

Others May Follow California Tax Plan

Proposition's Success Prompts Ballot Petitions

By The Associated Press
The passage of a sweeping property tax cut plan in California will make things easier for supporters of similar moves in other states, say the people who are backing the efforts for change.

"It will help us tremendously to get our proposal on the ballot," said Cal Williams, head of the Ada County Property Owners Association in Idaho. The association is one of several groups collecting petitions to get a measure on the November ballot limiting property taxes to 1 percent of market value.

Williams said the group has about 20,000 signatures so far and needs 26,000 by July 7 in order to get the proposal on the ballot. "I believe we've been picking up momentum in the last week and I think we're going to make it," said Williams.

Average per capita property taxes in fiscal 1976 ranged from $57 in Alabama to $1,048 in Alaska, according to the Tax Foundation Inc., a nonprofit research group.

A recent Associated Press-NBC News Poll showed 59 percent of those questioned felt the property taxes they paid were too high. Seventy-five percent of those surveyed said they agreed with the statement: "There should be a lid on property taxes, even if that means cutting back some government services."

An AP survey showed measures to eliminate or sharply curtail property taxes are under consideration in six states - Ohio, Montana, Michigan, Oregon, Pennsylvania and Nebraska - in addition to Idaho, although they are in varying stages of development.

In Ohio, for example, a committee is still pondering a proposal for a constitutional amendment to raise the state income tax and cut reliance on property taxes as a source of school financing.

Bills now in Pennsylvania's senate would abolish property taxes as a way of financing public education, raise the state's 2.2 percent personal income tax and increase state funding for education, and raise the number of business taxes.

In Oregon, a petition drive is under way for a proposed constitutional amendment that would limit property taxes to 1 1/2 percent of assessed valuation or, if the property has been sold since the last assessment, to 1 1/2 percent of the sales price.

Rep. Jal Shaw, a Republican from Roseburg, said the passage of California's Proposition 13 "will add fuel to our drive. It should give us a tremendous boost."

Richard Munn of the Legislative Revenue Office said the measure, if approved, would cut Oregon's average property tax of $22 for each $1,000 of assessed valuation to less than $15.

Ruling Could Stop HISD Place System

By PAUL SIMS
Managing Editor

The same federal three-judge panel which denied a restraining order requested by the U.S. Department of Justice to stop the last Hereford Independent School District board election has said an injunction will be issued to prevent further elections under the place system of voting. The Brand learned today.

A letter from the judges dated June 2 and received Tuesday by school district attorney Richard Green stated that Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act was not retroactive and therefore constitutional.

Section 5 deals with pre-clearance, which must be sought from the Justice Department by school district and cities whenever they change their systems of voting. The Hereford school district changed from an at-large to place system in 1974 and sought approval of the change from the Justice Department in 1975. The federal government denied the request, stating that the change might be discriminatory to minority voters and candidates.

The 1965 act was amended to include Texas cities and school districts in 1975 and covered any elections since Nov. 1, 1972. The school district claimed on March 28 in federal district court in Dallas that the act was retroactive, therefore an illegal ex post facto law and unconstitutional.

The judges—Patrick Higginbotham of Dallas, U.S. District Judge for the Northern District of Texas; Halbert O. Woodward of Lubbock, U.S. District Judge for the Northern District of Texas; and Irving Goldberg of New Orleans, La., circuit judge for the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals—gave attorneys for the school district and the Justice Department until May 25 to submit briefs on the constitutionality or unconstitutionality of Section 5.

The judges also denied injunctions against Hereford and Midland requested by the Justice Department to stop April 1 board elections. The panel stated that the federal government had waited too long to seek injunctions, which, if they had been granted, would have postponed the elections for at least a month.

The judges said this week that the application of Section 5 of the act, as amended, "is not retroactive in effect, and thus not violative of the ex post facto provision of Article I, Section 9 of the United States Constitution or the due process clauses of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments."

The letter also stated that Section 5 was written to prohibit political subdivisions, such as HISD, from conducting elections pursuant to the application of the act "and no past actions are proscribed."

The judges said the Midland and Hereford school districts would be

Shuval Takes Position With PACC in Austin

Andy Shuval, Deaf Smith County district attorney for the last eight years but defeated by Roland Saul in the April 6 county election, has resigned to become executive director of a newly-created agency responsible for improving the offices of prosecutors throughout the state.

Shuval will assume his new duties with the Prosecuting Attorneys Coordinating Council (PACC) July 1 in Austin. Governor Dolph Briscoe will appoint someone to fill out Shuval's term. A Briscoe aid told The Brand this morning that the governor will study letters of recommendation as soon as he receives Shuval's letter of resignation.

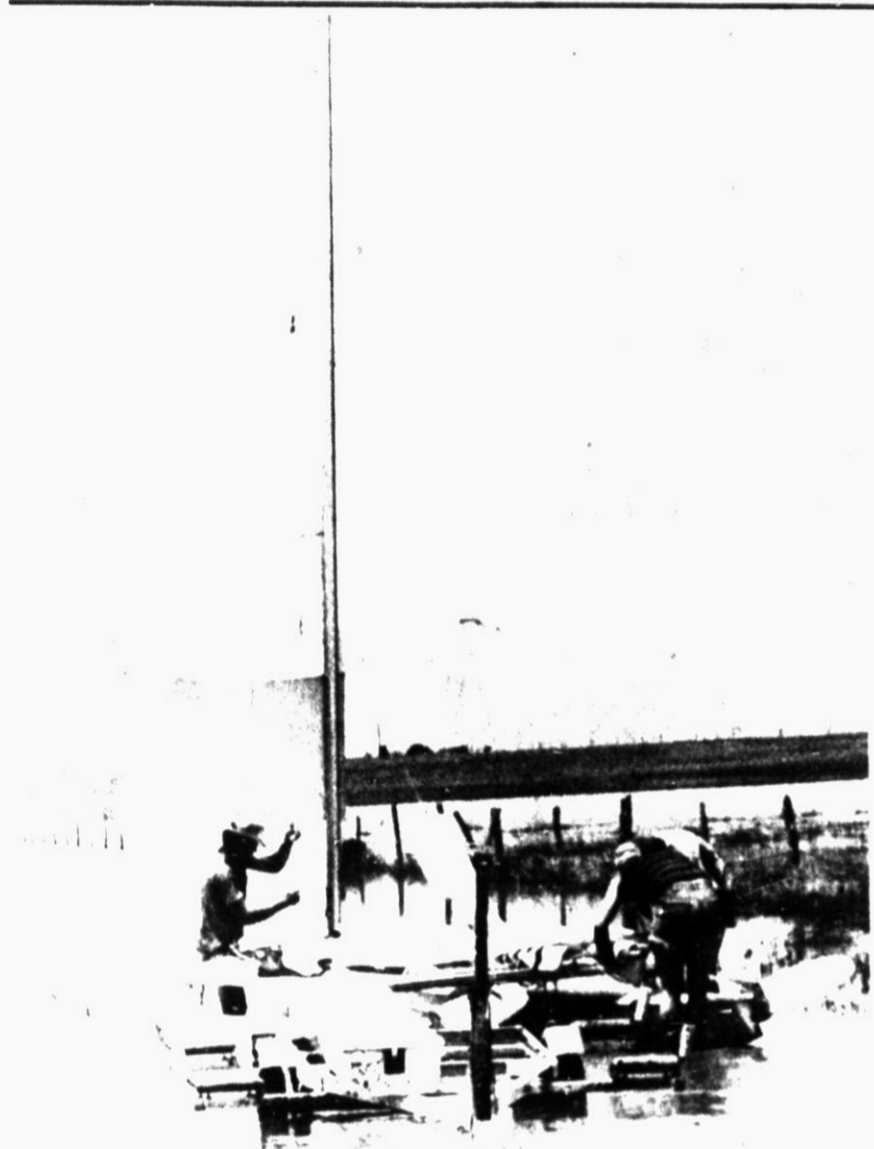

The PACC was created by the last session of the state legislature to investigate prosecutor misconduct and incompetence, provide technical assistance to local prosecutors, develop programs to improve the performance and competence of prosecutors and assist in the local funding of prosecutors.

