New special session likely to be called

AUSTIN (AP) — It would be wrong to call the nearly expired special legislative session a failure just because lawmakers haven't balanced the state budget, Gov. Mark White says.

The state's $3.5 billion deficit is a tough problem that simply will take more time to solve, he said.

"I think we've made more progress in this session than many people would have expected... We'd like to have solved it all, but then again, I think we have a larger problem with the budget shortfall in Texas than any other state in the nation," White said Tuesday.

"Here you're trying to revamp in 30 days what it took 140 days (during the 1985 regular session) to create. We're also faced with the most radical loss of funds of any state in the history of the United States," he said.

White again stopped short of saying when he would call the next special session, but he talked about "next week" while answering questions on what lawmakers will do next.

White said he hopes House and Senate conference committee members can agree on a budget-cutting plan before time runs out on the current session, which ends at midnight Thursday.

If that can be accomplished, White said, lawmakers then will have "a starting point for a second session that we will make some decision on when that should be called in the future."

White said he and legislative leaders "all went together on this session with the full understanding that we were going to take whatever time is necessary to resolve this problem. We also understand we were going to have to go through it piece-by-piece."

Since the special session began Aug. 6, White has pushed for a combination of spending cuts and a one-year sales tax increase — from the current 4½ cents to 5¼ cents — to balance the budget.

U.S. Gov. Bill Hobby also has favored a tax increase. But House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, opposes new taxes at this time.

The three leaders met over a two-hour lunch Tuesday in the Governor's Mansion. When the meeting ended, all sounded upbeat but none said a solution is in sight.

"There's no one solution to this problem. That's the main thing that has happened during these past 20-some odd days. Everyone recognizes there's no simple answer to this problem," White said.

Hobby said the differences between the House and Senate spending cut plans — totaling some $322 million — "are not really very major differences." But when asked if he and Lewis were any closer on a tax increase, Hobby replied, "I really don't know."

Lewis said he didn't feel any pressure from White or Hobby to bend on his tax stance.

"There's no pressure there. We're looking at this thing objectively," Lewis said.

Iranian gunboats seize Soviet ship

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iranian gunboats intercepted a Soviet ship in the Persian Gulf northwest of Dubai and Iranian marines boarded the freighter, gulf-based shipping executives reported today.

In Moscow, Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov confirmed today that a Soviet freighter was detained off the United Arab Emirates. He said the freighter apparently carried cement, but that he had no other details.

There was no immediate comment from Iran.

The 11,750-ton freighter, the Pyotr Yemtov, was heading from a Black Sea port to Kuwait when it was intercepted Tuesday off the United Arab Emirates, said the executives, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The vessel first put out a mayday signal that it had been hit by a missile at 25.40 degrees latitude north and 55.40 degrees longitude east, but later "corrected" the signal, reporting that it was boarded by Iranian marines, the executives said.

"Afterward, nothing was heard from the vessel," said one Bahrain-based shipping agent. There was no indication of the ship's whereabouts today.

However, Kuwait-based shipping executives said today they believed the Pyotr Yemtov probably was taken to the Iranian port of Bandar Abbas to be searched. Bandar Abbas is about 120 miles east of the United Arab Emirates.

Iran and Iraq have targeted each other's marine interests in their Collection agencies getting FmHA delinquent accounts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's farm lending bureau is turning 6,500 delinquent accounts over to a collection agency, which is sending out letters demanding immediate payment of $630 million in past-due debts.

The move is part of an overall toughening of debt-collection policy by the Farmers Home Administration, usually farm property or machinery, to the government, but it was inadequate to cover the full loan balance.

"This kind of action is routine for most parts of the government, like student loans," O'Neill said. "It's the first time we've sent out these kinds of letters. We're just catching up with what's being done in other parts of the federal government."

Letters being mailed out by the Capital Credit Corp., based in Fairfield, N.J., warn recipients to "send full payment at once" or risk stepped-up collection efforts.

The accounts are scattered all over the country, FmHA spokesman Joe O'Neill said.

Most are cases in which a farmer has already forfeited his collateral, usually farm property or machinery, to the government, but it was inadequate to cover the full loan balance.

"This kind of action is routine for most parts of the government, like student loans," O'Neill said. "It's the first time we've sent out these kinds of letters. We're just catching up with what's being done in other parts of the federal government."

He said he had no idea how effective using a collection agency would be in getting farmers to settle up on their past-due loans. "I guess we'll find out," he said.

Leland Swenson, president of the South Dakota Farmers Union, said producers in his state began receiving the notices Thursday, giving them just 24 hours to send in payment.

"They've lost all negotiating and communicating rights with their local FmHA office, without prior notice," Swenson said of the farmers. "Can you imagine the stress over a Labor Day Weekend? It's asinine, just asinine."

Swenson said even the agency's

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says there are three proven rules for good teeth: Brush after each meal; see your dentist twice a year, and mind your own business.

If we suddenly discovered that we had only five minutes left to say all we wanted to say, every telephone booth would be occupied by people trying to call up other people to stammer that they loved them.—Christopher Morley

A New England newspaper published this announcement: "In case you find mistakes in this paper, please consider they were put there for a purpose. We publish something for everyone, and some folks are always looking for mistakes."

Thursday morning is "Fun Breakfast" time—a chamber of commerce event that happens about every two months. If you're not attending these events, you are missing a great opportunity for fun and fellowship and a prime time for keeping in touch on happenings in the community.

Many of us are not "morning people", that is we can't seem to get going for a 6:30 a.m. function. But it's worth the effort when it happens only one time every two or three months.

Attendance at the breakfasts has been great, but we can't help but notice that some leading citizens of the community are not "regulars" at these events. Some folks are tied down by jobs that require their presence at this hour of the morning, but others simply refuse to change their habits even on these rare occasions. It is their loss.

If you were about to start a business, chances are you'd think your two biggest problems would be putting together the money to run the firm and finding people to buy your product or service. It might surprise you to learn that small business owners responding to a recent survey listed neither of these in the top 10 problems.

The biggest problem of these established businesses were high insurance costs and taxes.

The survey, made by the National Federation of Independent Business, selected 5,200 businesses at random and asked them to rank some 75 business problems.

Those responding said health insurance costs were their biggest problem, followed by the cost and availability of liability insurance. The cost of workmen's compensation insurance also made the top 10.

Federal and state income taxes, payroll taxes, and the rise in unemployment compensation taxes also ranked near the top of the list. Other problems facing small business owners include the mounting amount of government forms and paperwork, utility costs, telephone service costs, and problems in mail service.

Hiring and training of employees was mentioned frequently, as well as making the job attractive enough to keep workers with the firm. Of course, a number of businesses listed the problem of securing short term loans.

While small businesses are the backbone of this country's economy, there is still a lot more involved than putting in the stock, putting up a sign, and opening the doors.

Police arrest two adults

The Hereford Police Department arrested two persons Tuesday on charges of driving while intoxicated and no liability insurance.

Police also heard reports of a prowler in the 300 block of Ave. F, stolen keys from Walker's Used Cars on West 1st., harassment in the 1500 block of Blevins, a family argument at the Bluewater Gardens Apartments, criminal mischief in the 300 block of Ave. K, and harassment in the 600 block of Star.

