

Texas rains cause flooding, wrecks

By SUSAN ASCHOFF Associated Press Writer

A steady rain during the morning rush hour was blamed for a bus wreck that injured at least 19 people in Dallas today as sections of North Texas remained under a flash flood watch due to heavy downpours over the holiday weekend.

In the West Texas town of Big Spring, city officials were still trying to assess the damage caused by more than 5 inches of rain in two hours over the Labor Day holiday.

Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport reported 1.87 inches of rain over a 24-hour period through Monday, breaking the previous record of 1.69 inches set in 1927.

Light rain was expected to continue over the area, with 2 inches or more predicted by early today.

The flash flood watch, which included the Dallas-Fort Worth area, Sherman, Greenville and surrounding areas, was finally lifted about 9 p.m. Monday. The National Weather Service predicted totals exceeding 5 inches for some areas by today.

A Dallas Area Rapid Transit bus crashed into a bridge abutment during this morning's rain, injuring 19 people, hospital and paramedic spokesmen said. Dallas police spokesman Hollis Edwards said the bus was on a thoroughfare headed toward downtown when it slammed into the concrete abutment.

Nine people, ranging in age from 23 to 61 and mostly from the suburb of Addison, were treated at Parkland Memorial Hospital where their conditions were described as fair to serious, said spokeswoman Catherine Ellis.

She said Parkland had sent an emergency team to the scene to help treat the bus driver who was trapped in the bus for more than an hour before he was freed by fire department paramedics.

Nine others were treated for minor injuries at St. Paul Medical Center, said spokeswoman Pam Reaves.

In West Texas, rainfall amounts ranged from one-half to 4 inches and several roads were closed due to rising water.

A sheriff's department dispatcher in Kimble County, southeast of San Angelo, reported State Highway 377 south from Junction to Rocksprings washed out in several places. Law enforcement officers also monitored the roadways between Junction and Menard, where a Department of Public Safety trooper reported water running over U.S. Highway 83.

In Guadalupe County east of San Antonio, the sheriff's department reported wind damage to buildings at Marion and a motorist on Farm-to-Market 1044 reported marble-size hail at about 8 p.m.

No serious damage or injuries were found.

But Big Spring, in West Texas, appeared to be hard hit by the weekend rains.

A five-hour downpour Saturday night was blamed for one fatality, a seven-foot breach in the Comanche Trail Dam and several damaged roads.

"At this point we are still trying to evaluate or put a dollar value on what our damage (will) be," said Big Spring Mayor A.C. "Cotton" Mize on Monday.

"We are going to file (for declaration as a disaster area)," he said.

"The water receded about as fast as it came up and that's really a plus factor," Mize said. "The water didn't stand in the homes long. So hopefully it won't have ruined all the furniture."

The storm's fatality, Mary Sosa Gutierrez, 44, of Big Spring, was found about 7 a.m. Sunday — eight hours after she was swept away by floodwaters.

The family's truck was stranded on a bridge about 11:15 p.m. Saturday. Her husband and child clung to a tree, but she was swept away in the strong current, officials said.

Water running over the dam at Comanche Trail Park Lake flooded U.S. Highway 87, and a breach in the earthen dam forced an evacuation of more than 40 families Saturday night, said Tom Decell, city public works director.

Workers were assessing damage to the dam under mostly clear skies Sunday and Monday, he said. Highway 87 was reopened Sunday.

A Real Wet Picnic

Come whatever or high water, Jerry Brock was going to have a picnic. Labor Day Weekend brought almost 4 1/2 inches of rainfall to Hereford causing flooding to some areas of the city. Areas around the city pool, the golf course, and East 15th Street gathered most of the city's drainage and fields west of town resembled lakes. (Brand Photo by Mauri Montgomery)

Holiday traffic toll exceeds estimate

By The Associated Press

At least 44 people had died in Texas traffic accidents, exceeding state officials' predictions for the Labor Day holiday weekend.

Earlier, the Department of Public Safety warned that the final death count could top the original prediction of 43 deaths for the 78-hour period ended at midnight Monday.

Traffic accidents killed 52 people over the Labor Day weekend last year in Texas.

"We're going to have a high volume of return traffic and the possibility of inclement weather makes it likely we will exceed the estimate," said DPS spokesman David Wells Monday as rains blanketed much of Texas.

Two people were killed about noon Monday when their car flipped twice and struck a rock fence in Balch Springs. Linda Hicks, 24, of Balch Springs, and Gayla Hale, 16, of Dallas died in the crash, Wells said. Two other persons were injured.

In the worst single crash of the weekend, six people died when their car flipped over in a canal in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

According to Mercedes police, a 1977 Mercury carrying six people failed to negotiate a curve on Farm to Market Road 491 in the South Texas town, struck a cement railing and came to rest upside down in the water-filled canal about 10:45 p.m. Saturday.

The victims were identified as the 15-year-old driver, Amy Ramon, Santiago Vasquez, 21, Mary Rodriguez, 15, Sylvia Rodriguez, 16, Florinda Garcia, 18, all of Santa Rosa; and Guadalupe Saldana, 24, of Corpus Christi.

Three Austin teen-agers died Saturday night when their car was hit by a pickup and cut in two on U.S. Highway 290 in Austin, the DPS said.

