

Regardless of repository selection

Texas likely on waste transport trail

AUSTIN (AP) — A report prepared for the U.S. Department of Energy indicates that high-level nuclear waste could move by rail through Texas even if the nation's nuclear dump site is placed in another state, a state official says.

The plan could mean that a load of the potentially dangerous material could come into the state once every three days for 25 years, according to Steve Frishman, director of the governor's nuclear wastes program.

Frishman testified Thursday before the House Joint Committee on Hazardous Waste Transportation. He based his remarks on a report prepared by the Argonne National Laboratory in Illinois for the Department of Energy.

The report, prepared last December, said, "Transporting spent fuel and nuclear waste using barges in conjunction with trains is a viable option." The waste would be loaded in casks.

"In general, shipments from plants on the Atlantic coast or on the Gulf coast or shipments that travel by rail to an Atlantic port are assumed to travel by water to Houston," the report said.

One potential rail route through Texas begins at the Houston-Galveston area and moves northwest through Dallas, Fort Worth and Amarillo, according to Frishman.

"If a cask ruptures, you are dealing with a few tons of spent fuel. In a city, you could have injuries, death and long-term effects," Frishman said.

A site in Texas' Deaf Smith County is among the three finalists for the repository, with a decision expected in 1992. The other sites are in Nevada and Washington state.

Department of Energy officials have made no final decision on how to transport nuclear waste, Frishman said.

Committee chairman Al Luna, D-Houston, said federal officials were invited to the Thursday hearing, but did not attend.

"If Washington is seriously considering running the nuclear waste of the entire eastern seaboard through Houston, we need to let them know we won't stand for it. If they're not serious about it, then we want to see this idea officially killed and laid to rest," Luna said.

James Reed of the Texas Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations testified that the tests to be performed at the Deaf Smith site would necessitate the movement of 65,000 cubic yards of salt and rock from the location.

A Port Arthur landfill has been identified by federal officials as a possible disposal site for the material, Reed said.

"If Deaf Smith is chosen as a repository site, over 11 million tons of waste salt would eventually have to be hauled away," he said.

Too early for deadlock, governor says

AUSTIN (AP) — It's too early to talk about a deadlock between the House and Senate in this special budget-balancing session of the Legislature, Gov. Mark White says.

"We're going to keep working and let the system work. I think it's moving well," White said.

However, House leaders continued to insist they aren't interested in any plan to raise taxes now to help solve the $3.5 billion state budget deficit.

White is urging lawmakers to approve a 1½-cent increase in the state sales tax, boosting the levy from 1½ percent to 5¼ percent for one year, beginning Sept. 13.

The chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, Rep. Stan Schlueter, on Wednesday said such a bill probably wouldn't even get a hearing if introduced.

"We know all about taxes," said Schlueter, D-Killeen.

But White said he isn't discouraged by such talk. He said he continues to press for his temporary tax hike plan because he doesn't believe enough money can be pared from the budget to balance the books.

"I'm trying to make certain that they respond responsibly to the deficit ... I am going to continue to ask for responsible action from the Legislature," White said.

The Senate, led by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, has indicated support for a tax increase. But under the Texas Constitution, all tax bills must start in the House, and leaders there insist the opposition is overwhelming. White refused to answer repeated questions about which House member would sponsor his tax increase.

"We don't need one until they're read to act and we'll have one when that time comes if it is necessary," he said.

House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, also raised the spectre of another special session when the current one ends on Sept. 4. He said he

Day care center blends well with nursing home

By CINDY SMITH
Staff Writer

The old and the new at King's Manor Methodist Nursing Home pull together to make life more interesting.

The Manor is the first 24-hour child care service available in Hereford.

"We have a steady stream of residents that come by to look through the windows everyday. The child care is a quite popular attraction" said Martha Rickman, child care director. "Some of the residents, including Westgate, haven't seen children in years and it helps to keep them in touch with the real world."

The children and the residents are served the same menu written by the manor's dietician and often attend social events together. Activities for the "little people" also include the big people.

Going to the Town & Country Jubilee parade held Saturday, residents and small children packed into a van to join in the Jubilee spirit. Children in the child care center also celebrate with the residents at a monthly birthday party held at the Manor.

"All of the children except the crib babies go over and have ice cream and cake with the older residents, including Westgate," Rickman said.

Opening July 14 with 10 children the 24-hour babysitting service has grown to a membership of nearly 100.

"It's the first all-around-the-clock center. We haven't had any children staying all night yet, but we're prepared, we have people on call," said Rickman. She also added that business will definitely pick up after school starts.

Any child between the age of 3 weeks and 13 years old may enter the center after shot records and enrollment forms are completed upon arrival.

The center accepts children staying regular hours and drop-ins. "Drop-ins are children here only on occasion, like when the parents go to a football game and regulars are here on a regular set basis," explained Rickman. She said the regulars' hours vary depending on the family schedule.

The center requires only two hours notice by phone for drop-ins to give adequate time to contact their staff to be prepared.

Fees for the service are $1 an hour for regulars and $1.50 for drop-ins. The fee also includes transportation to and from the center and meals and snacks.

The child care center has recently had seat belts installed in the van and will be making regular pickups and deliveries at no extra charge, when school begins.

Meals are decided by the manor's dietician and the children are served home-style and are welcome to second and third helpings. The snacks include fruit, juice, crackers, cookies, cheese, and other nutritional foods.

The center features a specialized area for science, dramatic play, arts, books, and music. Child care activities include educational field trips. Rickman said the group has been to the grocery store, the Post Office, and the fire station this week as part of a focus on community helpers.

Wednesdays are movie days for the children featuring Walt Disney movies and a cookout is planned for next week.

"These kids are really terrific," said Rickman. "If they're spoiled, it's probably because we spoiled them."

Appian Corp. agrees to $5.5 million settlement

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A Hereford road construction company has agreed to pay $5.5 million to a family after a fire in 1983 in which a 2-year-old boy died and his two sisters suffered severe burns.

Appian Corp. agreed to pay the Pedro Barraza family on Thursday. The fire occurred Aug. 23, 1983, at the Barraza home in Odessa. The family has since moved to Brownsville.

The suit claimed that roadwork near the Barraza home jarred loose a gas line and a pilot light ignited the gas leak while the family slept, said Steve Hastings, the Barraza's attorney.

Pedro Barraza Jr. died in the fire. His sisters, Gina, then 9, and Corrina, then 8, suffered burns over 65 percent of their bodies.

In February, Rheem Manufacturing, a national air conditioning company, and Energas, a West Texas gas company, agreed upon an approximate $7 million settlement in the case.

Internal squabbles starting over aid

Fighting among officers for share of U.S. dollars is rumored

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP)

— The U.S. aid hasn't even begun to flow, but already Hondurans are awash in charges that its military is squabbling over the $100 million approved by Congress for Nicaraguan rebels.

Some Honduran and foreign analysts contend top officers are simply fighting among themselves for a possible share of the bonanza earmarked for the anti-Sandinista Contras.

Others say deeper issues divide the army, including U.S. policy in Central America and eventual leadership of the Honduran armed forces.

But Gen. Humberto Regalado, commander of the army, says such talk is absurd, insisting the officer corps is neither divided philosophically nor trying to muscle in on rebel aid money.