Also, criminal trespass in the 500 block of Whittier, loud music in the 600 block of South Texas, criminal trespass in the 600 block of Ave. K, disturbing the peace in the 100 block of Ranger, criminal mischief in the 100 block of Witherspoon, and a theft of a purse and contents valued at $825 from Save & Gain.

Drug trial postponed

The trial of Manuel Galindo Mendoza Jr., who is charged with delivery of LSD, was postponed yesterday because the state's star witness, undercover narcotics officer Raul Sanchez, is suffering from a minor back injury and could not travel to Hereford.

Mendoza would have been the 48th person to either stand trial or plead guilty to drug trafficking charges stemming from a January drug in which 88 persons were arrested in one evening.

Of the 88 arrested, 22 have been handed jail sentences totaling 292 years, with the average sentence being 13 years.

Alan Everett Brooks, 32, received the stiffest sentence of the 88. In April, he was given a 70-year sentence for two counts of delivery of marijuana.

In an exchange for a guilty plea, 26 of those arrested have received probation, with the average sentence being for seven years, along with fines ranging from $1,500 to $2,500.

Mendoza has been rescheduled to appear before a Deaf Smith County jury on Oct. 3.

Weather

TUESDAY'S HIGH: 82 OVERNIGHT LOW: 59

OUTLOOK: A 40 percent chance of rain and thunderstorms is in the forecast for tonight with a low in the lower 60s. West to northwest wind 5 to 15 mph.

Thursday: Partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of showers and a high in the lower 80s. Light north wind.

Football festivities slated

With gridiron action comes lots of related activities and Hereford's season opener Friday with Andrews is surrounded by three events.

In the parking lot of Whiteface Stadium, the high school cheerleaders are sponsoring the annual season kickoff party and pep rally at 7:30 p.m. Thursday. The rally will serve to boost spirit for Friday night's home game.

Senior class parents have slated a "Kickoff Breakfast" for 6:30 a.m. Friday in the Bull Barn. Coach Don Cumpton of the Hereford Whitefaces will speak at the breakfast.

Proceeds from the $4.25 tickets will be used for the senior prom. The senior class parents will sell "Hostile Herd" buttons at home football games this season and the holder of a "lucky button" will win a game ball.

For the evening meal, Band Boosters will serve stuffed baked potatoes from 5-7 p.m. in the high school cafeteria. Tickets are $3 for kids under 10 and $4 for persons over 10.

Those proceeds will be used to purchase new band uniforms.

Hospital budget adopted

Following a hearing which lasted just over an hour Tuesday night, the Deaf Smith Hospital District board of directors voted to adopt a budget of $6,974,256.

That budget includes $596,000 in tax revenues.

The board has planned to raise the tax rate from approximately 9 cents per $100 valuation to 12.5 cents. The formal vote on that item will be done at noon on Monday, Sept. 8, in the hospital board room.

Reservations due today

Reservations for the Chamber of Commerce Fun Breakfast at 6:30 a.m. Thursday are being taken at 364-3333 through 5 p.m. today.

The breakfast is sponsored by State Farm Insurance agents Jerry Shipman and M.D. Gentry. The Ranch House Restaurant is catering the meal.

John Stagner and Charlie Bell will emcee the breakfast party.

HISD first day at 4,518

Hereford Independent School District had 4,518 students from K-4 through twelfth grade on the first day of school Tuesday.

Last year the first day saw 4,457 students in school.

Current enrollments included 850 at Hereford High; Stanton Junior High, 516; and La Plata Junior High, 496. Elementary school campus enrollments were Aikman, 438; Bluebonnet, 499; West Central, 415; Northwest, 529; Shirley, 338; and Tierra Blanca, 474.

TECAT fighter gets axed

PLEASANTON, Texas (AP) — A special education supervisor of 30 years who drew statewide attention by going to court to resist taking a statewide teachers' competency test has been suspended without pay for failing to meet teaching requirements.

Iris Porter refused to take the Texas Examination for Current Administrators and Teachers that was given March 10 to about 210,000 teachers across Texas. Her bid to have the test thrown out was dismissed in August by a state district judge.

"We had no choice" but to suspend Ms. Porter, Pleasanton school superintendent Darrell Pool said Tuesday. "We can't hire anyone without certification and we must abide by the law," Pool told the San Antonio Express-News.

He praised her for her years of service.

"We would like to have her back. She is a top teacher and a top administrator," Pool said.

Ms. Porter was notified of his decision on Friday and was formally suspended on Tuesday, Pool said. The suspension will remain in effect at least Tuesday, when the school board next meets, the superintendent added.

Clements won't debate White

DALLAS (AP) — Organizers of a televised debate between gubernatorial candidates former Gov. Bill Clements and Gov. Mark White say Clements apparently won't attend the session, but they plan to save a seat for him anyway.

Officials for KERA-TV in Dallas said Tuesday they plan to hold the debate with White, a Democrat and the incumbent, facing an empty chair instead of his Republican challenger. A panel of three reporters will try to represent the position of Clements in asking White questions, said Pat Perini, KERA's vice president of programming.

The one-hour program is scheduled to air on Oct. 23 on a statewide network of 11 public television stations, Ms. Perini said.

Clements' spokesman Reggie Bashur said the cancellation was due to a schedule conflict. Bashur said Clements had previously notified the television of the conflict and offered four alternate dates.

The only televised debate between the two candidates is scheduled for Oct. 6. It will be sponsored by the League of Women Voters and will originate from KPRC-TV in Houston.

Clements made a series of campaign stops across North and Central Texas Tuesday, touting a six-point plan he says would create jobs. The plan includes providing the leadership that would encourage businesses to expand and strengthen the research capabilities in Texas.

Democratic opponents have criticized the former governor, claiming he was bluffing by not revealing his "secret" plan to eradicate the state's fiscal woes.

AIDS vaccine protected monkeys

DAVIS, Calif. (AP) — A vaccine that has successfully protected laboratory monkeys from AIDS has been developed by University of California researchers who believe the same techniques can be used for a human vaccine.

"It worked even better than we thought it would It looks like AIDS is a controllable disease by vaccine," virologist Dr. Preston Marx told a news conference Tuesday.

But Marx, who is chief of a 13-member research team at the university's California Primate Research Center, and medical pathologist Murray Gardner cautioned that it would probably be two to four more years before their research would produce a vaccine that could be used on humans.

Tear gas set off in Lincoln Center

NEW YORK (AP) — A Soviet dance troupe will perform tonight as planned, a spokeswoman said after a tear-gas bomb forced the evacuation of a sellout crowd of 4,000 people and caused minor injuries to 30.

Two telephone callers to The Associated Press claimed the Jewish Defense League was responsible for the Tuesday evening incident, which cut short the Metropolitan Opera House performance by the Moiseyev Dance Company. But the national chairman of the JDL condemned the incident.

Police reported 30 injuries, most for eye and respiratory irritation. Sixteen people were treated outside the opera house and the others, including four police officers, received aid at hospitals, authorities said.

Igor Moiseyev, 80, who founded the troupe in 1937, was unruffled. "Our friends like it when we dance with music. Our enemies want us to dance accompanied by bombs. But I hope that it won't be any effect on our cultural ties," said Moiseyev through an interpreter. He said he was sitting with Yuri Dubynin, the Soviet ambassador to the United States, when the fumes erupted underneath their box.

Gold prices skyrocketing

LONDON (AP) — Gold soared by more than $13 in London and Zurich in early trading today, reaching its highest mark in three years as metal prices followed the lead set in New York Tuesday night.