A 44-year-old woman died late Saturday when high waters washed her family's pickup off a bridge in Big Spring. The body of Mary Gutierrez was found Sunday morning, about 300 yards from the bridge, police said.

Hospital hearing tonight

A public hearing on a proposal to raise the tax rate of the Deaf Smith County Hospital District will be at 7 p.m. today in the Hereford Community Center.

Last week the board of directors voted to raise the rate from 9 cents per $100 valuation to 12.5 cents. The hospital proposes a budget of approximately $6 million, of which about 8 percent is from tax revenues.

Soviet ship sinks in Black Sea

MOSCOW (AP) — Divers, helicopters and ships today scoured Black Sea waters for survivors of the collision between a freighter and a cruise ship that sank with 1,230 people aboard, a Soviet official said.

Foreign radio monitors said they did not hear a distress signal after the 61-year-old Soviet passenger liner, the Admiral Nakhimov, and the Soviet freighter collided Sunday night.

The official news agency Tass said Monday without further detail that there was "loss of life" in the collision and that help was being given to the injured.

Igor M. Averin, a spokesman at the Ministry of the Merchant Marine, told The Associated Press by telephone that he did not yet know how many people were killed or injured. There were 884 passengers and 346 crew aboard the Admiral Nakhimov when it sank, Averin said. All were Soviets, he added.

He said he did not know how many crew members were aboard the freighter.

Weather conditions were calm when the collision occurred eight nautical miles off Novorossiysk, he said.

Averin said he did not know how quickly the ship sank, or what danger there was for passengers who had already retired to their cabins for the night.

Asked whether the crew of the freighter or the passenger ship was considered to have caused the collision, Averin said a government commission headed by Politburo member and First Deputy Premier Geidar A. Aliev was in Novorossiysk to investigate.

"Usually a collision at sea is a result of a clash of opinions between two people, just like in a marriage," Averin said. "In a marriage you can't find a single person guilty, like at sea."

Averin said civilian and military helicopters, divers and other vessels were involved in continuing rescue operations to try and find survivors. He did not specify how many people were involved in the rescue operation.

The choice of a senior Soviet official like Aliyev to conduct the government inquiry indicated the accident could be extremely serious.

Two permits worth $20,000 were issued during the month of August, one for residential additions and the other for the construction of a garage.

Rains timed well for beets

Heavy rainfall during the weekend was timed well for the sugar beets, according to Holly Sugar ag manager Dennis Printz.

Thunderstorms dumped as much as 3 1/2 inches in some parts of Deaf Smith County, with heaviest reports in the central and west parts of the county.

Printz said the rain will take a lot of pressure off irrigation and should boost some growth before controlled harvest.

Printz said that farmers hope the fields dry in time for the early harvest which begins Sept. 18.

Other crops, too, according to John Fuston of the ASCS office, will need some drying out following the rain.

AIDS hospital opens today

HOUSTON (AP) — The nation's first hospital devoted totally to the treatment and research of AIDS is scheduled to open its doors to patients today, officials said.

"What I hope people realize, the objective of this hospital is to try to find answers. It's a research institute," said Dr. Peter Mansell, the hospital's medical director who also has headed the AIDS research program at the M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute.

The 137-member staff at the Institute for Immunological Disorders has undergone special training to help patients with AIDS, as well as their families and friends. The hospital will be able to accommodate 150 patients.

Officials at the facility don't know when the first patient will be admitted, but about 50 outpatients will be taking part in a continuing study when the institute opens.

Joseph Stanley will be one of those outpatients. He will go through a routine monitoring just as he has every few weeks since joining the study in May.

Stanley, 29, doesn't have acquired immune deficiency syndrome and has not shown any symptoms of the disease, but has tested positive for carrying the AIDS virus. He's part of an experimental study of the anti-viral drug zalcitabine.

"I do not have the disease," Stanley said. "I am symptom-free. The virus is in my body, but it's not active ... This was my contribution to the AIDS crisis."

Summit planning continues

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — The Reagan administration says it will press ahead with planning for a superpower summit despite U.S. unhappiness over the arrest of an American journalist in Moscow.

"Things seem to get done in periods leading up to a summit and we think it's important that we meet," White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said Monday.

At the same time, Speakes said Reagan was angry over the arrest of the reporter, Nicholas Daniloff, correspondent for U.S. News & World Report.

"I think the president is clearly disturbed and concerned and has asked officials in the administration to do everything possible to secure (Daniloff's) immediate release," Speakes said.

Daniloff, 52, was apprehended Saturday for what the KGB said was an act of espionage. The reporter told his wife he was jumped by eight KGB agents when a Soviet acquaintance handed him a package that turned out to contain two maps marked "top secret."

The United States has rejected the charges and demanded Daniloff's immediate release.

The Washington Post, in today's editions, quoted a spokesman for the Soviet Foreign Ministry, Gennadi Gerasimov, as saying Daniloff would be put on trial for espionage after the investigation is completed. The spokesman also linked the case to the arrest of a Soviet official in New York last month on spy charges, the newspaper said.

Deaver presents B-1 documents

WASHINGTON (AP) — Challenging allegations that he lied to a House subcommittee, lobbyist Michael K. Deaver has compiled documents that may support his contention he testified truthfully about efforts to sell the B-1 bomber.