A bill calling for $70 million in U.S. military assistance and $30 million in non-lethal aid has already passed the House and Senate, but awaits action by a conference committee and final approval from both chambers before it is sent to President Reagan for signing.

Touching off the controversy in Honduras was an Aug. 8 army raid on the home of Rodolfo Zelaya, an alternate delegate to the national legislature and a businessman with close ties to the Contras, most of whom are based in Honduras.

Zelaya said the raid was orchestrated by Col. Roberto Nunez, chief of army intelligence, and carried out by soldiers under Col. Wilfredo Sanchez, the head of Honduras' public security force.

Their motive, Zelaya said, was to pressure him into relinquishing control of his business, which in the past year has supplied the Contras with millions of dollars in food, clothing and medicines, and turning it over to them and their friends in the army.

Both officers were temporarily dismissed pending a military investigation, a rare occurrence in Honduras where graduation from the national military academy usually guarantees a lifetime job.

In the meantime, Zelaya's house on the outskirts of Tegucigalpa was put under guard by soldiers from an armored cavalry unit. Some observers suggest Zelaya may enjoy the protection of rival elements in the army.

The incident so embarrassed the government that Foreign Minister Carlos Lopez Contreras announced Wednesday that none of the $100 million would be permitted to be channeled through Honduras.

"The government has always been clear on this point: North American aid for the Nicaraguan counter-revolution will not pass through here," Lopez Contreras said.

Most analysts, however, saw that as an idle threat.

"The Honduran government has been pretending for years that the rebels are not even here," said one Western diplomat. "They have said before that they wouldn't permit U.S. aid to pass through their country, but it always has."

Mexican mayor seeking asylum

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A Mexican opposition mayor has surfaced in this border city seeking political asylum after disappearing from his home for nearly a week.

Mayor Gustavo Villareal and two other members of the opposition National Action Party, or PAN, vanished from Hidalgo del Parral Aug. 15, one day after several people were injured during a rock-throwing melee at a political demonstration, said Silvia Perez, PAN secretary in Parral.

"We were very worried because nobody knew of their whereabouts," said Ms. Perez. "Then we got a call (Wednesday) saying they were all right."

Parral is the third-largest city in the northern Mexico state of Chihuahua, with a population of 120,000, and is south of Chihuahua City, the state capital.

Villareal, Jose Felix Bueno, 50, and Claudio Worley, 43, were allowed into the United States Wednesday night when they asked for political asylum at one of the bridges linking El Paso with Juarez, Mexico. Bueno and Worley are businessmen and PAN members in Parral, said Guadalupe Gonzalez, district counsel for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Campbell selected to PUC board

AUSTIN (AP) — Public Utility Commissioner Jo Campbell has been recommended for Senate confirmation by a committee that included a senator who asked her supporters if she is emotionally stable.

At the end of the Thursday hearing, the Senate Nominations Committee voted 6-0 to back Gov. Mark White's selection of Ms. Campbell for the three-member PUC.

Also Thursday, the committee voted 5-1 to recommend confirmation of seven White appointees to the State Board of Medical Examiners.

During the hearing, Sen. Bob McFarland, R-Arlington, told several pro-Campbell witnesses that he had heard from several sources that Ms. Campbell, at times, showed signs of "a possible emotional instability."

Ms. Campbell, a lawyer who often asks tough questions at commission hearings, has had several heated disputes with PUC Chairman Peggy Rosson at those hearings.

McFarland said what he had heard about Ms. Campbell was "hearsay and merely allegations."

Bernard Rappoport of Waco, a longtime Campbell family friend, called the allegation an "unmitigated lie."

Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace, who testified in support of Ms. Campbell, said, "The lady is not emotionally unstable." Ms. Campbell is a former Railroad Commission hearing examiner.

Senate committee OKs betting

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill that would legalize pari-mutuel betting on horse racing for the first time in half a century in Texas has cleared a Senate committee and will be debated by the Senate Monday.

The Senate Economic Development Committee approved the bill, 6-0, Thursday even though Gov. Mark White has not specifically included pari-mutuel betting on the special legislative session agenda.

Dallas Sen. O.H. "Ike" Harris said, however, presiding officers of both houses had indicated they would allow the bill to be debated. Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said later it would be the first order of business Monday.

Harris' bill would authorize pari-mutuel betting on a countywide local option basis if it is approved at a statewide referendum. The bill also would allow dog racing in Galveston, Nueces and Cameron counties.

Harris, R-Dallas, said the bill should suit the governor in that "he wants strong law enforcement — that's there, in place, has been all along. He wanted a referendum ... local option."

White was asked if he would veto a betting bill and he said, "I'm not prepared to answer that."

Coast Guard blocks NY Harbor

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. Coast Guard, police and federal agents tried today to stop all vessels entering New York Harbor and search them for illegal drugs, authorities said.

By 4:30 a.m. 15 vessels — 10 private boats and five commercial ships — had been boarded, but no drugs were found, said Seaman Robert LeValley, a Coast Guard spokesman.

The exercise, dubbed Operation Glass Eye, was described by officials as a partial blockade of the harbor and began about 8:45 p.m. Thursday.

It was to continue until sundown today.

In a statement, the Coast Guard said it planned to stop every pleasure craft and commercial fishing vessel entering the harbor, and as many charter and sight-seeing boats as possible.

LeValley said the operation also involved officials from the New York Police Department, the federal Drug Enforcement Agency, and the U.S. Customs Service.

Rebels claim Soviets used chemicals

JAMBA, Angola (AP) — Angolan guerrillas charge that Soviet-aided government troops have begun to use chemical weapons in the country's 10-year-old civil war.

The weapons have killed three rebel fighters, blinded several others and turned leaves on trees "totally dark," Brig. Isidro Peregrino Chindondo, intelligence chief of the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, or UNITA, said Thursday.

He said government air and ground units used a "toxic agent" in battles at Bie in June, at Lucusse in July and at Cuito Cuanavale in August.

The chemical bombs and grenades emit a yellow and green vapor, Chindondo said.

UNITA fighters learned to combat the effects of the weapons by placing wet cloth over their faces, he said.

UNITA has fought a civil war from the bush in southeastern Angola since losing a power struggle in 1975-76 to the rival Popular Movement for the Independence of Angola, or MPLA, following independence from Portugal.

Cuban troops moved into the southwestern African nation in late 1975 to back the Marxist MPLA against UNITA, which is supported by South Africa and the United States. The Cubans now number about 30,000.

There was no immediate reaction from Angola's government to the UNITA charges, made to journalists who flew from Pretoria, South Africa, to the guerrilla group's headquarters at Jamba in southeastern Angola on Thursday and then returned to file their stories.

UNITA leaders also claimed that they scored a victory at Cuito Cuanavale, a town at the tip of a government-controlled area protruding into UNITA-held territory.

Kids turn in parents for pot smoking

By The Associated Press

Two New Mexico children who complained to authorities that their parents used marijuana told officers they would do it again if the drug use continued.

Meanwhile, the parents of a

California youngster who turned them in for drug use have been forced from their home and their jobs because of the publicity, their lawyer says.

In the New Mexico case, the children, who live in Silver City, called ed the Grant County Sheriff's Department on Monday and told officers their parents were smoking marijuana. The youngsters' names and ages were being withheld.

"They said they had something to show us," said Capt. Daniel Garcia.

"They took us into the house and turned over paraphernalia and a small quantity of marijuana."