There are five prosecutors and four non-lawyers on the council. Shuval will Deaf Smith County Regatta?

What does a farmer do when it's too wet to plow? If you're as lucky as Tom Carter you have your own sailboat, and a place to launch it. Carter had just the place Tuesday after a steady diet of rainfall lately had swollen the small lake on his property. So, with friends Joe Ralph Kuper and Wayne Betzen, he set sail for an afternoon of relaxation. Guiding the craft down the road between two fence lines the trio quickly had the boat underway, and put off thoughts of work for at least one more day. [Brand photos by Bob Nigh].

Clearer Skies Replace Showers As Front Moves to South

By JIM STEIERT
Brand Farm Editor

A long-lived thunderstorm front that has clung to the local area for two weeks began relinquishing its grip today after another session of scattered light thundershowers last night dumped more moisture on already soggy areas of the county.

Skies cleared for a few hours Tuesday before a new system of thunderheads built to the west and blew over the area Tuesday night, announcing their arrival with chilly temperatures and gusty winds.

The heavy storm front that has made many local residents weary and has resulted in flooding over much of the northern and eastern portion of Deaf Smith County began dispersing last night, and clear skies greeted residents here this morning.

The wet spell simply relocated itself farther south, however, as heavy thunderstorms roared through south and southeast Texas, drenching the area with flash floods after heavy amounts of rainfall.

Flash flood warnings were posted today for Harris and Montgomery counties in Southeast Texas and a wide area of Southeast Texas was to remain under a flash flood watch throughout the day.

Flooding along Cibolo Creek, Salado Creek and portions of the San Antonio River in the San Antonio area continued during the night.

Rainfall amounts in excess of two inches were reported over most of the southern half of the state during the night.

Houston Intercontinental Airport received 4.25 inches and up to 4.5 inches fell in the San Antonio area. The fast-falling rain caused rapid runoffs. Blanco in Central Texas received in excess of two inches in 25 minutes. Luling received nearly 2.75 inches in about 90 minutes.

Skies were generally cloudy over central and eastern sections of the state with the eastern third reporting thunderstorms. West Texas reported clear skies.

Early morning temperatures ranged from the 60s and 70s in central and east sections of the state with a few above the 80-degree mark. In West Texas

Program To Be Submitted to Feds

School Trustees To Discuss Bi-Lingual Education Plan

By PAUL SIMS
Managing Editor

Improving the bi-lingual education program in the Hereford Independent School District will be the topic of discussion Thursday night in a special meeting of the school board.

The discussion, which has been termed a workshop by Superintendent Dr. Harrell Holder, will be centered on formulating a plan to be submitted to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare's regional office in Dallas.

"We have to submit a plan for meeting the needs of students whose most functional language is a language other than English," Holder said. "We'll send in the plan next week."

The school board will give final approval to the plan in its regular monthly meeting next Tuesday.

"We're going to go over the compliance plan Thursday (7:30 p.m.) and I want the board to have adequate time to study it in detail," Holder said.

"It (the plan) will have to be approved by the federal government. The next step would be implementation."

The first step was the testing of all students in the school system who speak Spanish as the first or second language. Those students were placed on a language-assessment scale to show whether they needed special programs to improve English-speaking ability or were in need of no further special instruction.

HEW, in a letter to the school district dated Jan. 4, said the district was deficient in that it did not place students on a scale showing language dominance and that HISD did not adequately provide instructional services to students identified as limited English speakers.

The deficiencies concerned grades 4-12 since Hereford elementary schools identify deficient students and have classes and programs for those needed to overcome a Spanish barrier in grades K-3.

Fourteen other school districts in the state, including Amarillo, Lubbock and Plainview, also were notified by HEW

USDA Says Beef Costs May Continue Upwards

WASHINGTON (AP). The rise in beef prices for both producers and consumers may be longer and stronger than expected just two weeks ago, the Agriculture Department now says.

Moreover, that and another report from department economists Tuesday indicate that supermarkets and food processors and wholesalers are lagging behind in passing through to consumers the full impact of higher raw-product prices.

That lag, which can extend to two months for some foods, is traditional and officials of the president's Council on Wage and Price Stability still expect the middlemen to catch up this summer and food prices to moderate in the fall.

But the higher beef-price forecast is a new wrinkle that could prompt reassessment of their inflation predic-

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says if you've been doing a lot of thinking about when middle age begins, it's begun.

Parents never fully appreciate teachers until it rains all weekend.

WHILE SOME FOLKS are a little tired of the "monsoon" weather around Hereford the past two weeks, dryland farmers continued to smile. Some of the old timers are trying to recall the last time it rained this much in two weeks - up to 14 inches or more. That's almost an average year's supply in this country!

EVERYWHERE WE go, although that's not too wide a circle, we are impressed by the fact that one of the big complaints is not unemployment, but the problem employers have in finding people who want to work.

We are fortunate to have a group of capable, trained and loyal people here at The Brand, but some employers do not have it so good.

There are a great many jobs which are hard to fill because they require hard labor or unpleasant working conditions. These type jobs formerly were of the low-paying variety, too, but that has changed to a great extent.

One of the problems, we believe, is that child labor laws and federal regulations keep a person out of the job market until he or she is 18 and, by then, it is too late to introduce them to the joys of work. I got my social security card when I was 12 years old and started sacking potatoes and carrying out bags of groceries at the supermarket. I worked from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. and thought I was lucky. Now, they'd send a supermarket manager to prison if he treated a poor child in such a manner!

Many communities are in need of workers in the food industry, in auto mechanics, plumbing and electrical helpers, farm laborers, and the like. The government experts keep talking about high unemployment and it is hard to reconcile that with the high demand for people willing to work. We have the uneasy feeling that today it is not absolutely essential that people work for a living, and that more and more people have found out about this.

Government "make-work" programs do not get the job done. These programs usually involve high salaries for

Sharks Swarm Again Around Texas Gulf

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — The sharks are out in the Gulf of Mexico by the thousands. It's just a question of whether they'll swim into shallow water a few feet off tourist-crowded Texas beaches and terrorize swimmers again this summer.

A swarm of more than 2,000 sharks, some reported to be 12 feet long, cruised last June only a few feet off some Texas beaches and made landlubbers out of all but the shark fishermen and a few fearless swimmers.

Dr. Faust Parker Jr., a marine biologist in Port Aransas, said Tuesday that the sharks could appear just as quickly again this summer — but without any becoming aware of them.

"It could happen again," Parker said by phone from the University of Texas Marine Science Institute. "We don't know much about their habits or why they do it. It's all guesses on our part."

"Last year, the water was slick calm up to the beach and there was a lot of foam available for them. You could really get a look at them from the air," he added. "But it's been pretty windy this year so even if they swarmed out there, we probably couldn't spot them."

Carter Gives Russia Choice of Actions

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter in a major policy speech, told the Soviet Union today it "can choose either confrontation or cooperation" and find the United States prepared to meet either challenge.

Speaking against a backdrop of heightened superpower tensions, Carter said he was convinced the Soviet people want peace and that their government was trying "in good faith" to complete a treaty limiting strategic nuclear weapons.

But, by contrast, Carter said in a commencement address at the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md., the Soviets were exploiting instability in Africa as means to expand their influence.