In Zurich, the bid price was $407 a troy ounce, up from $392.50 late Tuesday. Gold opened in London at a bid price of $405.50, compared with late Tuesday's $392.

These were the highest prices gold has fetched since 1983, but were far behind the more than $800 an ounce reached during the 1979 Iranian hostage crisis.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.42 a troy ounce, up from Tuesday's $5.21. It was the best bid for silver since April.

Short-term securities drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities fell again sharply in the weekly auction Tuesday to the lowest level since mid-1977.

The Treasury Department sold $7.82 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.12 percent, down from 5.32 percent last week. Another $7.82 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.17 percent, down from 5.35 percent last week.

The rates were the lowest since three-month bills sold for 5.04 percent on July 1, 1977, and six-month bills averaged 5.17 percent on June 13, 1977.

The new discount rates understate the actual return to investors — 5.26 percent for three-month bills and 5.38 percent for six-month bills.

In a separate report, the Federal Reserve said Tuesday that the average yield for one-year Treasury bills, the most popular index used for making changes in homeowners' adjustable rate mortgages, dropped to 5.67 percent last week from 5.85 percent the previous week.

Heavy storms rumble across Texas

By The Associated Press

Heavy thunderstorms rumbled across Texas again today, triggering high water warnings across a wide swath, particularly in Central Texas, where some communities were drenched by as much as 9 inches of rain.

The National Weather Service warned that flooding was imminent along the North Bosque River, which was over its banks after 9 inches of rain fell Tuesday in and around Hico, about 90 miles southwest of Fort Worth.

Heavy thunderstorms fell throughout much of the state on Tuesday, and the same pattern was expected for today.

The storms were triggered by a stationary warm front located across Southeast Texas and extending westward into the southern part of the Texas Hill Country, the weather service said.

Kermit, 45 miles west of Odessa and near the Texas-New Mexico border, received 2.25 inches of rain in a two-hour period Tuesday night, and some houses were reported flooded a few miles away in Wink.

Virtually all of the Texas Panhandle, South Plains and Far West Texas were under a flash flood watch that was expected to remain in force throughout today and tonight.

Record rainfall was reported throughout North Central Texas. Morning rains on Tuesday dumped 1.4 inches on Dallas, breaking an 85-year-old record of 1.32 inches for the day. Cleburne reported receiving 6 inches, Granbury 4.1 inches and Euless 3.44 inches.

Flood waters of up to three feet forced police to close several streets in Cleburne, about 35 miles south of Fort Worth.

Rain-slick streets contributed to a bus wreck in Dallas, and lightning sparked a house fire in San Angelo, officials said.

A San Angelo family was wakened when lightning struck their home early Tuesday, officials said. Andy and Gloria Wilson and their two daughters, Jodi, 14, and Lindsey, 21 heard the lightning hit the roof at about 3 a.m. and ran from the house when they discovered smoke coming from a kitchen vent.

"The storm, the fire and the fact that the phone wasn't working caused us to panic, but we managed to get outside without anyone being hurt," Mrs. Wilson said.

Fire marshal Ken Land said lightning struck the roof, starting a fire in the attic. Half of the roof and attic were destroyed, and the rest of the roof was damaged.

Streets in Brady were awash with up to 2 feet of water Tuesday, said police department spokesman James Smith. He said low water crossings were underwater Tuesday evening and Brady Creek, which runs through town, was overlapping its banks.

In Wise County, several motorists and residents reported a funnel cloud about 3:45 p.m. near U.S. Highway 380, but the cloud apparently stayed above ground.

"It just made a couple of dips a couple of times, and then it disappeared," Wise County sheriff's dispatcher Angie Walling said.

Accumulated rain caused part of the roof of a printing and office supply business in a two-story building in Lewisville, 20 miles northwest of Dallas, to collapse.

About 1,100 customers of Texas Electric Service Co. in Fort Worth had service interrupted because of the weather. Lightning damaged a high voltage transformer at Azle, 20 miles northwest of Fort Worth, causing 400 customers to lose service for five hours.

In Dallas, police said rain-slick streets contributed to the crash of a Dallas Area Rapid Transit bus. The bus slid into a concrete abutment north of downtown, temporarily trapping passengers. Injured were 18 passengers and the driver, officials said.

The bus driver, Lester Moffett, 30, was pinned for about an hour and 45 minutes before he was freed, said DART spokesman Richard Johnson. Moffett underwent surgery at Parkland Memorial Hospital, where his left leg was amputated, said hospital spokesman Claude McCain. He said McCain was in serious condition.

Ten others were treated and released, McCain said.

Obituaries

KATY GOLDSTON

Former Hereford resident, Katy Goldston, 85, died recently in Charleston Methodist Hospital in Dallas.

Mrs. Goldston was born Aug. 5, 1901 in Palestine, Texas. She was preceded in death by her husband, Henry Goldston. She was a housewife and had been a Hereford resident until several years ago.

Funeral services were held Tuesday at 1:30 p.m. in Ed C. Smith Funeral Home in Dallas. Graveside services were set for 3 p.m. today in West Park Cemetery under the direction of Rix Funeral Directors of Hereford.

She is survived by five sons, five daughters, 28 grandchildren, 21 great-grandchildren and three sisters.

Teacher banquet slated

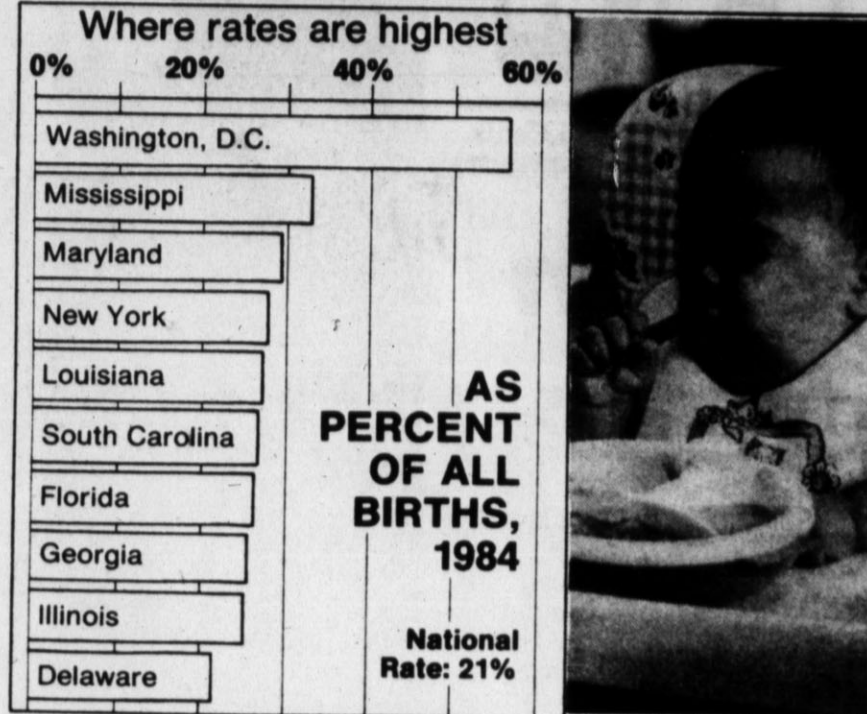

Members of Hereford Education and Texas State Teachers Associations are sponsoring a new teacher banquet honoring all teachers and their spouses.