Garcia said there was less than an ounce of marijuana found at the house.

"They said they had had enough," Garcia said. "They said they didn't want their parents getting into trouble. The kids said they wanted it to stop before it got any worse."

Garcia said the parents admitted they had been smoking marijuana, but said they had never done it in front of the children.

The family was referred to the Social Services Division of the state Human Services Department.

"Their own upbringing apparently made the children opposed to marijuana," Garcia said. "They were raised well."

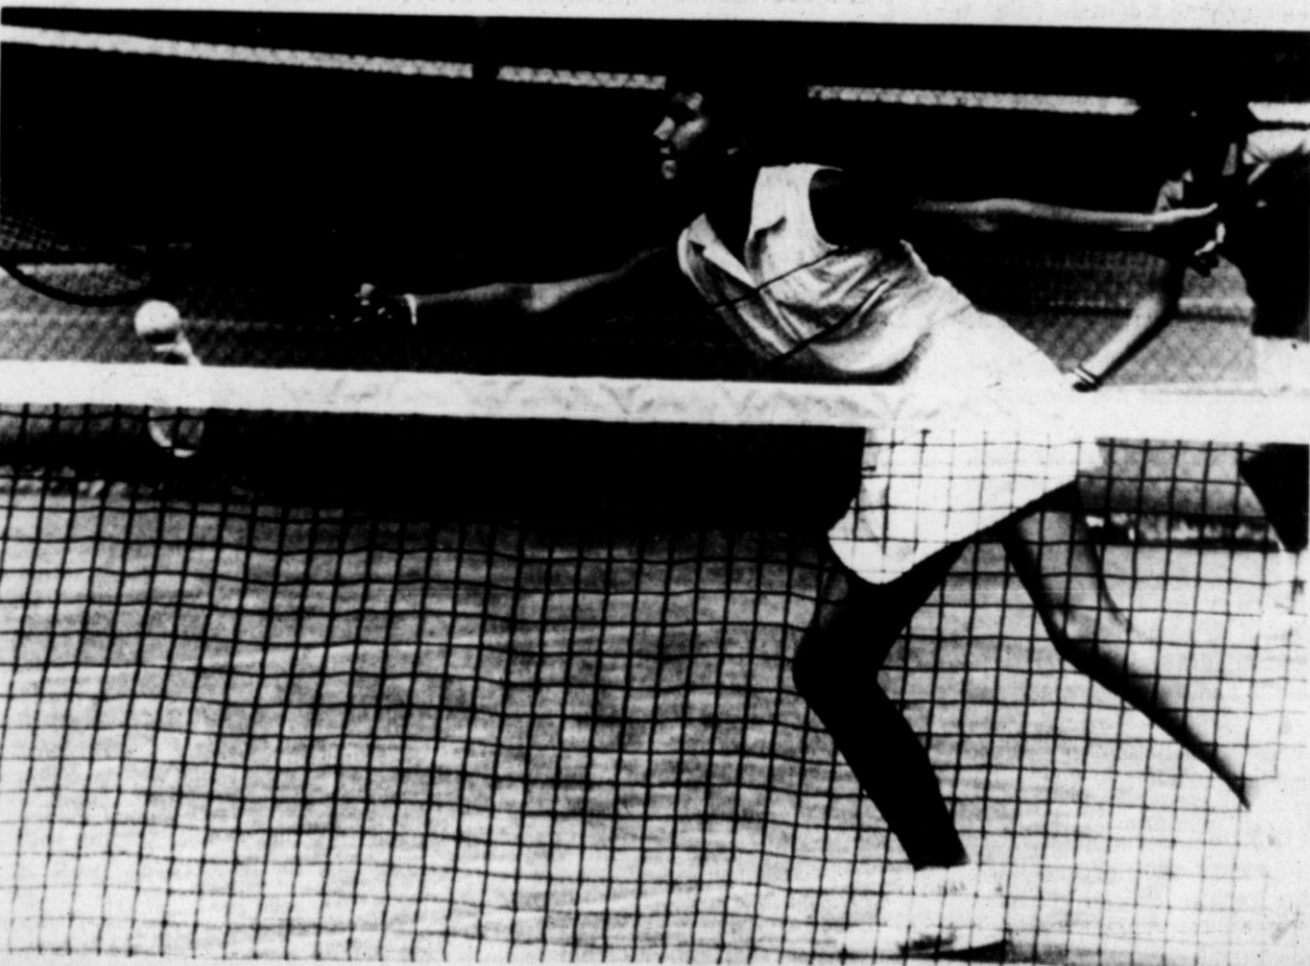

In the California case, lawyer Gary Proctor said Bobby and Judith Young of Tustin, near Los Angeles, had to leave their home and jobs because of publicity generated when their daughter Deanna, 13, turned them in for alleged drug abuse.

cancelled a planned September vacation.

White said that doesn't worry him, because he believes there is plenty of time to overcome the apparent legislative stalemate.

"That's premature, I think, to even discuss (a deadlock) because they are making great progress, and we have almost two full weeks left in this session, and I would hope they they would continue to make progress," the governor said.

Ann Landers Veteran benefits

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Many peacetime or wartime veterans are unaware of what benefits are available to them. I am just now becoming aware of these benefits because my own father is very ill. He is both a peacetime and a wartime veteran and probably will not live much longer.

With regard to the death of a veteran, the government will supply more than a flag. It will provide money towards the burial and a headstone. If a veteran dies in a Veterans Administration hospital the family will receive more money than if he or she dies at home.

Also, for those who cannot afford a cemetery plot and the cost of an undertaker, different states have different provisions. The VA has numerous national cemeteries across the country that will provide a plot for a veteran (and spouse, where space is available), also a small service. They will also take care of the arrangements with the undertaker. Some undertakers are aware of what the benefits are and are more than willing to help the family to obtain every possible benefit. Others will not be bothered or they do not know enough about it. A wartime veteran, for example, will receive more financial aid from the government than a peacetime veteran.

Ann, can you please look into this and provide your readers with the information so many of them need to know?—A Member of the Ladies Auxiliary to the V.F.W.

DEAR MEMBER: Thanks for a letter that is sure to be very helpful to a great many people. For those who want complete details about eligibility for help, I suggest contacting the local Veterans Administration office.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and his brothers have worked for their father all their lives. They had other opportunities to go elsewhere but Dad promised the boys one day the place would be theirs. He told everyone at our family gatherings that when he reached 55 he would retire and the boys would take over.

Fifty-five came and went. Meanwhile, Dad continued to pile up money and the boys are still struggling.

Dad's new goal for retirement was 60. The loyal sons hung in there. Sixty has come and gone and 65 is fast approaching. Now Dad has an offer to sell the business.

Did all those verbal promises mean anything legally? The faithful sons are now resentful. Dad and Mom can't understand why no one comes to visit anymore. The family is torn apart and the scars are deep. Can anything be done?—Sign me—Empty Promises In Utah

DEAR UTAH: If you're asking can the boys sue their father for selling the business, the answer is: I doubt it.

Too bad "the boys" stuck around. I'd love to hear your father-in-law's version of this story. I'd bet my bottom dollar it sounds very different.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I wonder how many paper boys are abducted or killed each year because their photos and names and addresses were published when they were named "carrier of the week."

This practice has been going on for years and I think it is a sure way to ask for trouble. Do you have the nerve to print this?—Reader in Casco, Wis.