"To the Soviet Union," he said in his prepared remarks, "detente seems to mean a continuing aggressive struggle for political advantage and increased influence in a variety of ways."

Detente, accommodation between the two superpowers — the United States and the Soviet Union — exercising restraint in troubled areas and in turbulent times.

Carter's speech, touted by his principal advisers as clarifying U.S. attitudes toward the Soviet Union, mixed both hard-line and conciliatory gestures. He consulted with Zbigniew Brzezinski, his national security adviser, and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, among others, in preparing it.

Conservation, Coal Hurt Gas Demand

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Conservation measures and the conversion to coal by some industries and utilities have resulted in a declining demand in Texas for natural gas and will stabilize the cost of gas in the state, according to a gas industry official.

Watson W. Cluett, vice president of the Houston Natural Gas Corp. who spoke Tuesday at the annual meeting of the Texas Gas Association, said the declining demand could result in a surplus of one trillion cubic feet per year by 1985.

"You will note a distinct dip in utilization since 1974, a direct result of conservation, not only by residential and commercial customers, but also by industries in the state that have spent considerable millions of dollars in the past several years to improve their energy efficiency," said Cluett.

Some utilities that are big users of natural gas, such as San Antonio's City Public Service, are switching to coal to generate electricity.

Gas production, Cluett said, has remained constant.

"This situation can do nothing but help stabilize the cost of natural gas in Texas," he said.

West Point Cadets Have Second Chance

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — The U.S. Military Academy rings down the final curtain on its historic honor code scandal today by graduating 86 cadets who received an unprecedented second chance to become Army officers after they admitted cheating on their engineering homework.

The 176-year-old institution had a record 948 graduates.

A number of the 86 who were readmitted — most of whom declined to be named — maintained in interviews before the ceremony that West Point still teaches lessons of expediency and hypocrisy for survival despite radical reforms brought on by the scandal.

"It stinks," one graduate said of the honor system. "It's rotten, worse than it ever was. I came back to the same stuff because people are people. I don't care what they do around here — it's not going to be the way they want it to be."

Said another, "I think things are changing for the better, but I don't think it's as good as it should be. They still have the archaic honor system, which is the root of the problem."

Police Report

The Hereford Police Department reported no activity for Tuesday or this morning. No offenses were reported also for Sunday or Monday.

Food Rumors 'Ridiculous'

WASHINGTON (AP) — For those intrigued by the shifts and personalities in federal farm and food-watching policies, moves that affect farmers and consumers alike, it must have been quite a scene.

There was sharp-tongued Carol Tucker Foreman, the former director of the Consumer Federation of America who spent most of her first year as assistance agriculture secretary trying to persuade farmers she wasn't out to enslave them.

Her audience was a conference on nutrition and the American food system, spearheaded primarily by the Community Nutrition Institute, a nonprofit food-issues organization that has a moderate image within the so-called "hunger lobby" but takes a harder line than she against what it considers marginal or suspicious foods.

Ms. Foreman said that published speculation that she and CNI and others are working toward a "national nannyism" food policy, which would prescribe what Americans shall or shall not eat, is ridiculous but that the questions such charges raise need to be squarely faced daily, with the weight given to information over regulation.

Her industry and producer foes must have been surprised she does not have a systematic role for government on food issues laid out.

But the real twist in roles came at the end of the speech, when she accused farm-state members of Congress of undercutting the futures of her friends, the farmers.

Last month, committees in both chambers moved to either delay or kill altogether her proposal to ban from the national school breakfast program a fortified grain-fruit bar because the Agriculture Department feels it has too much sugar and encourages children to eat "junk food" later on.

"The grocery-industry lobby has persuaded the House agriculture appropriations subcommittee and the Senate Agriculture Committee that the taxpayer-supported breakfast program should be a repository for what highly processed, high-fat, high-sugar garbage the industry takes a notion to sell," she said, in tones from the old days she has not used publicly since taking the administration job.

Children lose and so do fruit and vegetable growers, she added. Such farmers comprise about one-fourth of U.S. agriculture in terms of sales; sugar producers, less than 1 percent.

"Think about it....Members of two congressional committees charged with watching over the welfare of American farmers have chosen to feed our kids vitamins manufactured in a laboratory over those acquired from the consumption of fruits and vegetables. Perhaps farmers should learn to grow protein in a test tube instead of raising poultry or cattle," she said.

In the same speech, she also announced that, despite her hosts' opposition she has taken a small step toward the meat-industry position on the issue of including in consumer products the meat scraps and finely ground bone that processors can salvage from carcasses after the major cuts have been taken.

Most consumer groups had wanted the so-called "mechanically deboned meat" banned entirely. Last fall, she proposed that it be permitted within certain limits, in such processed products as wieners and salami, but that the label include "tissue from ground bone" in large letters in a prominent position.

Mrs. McGehee Dies At 102 Years of Age

Katie Nichols McGehee, who lived through two major economic depressions, a smallpox epidemic, the money panic of the early 1900's and devastating prairie fires, died this morning at the age of 102.

Mrs. McGehee died early today in Deaf Smith General Hospital, where she had been in intensive care since injuring her hip 14 days ago.

Services will be conducted at 10 a.m. Saturday in First United Methodist Church with the Rev. William McReynolds, minister, officiating. Burial will be in Rest Lawn Memorial Park under direction of Gilliland-Watson Funeral Home.

Born May 6, 1876 in Limestone County, Katie Nichols moved to the plains of Texas with her family in 1891. On May 10, 1896, she and William McGehee were the first couple to be married in the Lockney College at Lockney. They were married 67 years before his death in 1963.

The McGehees came to Hereford in 1935 and he was among the first to drill irrigation wells and sell pumps to local farmers. Mrs. McGehee was the first Hereford woman to place a direct dialed telephone call on the Bell Telephone System.

Mrs. McGehee witnessed many changes during her long lifetime. She rode in wagons pulled by oxen and did not travel by jet airplane until she was 94 years old. She used cowchips to heat her one-room half-dugout at a time when raging prairie fires threatened to destroy Panhandle farms and rangeland. The first telephone used by Mrs. McGehee was connected to a barbed wire fence.

At the time of her death, Mrs. McGehee was residing at 504 Miles Ave. She was a Methodist.

Surviving her are a son, Wallace L. of Kansas City, Mo.; two daughters, Mrs. Rose Stark, 504 Miles, and Mrs. Russell Hopper of Long Beach, Calif.; a brother, Dr. E.O. Nichols Sr. of Plainview; four grandsons and six great-grandsons.

Beef

The Agriculture Department World Food and Agricultural Outlook and Situation Board approved on Tuesday a forecast that average 1978 beef prices to consumers could rise 20 percent above the 1977 averages and those paid producers could rise 33 percent, indicating more to come next year for consumers.

As the board noted, President Carter is considering whether to allow more foreign beef, used for hamburger and processed meats mostly, to enter the country this year "as a possibility for tempering some of the rise in meat prices."

The White House said a decision is expected very soon. The National Farmers Organization and Rep. Tom Warten, D-Iowa, warned Tuesday that "making the United States a dumping ground for surplus beef" would again upset the beef producers' market.

Government economists have been saying that world beef supplies are not excessive and allowing more imports would only trim consumer prices by about 5 cents a pound by the end of the year.

The 1977 averages used in the forecast are $1.38 a pound at retail for a wide selection of choice-grade cuts and $40 per 300 pounds for 400-pound to 1,100-pound Choice steers at Omaha.

Retail prices for April, when overall cost of living averages took their biggest jump in more than a year, were released Tuesday also and showed a $1.63 a pound average. Preliminary May figures are closer to a record $1.68.