The former presidential aide is using the documents in an attempt to convince an independent counsel that part of a subcommittee staff report — which accuses him of lying under oath — is inaccurate.

The documents were turned over to the court-appointed counsel, Whitney North Seymour Jr., and made available to The Associated Press by Deaver attorney Randall J. Turk.

At issue is whether Deaver told the subcommittee the truth by testifying he informed his client, Rockwell International, that he planned to lobby the director of the Office of Management and Budget for more sales of Rockwell's B-1.

The House Energy and Commerce investigations subcommittee voted 17-0 on Aug. 12 to adopt the staff report, which said Rockwell officials told the panel Deaver never informed them about his plans.

Deaver's documents consist of notes and a memo from three meetings between Deaver and Rockwell officials prior to the lobbyist's meeting with the OMB director, James Miller III.

The documents indicate that either the OMB or Miller was mentioned each time.

Drivers oppose speed limit change

NEW YORK (AP) — A majority of Americans oppose raising the 55 mph speed limit, although most drivers admit to frequently ignoring it, according to a Media General-Associated Press poll.

In the nationwide telephone poll of 1,365 adults, 85 percent said they had exceeded the federally-mandated limit, and 56 percent of them said they did so at least half of the time.

But 54 percent of the respondents opposed changing the speed limit, while 44 percent wanted it raised, and 1 percent wanted it lowered. One percent wasn't sure.

Most of those who wanted an increase said 65 mph would be ideal.

Not surprisingly, slower drivers were more likely than faster drivers to oppose changing the highway speed limit. Eight in 10 of those who rarely exceeded 55 mph opposed a change, while the speeders were evenly split on the issue.

In the West, where 55 mph can feel like a crawl along empty stretches of endless highway, a 56 percent majority favored increasing the speed limit. Only 35 percent of Easterners, 39 percent of Midwesterners and 47 percent of Southerners favored an increase.

The 55 mph speed limit was imposed by Congress in 1974 as a fuel conservation measure following the Middle East oil embargo. But with gasoline supplies plentiful and prices low, there has been an increased effort to have it repealed.

Earlier this month, President Reagan endorsed in principle the repeal of the nation's 55 mph speed limit to allow states to set their own speed laws. The issue is politically important in the West, where seven Republican senators are seeking re-election in November. The AP-Media General poll was conducted before the President's position was announced.

If states don't adequately enforce the speed limit, they risk losing part of their federal highway funds. The government checks compliance, and states where more than 50 percent of drivers exceed the limit could lose highway money.

Respondents in the Media General-Associated Press poll included a random, scientific sampling of 1,365 adults across the country June 20-28. As with all sample surveys, the results of Media General-AP telephone polls can vary from the opinions of all Americans because of chance variation in the sample.

For a poll based on about 1,300 interviews, the results are subject to an error margin of 3 percentage points either way because of chance variations in the sample.

Reporter's boss met with Kremlin

MOSCOW (AP) — The chairman of the American news magazine whose Moscow correspondent has been jailed on accusations of spying met today with senior Kremlin adviser Georgy Arbatov to press for the journalist's release.

Mortimer B. Zuckerman of U.S. News & World Report met with Arbatov, who heads the U.S.A.-Canada Institute, a Kremlin think tank, at Arbatov's offices in central Moscow.

Arbatov, who is also a member of the Communist Party Central Committee, emerged from the building after the meeting. When asked by a Western reporter if he had explained to Zuckerman why Nicholas Daniloff had been arrested Saturday by the KGB, answered, "It's none of my business."

Daniloff, 52, has told his wife that he was jumped by eight KGB agents after meeting a Soviet acquaintance who gave him a package later found to contain two maps marked "top secret" and photographs of Soviet military installations.

His wife, Ruth, said he told her that KGB photographers were present at his arrest and also when the package was opened at east Moscow's Lefortovo Prison where he is being held.

Arbatov declined to say whether the Central Committee had been consulted about Daniloff's detention and explained his meeting with Zuckerman by saying, "He's an old friend, he came to visit."

Arriving in Moscow on Monday, Zuckerman said he also was seeking audiences with top Soviet government officials on Daniloff's detention, which he branded "a phony arrest based on contrived circumstances."

Daniloff has been in Moscow 5 1/2 years and was to leave this week on a monthlong trip retracing the steps of a Russian ancestor jailed in Siberia in 1825. He then was to return to the United States for reassignment.

His 16-year-old son Caleb arrived at the institute midway through the meeting with a telex for Zuckerman.

Jeff Trimble, who arrived Aug. 22 as Daniloff's replacement, said the telex detailed measures being taken in Washington to win Daniloff's release, but declined to give further details.

Mrs. Daniloff and Caleb spent an hour with Daniloff on Monday and told reporters outside the prison that the Soviets plan on keeping him in jail for a 10-day investigation before deciding whether to release him or charge him with spying.

She called the investigation "a complete farce" and said she feared her husband would be put on trial.

The Washington Post, in today's editions, quoted a spokesman for the Soviet Foreign Ministry, Gennadi Gerasimov, as saying Daniloff would be tried for espionage after the investigation is completed.

Daniloff has suggested through his wife that his detention is the Soviet response to the Aug. 23 arrest in New York of Gennadi F. Zakharov, a Soviet United Nations' employee charged with trying to buy U.S. secrets.