DEAR CASCO: I do not know of one carrier who was abducted. Ninety-nine percent of the missing kids are either runaways or have been snatched by a parent after a divorce. The notion that they all have been kidnapped by strangers is a myth.

Job stress can lead to job burnout

HOUSTON—Seven o'clock in the evening. The boss is still waiting for an overdue report. The stack of work on the desk grows taller. The phone doesn't stop ringing. The headache throbs.

Does this sound familiar? Workers who experience this kind of day too often are candidates for job stress and are in the running for job burnout, said William Myerson, Ph.D., a psychologist with Baylor College of Medicine and The Methodist Hospital's Institute for Preventive Medicine in Houston.

Today's average office working environment, with long hours of sedentary work, puts an emotional strain on people accustomed to activity. The unstable economy and high unemployment in states such as Texas can also lead to increased job stress.

"One thing we see constantly when we go into corporations is people not doing a lick of physical labor, but they are absolutely drained at the end of the day," Myerson said. "We see that they are drained not from physical effort, but from the stress of it all."

Factors that contribute to stress include demanding job tasks, a continual need for immediate decisions and a lack of control over time and tasks on the job.

There are ways to cope with job stress, short of quitting your job, by keeping physically fit and exerting more control over time and tasks, Myerson said.

Signs of excess stress on the job include a lack of ability to concentrate, a loss of interest in work, an absence of job satisfaction for months on end, or a mild sort of depression or continuing disappointment about work.

Physical signs of job stress include ulcers, nervous stomach, high blood pressure and migraine headaches.

"One of the signs is a feeling at the end of the day like your brain is dead," Myerson said. "Somewhat, you just can't think, and you can't imagine doing anything but going home to watch television and have a drink or a beer. Ideally, you should leave work feeling good about yourself, and feel that something good has been accomplished."

It is important to recognize stress and deal with it before it becomes job burnout, a more psychologically and emotionally troubling problem, Myerson said.

"One of the things you can do is focus some of your energies elsewhere and put more emphasis temporarily on another part of your life, like your family, favorite sport or hobby," he said. "It is also helpful to take more control over how your day runs. For example, try to schedule lunch away from your desk occasionally, decide when to take breaks and figure out your priorities and schedule for the day."

Keeping physically healthy will also ward off stress or at least reduce its damage. Myerson recommends regular exercise, healthy eating habits and cutting back on caffeine and alcohol.

When job stress is leading to job burnout, he suggests testing the job market.

"A job is not a marriage," Myerson said. "You're not getting a divorce if you look around for another job. It's all right to keep your options open by inquiring about other jobs and other opportunities."

He said getting additional information on the job market can lead to renewed job satisfaction with a current position or a decision to change jobs or even careers.

"The bottom line in avoiding job stress is to make work as enjoyable as possible," Myerson said. "But realize that every day is not going to be great, and don't let it get you down."

Tennis Tournament Action

Randy Robbins goes after a ball served by opponent T.J. Head Thursday in a junior high boys' singles match in the Hereford and Vicinity YMCA tennis tournament. Walker will probably be on sidelines tonight

By ALAN SAYRE
Associated Press Writer
IRVING, Texas (AP) — Herschel Walker may be the new star attraction of the Dallas Cowboys, but fans at Texas Stadium and a national television audience probably will have to settle for Tony Dorsett tonight.

Walker, who was one of the USFL's bright spots, began practicing with the Cowboys this week but is likely to remain on the sidelines, leaving the tailback duties to Dorsett.

The kickoff is scheduled for 7 p.m. CDT. The game will be telecast by ABC.

Dorsett, who asked to be traded and then apologized after Walker signed a $5 million contract with the Cowboys, reversed himself this week and asked again to be traded. Dorsett makes $450,000 a year.

"Obviously, you're investing money for the future," Coach Tom Landry said in explaining Walker's salary and the Cowboys' refusal to trade Dorsett. "Herschel could become the Dorsett of the future. That's the only way you can think about this."

The Cowboys and the Steelers are both winless during the NFL preseason — Dallas is 0-3 and Pittsburgh 0-2. But neither Landry nor Pittsburgh counterpart Chuck Noll seems overly concerned.

"I think our players still think they can win even though we haven't won anything this year. Obviously, it would help if we could win a game here pretty soon," said Landry.

The Cowboys have suffered through an offensive drought, and finally scored their first touchdown in a 24-19 loss to the Raiders last week after just two field goals in its two previous losses.

The Steelers, 0-2, opened the exhibition season with a loss to the Bears before falling to Washington 27-24 last Friday. But Noll said he was "happy with the progress we made" in the Washington game.

The contest could be the first real test for the Steelers No. 1 pick, 280-pound offensive guard John Rienstra, who saw only limited action against the Redskins after a 26-game holdout.

Noll said he would once again use three quarterbacks against the Cowboys, starting with veteran Mark Malone. Scott Campbell and rookie Bubba Brister also will see some time, Noll said.

The Steelers had a five-game regular and post-season winning streak against Dallas snapped last Oct. 13 when the Cowboys won 27-13 for their first victory over Pittsburgh since 1972. The Steelers defeated the Cowboys twice in Super Bowls — in 1975 and 1979, but neither team has been to a Super Bowl in the '80s.

Oilers close down training camp

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — The Houston Oilers closed down their training camp on the Angelo State University campus and are back in Houston where they will face the New Orleans Saints in the AstroDome Saturday night.

But the Oilers are returning without a contract for their No. 1 draft pick Jim Everett.

Houston Oilers General Manager Ladd Herzog and Marv Demoff, Everett's agent, will meet in Houston next week but neither party is confident of reaching an agreement quickly.

Demoff is seeking a $3.7 million, four-year contract for Everett, a Purdue quarterback who was the third player selected in the April 30 NFL draft.

The Oilers are offering less than the $2.35 million contract signed by Atlanta rookie Tony Casillas, the second player chosen in the draft.

"The meeting is important, but I don't feel either Ladd or myself is very confident that we'll reach a joyful resolution," Demoff said.

Herzog and Demoff have not met since July.

"Marvin feels the Chuck Long contract has no bearing on the Everett situation," Herzog said. "We feel it does. It clearly establishes the market."

Long, a quarterback first round selection of the Detroit Lions, signed a four-year, $1.65 million contract. Long was the 12th player selected in the first round.

Meanwhile, Oilers' thoughts are on their date with the Saints.

New Orleans is 1-1 under new coach Jim Mora. Houston is 2-0 under first year coach Jerry Glanville.

Glanville said rookie wide receiver Ernest Givins of Louisville, the team's second-round draft pick, would start ahead of veteran Tim Smith against the Saints.

"Nobody's being benched," Glanville said. "We just want to see how far Givins has come. When you're on the second team, you're not working with the starting quarterback. We want him working with Warren (Moon) out of the box."

The Oilers close out their exhibition schedule Aug. 30 against the Dallas Cowboys and open the regular season Sept. 7 at Green Bay.

National League roundup

Reds sweep series over Cardinals

By JOHN NELSON
AP Baseball Writer

His body had done him wrong, so Eric Davis did the best he could.

His best turned out to be a two-homer, four-RBI performance that led the Cincinnati Reds to a 9-4 victory Thursday night and a sweep of their three-game series with the St. Louis Cardinals.