At the same time, average steer prices at seven leading Midwestern markets and California in April were $52.12 per 100 pounds and the new forecast said they could go to $57 late this fall before slipping to current levels.

The department and the meat industry have been projecting a two-year to three-year climb in beef prices until herds are sufficiently rebuilt to start that commodity's cycle over again.

But just two weeks ago, the board raised from 12 percent to a range of 16 percent to 18 percent its outlook for 1978 beef prices. A few days later, that kicked off a jump in its overall estimate for 1978 food prices from 4 1/2 percent to 8 percent range to 8 percent to 10 percent.

In the local area, the heaviest rainfall accumulations from last night's storm were in the Hereford vicinity and to the south at Easter.

KFAN radio logged 40 inches of moisture or the city, while Easter Grain reported 50 inches at that community.

The Holly Sugar Corporation's Haverford plant reported only .28 inches, however.

In the Summerfield community to the west, 30 inches of rainfall was recorded, and the H.L. Hershey farm 13 miles northeast received 20 inches.

To the east of Hereford, the Dawn community registered .25 inches of precipitation.

Tuesday's regular monthly school board meeting, trustee president James Gentry said today.

"Our next step is to discuss the matter in our upcoming board meeting and decide what the next step will be," Gentry said.

To the west of Hereford in dryland country, the Bill Page farm at Bootleg Corner reported only .10 inches of rainfall, and moisture from Tuesday's rainfall was light and scattered over most of the sprawling dryland country.

The forecast for West Texas calls for partly cloudy conditions through Thursday with widely scattered thunderstorms and showers through the southeast today and tonight.

A warming trend is underway, and highs should reach the 80's, with lows in the 50's.

Government statistics indicate that productivity is down in many industries, meaning that people are not producing as much because they are not working as hard.

We seem to have slipped into an attitude that it is smart to figure out how to get out of work rather than find a job. Something is drastically wrong with a system that discourages meaningful work, and we hope this country has people smart enough to figure out an answer.

W.J. CLEVINGER

Funeral services for W.J. "Jeff" Clevenger, 82, of Tulia, are being conducted at 2 p.m. today in Central Church of Christ at Tulia. Wayne Cary, minister, will officiate.

Burial will be in Rose Hill Cemetery at Tulia under the direction of Wallace Funeral Home.

Mr. Clevenger died yesterday. He was the father of Wister Clevenger of 117 Liveoak.

He was born in Indiana Territory. He came to Tulia in 1928 from Wellington. He married Oma E. Reeves in 1926 in Tulia.

Clevenger was a veteran of World War I and a member of Central Church of Christ. He retired several years ago from Reeves Butane Co.

In addition to the widow, survivors include three sons, two daughters, 19 grandchildren and 15 great-grandchildren.

The family requests memorials to any children's home.

Miss Rowland Nets Laurels In 4-H Fete

Word was received late yesterday that Phylecia Rowland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.L. Rowland, captured first place honors for her main dish entry in the state 4-H Round-Up at College Station.

Miss Rowland will be awarded a $500 scholarship for her achievement by Morrison Milling Company.

Several local 4-H'ers are at College Station now competing in Round-Up events which continue through today. Deaf Smith County youngsters who earned recognition yesterday, in addition to Miss Rowland, were Carla West, first runner-up in the side dish division, and Steve Douglas, who was a scholarship finalist.

Results of today's contests will appear in The Brand as soon as results are available from assistant County Extension Agents Steve Kennedy and Claudette Mitchell.

Women's Aglow Fellowship To Establish Bible Class

Women's Aglow Fellowship will soon be launching Bible study groups about the city, using study guidelines approved and published by the national Aglow headquarters. Potential leaders and interested members are presently being sought, according to Leta Kaul, Aglow president.

Other Biblical reading materials and records, published by Aglow Publications, were also displayed and explained at Friday's meeting by Kathryn Chapman, corresponding secretary.

Joyce Landers opened the meeting as she led the group singing while Nedra Higginbotham accompanied on her autoharp. Mrs. Kaul read several scripture verses wherein the listeners were encouraged to "pray always" and to "pray everywhere". Sometimes for a busy wife or mother the "secret place with the Lord" might be in the car as she's traveling to and fro. Mrs. Kaul related to the group.

After brief testimonies about several answered prayers among the members, Jan Harper related her own story of happenings as she and her husband, Leo, have moved about with his job with Holly Sugar. The Harpers have the unique distinction of being perhaps the only couple to be transferred to Hereford three different times. The first tenure here was not a pleasant experience for Mrs. Harper, but neither was Colorado or Wyoming or California.

"There had to be something better," she said as she explained their search for a happier spiritual life. While in California, Mrs. Harper visited an Aglow meeting and found there a "love I never saw before."

"They loved each other and they loved me and they didn't even know me," she continued.

It wasn't easy to return to Hereford, but the third time has been a pleasant experience for the Harpers now that they've found a "better way with the Lord and with their fellowmen and with each other."

"We're not perfect yet, but then the Lord's not through with us," Mrs. Harper said in conclusion.

The evening's guest speaker, Thelma Lee of Fort Worth, talked to the group about "balance" of freedom and control.

"We are each a being of body, soul and spirit and we need to strive for a balance between these features," Mrs. Lee told the women and guest, Raymond Higginbotham. In some persons, the body is in evidence, in others the mind is in control. "Freedom is dangerous if people aren't disciplined," said the lay minister of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, who has been active in lay ministry work for more than 25 years.

She went on to explain her own feelings when she resisted instructions from the Lord because she feared she "might make a fool of herself" as she had seen others do.

"We must learn yieldedness if we hope to be in control," Mrs. Lee elaborated as she went on to tell how she did obey the call of the Lord to minister to her fellowman.

"God won't cause us to suffer one thing we don't need and He will teach us what is profitable for the body of Christ. The spirit of God is blessed, precious, wise and discreet," she said just before she concluded with this prayer. "I pray that your life will be as beautiful as it was the day God created you."

Mary Watson of Tulsa accompanied Mrs. Lee to Hereford for a weekend of ministry. Saturday, Mrs. Lee appeared at a daylong seminar at San Pablo United Methodist Church and she also spoke at the Sunday morning services of Wesley Methodist Church.

The next Aglow meeting will be a luncheon on July 7. Mrs. Kaul also informed the members of a basic leadership training workshop to be held June 10 at the Evangelical Center Church in Amarillo.

Walcott Reunion Sunday

Former residents of the Walcott community and alumni of Walcott School are encouraged to attend the annual reunion Sunday at the community school.

Registration will commence at 12 noon Sunday with lunch to be served at 1:30 p.m. All families attending are asked to bring basket lunches. Beverages will be provided.

After the meal, informal reminiscing and games will entertain the reunion guests. It is suggested that youngsters present bring baseball equipment for their own pastime.

Reunion organizers are seeking information about former Walcott residents and students. Persons having information about ex-Walcott residents are asked to contact Diane Jacks Perkins, 364-0776, June Henderson, 364-3407, or Adaire Melton Brock, 364-0128.

Auxiliary Delegates

Give Assembly Report

The three delegates to the recent convention of the Texas Hospital Auxiliary Association delivered a report to their local chapter members Monday night during a covered dish supper in Pioneer Natural Gas-Flame Room.

Olivia Denning, local president, Mary Johnson and Star Christie, who attended the state-wide assembly at San Antonio, displayed merchandise sold to Auxiliary members in a convention workshop.

In other business, the organization of a gift shop, to be built in the lobby of the local hospital, was discussed. Members considered what items to offer as merchandise, as well as the financial limits of the project. Mrs. Denning is chairman in charge of organizing the building and stocking of its wares.