Zakharov, who has no diplomatic immunity, is being held without bail.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Peter Martinez declined comment on the Post report.

manager David Clark said the Red Cross had been providing meals to victims since early Sunday.

Mize said flood waters damaged 100 to 150 cars at a car dealer, and an estimated 70 homes suffered water damage with levels rising to 3 to 4 feet indoors.

Geraline Averitt, leaning against a dripping mop outside her flooded home Sunday afternoon as she tried to sop up more than 2 inches of water and red mud, said she was making slow progress.

"I've already vacuumed it out twice, and the carpet is still pretty squishy," the Big Spring resident said.

Rainfall totals between 1 and 2 inches were common over parts of northeast and north Central Texas Monday. Some of the heaviest rainfall amounts included over 2 inches at Cresson, 1.7 inches at Aledo, 1.6 inches at Euless and 1.8 inches at North Richland Hills.

In West Texas, Winters recorded 1.8 inches, Ballinger had 1.5, Mason measured 1.30 inches, Del Rio reported an inch, and Brady, Kerrville and Lampasas each had about a half-inch.

Highway 381 between Lowake and Vancouver was closed temporarily due to high waters washing over the roadways, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Farm-to-Market Road 2288 also was closed for a short time Monday morning due to water flooding over the bridge at Dove Creek. Both roadways had been re-opened by Monday afternoon, but residents reported large masses of debris accumulated from the flooding.

Other street flooding occurred in Muleshoe and Plainview early Sunday but no injuries or serious damage were reported, authorities said.

Lauber said he had no indication if the heart attack could have led to the collision.

Controller distracted

CERRITOS, Calif. (AP) — The air traffic controller guiding a jetliner when it collided with a private plane, killing at least 67 people, was apparently distracted by a third craft nearby, officials said.

In addition, the pilot of the small plane in the crash suffered a heart attack moments before the disaster, the coroner's office said.

The air traffic controller will take a drug test today "not because there was any indication (drugs) are involved, but as a matter of routine," John Lauber, a National Transportation Safety Board investigator, said Monday.

"It is a fact that (the third craft) took the attention of the controller during the time he was dealing with Aeromexico," Lauber said.

When the controller returned to deal with the Aeromexico DC-9, he got no response.

Sunday's crash in the Los Angeles suburb of Cerritos was the worst U.S. air tragedy since 137 people were killed Aug. 2, 1985, when a Delta Airlines L-1011 TriStar crashed while landing at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

The death toll early today included 64 people aboard the jet and three aboard the Piper Archer, and officials were trying to determine if any of the bodies strewn about the suburban neighborhood were residents killed by debris. Fifteen people were listed as missing, said Red Cross spokesman Stan Schwartz.

The Los Angeles Times reported today that the death toll climbed to 85, including 18 people recovered from two houses, but authorities would not confirm that figure.

The Piper's pilot suffered a heart attack moments before the collision, Bill Gold, a spokesman for the Los Angeles County Coroner's Office, said Monday.

Don't leave children alone in cars

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is for the lady in the video rental store.

Dear Luck: I almost stole your baby today. I'm not a kidnapper. My husband makes more than $100,000 a year. I have two gorgeous children of my own and I don't want any more. But my sister can't have any kids and has been waiting to adopt for three years. I almost opened the car door and took your little boy.

I thought you were returning some rented tapes but I was wrong. You stayed 15 minutes and bought several movies. I walked out a minute ahead of you and heard your precious child screaming at the top of his lungs. His hair was set with perspiration.

I had no intentions of taking him, but it would have been easy. I hope you read this and realize how lucky you are that I am a nice, harmless person. There are a lot of kooks out there and I might have been one of them.—MEMPHIS MAMA

DEAR MAMA: I hope every mother who has ever left her child alone in the car for "a few minutes" will read your letter and vow that she has done it for the last time. Thanks for the wake-up call.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 43-year-old widow with a 19-year-old son, Paul, who is a sophomore in college. Marie, a friend of my mother's, is financing his education. She is in her early 60s and lives near a small private college in Indiana. Paul stays in her spare room, has meals there and gets paid to do odd jobs on her rental properties. He couldn't attend college if it weren't for Marie's generosity.

I recently discovered that one of the "odd jobs" Paul does is in Marie's bed. It makes me sick to think my son is carrying on with a woman his grandmother's age.

I went to my minister about this. He was not the least bit critical. In fact, he showed me an essay written by Benjamin Franklin in praise of intimate relationships between young men and older women.

I think Paul should quit college if this is the only way he can get through. My mother says the minister is right and I should "look the other way." What is your opinion?—DISGUSTED IN INDIANA

DEAR D.: Tell Paul how you feel about this odd liaison, but don't be surprised if nothing changes. Marie is apparently pleased with the arrangement and your son must think it's OK or he wouldn't be there.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We are having what you call a "four-door" family fight. Please settle it.

Our neighbors have a pet ferret. It is so cuddly and cute. Our cat disappeared last week and our 11-year-old son wants a ferret. I've heard they can be dangerous. True or false?—PALO ALSO

DEAR PALO: The American Veterinarian Medical Association says ferrets are wild animals and have been known to attack children and inflict serious injuries. Get another cat.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please tell your readers not to take a plane trip the same day they have dental surgery. My dentist didn't warn me and my mouth ached for hours. Wise up your readers, Ann. I wish I'd know.—AUSTIN, TX.