The banquet will be held Monday, Sept. 8, at 6:30 p.m. in the Community Center. There is no charge for new teachers and their spouses. Cost for the catered meal will be $4 per person at the door.

state director was unaware of plans to involve a collection agency until Friday, the payment deadline in some of the letters.

"As far as I'm concerned, they've reneged on my agreement as far as giving me the opportunity to negotiate a settlement," said Timberlake, S.D., farmer Louis Keller. "I didn't sleep last night."

In a separate set of delinquent loan cases, the agency earlier this year sent out 27,000 thoroughly worded letters to farm borrowers who had made no payments on their loans in three years or more. Those letters warned of possible foreclosures should the borrowers not make some arrangements to pay up.

"I would hope... that the word is getting out to borrowers across the nation that Farmers Home does mean business," FmHA Administrator Vance Clark said at the time.

FmHA reportedly is stepping up its prosecution of farmers who sell off crops and livestock they had put up as collateral for their government loans.

The New York Times reported Monday that federal officials have won indictments of more than 300 such farmers over the past 30 months, and that roughly half of those have been convicted.

SHIP

6-year-old war, and Iran has said it would interdict any ship carrying cargo destined for Iraqi ports. In January, the Iranians intercepted and boarded the American-owned freighter President Taylor.

This was the first reported seizure of a Soviet ship since Iran inspecting commercial vessels for Iraqi-bound goods, the executives said.

Relations between Moscow and Tehran have been strained since Islamic fundamentalists seized power in Iran in 1979, but the two countries in recent months have attempted to improve their relations. The Soviet Union is a major arms supplier to Iraq.

In Tokyo, the Japanese Shipowners Labor Relations Agency said today Japanese tankers in the gulf monitored an emergency call Tuesday from the ship and identified it as a Soviet-flag vessel because of its call sign "UOGS."

Letters to the Editor

South Carolina man offers advice to residents

Dear editor:

We read that the Department of Energy plans to bury massive amounts of nuclear wastes in your county. May we suggest that this is not necessarily all bad news and further that how you do it is all important.

May we offer three main points for your consideration: (1) we have considerable control over the form and content of the wastes for Texas and (2) the waste form and content are most important considerations and (3) the best that can be said for the current DOE plans, in my opinion, is that most of us may not be around to clean up the inevitable unholy mess. But first extract the really bad actors, the transuranics, and then encapsulate the remaining fission products in glass, and you can bury the nuclear wastes headed for Texas on my farm for all I care. In fact, we would like the business.

As background may I state that for five years before my retirement in 1981 I was an engineer in the nuclear waste management business at the Savannah River Plant (SRP), and during the last two years I was the Quality Assurance engineer responsible for QA matters for the plant being constructed at SRP to put fission products in glass billets. And let us be up front about our current interests; our dollars and daily bread come from a healthy local economy that depends on the DOE SRP located in this county. We would like to see SRP process the nation's nuclear wastes before they come to you. We suggest that it's the right thing to do, and we would like the resulting 5,000 jobs that would last well into the next century.

Perhaps a short lesson on nuclear wastes would be helpful: One can divide nuclear wastes into three piles, short-lived fission products that are long gone before we ship anything to the fine state of Texas, long-lived fission products that must be kept out of the environment for 1,000 years and the really bad actors, the transuranics, that must be either burned as nuclear fuels (and thus destroyed) or kept out of the environment for a million years. Current DOE plans call for burying both the long-lived 1,000 year fission products and tons of the million year transuranics in metal cans in Deaf Smith County. Thank goodness Texas is a long way from South Carolina!

One gets a bit impatient with DOE planners when one considers that the DOE has developed a superior process for nuclear wastes at SRP and declines to use it for civilian wastes. The SRP process is head and shoulders above the one proposed for the wastes for your area in that the transuranics are first extracted and then the 1,000 year fission products are encapsulated in solid glass logs that are much more reliable than the metal cans that they plan to send to the farmers in Deaf Smith County.

In summary, the heart of the problem is the DOE plan to bury tons of most toxic transuranics that will be around for a million years in metal cans designed to last a few hundred years. (I must comment here that I spent a good portion of my engineering career repairing leaking metal pipes and tanks designed to last 100 years that failed in less than ten!) You, who are about to receive this blessing, should insist on two things: (1) that the transuranics be first extracted and then destroyed by nuclear burning in future reactor fuel cycles instead of being buried anywhere and (2) that the remaining 1,000 year fission products be molded in glass before burial.

The process and the plants to do this right thing with nuclear wastes will exist shortly at SRP, and these facilities can easily be expanded to process all the wastes in the country. All that is needed is the political decision. Our Washington lawmakers support this use for SRP; Senator Thurmond arranged a meeting for us this April with Sec. Foley of the DOE to further this proposal. The upshot of the meeting was that the proposal was technically attractive but political support from the federal Congress was needed to alter the present DOE plans.

The politics of the situation as we see them are: As with all things in Washington, the present DOE plans have evolved by a series of compromises to their present imperfect status. The DOE has supported their present plan to the Congress and is embarrassed to admit error and recommend change. Our Washington delegation needs the help of the Texas delegation to produce the needed changes. We would like the business and the mobs at SRP. But you have much more at risk than everyone else, to the extent that you want to worry about leaving a clean place for your children and grandchildren.

If I have attracted your interest and if you wish to dig further, may I suggest the following sources and questions:

-Mr. Ben Rusche at DOE headquarters in Washington will present an excellent case for the present DOE plans. May we suggest that you press him with the questions: Why bury tons of transuranics at all when you don't have to? Why bury 1,000 year fission products in metal cans when a superior process (glass billets made at SRP) is available?

-Pick any physics professor or nuclear engineering professor at any university of your choice and ask about toxicity of plutoniums (transuranics), about how long they will last buried in the good ground of Deaf Smith County and about the only way to destroy them. Give them the choice: Bury the whole mess, transuranics 1,000 year fission products and all in metal cans, as the DOE plans to do in Deaf Smith County? Or insist that we bury no transuranics and that all fission products be cast in glass before burial?

It is our opinion that if you insist that the wastes be put in the appropriate form and the transuranics be first extracted, your region is in for a fine multibillion dollar business with very low risk. You might plan to knock and squeal about what a dirty job the rest of the country has imposed upon you and secretly smile all the way to the bank (while the rest of us poor fools look smug and cut pulp wood for a living!). If I can be of further help, do not hesitate to call (803-648-4998).

Sincerely,
Fred Christensen

Ann Landers Get affairs in order

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a 24-year-old career woman. A year ago I started to see a man at work. He was 12 years my senior but we got along very well. We were talking about living together because I was at his place more than my own. It seemed foolish to pay rent on an apartment I rarely used.

"Don" died suddenly of a heart attack. He had no history of heart trouble. I was devastated. His family treated me rotten. I was ignored completely and not allowed to help with the funeral arrangements. When the family went through his personal belongings (many items were OURS because we bought them together) I told them I was entitled to certain things because I was half owner. His brother asked, "Where are the papers, lady?" They would not even let me have the presents I had given Don because I had no receipts.

I am writing to advise others who may be in a similar situation. I wish someone had tipped me off. Be sure to have something in writing to prove you are a part owner of certain objects. Also, I'm sure Don would have left me some money in his will, but he didn't expect to die so suddenly. (Nobody does). Come to think of it, I didn't put anything in my will to provide for him, and I should have.