It was proposed that the auxiliary's fiscal year be altered from January to June. Also, it was agreed that the auxiliary begin work immediately on the compilation of a scrapbook to be entered in competition at next year's state convention.

As a fund-raising project, members discussed the possibility of selling a cookbook.

Members present were Jana White, Naomi Brindine, Irene Reinart, Grace Covington, Anne Kershen and Mmes. Johnson Christie and Denning.

Viewing Materials

Art Demonstration Scheduled Sunday

The public is reminded that a free demonstration in oil painting is to be presented at 2 p.m. at the Community Center Sunday by Luphelia Middlebrooks, well-known artist from Texarkana. Refreshments will be served by members of Hereford Art Guild, sponsors of the demonstration and five ensuing days of art lessons.

Individuals interested in attending the upcoming demonstration are asked to contact Betty Rice, 364-3114, in advance.

On Monday, Mrs. Middlebrooks will begin art lessons at the Community Center with classes scheduled from 9 a.m. - 4 p.m. each day, June 12-16. In the art classes, emphasis will be placed on landscape.

Mrs. Middlebrooks, who is equally competent in oils and watercolors, specializes in portraits. She has studied under Ramon Froman, Bud Biggs, Harold Rooney, Jerry Farnsworth and Milford Zornes. She has attended workshops led by O'Hara, Enabnet, Tom Hill, Ed Whitney and others.

Mrs. Middlebrooks has been sponsored as a lecturer and teacher of oils and watercolors by art groups in seven states. She has active memberships in art societies in four states.

Reservations to attend the art classes may be made by contacting Mrs. Rice.

Elderly Woman Speaks

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You haven't lived long enough to qualify as an expert on sex among the elderly. I have.

All women do NOT lose their sex drive in later years. You told "It's Zero Here" that many elderly people derive ample satisfaction out of fondling and caressing -- just touching and being close.

This may be true if the man and his wife have no foot in the grave, but that's not the way it is in our house.

I say if the only place a man has it is in his head, let him keep it there. I'm tired of being mauled and pawed, aroused and left hanging in midair. No one should start a fire unless he can put it out. Just sign me -- Needing More At 72

DEAR 72: I did NOT say "all women lose their sex drive in later years." Some women, as well as men, maintain a keen interest in sex into the 80s and even 90s. I did say, however, that some elderly couples are content just to be held and caressed lovingly and nothing more is needed.

If ever a couple needed joint sex therapy, it's you and your husband. There are simple solutions to your problem and I hope you will make an effort to find them. If your physician is unable to recommend a legitimate sex therapist (watch out for quacks -- the woods are full of 'em), write to the American Psychiatric Association. That National Headquarters address is 1700 18th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20009.

DEAR ANN: The controversy in your column about breastfeeding babies in public brought back a memory that gave me and other members of our family a hearty laugh. I'd like to share it with you and your readers.

Many years ago my mother was going by train from Galesburg, Ill., to the next town. She noticed across the aisle a large, friendly woman who was breastfeeding her child. The little one was fretful and not taking his nourishment.

At that moment the conductor came by and asked the woman for her ticket. My mother heard the woman say, "Eat your dinner, child, or I'm going to give it to the conductor." -- An Illinois Reader

DEAR READER: Thanks for a good laugh. Those old family stories are a lot funnier than the current jokes that make the rounds.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A message to all those jerks who yell at the secretary because her boss did not return their call:

Why don't you yell at him in person? Do you think the secretary has the power to stand over the guy and demand that he call you back just because you said it was urgent?

I've been answering telephones for 15 years, and it is unbelievable how nasty people can get. I realize being tolerant is part of my job, but life would be so much more pleasant if people were sensible.

What do these bullies think they are accomplishing when they yell at the secretary? Please ask them. Ann -- Hammered-On Sue DEAR SUE: I don't have to ask them. I know. They're taking out their frustration on the handiest target, and that's you.

Of course it makes no sense, but when people behave emotionally instead of rationally, this is what you get. Keep a smile in your voice, honey -- and don't let those clods give you their ulcers.

Issues along for the 'ride'

WASHINGTON (NEA) - When the House of Representatives votes this month on the annual bill appropriating operating funds for the Treasury Department, it also will consider a totally unrelated dispute over federal income taxes. That odd combination of issues represents only the most recent example of an unusual legislative practice that long has thrived in both the House and Senate. The current case involves an effort by the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) to issue regulations regarding federal taxation of employee fringe benefits such as free parking on company lots, discounts for retail-store workers and company-subsidized medical examinations for executives. The issue has generated considerable controversy, and Congress could resolve it by drafting legislation to either authorize or prohibit the IRS proposal. But ever since the 1960s, federal lawmakers have been relying upon an oblique approach under which amendments that are only vaguely relevant are tacked onto appropriation bills. Slightly more than a dozen such bills are approved by Congress each year, and their sole purpose ostensibly is to provide the needed operating funds for all government departments and agencies as well as Congress itself and the federal judiciary. But recent years have seen a surge in the popularity of "appropriations riders" — one-sentence or one-paragraph amendments that invariably begin with the words: "No funds appropriated by this act may be used for..." IRS is a component of the Treasury Department, enabling two leading House conservatives, Reps. William L. Armstrong, R-Colo., and Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., to use a rider to the Treasury appropriation bill in their attempt to influence tax policy. In the past, conservatives have used the same questionable technique in efforts to prohibit the use of federal funds to bus children as part of school integration programs and to deny food stamps to striking workers. But there is no ideological monopoly on the gimmick. Liberals have used the same approach to halt federal funding for both development of the supersonic transport (SST) plane and continued United States involvement in the Vietnam War. Special interest groups also have discovered the value of appropriations riders. Last year's Environmental Protection Agency appropriation bill contained a prohibition inspired by lobbyists for shopping center operators. In the seven years from 1971 to 1977, 225 such amendments were proposed on the House floor and 87 were approved. In contrast, only 99 amendments were offered and 25 approved in the immediately prior seven years, from 1964 through 1970. The practice usually results in ill-conceived public policy because it precludes conventional public hearings on controversial issues, followed by deliberative consideration during committee "mark-up" of legislation. During the debate on last year's appropriation bill for the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare, Rep. Henry J. Hyde, R-Ill., convinced the House to accept a rider prohibiting the use of Medicaid funds to pay for abortions. While a House-Senate conference committee wrangled over that provision for almost six months, the entire $61 billion annual budget for Labor and HEW was held hostage. That episode inspired House leaders to announce they would reexamine the use of appropriations riders. But the reform effort was quickly abandoned after it became apparent that many legislators actually liked the current system. "Perhaps," concedes an aide to Kemp, "it's a reflection of Congress' inability to get its act together." He's right, and the time has come to abandon the back-door system of resolving complex, sensitive issues.

Fishing Rights Wars Not Funny Business

NEW YORK (AP) - Canada isn't that the friendly neighbor whose customs agents probably won't even open your luggage? Try to imagine facing arrest for fishing off Canada just because you're an American.

Sound strange? Well, imagine the proud British Navy backing off from Iceland's six gunboats. Or the United States seizing a Soviet ship off Boston while the two superpowers try to talk arms control.

Unlikely - all of it. But it happened.

It is the diplomacy of fish - and it can turn to shooting.

Over the last 26 years, most of the major maritime nations have extended their fishing zones, usually to 200 miles. What they created is a new system for conserving the fish off their shores - and a host of problems.

A U.S. fisheries official, William G. Gordon, predicted trouble between the United States and Canada in 1976, as the two adjacent nations readied 200-mile fishing zones. Even then, the neighbors were finding it difficult to pick a dividing line, particularly off the intricate East Coast.

"I think this can be resolved, but not necessarily without considerable pain," Gordon said then. "It's a very crucial issue because the fish out there don't understand where that political boundary is."