DEAR AUSTIN: My dentist, Dr. Jordan Block, says it is OK to travel by plane after routine dental work, but after some types of oral surgery and root canal therapy, there may be tissue inflammation that could lead to post-operative discomfort following a rapid change of pressure. So, as you pointed out, it is wise to keep this in mind when planning air travel.

Double-ring ceremony conducted

Wedding vows were exchanged by Lenora Jeanne Hancock and Rick Bowie Jackson in a double-ring ceremony Aug. 11. The ceremony was performed by Judge Cliff Roberts in the Potter County Courthouse.

The bride is the daughter of Wayne and Oletta Hancock of Clovis, N.M. and the bridegroom is the son of Oral Jackson of Hereford. The bride wore a sleeveless white street-length dress with gold accessories. In carrying out bride tradition, she wore a gold brooch with inlaid pearls that once belonged to her great-grandmother, Marie McDaniel, as something old. The brooch was borrowed from the bride's mother. Her dress served as something new and she wore a blue bracelet. Taped to her shoes were pennies of the couple's birth dates.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the bride's home in Hereford. Cindy Jackson, the groom's sister, served cake and Margie Jackson, also a sister of the groom, served punch.

The bride is employed as a teacher by the Hereford Independent School District. The groom is an employee of Kentucky Fried Chicken and is attending West Texas University majoring in wildlife management.

After a wedding trip to points of interest in Colorado Springs, Colo., Yellowstone National Park, Idaho, Utah and New Mexico, Mr. and Mrs. Rick Jackson will make their home in Hereford.

POLLY'S POINTERS

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — Do you have a recipe to make oat flour to be used in breads and other baked goods? There does not seem to be any on the market. — FLORENCE

DEAR FLORENCE — You may be able to find oat flour in some health-food stores, but it's easy to make your own. Just whirl rolled oats (either the old-fashioned or quick-cooking style) in the blender or food processor until reduced to a fine flour. Nothing to it! — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — For children and for parties when you are serving ice-cream cones, try putting six to eight miniature marshmallows in the bottom of the cone. Then put in the ice cream. The marshmallows prevent soggy, dripping cone bottoms. Also, it is an added treat for the guests or children to discover the marshmallows. Of course, you can add more marshmallows in a middle layer and on the top of the ice cream if you like. — ALICE

DEAR ALICE — It's like an upside-down marshmallow sundae!

Americans observe healthier lifestyle

People's dietary habits have come full cycle since earlier times when eating unrefined foods was stressed for good health, a nutritionist says.

Americans' eating habits strayed from the basic facets of good nutrition with the onset of modern technology and its ways of making food more convenient, according to Professor Clara M. McPherson of Texas Tech University. But consumers at least have become more health conscious in recent years and are returning to eating patterns that are better for them.

McPherson, who is retiring after 22 years of service to the Department of Food and Nutrition, said her field has played a part in that change and will continue to be even more important in the area of research.

"We've come a complete cycle," she said. "We see more whole grains and fiber now—something that was stressed in the early 1900s. Now we're coming back to the scientific reason why we have to have these things and why we see more people exercising and getting away from stress."

Technology allowed people to get away from basic foods in favor of dishes that are faster and easier to prepare, McPherson said. Food became more refined and contained more fat and sugar.

But with government programs and the adoption of national dietary goals, along with increased publicity and awareness of nutritional needs, the public is coming back to a healthier lifestyle.

"Nutrition is the health of the nation and the way its people function," McPherson said. "We already know, for instance, that the nation's children don't function in the school system properly without adequate nutrition."

Even fast food producers are making changes as consumers and nutritionists needle them for dietary information about their products, McPherson said.

"When we keep bombarding them with the facts and keep making people aware, then processors and producers begin to change things," she said. "Major food manufacturers are now sending biochemists to nutrition meetings."

The only way to change what people are eating, she said, is to change what is available.

"We still have people who do not eat enough fruits and vegetables, but this is something that has to be taught to children and it has to be taught at home," McPherson said. "This is increasing as more parents become aware of nutritional needs. It may take a generation to change things, but they will change."

With all its emphasis on the physical, however, America is by no means a leader in the world of sound eating habits, McPherson said. Germany, England, China and Japan all are very health conscious.

McPherson said the diversity of ethnic groups in the United States accounts for the inability to get the word of good nutrition to the entire population.

"The American Dietetic Association has more than 50,000 members," she said, "but because the United States is so large and has such a variety of ethnic backgrounds, it's hard to reach everyone."

McPherson noted that in New Zealand, where the largest minority population is the aborigines, that group experienced more hypertension as their eating habits became more westernized.

"They would have been better off if they had retained their old eating habits, but that's hard to do with what is available," she said. "It almost takes a highly educated person just to make selections from the supermarket."

The teams played a low-ball care on Saturday, then played a scramble on Sunday and Monday. There were various prizes each day for closest-to-the-pin shots, longest drives, and other classifications.

Fred Cook of Friona scored a hole-in-one on the first day of play on hole No. 3 and won a watch from Cowan Jewelers. Whiteface Ford offered a new van for a hole-in-one on No. 14, but no one was lucky enough to win the big prize.