"My whole right side hasn't been doing me any justice," said Davis, who has suffered from pulled muscles in that side. "No matter which way I swing, I'm going to aggravate it, so I've got to block it out of my mind."

Davis now has 19 homers, including three in the last three days. The Reds also got homers from Buddy Bell, who has seven in eight games, and Nick Esasky, who homered two nights earlier to break a longball drought that dated back to July 26.

In the rest of the National League, San Francisco defeated Philadelphia 7-6, Atlanta downed Chicago 5-2 and San Diego beat Montreal 6-0.

Left-hander Chris Welsh, 5-4, did not give up a hit until Jose Oquendo led off the sixth with a single. The Cards got two in the sixth and two more in the seventh, on Terry Pendleton's two-run single, to chase Welsh.

Bell's recent home run binge has given him 16 for the season, the most since he hit 17 in 1980 for the Texas Rangers.

"I don't know how to act," Bell said. "I've never done this before. I even checked my bat once."

Giants 7, Phillies 6
San Francisco rallied for five runs in the eighth inning to snap a four-game losing streak and beat Philadelphia, which had won four in a row. The loss dropped the Phillies 19 games behind the New York Mets in the NL East.

Dan Gladden drew a bases-loaded walk, Luis Quinones hit a two-run single and Candy Maldonado drove in the tying and winning runs with a two-run double, pinning the loss on Kent Tekulve, 6-2. Mark Davis, 4-4, was the winner.

Phillies right-hander Kevin Gross took a four-hitter into the inning before loading the bases on singles by Chris Brown and Robbie Thompson and a walk to Mike Aldrete.

Rick Schu hit a two-run homer for Philadelphia.

Braves 5, Cubs 2
Atlanta won its fourth in a row, getting a two-run homer from Dale Murphy to break an eighth-inning tie. Braves right-hander Jim Acker allowed just six hits through 7 1-3 innings.

Murphy's 23rd homer came off Ed Lynch and broke a 4-4 tie. The Cubs contested the homer, saying it didn't clear the fence in left field, but second-base umpire Fred Brocklander said it had gone into the screen basket atop the wall and thus was a homer.

Acker was relieved by Paul Assemacher in the eighth, and Gene Garber pitched the final 1 1-3 innings for his 19th save.

Padres 6, Expos 0

Steve Garvey hit his 18th home run, a three-run shot in the third inning, to help pitchers Dave Dravecky and Gene Walter hand the Montreal Expos their fifth straight loss with a five-hit shutout. Terry Kennedy also homered for the Padres.

Dravecky, 9-10, gave up three hits in five innings before leaving with a stiff back. Walter finished up, allowing the other two Montreal hits.

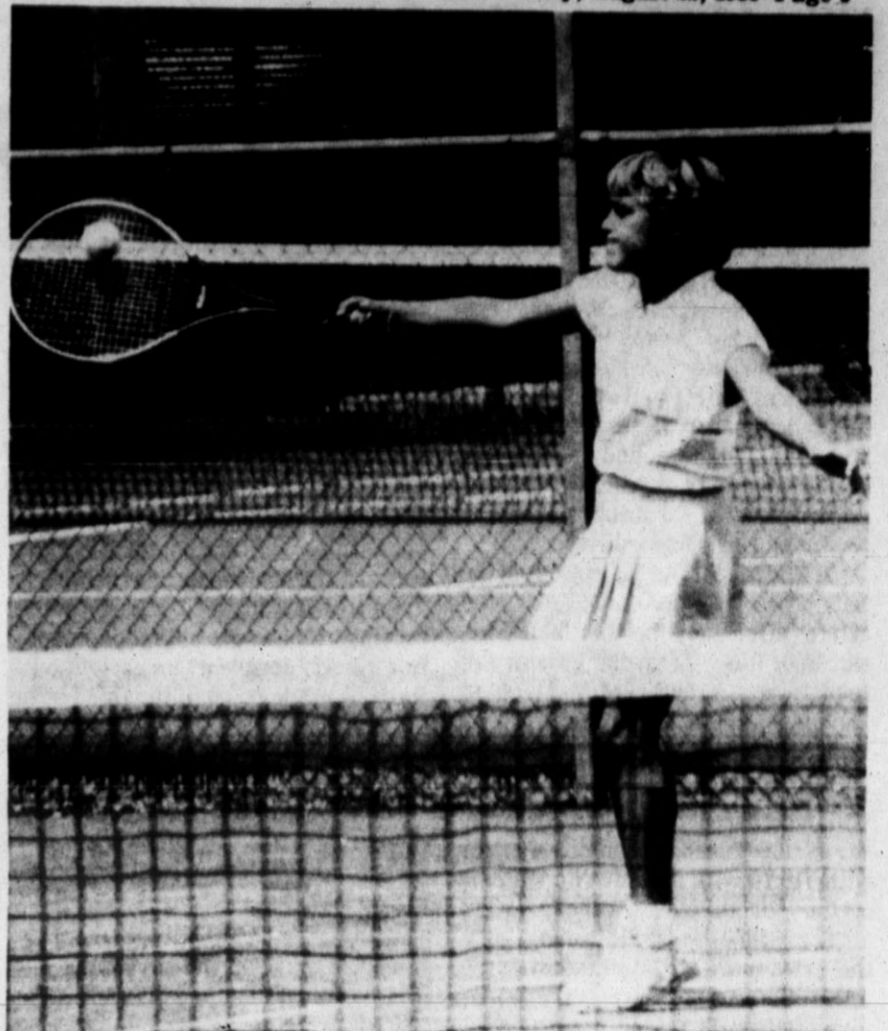

Kevin McReynolds singled in a first-inning run against Dennis Martinez, 2-5, for his fourth game-winning RBI in six games. McReynolds had nine RBI in the three-game series and batted .455.

Hits 435-footer for Royals

White homers again to beat Rangers, 4-3

By CRAIG HORST
Associated Press Writer
Watch what Frank White does, rather than listen to what he says.

White says over and over that he is not a home run hitter. Those who watched White pound a 435-foot homer Thursday night to provide the difference in a 4-3 Kansas City victory over Texas know different.

"If there is a sweet spot (on the bat), that was the sweetest," said White after sending the ball two-thirds of the way up the grassy embankment in left-center field of Royals Stadium.

It was White's 17th home run of the season and third in three games. White homered twice and drove in seven runs Tuesday, winning a game with Texas with a home run leading off the 11th inning.

"Something must be wrong with the ball for me to hit one that far," joked White, who has homered to give the Royals a tie or the lead nine times.

White hit a fastball by Ed Correa leading off the fifth inning to unlock a 3-3 tie.

"I was looking fastball, just fastball," the Royals second baseman said. "I thought I had a better chance to get a fastball with nobody on base. They'll challenge you more with nobody on."

White's home run got Kansas City starter Charlie Leibrandt off the hook of a defensive blunder that gave the Rangers the opportunity to get back into the game.

With two outs in the fourth, Leibrandt came off the mound to field a tap by Pete Incaviglia. Leibrandt started to throw to first base, changed his mind and tried to tag Incaviglia.

Incaviglia jumped out of the way and was safe. On Leibrandt's next pitch, Larry Parrish hit an inside-the-park home run that gave Texas the 3-3 tie.

"That's probably the most embarrassing play that has happened to me in my life," said Leibrandt, who evened his record at 10-10 with his first win since July 8 and first complete game since June 6.