This is my story, Ann. I hope you print it. — OLDER AND WISER IN WACO

DEAR WACO: Thanks for the message. It's a good one. Nobody likes to think about death but one of the realities of life is as follows: If you don't have your affairs in order, it is more than likely that the people you would least like to inherit your money and possessions will do so.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is the busiest time of the year for me but I had to drop you a line about a letter you printed recently complaining about today's youth and how disrespectful they are.

I have been a teacher and school counselor for 30 years. Throughout my career I have observed that about 5 percent of the student population could be considered obnoxious and, unfortunately, they are the ones who are most noticed. The other 95 percent are basically normal kids who are neither disruptive nor disrespectful.

Enclosed is a quotation I would love to see in your column. I'm sure if you print it, it will appear on thousands of bulletin boards across the country and in Canada. Thanks for your consideration.—P.M. (DEARBORN, MICH.)

DEAR DEAR: It's an excellent quote. Glad you sent it on. (Get the scissors out, folks.) AGE-OLD WISDOM

"From the day your baby is born," counseled the famous scholar, "You must teach him to do things. Children today love luxury too much. They have detestable manners, flout authority, have no respect for their elders. They no longer rise when their parents and teachers enter the room. What kind of awful creatures will they be when they grow up?"

The scholar who wrote these words was Socrates, shortly before his death in 399 B.C.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We are devout Catholics. Our son feels an obligation to become a priest because so few young men are choosing this vocation. Is this true? What are the facts?—LACROSSE, WIS.

DEAR L.C.: Yes, it's true. In 1965 approximately 50,000 men were enrolled in Catholic seminaries. In 1985 the number was 10,440.

What's the story on pot, cocaine, LSD, PCP, downers, speed? Can you handle them if you're careful? Send for Ann Landers' all-new booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope." For each booklet ordered, send $2.00, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

MR. AND MRS. CHRISTOPHER HEATH
...married recently in Hereford

Wedding vows spoken recently in Hereford

Margo Davis and Master Sergeant Christopher Heath exchanged wedding vows Aug. 16 in the home of the bride's parents, Earl and Naomi Warrick, 204 Centre. The groom's parents are Kay and Art Heath.

Officiating for the couple was Ted Taylor of the Church of the Nazarene.

Maid of honor was Kyla Farmer Flores and best man was the groom's father.

The bride, given in marriage by her stepfather and mother, chose to wear an ivory tea-length wedding dress sprinkled with seed pearls and designed with long tapered sleeves. Along with her bridal bouquet of coral roses, she carried her mother's white Bible. Her hair was adorned with baby's breath.

Mary Ruth Hamman registered guests and Craig Hamman served as photographer.

During the reception, a two-tiered white wedding cake was served. It was decorated with an icing of coral roses and topped with yellow and white carnations. Matching flowers also surrounded the cake.

Out-of-town wedding guests included Gilbert and Era Roberts of Paris, Texas; the bride's father, Bob Davis

PIANO COMPETITION
NEW YORK (AP) — The Julliard School was presented over $33,000 in special prizes to six pianists in the eighth annual Gina Bachauer International Piano Scholarship Competition.

The recipients of $6,500 full scholarships were Yu-Chia Hu, 21, of Taiwan, Gregory Slag, 26, of Bismarck, N.D., and Daejin Kim, 24, of Korea.

Other recipients of scholarship awards were Christina Kiss, 28, of Franklin Lakes, N.J., Steven Graff, 20, of Northbrook, Ill., and Alvina Chiu, 22, of Taiwan.

Special performances planned during season

Ann Myer, drive chairman for the Hereford Community Concert Association, has mailed the tickets for the coming season to all subscribers.

These tickets will entitle the holders to attend the four concerts scheduled in Hereford, as well as the performances set for Dimmitt, Plainview, Pampa, Borger, Dumas, Dalhart and Tucumcari, New Mexico. Included in Meyer's mailing, was the complete schedule for all of these fine arts opportunities.

Any person who bought a community concert membership during the spring campaign who has not yet received his tickets and schedule is urged to call Meyer at 578-4486 to insure delivery.

Scheduled for presentation at the Hereford High School auditorium are the following: The Tennessee River Boys on Oct. 27; Phil Coulter's Pops Orchestra of Ireland on Feb. 1; The Alexandria Quintet on Feb. 26; Arthur Woodley, bass-baritone, on Mar. 31. All performances will begin at 8 p.m. on these dates.

"We are grateful for the wonderful support given to the Hereford Community Concerts Association by every person who subscribed for a membership. Persons who have given funds in addition to their regular memberships are especially appreciated as we strive to keep our high level of excellence in the offerings," says Helen Langley, association officer.

'Twas typical of Dorsett to complain

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — You couldn't blame Tom Landry if he wanted to pack it in after this NFL season.

His Dallas Cowboys, besides having their worst preseason since 1962, also have a leadership crisis that bodes for a long, painful regular season.

Never mind Tony Dorsett's on-again, off-again trade demands because of Herschel Walker's enormous salary.

You kind of expected Dorsett to be upset.

He missed missed training camp last year, sitting out until the Cowboys bailed him out of financial trouble with the IRS and presented him with a new, gold-plated contract.

It was typical of Dorsett to complain a little about Walker's contract.

When Dorsett bragged he could be a "disruptive force" to the fortunes of the 1986 Cowboys, it reminded Dallas fans that the talented running back has been everything but a leader in his 10 years with the team.

Here's a guy who was once a team captain warning he might blow up some bridges on the march to the Super Bowl.

Just what you need, Tom? Dorsett said something else. He mentioned that the Cowboys are not a close team, and he hit that one dead solid.

Other players have said the same thing, including outspoken veteran defensive back Dennis Thurman, who was given his goodbye papers.

The Cowboys ARE basically a team that doesn't care that much about each other. Getting paychecks on the same day each week is the closest some of them come to doing things together.

The Wall Street Journal is more important to some of them than their playbooks. Nine players are in their option year and spend a good deal of time grousing about it.

The attitude with a lot of the Cowboys isn't what you recall from the championship teams in the 1970s that had Bob Lilly, Chuck Howley, George Andrie, Lee Roy Jordan, and Roger Staubach as inspirational leaders who would stop at nothing to accomplish team goals.

Staubach made some money with the Cowboys but he paid his dues, too. He made only $25,000 in salary in his first THREE years with the team. He never missed a day of training camp complaining he was underpaid or unappreciated.

Remember when you came aboard with the big salary and big bonus, Tony?

Staubach was all for you.

A strange thing this attitude of the '80s compared with the attitude of the '70s. The Cowboys have all this discontent yet they are the fifth highest paying team in the NFL.

The 1986 Cowboys have a silent leader like Randy White, the heart of the Cowboys' defense with his dogged pursuit of perfection. He would do anything to win — but recall White also missed all of training camp in 1984 over money.

There is not one single leader on the offensive team.

Dorsett has lost his credibility. Danny White grades out poorly in leadership ability just like he does in clutch, playoff games.

The only hope seen from this corner is Herschel himself.

But Walker needs time to show his teammates what he can produce on the field first. That could take most of the season.

Once Walker becomes a leader with his actions, perhaps he can take emotional charge of a rudderless team that is drifting around trying to find itself.