The team of Steve Nieman and Arthur Clark won a "freeze-out derby" which was played Sunday afternoon.

Dave Smith gets 28th save

By JOE MOOSHL
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Houston Manager Hal Lanier doesn't think his relief ace, Dave Smith, gets enough credit.

"All you hear is about other people," said Lanier on Monday after Smith closed the door on the Chicago Cubs in the ninth inning of a 6-4 victory.

"But day in and day out, and time in and time out, Dave Smith is as good a relief pitcher as there is in baseball," said Lanier.

The Astros held a 6-3 lead going into the ninth inning when Charlie Kerfeld, working in relief of winner Danny Darwin, 1-1, walked the first two batters and had a 2-1 count on Ryne Sandberg.

Lanier called on Smith, who completed the walk charged to Kerfeld. Then he struck out Gary Matthews and got Keith Moreland on an infield pop for two outs.

While working on Leon Durham, who earlier had hit his 14th homer, catcher Alan Ashby was charged with a passed ball, with one run scoring and the tying runs moving into scoring position.

Unruffled, Smith got Durham to pop up to end the game and register his career high 28th save.

Smith said he had no intention of giving Sandberg anything good to hit.

"I wasn't going to let him hit it out of the park," said Smith. "I'd rather have the bases loaded. There would be a play at the plate and any combination of a double play."

Smith gave credit to the shadows that had lengthened across the plate in Wrigley Field.

"The shadows helped," he said. "They make it difficult for the hitter to tell the difference between a fast ball and a fork ball."

"I felt good all year except for a little slump when I had some bruised ribs," said the 31-year-old rightlander, in his seventh season with the Astros.

Denny Walling described the Astros' three losses in the previous five games as "shabby and ugly."

"Today we played good — Astros' type of baseball. We came from behind the way we had been doing the first five months of the season," he said.

The Cubs had taken a 2-0 lead in the fifth on a sacrifice fly by Sandberg and a run-scoring single by Moreland.

Houston's Billy Hatcher opened the sixth with a single to extend his hitting streak to 11 games and Craig Reynolds walked.

Walling then doubled to the right-field corner to tie the game and scored the lead run on a sacrifice fly by Kevin Bass. Jose Cruz capped the rally off loser Ed Lynch, 4-4, with his sixth homer.

The Astros wrapped it up with two more runs in the eighth on a run-scoring double by Bass, who scored on a single by Ashby.

The loss eliminated the Cubs in the National League East as they fell 33 games behind the New York Mets with 31 to play.

"So today was the day" said Cubs Manager Gene Michael. "Well, we can start playing some of the kids."

"It's not like that we're 10 or 11 games out," said Michael. "We've proved we're not that good."

The Cubs called five players up from Iowa. They were outfielders Brian Dayett, Dave Martinez and Chico Walker and pitchers Greg Maddux and Guy Hoffman.

Maintain 3½-game lead over Toronto

Red Sox salvage win over Rangers 6-4

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Marty Barrett, the Boston Red Sox' tough little second baseman, had just gone 0-for-5, even hitting into a double play with the bases loaded.

But Barrett had an impish grin Monday night after the Red Sox survived four Texas homers for a 6-4 victory over the Rangers.

"We kept pace with them, didn't we — even though no thanks to me," Barrett said with a wink as he made his way through a crowded clubhouse to his locker. "That's all that counts, winning. No one can do anything as long as we win."

For the most part, the Red Sox insist they're playing "one game at a time" and not worrying about what the surging Toronto Blue Jays or other American League East rivals are doing.

It's just a party line. They knew when they took the field against Texas that Toronto had beaten Cleveland 5-4 in the afternoon. With a ninth consecutive victory, the Blue Jays had put pressure on Boston once again.

However, after southpaw Bruce Hurst surrendered solo homers to rookie Pete Incaviglia, his 21st, and Larry Parrish, his 22nd, the Red Sox bounced back to preserve their 3½-game lead over Toronto.

Veteran slugger Tony Armas, the major league's 1984 home run and RBI champion, continued his comeback from a miserable first half. He put the Red Sox in front to stay with a three-run double with two out in the third and then paved the way to the sixth run with another double in the seventh.

"I'm swinging the bat pretty good again, and at a good time," Armas said. "We have to win games now and I want to do my part."

With Texas trying to overtake California in the AL West, the victory over the Rangers didn't come easy.

The Red Sox had runners thrown out at the plate in each of the first two innings and third base coach Rene Lachemann heard plenty of boos for his part.

The Rangers came up with a couple of nifty plays in the field. And Bill Buckner was thrown out at third trying to stretch a double just before Jim Rice hit his 14th homer with none out in the seventh.

Veteran Steve Crawford, making his first appearance since being disabled by arm trouble on July 18, bailed out Hurst with runners on first and second and none out in a 4-2 game in the top of the seventh. With two more runs to work on, Crawford breezed through the eighth, although Dave Henderson had to range near the 420-foot mark to grab Parrish's long fly.

Crawford retired the first two batters in the ninth. Then he kind of ran out the clock—like in football.

Odibe McDowell hit a pinch homer, his 17th, into the Boston bullpen in right-center and Darrell Porter lined another pinch shot into the Texas bullpen in right. The pinch homers tied the major league record for the most in a game, done 10 times, and for consecutive pinch homers, 6 times.