"I try to put the tag on him and he jumps out of the way. The next guy comes up and hits it off the center field wall. That's the way things have been going for me. I sure didn't expect to get win No. 10 after that happened."

Correa, 7-11, gave up home runs to White and Steve Balboni, and now has given up five in his last three starts. He also walked six batters.

"He missed in a couple of places and it hurt him," Rangers Manager Bobby Valentine said. "The walks and the home runs were the difference in this game. We had our chances to win, but couldn't get the hits to fall when we needed them."

Kansas City loaded the bases in the second with one out but managed only a run on Jorge Orta's ground out. Balboni made it 2-0 in the third with his 27th homer.

Parrish tied it with his first career inside-the-park home run and 19th homer this season. Center fielder Willie Wilson leaped for the ball in front of the 410-foot sign, but the ball hit him in the face and he lay stunned as Parrish circled the bases.

George Brett gave the Royals a 3-2 lead with a two-out single up the middle in the fourth after Buddy Biancalana walked and stole second.

The Rangers tied it again in the fifth when Don Slaught doubled leading off, was sacrificed to third and scored as Scott Fletcher grounded out.

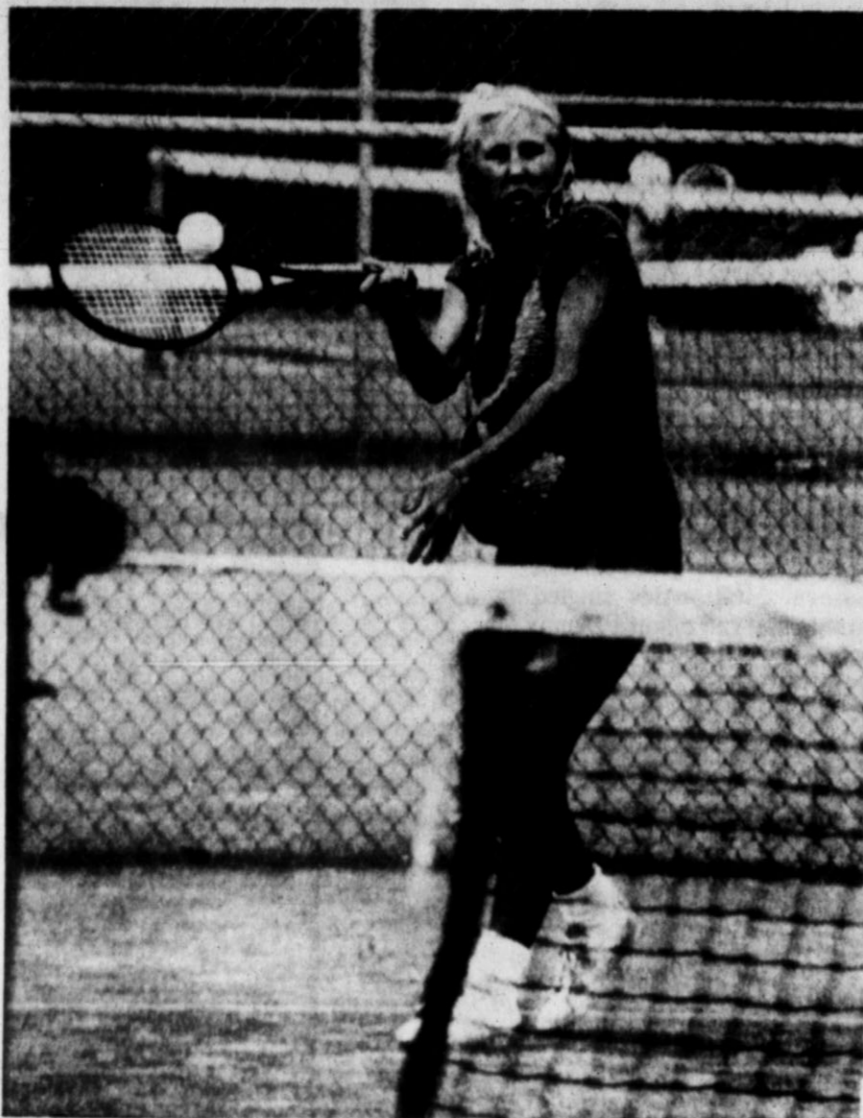

Elsewhere in the AL, Boston walloped Cleveland 24-5, Chicago

1985. Boston had 24 hits, three more than the highest total in the majors this year, and Cleveland pitchers issued nine walks. The only American Leaguer to score six runs in a game was Boston's Johnny Pesky in 1946. Pesky now is a special assistant to Red Sox General Manager Lou Gorman.

Almost lost in the torrent of runs was the first victory since July 8 by Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, 12-9, who allowed eight hits and two runs in seven innings. Boyd had lost three straight after returning from a suspension on Aug. 1. Angels 6, Tigers 1. Mike Witt allowed only five hits in eight innings and got batting support from Bob Boone, Dick Schofield and Wally Joyner as California beat Detroit to extend its AL West lead to five games over Texas. White Sox 4, Blue Jays 3.

Ozzie Guillen's run-scoring single broke a 3-3 tie in the top of the ninth inning as Chicago snapped Toronto's five-game winning streak.

Returning The Serve

Kirsten Abney returns the serve in a YMCA tennis tournament match Thursday. This action came during a junior high girls' doubles match, in which Kirsten and her teammate, Gina Alley, lost to Trisha Munoz and Brenna Reinauer, 6-2, 6-1. (Brand photo by Gary Christensen)

Red Sox 24, Indians 5. Scoring runs, Spike Owen said, can be contagious. Owen, Boston's newly acquired shortstop, started an epidemic Thursday night by scoring a record-tying six runs in a 24-5 victory over the Cleveland Indians. The Red Sox scored the most runs in an American League game since 1979 and had the biggest inning in the majors in three years with a 12-run sixth.

Owen, in his third game since being acquired by Boston from Seattle, tied the modern major-league record with his six runs. The last time it happened was 1957 by Frank Torre of the Milwaukee Braves.

"I can't score unless the guys behind me pick me up," said Owen, who had a solo homer among his four hits. "My feet are a little sore. I did a whole lot of running, but it was well worth it."

Other offensive stars for the Red Sox included Bill Buckner, with five hits, and Tony Armas, with six RBI on two homers — including a grand slam in the 12-run inning. The Red Sox scored the most runs by an AL team since the Angels scored 24 times against the Toronto Blue Jays on Aug. 25, 1979. It was the most runs by one team in a major-league game since Philadelphia beat the New York Mets 26-7 on June 11,

NFL's enthusiasm for replay officiating not dampened

By JONATHAN VITTI
AP Sports Writer
Last Saturday's failure has not dampened the NFL's enthusiasm for instant-replay officiating.

Not all the equipment was there and what was there didn't work, said the league's director of broadcasting, Val Pinchbeck.

It was the first attempt made this season to change an NFL official's call under an experimental rule. It was not the first attempt ever, though — one was changed successfully in last year's preseason, when the rule was being tested.

Los Angeles Raiders receiver Dokie Williams was ruled to have caught a pass in Saturday's nationally televised game against the Dallas Cowboys before falling out of bounds. The replay showed the ball was knocked loose before Williams fell. But the umpire couldn't feel his belt shaking.

It is called a paging device or a beeper, but the contraption worn by the umpire — the only one of the officials who wears it — announces the change in a different way. In theory, at least.