Hurry Herschel! This season may be out of reach already.

Change noted in HHS cross country schedule

One change has been made in the Hereford High School cross country schedule for the 1986 season, from the original schedule that was published in Tuesday's issue of the Brand.

The HHS runners will compete in the Borger Meet on Saturday, Sept. 13, instead of the Brownfield Meet.

Addition information on the 1986 schedule, according to Coach Martha Emerson, is: District 1-4A Meet at Lubbock, 10 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 1; Region I Meet at Lubbock, 10 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 8; and state meet at Georgetown, 10 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 15.

Specs Meadows, one of the first big league ballplayers to wear glasses, won 188 games, pitching for the Cardinals, Phillies and Pirates.

University employs interior designer

With a little ingenuity, college students can turn the four cement walls and institutional furnishings of their dorm rooms into warm, practical settings which uniquely reflect their personalities.

At Texas Tech University, students can even draw on the skills and knowledge of an interior designer in their creative endeavors. One of fewer than 10 universities across the nation to employ a full-time interior designer, Texas Tech created the position two years ago and the 6,800 residence hall students now have several avenues through which they can directly influence their environments.

Interior designer Beth Worthington said the programs benefit both students and the university.

"Research indicates that students who feel good about their living arrangements do better in school and in general," Worthington said. "It is important for everyone, including students living in residence halls, to feel at home in their environments."

Students who are comfortable living in residence halls are less likely to move off campus, Worthington said.

"It just makes good sense to encourage students to live on campus," she said. "Students spend about 70 percent of their time out of class, most of that in their residence halls. For students to want to stay on campus, a residence hall must be suitable for learning and studying, as well as a place to socialize and meet friends."

People also tend to take better care of environments they enjoy and helped create, she said.

"The problem for many students is that they don't know how to manipulate their immediate environment. They move in and just accept residence hall rooms as they are because they don't have the ideas, skills and resources to enhance them."

Through the program "Designs for Living," Worthington prepared a number of publications for students, including "Room Personalization Guide," a page of things students should not do; and a "Resource Manual" full of decorating ideas.

The "Resource Manual" provides ideas for carpeting and window coverings, making furniture, choosing accessories, lighting, a list of local resources and worksheets to help students identify their style and what they would like their rooms to say.

"We try to teach students how they can take their favorite things and build their rooms around them but not spend a lot of money," she said. "If roommates have totally different tastes, they also have to work to come up with a compromise for a theme for their room."

Worthington speaks and presents slide shows about room personalization to residence hall groups. This year students can visit two demonstration rooms in dorms to learn how to create special effects and build bookcases, shelves and other popular items.

At the start of the year, Housing provides five colors of paint for students who want to change the color of their rooms, but if they want dark blue walls, she suggests hanging bed sheets for the trim.

The Student-Initiated Design Program allows students to influence design of small public areas in their residence halls. Worthington acts as a consultant for students who want to create a special room or atmosphere in their dorms. Last year, students planned and designed 17 areas, including study rooms, computer centers, an aerobics room and multipurpose recreational areas.

"I help the group conceptualize what they want and negotiate with them for something safe and durable," she said. "If they want white silk upholstery, I try to get them to choose an attractive medium-tone wool or nylon blend. I try to help them realize their dreams and at the same time design areas that Housing will accept, something which will look good for more than six months and be safe and comfortable."

Worthington has a resource room of samples of fabrics, carpets, paints, furnishings and light fixtures which students use to design a total project plan. The residence hall representatives present the project to other residents before it is forwarded to the Housing area coordinator and a facility planning committee for final approval.

Plans are judged by the committee based on student initiative and involvement, creativity, feasibility and the amount of work done recently in that particular hall.

Through the Public Area Paint Project, Texas Tech is one of a small number of universities to allow graphic designs on residence hall corridor walls, she said. Walls are now decorated with such things as pink flamingos, abstract creations and golfing scenes.

Student input is also sought for extensive renovations of large public spaces, such as lobbies. Worthington said Texas Tech design students study the area proposed for rejuvenation by mapping traffic flows and surveying residents on how they feel about the area.

Several local performers to be featured

The 1986 edition of the Easter Opry Gospel Road Show will give a benefit performance for Larry White Saturday night at the Friona Junior High School auditorium. Show time is scheduled at 8 p.m.

White was seriously injured when he was hit by a pickup while riding his bicycle. All proceeds from the show will go into a medical fund.

Hereford musicians who will be performing include C.E. Stanaland, Holly Middleton, Darla Stengel, Francis Ricenbaw, Melanie Davis, Brian Stanaland, Chuck Danley, Roger Hodges, Heather Gee and Jim Tucker, who will serve as master of ceremony.

There will also be local talent from the Friona area.

The Easter Opry is in its eighth year of conducting benefits around the area having performed in Hereford and Clovis, N.M. recently.

Everyone is encouraged to attend.

MECHANICAL ILLUSIONS

NEW YORK (AP) — "Mechanical Illusions by Robert Cumming" is on view at the Whitney Museum of American Art through Oct. 19.

The 36 drawings, photographs, prints and sculptures comprise a survey of the artist's work since 1965 and highlight his recurrent use of architectural and mechanical images.

The museum says, "Cumming's early fascination with physical things led him to create a personal genre in which his interests in craftsmanship and materials are combined with conceptual concerns..."

Babies too young to diet

In a misguided attempt to prevent obesity, heart disease, hypertension and other diet-linked conditions, some health-conscious parents are putting their children on restrictive diets.

According to Dr. Dymple Cooksey, a nutritionist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service, this practice may cause stunted growth and failure to gain weight in children under two.

Nutrition researchers have found that these parents typically substitute skim milk for whole milk, feed their toddlers lean meat and complex carbohydrates and no more than three eggs per week, while also forbidding snacks between meals.

"This type of low-fat, low-cholesterol diet can be appropriate for an adult, but will result in young children getting only 63 percent to 94 percent of the calories they need," she says.

It's particularly important that babies drink whole milk, says Cooksey, since the fat provides essential fatty acids and calories, in addition to the calcium, vitamin D and phosphorous in found in all milk.

A parent who is concerned about a child's weight may wish to restrict ice cream and other highly sugared or high fat dairy treats as snacks, but shouldn't serve skim milk to a child under two, she adds.

Snacks are also important for babies and toddlers because their stomachs are small and they may not get enough nutrients by eating only at meals, says the nutritionist.

Research studies show that nutritious snacks provide up to 20 percent of a child's food energy. They also supply much of the vitamin C-rich foods and liquids in the form of fruits, juices and drinks.

Rather than deny young children snacks, parents should make sure the snacks are nutritious, advises Cooksey. Fruits, fruit juices, fresh vegetable pieces, cheese and crackers, egg custards are all examples of nutritious snacks.

Sugary snack foods, including soda, candy, sweetened fruit drinks, cakes, pies and sugared cereals contain many calories but very few nutrients. So parents can justifiably limit these snacks, says the nutritionist.

"Children need basic nutrients in adequate amounts from a balanced diet," Cooksey emphasizes. "They are not miniature adults and are too young to diet."

TEAMWORK

TEAMWORK noun a joint action by a group of people in which each person subordinates his individual interests and opinions for the unity of the group.

When the word "teamwork" is mentioned, the most obvious thought is that of football or another sport. While it is true that a football team must have unity, teamwork also applies to business.