Now, after two years of temporary treaties, Canada has cut off the interim pacts and barred U.S. fishermen from its waters. Washington has retaliated by closing its waters to Canadian fishermen. Starting Monday, fishermen who stray into the wrong waters could be arrested. All this recalls other recent fish wars - many just as improbable.

The most bizarre were the 18 years of "cod wars" between tiny Iceland and Great Britain, which began when Iceland first extended coastal control to preserve dwindling fish stocks and tried to enforce drastic cuts in the foreign catch.

British trawlers kept returning and trouble continued. By 1975, Iceland had a 200-mile limit and its gunboats and were cutting away British nets. Three Royal Navy warships were sent in and became involved in collisions with Icelandic gunboats. At one point, the Icelanders fired at a trawler, but nobody was hurt. Iceland broke off relations, but the two nations finally reached agreement in 1976 - an agreement that some in Britain called a sellout.

Problems over 200-mile fishing zones date to 1952, when Ecuador, Chile and Peru set them up and Washington would not recognize them. American tuna fishermen, who often range far south from the West Coast, were caught in the middle.

The climax occurred in the 1971 "Tuna War," when Ecuador detained 53 American boats and collected $3 million in fines. The United States suspended military aid, and Ecuador expelled the U.S. Army mission. Seizures continued, but grew less frequent as American boat owners agreed to buy foreign licenses.

By then however, foreign vessels were overfishing off the U.S. coast, and Washington was changing its position, too. The new hope was that the U.N. Law of the Sea Conference would write a 200-mile treaty for all nations. But the conference failed, and U.S. fishermen were howling that foreign fleets were raiding their waters.

The U.S. limit took effect last March 1 - and a Soviet ship was boarded and warned about violations the first day. But during those weeks, the Carter administration was also trying to break a deadlock in the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks.

On March 31, the State Department acknowledged it had decided not to seize a Soviet trawler partly because of the arms talks - and it was April 10 before any Soviet ship was seized. The United States then asked the Soviets to "ensure that the violations cease so that this situation will not contribute to a worsening of our bilateral relations." The Russians agreed their ships would obey the laws.

Since then, other ships including Taiwanese, Spanish and Japanese vessels have been seized for alleged violations in U.S. waters.

And other nations made seizures, too. Argentina has halted Soviet and Bulgarian ships; Ireland has halted the Dutch; Scotland has stopped the Russians. Fishing wars have also been fought by Italy and Yugoslavia, Thailand and Burma, Hong Kong and China, Japan and Russia, and Italy and Tunisia.

Not all those involved 200-mile limits, but all the new limits have increased the problems. As the United States went to a 200-mile limit, others did, too - Mexico, Russia, the Common Market, Canada.

And in the process, regional treaty agreements administered by international commissions had lapsed, leaving a vacuum that had to be filled by new treaties defining boundaries and enforcement rules.

When the U.S. and Canadian limits took effect in 1977, a key problem remained - where to draw the boundary, particularly along the rich northern third of Georges Bank off Nova Scotia and Maine.

Canadian officials concede that is one reason they grew impatient with the temporary treaty. It is one thing for a fisherman to have a 200-mile limit; it is another to be uncertain whether his government can deliver Georges Bank, one of the richest fishing grounds in the world.

Surfacing Bodies A 'Spring Phenomenon'

NEW YORK (AP) - Just as warmer weather was bringing green leaves to Central Park and summer clothing to shoppers on Fifth Avenue, so too were the Hudson, Harlem and East rivers performing their own rites of spring: They were giving up the dead.

It happens every year as the waters warm up. The bodies float up from the once-icy depths where they remained from winter, when they plunged voluntarily into the waters, entered accidentally or were deliberately thrown in.

It is a phenomenon peculiar to New York, as least in volume, yet another macabre side to a city well endowed with the bizarre.

In San Francisco, bodies surface right away because the water temperature is more consistent. In Chicago, police say, their patrols prevent many suicides in Lake Michigan. Bodies do surface around Detroit - in small numbers - and most are found out of town where the swift-flowing Detroit River deposits them.

In New York - the bodies fished from the rivers - these "floaters" as the police wryly call them - find their way to the province of Detective Jack Hackett.

Hackett, glancing across the row of shroud-covered figures in the Manhattan morgue, said to a recent visitor, half in explanation, half defensively, "Someone has to do this job, don't they?"

Then the gray-haired cop consulted his work book, running his eye over the brief notations:

East River and Dover Street, white male.

East River and 108th Street, black male.

Hudson River and 100th Street, black male.

South Street Seaport and East River, unknown.

Hudson River and West 55th Street, white female.

South Side Seaport and East River, black male.

Harlem River and 151st Street, black male.

Hudson River and 125th Street, white male.

Detective Hackett sighed audibly, turning a page for more details. He is a licensed undertaker with New York's Bureau of Missing Persons, and the evidence was obvious enough to him.

These eight had been found floating in the water in the previous 60 hours. As many as five bodies a day have surfaced this time of year. "I've watched it happen for the 26 years I've served here," said Detective Hackett. "It's a spring phenomenon."

"Why so many in the rivers?" Sgt. Max Sanders, a supervisor at the Bureau of Missing Persons, repeated the question. "Straight people don't buy guns if they want to take their lives. Many just go into the river."

Lt. Earl J. Campazi, chief of the bureau, said, "New York is a magnet for pleasure. People come here from all over the East Coast. And it is also a magnet for the suicidal."

Death by drowning is a small percentage of the average of 25 who die each day in Manhattan and the Bronx from other than natural causes. The difficulties of identifying the bodies of the drowned lead to a higher percentage being buried anonymously in potter's fields.

Hackett is an expert in identification at the Manhattan Morgue. He developed a technique to fingerprint the inner skin of drowning victims. When those are not available, as so often is the case this time of year, the skeletal remains are X-rayed in an attempt to recognize healed fractures.

"Fingerprints are the key," said Hackett. "We get nearly 100 percent identification from male prints. The percentage is far lower for females."

The poorer identification rate for women results because there are fewer fingerprint records for them, Hackett explained.

The floater phenomenon is known to relatives of missing persons, and this is the time of the year when the phones ring constantly at the Missing Persons Bureau and the morgue. Around 26,000 missing persons cases are accepted by the New York bureau each year, and while a very high percentage are solved, hundreds of people remain lost.

"Particularly families who have lost young daughters, they call us for years and years anytime they hear we have a floater," said Lt. Capazi.

The police list known suicides and wait for the bodies to surface. A woman executive of a computer company in Westchester County was thought to have jumped off the George Washington bridge six weeks ago after her car was found nearby. Her body was among the eight checked by Detective Hackett.

He is still watching for the body of the daughter of a South

Asian ambassador reported seen leaping into the Hudson River from the West Side Highway in mid-winter.

"Someone has to do this job, don't they?" said Detective Hackett.

Address To Sum Relations

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter's commencement address at the U.S. Naval Academy today will attempt to sum up the relationship between the United States and Soviet Union, and administration official said.

Carter himself is deeply involved in writing the speech, which is still in draft form, the official said.

"There have been some questions raised recently about what our position is toward the Soviet Union," said the official, who asked not to be identified. "Clearly this speech will be an attempt to clarify."

The questions were raised after administration criticism of the Soviet-Cuban role in Africa, and reports that a deterioration in U.S.-Soviet relations was holding up progress on a strategic arms limitation treaty with the Russians.

Carter denied last week that the United States was slowing down its SALT discussions because of dissatisfaction with the Soviet role in Africa.

Although the invitation to address the graduates was accepted some time ago, Carter himself decided in light of recent events that it would be a good opportunity to clarify the U.S. position toward the Soviets, the official said.