"A lot of balls were hit hard by both teams, but we won the game and that's all that counts," said Rice, who also set up a run with a single in the fifth despite a stiff neck.

"With a 6-2 lead, two out in the ninth and nobody on base, we were going right at them," catcher Rich Gedman said. "So what if they hit two homers in such a situation? They still had to hit two more to just tie."

"With a four-run lead in the ninth, I had to go with my best stuff, my fast ball—or try to," Crawford said with a grin. "A home run with nobody on still counts for just one run. We were in pretty good shape."

Texas Manager Bobby Valentine had little to say about the game or the pennant race. He was too angry over the umpiring. Valentine particularly objected to plate umpire Steve Palermo "yelling at my pitcher" when action slowed in the Boston sixth and to Gedman breaking up a possible double play with a "non-slide" as Boston scored its last run in the seventh.

The Red Sox send right-hander Al Nipper, 8-9, to the mound tonight. The Rangers, who trail California by 5½ games, plan to counter with right-hander Jose Guzman, 9-12.

REGGIE HELPS
CINCINNATI (AP) — Reggie Williams knows what it's like to need help and that's why he gives so much of it during the pro football off-season. Williams is a veteran of 11 years of playing linebacker for the Cincinnati Bengals.

Williams had a hearing problem as a child and was sent to the Michigan School for the Deaf. "I remember the volunteers who worked with me," he said. "I don't remember their names but I do recall their faces. I appreciated it and that's why I'm involved in volunteer work myself."

Williams works with several organizations, including the Cincinnati Speech and Hearing Center.

Team handball, an Olympic sport since 1972, is contested on a large court with seven men on a side. It has elements of soccer and basketball.

Eddie Gaedel was 43 inches tall—the smallest player in major league baseball history.

The first black baseball player in the American League was Larry Doby.

U.S. attorney says

Special grand jury needed

DALLAS (AP) — The number of federal drug cases being filed in the Northern District of Texas is growing so heavy a sixth grand jury is needed simply to keep up with the load, U.S. Attorney Marvin Collins said.

"We were and are operating at a high rate of efficiency, but the caseload is such that another special grand jury is needed to handle the increased volume of narcotics cases," Collins said.

Collins, who said drug trafficking was the 100-county area's most serious problem when he took his post 14 months ago, said the number of cases involving drug dealers and users is straining the capacity of the district's current five grand juries.

The additional grand jury, which would deal mostly with drug cases, would be established in October or November, Collins said.

It would give prosecutors an increased ability to take away the two things that keep drug dealers in business — assets and their personal freedom, Collins said.

Under federal law, accused individuals can be jailed without bond if they are considered a danger to the community.

"Drug dealing is one item that creates the presumption of danger to the community," Collins said.

Before the pretrial detention law was passed, major drug violators could be released on bond, permitting some to increase their illegal activities in order to pay their lawyers and stockpile money, Collins said.

"We cannot detain everyone, and many are not deserving of it," he said.

"We tend to use pretrial detention for the big alligators. When the leader is locked up, the rest are like a bunch of alligators and take what is left because the individual in jail is no longer in control."

Plucking hairs causes problems

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I'm getting long hairs in my ears, which makes them feel as if I've got bugs. When I pluck the hairs, the crawling sensation goes away until the hairs come back. Will this plucking injure the ears? Is there something better I can try?

DEAR READER — Plucking ear hairs can cause infections to develop in the pores once inhabited by the hairs. Ask your spouse, your barber or your hairdresser to trim the hairs with scissors.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have what my doctor calls a chronic bronchial cough. I don't smoke, but my husband does. Could this be caused by the hair coloring I use?

DEAR READER — I suspect that your cough is more likely due to the irritation caused by your husband's tobacco smoke than to the hair-coloring material. Ask him to confine his smoking to outdoors or to specific areas that you don't frequent. Your cough may improve.

Sociologists say

There's no man shortage

NEW YORK (AP) — The great American man shortage may not be as bad as some women seem to believe, say sociologists who studied what they call "The Feminization of Loneliness."

They found that there is no shortage of men in the marriage market — only a practice of men marrying, and remarrying, women who are younger than they are, mostly to impress other men, said Ann Swidler of Stanford University.

She was one of six sociologists who presented papers to the American Sociological Association Monday at its annual convention here.

Ms. Swidler said the phenomenon of men being attracted to younger women even affects young women in colleges, where men of all ages compete for freshmen females.

"When a woman gets to be a senior, her phone has just stopped ringing off the hook. Has she suddenly lost her freshness of complexion, her looks, her vitality?" she asked.

The escalating divorce rate worsens the problem, she said, because "men have an enormous range of women to choose from" and often remarry women decades younger. That leads to "devastating consequences for married women," she noted. "Women are worried about keeping their husbands. ... It affects the internal power relationships for both husbands and wives, even in enduring relationships."

The findings dispel the theory that diminishing marriage prospects normally befall "picky women who waited too long," she said.

They also point out that "strong, independent women need love just as much as strong, independent men do," said Ms. Swidler. "It's imperative to tell women that it's not their fault — that they have gotten better (with age) but they've got a bad market situation."