Competition sparks Siskel, Ebert

LOS ANGELES (AP)—One of the few things Gene Siskel and Roger Ebert agree on is that their rivalry sparks their movie review show.

Siskel and Ebert agree on little else, and that keen sense of competition has helped make stars of two Chicago film critics who still consider themselves just working newspapermen.

This month they begin their ninth season on the air with a new version of their movie review show, called "Siskel & Ebert & The Movies."

"The success of the show still astonishes us," said Siskel. "None of it was planned. I think it shows that newspaper people who are given a beat and given time to develop expertise can become very effective communicators on television."

"Roger and I are intense competitors. I think it's this rivalry and competition that fuels the show. The key is that we're two newspapermen who sit around and argue about movies."

Chicago has always been a city of intense newspaper rivalry. Siskel was the daily film critic for the Chicago Tribune for 17 years and will continue writing reviews and commentary for the newspaper and its syndicate twice a week. Ebert has been with the Chicago Sun-Times for 19 years and in 1975 became the only film critic to win the Pulitzer Prize for distinguished criticism.

The rivalry is such that they asked to be interviewed separately. Siskel, who is tall, slim and has a receding hairline, was first. Then came Ebert, who is shorter and rounder, has a mop of curly hair and wears hornrim glasses.

"Our professional competition has been a fact of life since 1969. We were not really on speaking terms," Ebert said. "We were film critics for rival morning newspapers. We'd go to the same screenings, but we wouldn't speak. People talk about our chemistry, but that had nothing to do with our original selection to do this show."

In 1977, a Chicago public television station asked Siskel and Ebert to participate in a weekly show reviewing the arts. At first the show was distributed free around the country, then it was bought by a majority of the PBS stations. "Sneak Previews" went on to become the highest-rated half-hour weekly show in the history of PBS.

In 1982 their new show, "At the Movies," was syndicated to commercial stations by Tribune Entertainment. Beginning this season their new show will be syndicated by Buena Vista Television. Both said they felt the show was being pushed harder by the new syndicators—and in many cities it was moving to higher-rated stations or getting a better time slot.

After the move to Buena Vista was announced the Tribune replaced Siskel as daily critic. He now writes twice a week for the newspaper and is syndicated by Tribune Media Services.

JESSUP, Md. (AP) — Asked whether she tries to keep track of her students after they graduate, Carolyn Buser answered with a sad shake of her head.

"I can't tell you how many of my former pupils have been murdered. I stopped counting after 35," she said.

From any other school administrator, the response would have been shocking. But her school is the "Reading Academy," inside the razor-wire fence of the Maryland Correctional Institution, one of the most difficult imaginable educational settings.

Classes in this medium-security penitentiary are apt to be interrupted at any time by a head count. And the potted plants decorating classroom window sills just barely soften the prison ambience.

Still, with the help of reading methods developed at Johns Hopkins University, Buser's school is gaining a national reputation for its accomplishments in fostering literacy. An unusual "peer tutoring" system trains inmates to expertly teach each other the rudiments of reading and writing.

A soon-to-be-published U.S. Department of Justice report, "Making Literacy Programs Work: A Practical Guide for Correctional Educators," cites Jessup as one of a handful of exemplary prison-based literacy programs.

Others singled out for praise include the Buena Vista (Calif.) Correctional Facility; Kansas State Industrial Reformatory, Hutchinson, Kan.; Lebanon (Ohio) Correctional Institution; Mount McGregor Correctional Facility, Wilton, N.Y.; Muskegon (Mich.) Correctional Facility; Petersburg (Va.) Federal Correctional Institute, and Washington Corrections Center, Shelton, Wash.

What helps Jessup stand out are six top-notch teachers paid competitively with neighboring public schoolteachers, and a hard-won rapport between prison staff and educators.

There are no textbooks or primers. The material, as in many adult literacy programs, comes mostly from the men themselves: their thoughts and experiences, in their own words.

The reading fare is thus worlds away from Dick-and-Jane:

"A 21-year-old man was killed Tuesday morning in the line of duty..."

"Without thinking, Laura put up her arms in a karate block..."

That kind of thing. The method pays off for tutors and students. The tutors gain self-respect and learn empathy. The students get the individual, patient attention that few ever get in a regular school.

"My tutor is very patient. He doesn't show any madness. He's more than just a tutor; he's a very good friend," said inmate Felton Warren, 29, from Baltimore, who has spent 15 months at the Jessup Reading Academy.

Thomas Lewis, a 54-year-old inmate, interrupted a lesson on a 95-plus degree day to explain to a visitor why reading suddenly meant something to him in prison.

"My parents had 16 children," he said. "I had to drop out of fourth grade to help support the family. We collected junk. I never went back to school 'til I got here. I couldn't read a newspaper. Didn't know the alphabet."

After six months in the reading academy, Lewis proudly displays what he can now do for the first time in his life: write his own name in neat script. He writes letters to his wife. He imagines himself reading to his grandchildren if, as he hopes, he's freed sometime next summer.

But Jessup's teachers and pupils harbor no illusions. No one here believes reading turns felons into Boy Scouts.

The Justice Department report, expected to be released this fall, offers grim statistics on what typical prison literacy programs are up against. They include:

As many as half of all inmates in federal and state prisons can't read or write at all and 37 percent have completed high school, half the graduation rate of the general population.

Record number fall below poverty line

WASHINGTON (AP) — A record 5.2 million Hispanic Americans lived in poverty last year as the median family income of the group fell $478, according to a study of Census Bureau data.

The analysis by the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities also found that two out of five Hispanic children — or a record 2.6 million — lived below the poverty line last year.

The center, a non-profit, liberal-oriented research organization, also said that "if current trends continue, Hispanics will pass blacks in the next few years as the ethnic group with the highest poverty rate in the nation."

While the poverty rate of 31.3 percent among blacks last year was virtually the same as it was in 1979, the rate for Hispanics had increased from 21.8 percent to 29 percent during the same period, the report said.

The median income of Hispanic families dropped $478 last year to $19,027, while it rose $803 to $16,786 among black families and increased $478 to $29,152 for white families.

Median means that half the families earned more than that amount and half earned less.

The report also found that per capita income of Hispanics was $6,613 last year, compared with $6,840 for blacks.

NEA GRAPHIC In the '86 Senate races, the top early fund-raiser was Florida challenger Bob Graham, the incumbent governor who collected more than $1.2 million in just a few months. But fund raising is also heavy in California, where Rep. Edwin Zschau ($1.02 million) is challenging Sen. Alan Cranston ($914,578).

The Newspaper BIBLE

LISTEN TO THE REST OF IT, MY FRIEND!

Arriving at the port of Ephesus, Paul left us aboard ship while he went over to the synagogue for a discussion with the Jews. They asked him to stay for a few days, but he felt that he had no time to lose. "I must by all means be at Jerusalem for the holiday," he said. But he promised to return to Ephesus later if God permitted; and so we set sail again.

The next stop was at the port of Caesarea from where he visited the church of Jerusalem and then sailed to Antioch.

After spending some time there, he left for Turkey again, going through Galatia and Phrygia visiting all the believers, encouraging them and helping them grow in the Lord.