"What it is ... we call it the zapper," Pinchbeck said. "Some of the manufacturers call it the vibrator. We didn't like that term."

That's right — it shakes. "You obviously can't put a light on the umpire, he wouldn't see it, you can't put a bell on him, he wouldn't hear it," Pinchbeck said.

"So it's on his belt and he can feel it vibrating. And then he's got a walkie-talkie and he just picks it up. I've been at games the last three weeks and it works fine and you've got him in two seconds." But not this time. "Apparently the paging device malfunctioned a number of different ways," said Pinchbeck, adding that other tests of the device experienced difficulty.

"There were times when the official couldn't realize when he was being paged. There were also a few times when it off without the people upstairs supposedly using it," he said.

The umpire could not be vibrated to attention at the right time so play went on, making a change impossible. The "completion" was a key one in Los Angeles touchdown drive.

In a real game, Pinchbeck said, it wouldn't have happened. There was a backup missing on Saturday.

"Let's say this same thing were to happen three weeks from now in a regular-season game," Pinchbeck said. "As soon as the paging device didn't work, you'd pick up the phone to the guy on the sidelines and tell him to hold it up."

There was no phone to pick up last week, and no sideline guy to stop play.

It was called a foul-up and a failure, but the lack of communication did not introduce an officiating error, did not make the situation worse than that without the rule. There was simply a missed opportunity to fix a mistake.

While the NFL is not promising the system will catch all or even most officiating mistakes, Pinchbeck said this sort of technical miss shouldn't recur.

"You've got to get the bugs out of something, which is why we're doing it in the preseason, why we're going to do it at all games the next two weekends," he said.

Tattooist takes pride in his craft

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Inside the shop a hefty, bald man with a bushy beard sat at a picnic table that almost filled the small room. There was just enough room for a huge motorcycle and an 11-foot python, which slithered about in a glass cage.

The ambience would fit nicely into a Hollywood script calling for a tattoo parlor. But the stereotype didn't advance much further. Unlike Hollywood images, this 33-year-old tattoo artist was a husband, a father, and a man proud of his artistic talents.

"If someone comes in here really drunk, I won't fool with them," Mike Gill said. "They won't stand still and they get 'skin slip,' so it's hard to put the ink into them."

Concrete reasons for etching an indelible image on the skin are hard to come by. "Why not?" Gill responded, drawing a parallel between tattooing and ice cream. "It's one of those things you either love or hate, but once you do it, you fall in love."

Most people don't stop with one, he added, although there are some notable exceptions. Winston Churchill's mother, for instance, sported a tattoo on her wrist, and Barry Goldwater has one on his left hand. Rumor has it that Cher once showed hers on the David Letterman show, so presumably its location isn't too secretive.

Women constitute the majority of business at the Island Tattoo Studio, Gill said. Butterflies, roses and unicorns are favorites among females, and such private areas as thighs, breasts and buttocks remain popular. Gill, however, recommends the shoulder, as the skin there is tougher and heals more easily.

Men generally advocate public display of tattoos and frequently sport them on the arms or chest, he continued. The Grim Reaper and their eagles rank among their favorite tattoos, while anything with flowers ranks among the lowest. The infamous "Mom" tattoo has lost popularity since its heyday in the 1940s.

Gill doesn't practice his art in the small room with the snake, but in a large back room, he explained. A barber's chair without arms is comfortable for the customer, yet it allows the artist a full range of motion. The basic tool of the trade is an electric gun with a removable needle, he said. A single needle is used to outline the image, and an eight-pointed needle is used to apply color.

The needles are kept in germicide, which kills everything except the hepatitis germ, Gill said. Before being used the needles are sterilized in a Speedclave machine.

"Don't let anybody kid you. It hurts," he said. "A lot of people say the outlining hurts the most, because after that the area is numb. I say it all hurts."

Women, he added, generally handle the pain better than men.

"I've had soldiers, merchant seaman and motorcycle men pass out on me," Gill said. "Only one woman has asked me to stop, and I've never had a woman pass out."

Pain, though, hasn't altered Gill's love of tattoos. At the age of 18 he counted 50 tattoos on his body. He's since stopped counting.

Gill's first tattoo came at the age of 11, and was a product of his own hand. He became a pro at "hand-sticking," and graduated to the electric gun at age 14.

A small tattoo costs about $25 and takes approximately 15 minutes to complete, Gill said. Larger ones require an hourly charge of $60. Gill specializes in coverups, or etching a new design over an old tattoo, thereby completely changing the image.

There are medical techniques for removing tattoos, but all involve some degree of scarring, said Dr. Edgar B. Smith, dermatologist at the University of Texas Medical Branch.

Tattooing calls for injecting color deep into the skin, thereby changing the pigmentation, Smith said. To remove the tattoo, the pigmented skin must be destroyed or removed.

The newest technology in tattoo removal involves the use of lasers, which burns away the pigmented areas, he said. Perhaps the easiest and surest way of removing the tattoo is by literally cutting away the image and pulling together the skin on either side of the wound, he said.

"It's not like deciding to buy a Cadillac, because someday that will end up in the junkyard," Gill said. "A tattoo will go to the grave with you."

Work is becoming a bigger fact of life in America for husbands and wives. Both spouses work in nearly half of today's married couples — it was so for less than one-third of the marriages two decades ago.

Gospel concert planned

An old fashioned gospel concert will be presented to the public free of charge at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the Hereford Community Center.

Among the performers is Gleema Hudson Langford of Lubbock, who was reared in Hereford. She is currently employed as program director of general psychiatric treatment programs at Charter Plains Hospital in Lubbock.

She has been writing and singing southern style gospel for 20 years and with her husband has held concerts in Texas and Oklahoma. She is a member of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and is currently considering a publishing contract.

DR. GOTT 'Real pharmacy' is a rare art

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I recently read your column about using boric acid for vaginitis. As a compounding pharmacist, I agree with your comments. In fact, I have been making such capsules for eight years. I believe the reason your readers could not find a pharmacist to make the capsules is that many druggists stopped compounding medicines when the public refused to pay for the time and skill involved in the preparation of special products. I make my living as a compounding pharmacist, and as far as I'm concerned, that is "real pharmacy."

DEAR READER — Thank you for your support. I know that it is more of a job for the pharmacist to make something than to measure pills out of a large container into a smaller one. Although most medicine is commercially manufactured and simply distributed by pharmacists, I am heartened to know that there are some of you who still take pride in compounding. I hope it doesn't become a lost art.

DEAR DR. GOTT — A year ago I had a Copper-7 IUD fitted. Since then I've had a thick, white, mucus-like, odorless discharge. My gynecologist isn't worried, but I'm sick of it. Can you offer any advice?

DEAR READER — An intrauterine device (IUD) for contraception can cause a harmless but troublesome vaginal discharge. Most women with IUDs put up with this annoyance because, for a variety of reasons, they prefer this form of birth control. If you are bothered by the discharge, ask your gynecologist to remove the Copper-7 and to discuss with you alternative methods of contraception, such as barrier devices, tubal ligation or vasectomy.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I've never read anything in your column about people shrinking. I'm 69, still do my household chores and walk some, despite arthritis, thyroid problems and high blood pressure. Is it too late to do anything about shrinking?