National security adviser Zbigniew Brezezinski, Defense Secretary Harold Brown, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Vice President Walter F. Mondale all have been helping Carter with the speech, the official said.

Fireplace is stained
By Polly Cramer

POLLY'S PROBLEM
DEAR POLLY — I would like to know how to clean the smoke stains from my white brick fireplace. — BOBBY
DEAR BOBBY — I presume your fireplace has bricks that were made white, not painted white. If the finish is smooth such stains should scrub off with scouring powder and steel wool. But if they are rough use a stiff scrubbing brush instead of the steel wool. Rinse well after cleaning. I have also heard of mechanic's hand soap being used for this, too. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — I keep my pierced earrings in an empty one pound chocolate candy box that has compartments for the chocolates in one layer only. This keeps each pair together and I can select from about 40 pair with just a glance at the box. — MARIE

DEAR POLLY — When I wash my foam-backed draperies I do just one panel at a time in the bathtub and find they do not wrinkle so much. I leave the hooks in the pleats and hang them on the line to dry by the hooks. For longer draperies I do have to use clothespins to pin them to a second line but I find that leaving the hooks in makes it much simpler when hanging the drapes to dry. (Polly's note — Just be sure the hooks are rust proof.) — MRS. R.P.

DEAR POLLY — I have been quilting for 15 years and have some advice for Berdina. Do not do anything about those blue quilting lines or marks until AFTER you are finished with the quilting. You do not want to destroy any of them or you may have to draw some of your own. Buy a percale sheet to use for the quilt backing and use polyester batting for the padding. It seems to stay soft and fluffy forever. Quilt with regular quilting thread and needles. After the edge is finished wash the quilt. Let it soak for about 10 minutes in barely warm water with liquid soap for washing woollens. Then wash for two or three minutes. Dry on "Delicate" speed and most if not all of the blue lines should be gone. After the second washing they will surely be gone. Happy Quilting. — ARABELLA

DEAR POLLY — While baking a cake I discovered the bottom was burning but it was not completely cooked inside. I filled a pan with water and put it on the rack under the cake. When it had finished cooking there were no more burns and the inside was completely done. — LYSA T.
DEAR LYSA — I often put a pan of water under a casserole I am baking so there is no danger of a too-brown crust on the bottom. — POLLY

Republicans Divided
On 1980 Chances

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wait a minute - before you make any wagers that Jimmy Carter is going to be a one-term president. He's in a slump, and a bad one. But this is 1978. Gerald R. Ford got his kicks out of the poll that showed him leading Carter if the election were held now. But he's seen polls change dramatically before, and he said they could again. Or take the author who predicted between hard covers that Sen. Henry M. Jackson would be the 1976 Democratic presidential nominee. The book didn't sell much. Republicans, often divided from left to center to right, are almost unanimous in their optimistic forecasts about GOP prospects in the 1980 election. "It's way too early to be predicting a one-term presidency, like a lot of people are doing," said Republican National Chairman Bill Brock. "It's not too early to be predicting one heck of a contest." Brock said that will be a boon to the Republicans, whatever the outcome. Then too, Republican optimism is tempered by the familiar GOP argument over the ideal ideological credentials of the candidate most likely to succeed against Carter. John Sears, a political pro who worked for Richard Nixon in 1968 and Ronald Reagan in 1976, is betting in print that the Republican nominee, regardless of identity, will be a sure winner. But Sears could get a good argument, and perhaps a bet, from Patrick Caddell, the youthful, ruffled pollster who regularly tests the political winds for Carter. Caddell, addressing a business group here recently, readily acknowledged the president "has had a serious drop in public opinion surveys in recent months, no matter how they've been measured." But Caddell argued that the poll results most Americans read "tend to be masking the amount of personal popularity he maintains individually, in terms of personal qualities." Moreover, the group of Cambridge Research Associates finds a "lack of intensity" among Carter's poll-measured detractors. "I have rarely seen a politician who has reached the levels in overall low ratings that Carter has which has not been accompanied by an enormous amount of...personal hostile reaction," said Caddell. The said Carter seems to escape the kind of hostility directed at such earlier presidents as Nixon, Lyndon Johnson and Truman when their popularity ratings were similarly slim. In Caddell's view, public attitudes toward Carter are more ambivalent than negative.

Ventricular fibrillation

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — Could you please tell me something about ventricular fibrillation? I have read that it can lead to sudden death. DEAR READER — Ventricular fibrillation is a very serious irregularity of the heart. The ventricles are the heavy muscular chambers that do the major pumping action for the heart. When they fibrillate they simply twitch or squirm in a slow undulating fashion and do not contract efficiently. Without adequate contraction the heart can't pump blood and there is no significant circulation. During ventricular fibrillation there is no measurable blood pressure and you can't detect any pulse in the arteries at the wrist, head or other such locations. This is the irregularity that often causes sudden death as a complication of fatty-cholesterol blockage of coronary arteries. The heart is the irregularity of the heart that I'm sure you've seen depicted on TV programs when the nurses or doctors place electric paddles on the chest and deliver an electric shock. What is the electric shock for? Well, it neutralizes all of that irregular electrical activity that's going on in the heart muscles that causes the twitching. Once it's discharged the electrical activity over the heart muscle begins to proceed in the normal organized fashion producing rhythmic regular heart contractions again. If the defibrillation process from the electric shock is rapid enough the person can be returned to a normal state. Even if ventricular fibrillation is present and there is no effective pumping of the heart you can maintain a person's life by administering closed heart massage by rhythmic pressure on the chest. I'm sending you The Health Letter number 7-4, Save a Life: Heart and Lung Arrest, which describes the life-saving procedure that can be used in these circumstances. I think all adults should know how to do this procedure and I wish that all high school students would be taught this method. In most communities the Heart Association and Red Cross offer courses in this procedure and I hope it will become a standard part of teaching at least in high school and college. DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a guy in his mid-30s and I'm in love with a girl in her late 30s. She has had a complete hysterectomy. Will the missing cervix make a difference in my sex satisfaction? If so, I do not want to marry this girl. I have heard after a hysterectomy a woman's sex life is gone if the cervix has been removed. Please answer soon as I'm planning on a decision. I have heard a man doesn't get any satisfaction if the cervix has been removed. DEAR READER — And most of what you have heard is wrong. Many women have a hysterectomy and never notice the difference as far as sex life is concerned. The cervix is relatively insensitive. Likewise the absence of the cervix is not likely to even be noticed by most men. With that kind of information I might add that it could be that you would both profit from your obtaining a good book on the normal, physiological function of sex, to find out about sensitivity and become better informed. It might improve both of your lives. Sex is like everything else. It works better if you know what you are doing. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

More Residencies Could Relieve Doctor Shortage

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Creating more residencies for medical school graduates would go a long way toward relieving Texas' doctor shortage, a Southwestern Medical School study says. "Increasing the number of residency positions to approximately the number of Texas medical school graduates... should relieve the current shortage of physicians in Texas," the study concludes. "Therefore, one way to eliminate the physician shortage is to increase state funding for graduate medical education," it says. Constantine Stefenu and Mary L. Pate reported on the study in the June issue of "Texas Medicine," monthly magazine of the Texas Medical Association. They found out where 778 doctors who graduated from the University of Texas Southwestern Medical School from 1961 to 1970 took their residencies and later settled down to practice. Eighty-two percent of the Texans who took their residencies in this state remained, while only 34 percent of those who left the state for their residencies returned. Of the out-of-state doctors who graduated from Southwestern and took their residencies in Texas, 73 percent remained to enter practice here. Only 22 percent of the non-Texans who graduated from Southwestern but left the state for residencies came back to Texas to practice. The writers said the study "strongly indicates that a high degree of association exists between taking a residency in Texas and remaining to practice medicine in the state." The 1977 Legislature authorized state subsidies for

Trojans Beat ASU Before Record Crowd

By ELLEN HADDOW
Associated Press Writer
OMAHA, Neb. (AP) - "He gatted it out." Southern California Coach Rod Dedeaux said about pitcher Rod Boxberger after the top-ranked Trojans became the last undefeated team in the College World Series by beating second-ranked Arizona State.

