has been proposed by the Colorado River Municipal Vater District.

Herring said in a statement that a report by LCRA engineers ndicates the water would be used by a proposed power plant, the city of San Angelo and residents of Concho, Running and Coleman Counties "so that little, if any, would be directed back into the river for downstream use."

"In my judgement," Herring said; "this project, if approved, would encroach on the water rights of all permitted users

"This restricted inflow into the Highland Lakes," he said, "could severely reduce the level of Lakes Buchanan and Travis, impairing their use for recrea-tion" and reduce "our capability to generate low-cost hydroelectricity; the city of Austin's source of drinking water; and the water suppl required downstream by agri-cultural and industrial users."

Herring said the LCRA would try at public hearings on the proposed dam to "direct attention to the detriment the project would cause to the authority LCRA, its customers