In another paper presented to the convention, University of Southwestern Louisiana sociologists Linda Mooney and Sarah Brabant found that males get less "love" when it comes to birthday cards, and children get less still.

Mooney and Brabant found that more cards for wives, mothers, sisters and other females contain the word "love" than cards intended for males.

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — There is orange paint in Mel Hall's flattop, in the bristles framing his face.

"Makeup," apologizes Hall, fingering the orange stripe. "I guess I didn't get it all out."

No problem. Within the hour, he is on a royal blue folding chair, squinting into a magnifying mirror, smearing a fresh layer of paint onto his softly folded face.

The orange blends right in. The eye-assaulting checkered pants are another story.

"I'm a clown," Hall says. "I can get away with it."

He calls himself Happy the Clown, and he works at the International Wildlife Park.

Twice on weekdays, three times on weekends, he tells dumb jokes and performs silly magic tricks.

Then the 71-year-old climbs on his unicycle.

Seven feet up in the air.

"I have to watch out for bumps," Hall says.

Serious stuff for a senior — except that this clown comes with experience.

He was born in the circus.

"I was born in a Top Wagon, which is what you'd call a Gypsy Wagon, in Kentucky..." says Hall. "My dad, Robert Hall, was a ventriloquist. My mother, Kay, was a contortionist."

Hall learned to ride a unicycle at age 12 when his father lopped two wheels off a tricycle.

"I used cut-off broom stick handles for balance ... until I could get the hang of it," Hall says.

He had lots of practice. His family traveled in a Model T truck — 8 feet by 14 feet — throughout Illinois and Missouri, spending a week in each small town.

At every stop, the Halls sponsored a Popular Lady Contest.

"It was a penny a vote," Hall remembers. "Every time a customer bought something, he bought votes."

Competition often was fierce — to the Halls' benefit. In Depression years, they might make $70 on contest night.

The Popular Lady got a wristwatch, the runner-up got an Indian blanket.

Hall stayed with the family act until he was 20, when he went to South Texas. There, he and a friend performed at nightclubs and the skating rink, "passing the hat" for profits.

"I rode my unicycle and my friend, he was a Golden Gloves boxer," he remembers.

As his act improved, so did Hall's engagements. Soon he was performing in nightclubs throughout the country, amazing audiences on his unicycles — which reached up to 9½ feet in height.

His greatest stunt was riding the unicycle upside down, his hands pushing the pedals, his feet high in the air.

"Upside down — that got a lot of talk," Hall said. "It wasn't as fancy as the quick stuff I did right side up, but upside down is what they talked about when they went home."

Eventually the act made it to Loew's Theater on Broadway in New York City, where he performed his unicycle act in tails, one week each summer, three years in a row.

He worked with Bob Hope, Jimmy Durante and Mickey Rooney and was a featured performer in the movie "Sensations of 1944," starring Eleanor Powell and W.C. Fields.

"I worked with Mickey in Hawaii," says Hall, pulling out a picture of a small guy on a unicycle. "See, that's Mickey on the unicycle. And that's me right next to him."

Soon after filming "Sensations," Hall met his wife, Aurelia, performing in the Pollack Shrine Circus. Two years later, they married and had the first of four children.

It would be the children who upstaged Hall's career.

"As soon as they could walk, I began teaching them how to ride the unicycle," Hall says. "I used the free-enterprise system of bribing. If they practiced, they got on ice cream or got to go swimming."

The bribery paid off. Ervin, the oldest son, mastered the wheel at the age of 2 and was written up in "Ripley's Believe It or Not."

"I got letters from people wanting to know whether it was true," Hall says.

When Ervin was 5, he and his sister, Carmen, 3, and Jimmy, 2 — who also were proficient on the unicycle — went on the road, with mother, Aurelia, as chaperone.

They called themselves the Hall "Whiz Kids."

"They all rode out on their unicycles and the people went crazy," Hall says. "They were written up everywhere they went."

They made $250 a week the first year and $350 a week the second year.

"Pretty soon they were outgrossing me, making $1,000 a week," says Hall, who traveled a different circuit than his wife and children.

Five years later, at age 40, Hall retired his unicycle to work on his children's act, which now included his youngest daughter, Jeannine.

It would be 25 years before he rode again.

"I was living in Beaumont ... and the fellow who produced the Shrine Circus there asked if I would clown for him," Hall says. "I told him I didn't know a thing about clowning."

"He told me just to go out and wave at the kids and smile."

Hall did as told — and it worked. When he added the unicycle to his act, the smiles got even bigger.

The circus performer was back in business.

Hall is living this summer at the Wildlife Park, next to an abandoned bathroom building. He sleeps in a converted delivery truck and hangs his costumes along a fence.

He also trains chickens to walk the high wire.

"Here, Charley," Hall calls to a rooster. The bird walks up a ramp and then across a stretch of wires to a platform. The bird turns, walks halfway back, hops through a hoop that Hall is holding and, finally, back to his cage.

"Now for the finale," Hall says.

He opens another gate. A different rooster walks up to the platform, turns twice and walks back down.

"He just comes out for bows," Hall says.

That's what Hall likes about show business.

The bows.

"I like clowning better than anything I've ever done," he says. "Twice a day, I get to have people tell me how much they like me."

"I guess I'm what you call a ham."