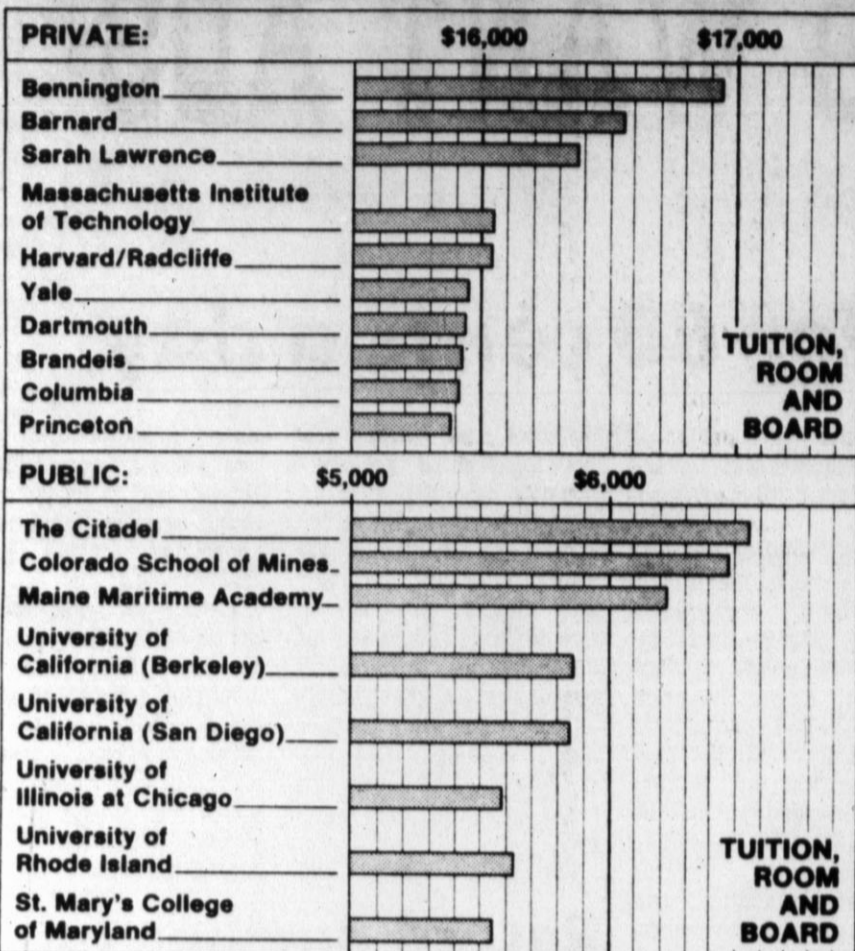

As it happened, a Jew named Apollos, a wonderful Bible teacher and preacher, had just arrived in Ephesus from Alexandria in Egypt. While he was in Egypt, someone had told him about John the Baptist and what John had said about Jesus, but that is all he knew. He had never heard the rest of the story! So he was preaching boldly and enthusiastically in the synagogue. "The Messiah is coming! Get ready to receive Him!" Priscilla and Aquila were there and heard him -- and it was a powerful sermon. Afterwards they met with him and explained what had happened to Jesus since the time of John, and all that it meant!

Apollos had been thinking about going to Greece, and the believers encouraged him in this. They wrote to their fellow believers there, telling them to welcome him. And upon arrival in Greece, he was greatly used of God to strengthen the church, for he powerfully refuted all the Jewish arguments in public debate, showing by the Scriptures that Jesus is indeed the Messiah.

HIGHER-COST EDUCATION

THE MOST EXPENSIVE U.S. COLLEGES

(Source: The College Board)

NEA GRAPHIC

It costs $16,950 for tuition and room and board at Bennington, the nation's most expensive college. The Citadel, at $6,561 for those basics, tops the public-college list. But the figures don't include books, transportation and personal expenses.

Free shows to be held during Tri State Fair

Something new and different has been added to the Tri State Fair in 1986, scheduled for Sept. 15-20.

On Wednesday, Sept. 17, two free shows featuring Johnny Rodriguez will be held in the coliseum. Then on Thursday, Sept. 18, Moe Bandy with Amber Pennington will conduct two free coliseum shows. Performance times on both days will be 6:30 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. Sponsors for the shows with the fair will be Total Television of Amarillo for the Rodriguez Show and KVII-TV and Gebo's of Amarillo for the Moe Bandy Show.

The locations where tickets may be obtained will be announced by the sponsors within a few days. Although tickets are free, a ticket will be required for admission to the shows.

Rodriguez appeared on the country music scene in 1968 at the young age of 17 and has produced hits such as "Pass Me By", "That's The Way Love Goes" and "Down on the Rio Grande", to name just a few.

Bandy, a popular singer who has appeared at the Tri State Fair in the past with Joe Stampley, has made such song hits as "Just Good Ol' Boys", "Bandy the Rodeo Clown", "It's a Cheatin' Situation", and some thirty other hit songs and 24 albums.

Pennington, a seven-year-old singer from Stinnett will open each show for Bandy. Amber opened one of the rodeo performances at the Houston Livestock Show last year in the Astrodome with her rendition of the "Star Spangled Banner" and has made several television and radio appearances in Nashville and in Texas.

Long-term care discussed

Just as families have gotten used to financial planning for a child's college education or retirement, they may need to begin thinking about long-term care for their later years, says a family economics specialist.

According to Dr. Marjorie Marman, a home economist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service, 80 percent of older people surveyed by the American Association of Retired Persons, believe Medicare will fully cover long-term health care when it doesn't.

Several different types of services may be required to support long-term care for an elderly person in a nursing home, she explains.

Skilled nursing care, for example, involves daily care from trained medical professionals. Intermediate care is less intensive nursing care which is not required provided daily. Custodial care includes services such as assistance with dressing or giving medications, and does not require highly trained or licensed personnel.

Currently, Medicare pays the "allowable" costs of skilled nursing care in a Medicare approved skilled nursing facility for the first 20 days following a hospital stay, says the specialist. Then Medicare covers all but $61.50 per day for the remaining 80 days. Beyond 100 days the consumer must pay all costs for the skilled nursing home care.

Medicare does not cover custodial care, yet many long-term nursing home patients require custodial care, not skilled nursing, Marman points out. Medicaid provides extended coverage for nursing home care, but you must be impoverished to qualify.

In addition, many families may choose to care for an elder in his or her own home, by providing home-care support services such as a visiting nurse, or caregiver who can help with meal preparation, personal grooming and taking medicine.

The specialist reports that 25 percent of those between 75 and 84 and 46 percent of those over age 85 require such assistance. However, Medicare often will not cover home health care costs either.

The limitations of Medicare mean that most families need to examine alternatives for long-term care of their elders, she emphasizes.

Some families use current earnings, savings or other investment earnings to cover long-term care for themselves or other family members, she notes.

Medicare supplement insurance policies—often called "Medigap" policies—are offered by private insurance companies. Those policies, help cover the difference between Medicare payments and actual costs for skilled nursing care in a licensed home. But they typically have a time limitation on coverage, Marman explains.

In an attempt to meet the need for long-term care coverage, some large insurance companies are now offering long-term care policies to people of retirement age and older.

The specialist suggests that consumers interested in long-term care policies consult the consumer and financial magazines available in many public libraries for reports on this type of insurance. This background information can help families learn the limits of the coverage and decide whether it is or is not an appropriate choice in their situation.

In addition, she encourages families to ask questions about specific policies and their benefits to different company representatives before making a decision.