Boxberger retired 12 of the final 13 Sun Devil batters as the Trojans took a 5-2 victory Tuesday night. He pitched his way out of a bases-loaded jam in the fifth inning after allowing a run-scoring single and gave up a solo home run to Jamie Jallen in the sixth.

"Then Boxberger got tough. It took a lot of guts," said USC's Chris Smith, who doubled home what proved to be the winning run.

The NCAA All-American team was announced before the game, and USC pitcher Bill Bordley was selected along with three Sun Devils - none of whom could hit Boxberger very well.

Bob Horner, the Sun Devils' third baseman who was the first player selected in the major league draft earlier Tuesday, was hitless in four times at bat. Hubie Brooks, the third player taken in the draft, banded only a single and Chris Bando - Milwaukee infielder Sal Bando's young brother - got two singles, flied out twice and struck out.

Brooks committed three errors in the game after a collision at second base in the third inning with Southern Cal's Bob Skube. Brooks turned the double play but had to get first aid for a cut on his shin.

"He (Brooks) was spiked and the trainer sewed him up. I felt the slide was out toward right center field," said Sun Devil Coach Jim Brock. "It's a judgment call. The umpire was there and is a good and honorable man. From where I was, it looked like an illegal slide."

"Anybody standing on the base is open season," said Skube. "The umpires knew what they were doing."

The biggest crowd ever to see a College World Series game - 15,261 - packed Rosenblatt Stadium for the showdown Tuesday night. Fans were lined up on the field along both foul lines all the way to the fence, but never interfered with play.

"You can play the Rose Bowl football game and it is all over," Dedeaux said. "But here, after a night like this before that

Finley, A's Draft High School Hurler

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Charlie Finley, the owner and manager of the Oakland A's, was barking on the phone to his stand-in manager, Jack McKeon.

"Hey Jack, who you got pitching on Sunday?"

"Broberg," answered McKeon.

"Scratch him, I got a replacement."

"Who he?"

"Michael Thomas Morgan."

"Yeah?"

"Yeah!"

"That's the way to go boss," Finley, the P.T. Barnum of the baseball world, has done it again, creating excitement and

Tennis Coach Resigns

The Hereford Whitefaces are looking for a tennis coach for the second time in as many years after HHS mentor Sheila Watley turned in her resignation to athletic director Don Cumpton Tuesday.

Watley, who replaced Steve Thomas as the Herd net coach last season, is leaving the HHS post to move to Spearman, where she has obtained a teaching job. Watley's husband will also begin a compost company in nearby Gruver.

crowd, you still have to come back again tomorrow."

USC will meet North Carolina tonight, with Ernie Mauritsen the probable Trojan starter. Pitching for the Tar Heels will be Greg Norris, 14-1, who was named to the All-American team along with USC hurler Bordley.

Arizona State, like North Carolina and Miami carrying one loss, meets the Hurricanes in tonight's first game.

Bando summed up the Sun Devils' attitude following the loss to USC:

"We're not through yet. We've got tomorrow."

String Tournney Winners Listed

The team of Gene and Norma Hendon and Fidencio Cantu won the Hereford Womens Golf Association (HWGA) "String Tournment" last Sunday with a nine-hole score of 26 to edge three other teams which shot 27s.

Teams were handicapped by being given lengths of string, which could be used in lieu of strokes, during the round of golf. "The number of strokes cut off of the score depended on the length of the string (the string) was used for," Lynn Carter of the HWGA explained.

Placing second in the event were Susie Mannschreck and Joe and Doris Zinser. The team of Keith Kitchens, Jo Charest, and Jackie Redwine placed third, while Dana Rush, Debra Owen, and Sherry Sargent were fourth.

The next event on the HWGA slate will be a Solo Club Tournament July 22. The tournney will be followed by a dinner-dance at the country club.

Horner, the NCAA career home run leader with 56, expects to come to terms with the Braves after the College World Series this week. Then he will be sent to Savannah of the Southern League for seasoning.

Hamilton Double Winner

Roger Hamilton of Hereford was a double winner when the Magic Triangle Competition Association held motocross competition Sunday, June 4. Hamilton won both the Open Class and Maxi-Man Class races at the event.

Plainview's Danny Hooks was the only non-Hereford champion crowned on the day. Hooks won the 250cc Class race, one of six classes held. Other winners included, all from Hereford, Paul Jorde (100cc), Kris Cardinal - (125cc), and Kirk Andrews (Enduro).

Also, Mark White of Hereford placed second to Andrews in the Enduro Class.

Morgan was the fourth player selected in the draft, which continues today. Until Finley went on his youth kick, the major interest of the draft focused on the domination by College World Series contenders, Arizona State and Southern California.

Arizona State had four players selected, including No. 1 pick Bob Horner by Atlanta, No. 3 selection Hubert Brooks by the New York Mets, and Chris Bando by Cleveland. Bando is the brother of Milwaukee third baseman Sal

'McDonald's Night' To Kick Rodeo Off

By BOB NIGH
Sports Editor

HEREFORD - This year's edition of the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame All-Girl Rodeo, which will run August 25-27 at the Hereford Riders Club Arena, will get a festive start Friday, August 25 with "McDonald's Night."

Rodeo goes 12 and under will be admitted free to the opening-night performance when they display any type wrapper or soft drink cup proving they made a purchase at one of the several area McDonald's Restaurants.

"And, to add to the festivities for the rodeo weekend, the McDonald's trademark, Ronald McDonald himself, will be on hand for the rodeo parade Saturday," rodeo general chairman Jim Tucker of Hereford announced.

The well-known and widely-loved clown will act as marshal for the rodeo parade, which will wind its way through downtown Hereford beginning at 2 p.m. Saturday, August 26.

The theme for this year's parade is "Women of the American West." The parade is under the guidance of Harold Wheeler of Hereford. "We are trying to secure as many entrants as possible for the parade," Wheeler said. "And, there will be some good prizes awarded in several categories."

Over 200 professional cowgirls are expected for the rodeo this year, which will feature the induction of seven women into the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame, which is located in downtown Hereford. The seven, which were selected from a field of 26 nominees, will be enshrined into the Hall during a special ceremony during the final rodeo performance Sunday.

The new athletic director was expected to be introduced at a news conference at 2:30 p.m. following a closed session of the board.

The seven inductees this year include Wanda Bush, Faye Blesing, Marge Greenough, Enid Justin, Tad Lucas, Fannie Sperry Steele, and Karen Vold.

In addition to the parade and induction ceremony, dances will be held following both the Friday and Saturday night rodeo performances. Mel Street, along with his "Borrowed Angels Band" will perform Friday, while Grand Ole Opry star Del Reeves will provide the music Saturday night.

And, the art of some 75 women artists from the Western United States will be on display at the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame in an art show, which will be held throughout the rodeo weekend.

The Flying "J" Rodeo and Cattle Company of Hamshire, Texas has been secured as stock producer for the rodeo this year. The Flying "J" is owned and operated by Johnny Ackel, and has furnished stock for many of the top all-girl rodeos sanctioned by the GRA.

While in the arena the girls will be aided by rodeo clowns Steve and Dave Holland of Lubbock. The Holland brothers are experienced rodeo clowns, having worked numerous events throughout the Panhandle.