DEAR READER — As people age, they lose height. This is due to shrinkage of tissue, primarily the supporting structures between the vertebral, hip and leg bones. Also, many patients tend not to stand up straight; this change in posture can give the appearance of shrinking. Finally, the vertebral bones in the elderly tend to lose substance and mass; this causes a foreshortening of the spine. Calcium supplements, a nutritious diet and regular exercise can slow the shortening process, but — to my knowledge — there is no way to prevent it.

House budget cuts summarized for Senate

AUSTIN (AP) — The mother of a disabled child says budget cuts proposed by the House would hurt a program that has kept her 2-year-old son alive.

"You'd be killing a lot of children if you take away the funds," Sandra Murgia told the Senate.

Ms. Murgia, of Austin, testified Thursday at a Senate session called to get a summary of House budget cuts totaling $739.4 million for the 1987 fiscal year.

The proposed reductions are part of the Legislature's response in special session to a projected $3.5 billion budget deficit. Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said he hoped the Senate could vote on its own budget proposals Tuesday.

Ms. Murgia brought her son, Kenny, with her Thursday in telling what the Early Childhood Intervention program had meant to him.

She said Kenny has a chromosome defect that is so rare there are only five known cases in the world.

"Before he started he was a 'vegetable' but as a result of therapy 'he can now sit up on his own, he can roll over, he can play with things, he can vocalize — he can tell me not with words but with actions that he loves me," Ms. Murgia said.

Sen. John Whitmire, D-Houston, said, "Have you not presented for all to see, unequivocally, that there are direct cuts" in human services in the House bill.

Ms. Murgia replied, "Yes ... it cuts services."

"In your opinion, if funds are no longer available for the childhood intervention program, what would happen to Kenny?" Whitmire asked.

"Kenny would be dead," Ms. Murgia replied.

Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, said, "I believe I've figured out what the House has done — it's called a shell game, it's called smoke and mirrors. They have created the illusion that they're not cutting children like Kenny, not affecting direct services, but we know they are."

CAMPAIGN PAYS OFF

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Since the "I Love New York" campaign began marketing the state in 1977, New York's tourism revenue has risen to more than $14.4 billion, up from $6.1 billion in 1977.

Student discipline bill clears Senate

AUSTIN (AP) — In response to educators' pleas, the Senate has approved a bill to put more discipline in the classroom.

Teachers and administrators had complained that the 1984 school reform bill had stripped them of disciplinary power.

The bill approved by the Senate on a 28-0 vote Thursday could speed up the process of getting student troublemakers out of the classroom.

Bill sponsor, Hector Uribe, said under current law students can "effectively avoid any discipline for up to six or seven months."

"This bill would give school districts the opportunity to utilize suspension as a disciplinary tool," Uribe said.

Currently, he said, a student can only be suspended if the student assaults a teacher or is determined to be a "clear and present danger to himself and others."

He said teachers felt "they did not have the power to initiate suspensions against students who are consistently unruly. ... All teacher organizations support this bill."

A major feature of the bill provides for immediate suspension for up to six school days if it is determined that the student's presence at school "presents a danger of physical harm to the student or other individuals" or if the student persists in misbehaving.

Expulsion for over six days is provided if a student at school or a school-related function assaults a teacher; sells, delivers or uses drugs or alcoholic beverages; is found to be under the influence of drugs or alcoholic beverages; or carries weapons.

A Senate amendment specifies that "it is the responsibility of the parent or guardian to provide adequate supervision" for a student who has been expelled or suspended.

Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, tried to place some of the responsibility for supervision on the school district, saying, "I don't want to shut the door on a child or kick him out in the street." His proposed amendment was rejected 25-3.

Methods, motivations radically changed

NEW YORK (AP) — People accustomed to finding ways to shrink their taxable income should start changing their habits.

The landmark tax legislation expected to become law this year marks a retreat from using the federal tax code for social and economic engineering. So it offers few credits and deductions aimed at enticing taxpayers to pay for goals deemed appropriate for the public good.

Methods some taxpayers have used to create losses and thereby shield income would be abolished. Congressional reformers targeted the abusive type of tax shelter that the Internal Revenue Service has been battling for years.

"Master recordings of films, or books, exotic nut plantations, gold mines in New Jersey and orange groves in Alaska. Those things are dead and gone and good riddance," said David A. Berenson, adjunct professor of taxation at New York University.

But less exotic, more productive ways of writing off income also would be wiped out or sharply curtailed.

"Everyone will have to rethink their whole investment strategy," said John L. Norman Jr., national director of the Pannell Kerr Forster accounting firm in Washington. "A lot of traditional tax shelters no longer make sense."

Tax sheltering would be radically transformed because losses from most "passive" pursuits could not be deducted from other income, including salaries, stock dividends and bond interest payments.

The bill defines passive shelters as limited or general partnerships in which the investor does not actively participate in management.

The passive loss provision would go into effect gradually and would be fully phased in by 1991. Starting in 1987, the legislation would permit taxpayers to use 65 percent of the losses they could deduct under current law.

"Shelters, as we've come to know them, will be gone," said James Godbout, a tax partner with the Ernst & Whinney accounting firm in Washington.

What he means is that protecting part of one's salary, or most other income, from Uncle Sam's tax bite would be much more difficult, but perhaps unnecessary, for many people because of a lower tax rate.

The purchase of tax-free municipal bonds would be one of the few shelters left largely unchanged. The ability to tuck dollars into Individual Retirement Accounts to defer taxation would be curbed.

David J. Kautter, director of the national group of the Arthur Young & Co. accounting firm, said a new strategy would be to offset losing passive investments with ones that generate income to neutralize tax liability.

As a consequence of such a strategy, investors might become less willing to put their money in riskier ventures that do not guarantee a cash return.

"I don't think that anybody is going to be going into loss-oriented deals," said Barry Salzberg, a partner in New York with the Deloitte Haskins & Sells national accounting firm.

Real estate has been a popular haven and it is one area to which the passive loss limit most directly applies.

In general, deductions for losses from passive real estate holdings would be allowed up to $25,000. But once adjusted gross income exceeded $100,000, the allowed deduction would be reduced gradually to zero for incomes at $150,000 and above.

Shelters packaged around investments in oil and gas exploration, animal breeding or industrial equipment also have been popular. Investment in some of the more speculative ventures of that sort might dwindle under the new legislation, tax experts said.

One positive byproduct of the upheaval in tax sheltering would be that people will have extra incentive to find economically sound investments, something that most experts have long been counseling, said Mark Brumbaugh, director of tax-oriented financing and investment transactions at the accounting firm of Coopers & Lybrand.

"The wise investor has always looked at the economics," he said.

No-sweat sweater washing at home

DEAR POLLY — I have a new cashmere sweater. Can it be washed at home, or must it be dry-cleaned? — LINDA

DEAR LINDA — If the dyes are colorfast, the cashmere sweater may be washed by hand. Soak the sweater briefly in cold, sudsy water, using a mild detergent made for hand-washables. Squeeze the suds through the fabric; never twist or wring the sweater. Rinse in several changes of cool water until no more suds come out of the cashmere knit. Roll the sweater in a thick towel to remove excess moisture, then lay the sweater out on a towel-covered table to dry. While it's drying, smooth the sweater into the proper size and shape. Handle cashmere gently, as you would any fine wool.

Of course, if you have any doubt as to its washability (such as if the dyes may run in water), it would be safest to have the sweater dry-cleaned. — POLLY
