Deaf Smith County voters picked Glen Nelson as the new county judge and named O.K. Neal as justice of the peace in the Democratic runoff election here Saturday. A good turnout of 2,539 votes were counted, compared to the record 4,390 in the primary.

James Voyles, county commissioner of Precinct 4, successfully retained his post in the runoff challenge from Stan Fry. In the only statewide race on the ballot, local voters gave a big margin to John Poerner for railroad commissioner.

Nelson, who gave up his JP seat to seek the county judgeship, polled 1,519 votes, while challenger L.B. [Scat] Russell received 1,122. Neal won by a wider margin in the JP race, capturing every voting

Prices are high now, as the beef industry recovers from its worst depression since the 1930s, but they are going to be lower than those paid by most other people in the world.

While the average price of boneless sirloin steak was up to almost $2 in this area, it was $2.12 in Washington, D.C., $15.15 in Tokyo, $4.99 in Stockholm. $3.62 in Rome, $3.32 in Paris, and $3.13

JERUSALEM (AP) - The death toll rose to six Saturday in a Palestinian bomb blast on a city bus apparently timed to mark the 11th anniversary of Israel's capture of Jerusalem.

A 17-year-old Israeli youth died during the night. Five others, including 30-year-old Richard Fishman of Silver Spring, Md., a medical student in Israel, died in the bombing Friday

The attack came as Israel prepared to celebrate the 11th anniversary today of its capture of East Jerusalem, including the Western Wall, Judaism's holiest shrine.

The eastern half of the city was taken from Jordan during the Six-Day war on June 7, 1967, but today marks the anniversary in the Hebrew calendar.

Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek said he hoped the attack would not mar the festivities. "I would not want these bastards to let our festivities be in any way diverted." he said. That would be the success they would pray for."

Twenty persons were injured when the bomb exploded Friday in rush hour traffic as the bus turned into a suburb near Yad Vashem. Israel's memorial to the 6 million Jews exterminated by the Nazis.

The Palestine Liberation Organization in Beirut said its Al Fatch faction was responsible for the blast and that the 13-pound bomb was planted by "an underground squad" that escaped.

However, Israeli police said they arrested several suspects. The American victim was identified as Richard Fishman, 30, of Silver Spring, Md. A U.S. Embassy official said Fishman was registered as a medical

"They're very well trained," McPherson said of the eight deputies and sheriff's reservists who comprise the tactical force."We hope we never have the need for them in a violent situation, although they come in useful in roadblocks or escapes.

"They also have the ability to work as a rescue operation

The SWAT team can also utilize an arsenal of shotguns and rifles in a hostage situation.

We haven't had any situations like a man barricading himself in a house with his family or a robber taking hostages at a store, but we couldn't afford to have to rely on Amarillo or someplace else for assistance if those situations ever came up. It's like insurance.

When either routine or hard-to-solve crimes are committed, the sheriff's office has a wide variety of modern equipment at its disposal including an identification kit, which a witness can use to construct a face, a trace metal detection kit, which is used to determine if a subject has fired a weapon recently, a fingerprinting kit an.4 a polygraph.

The identification kit contains transparencies of almost every known facial feature and has been used to construct composite drawings of those believed to have committed a crime.

Sheriff McPherson demonstrates how he would use a .45 caliber machine gun if the occasion ever should arise. The gun is part of a large and diversified weapons arsenal in the sheriff's office. Poerner, appointed to the railroad commission earlier this year, appeared headed toward a landslide victory over Sadler in the Demo runoff. The winner still must face Republican James Lacy of Midland in November. Poerner had 272,935 to Sadler's 122,526 in early statewide reports Saturday night.

Commission To Postpone Rate Increase

The Hereford City Commission has only one item on Monday night's regular semi-monthly meeting agenda--passing a resolution to postpone a Southwestern Public Service rate increase for 120 days.

The commission voted last month to decide the fairness of the SPS proposed rate hike, which would increase residential rates by 10 percent. Cities have the right to set their own electricity rates, and Hereford commissioners decided in May to schedule hearings to determine a fair rate

The commission also decided not to intervene on behalf of rural customers, also to be affected by the increase if it is approved by the Public Utility Commission in a hearing to soon be scheduled.

Possible Mercy Killings Investigated

BALTIMORE (AP) - An investigation of possible mercy killings of one or more terminally ill patients at Maryland General Hospital has been started by the Baltimore Police Department.

We have found no evidence of any crime at this point," said Howard Gersh, an assistant state's attorney.

"Our investigation involves rumors at the hospital that one or more terminally ill patients in the intensive care unit may have been terminated by euthanasia.' Gersh added.

He said the investigation, initiated by the 318-bed, privately owned hospital, may take months to complete.

Gersh and Clark Jeunette, a hospital spokesman, refused to pinpoint the time frame or discuss the possible suspect.

They did acknowledge, however, that the employee had resigned from the nursing staff within hours after the matter was brought to the attention of police.

They denied published reports that a hospital employee told superiors of having seen another employee unplug a respirator from a male patient who died

"We have no witnesses who told us they saw anyone's respirator unplugged," Gersh said. "If they had seen it, it would have been much easier. We wouldn't be doing this.

Friday Night Blaze Kills 7 Children

COHOES, N.Y. (AP) - Seven children and one man, all believed to be from the same family, were killed in an apartment fire in the Albany suburb of Cohoes. according to police.

Police said several firemen were also injured in the blaze, which started at about 11:30 p.m. Friday and was not controlled for about three hours.

It was not clear how many others lived in the four-apartment building, but Sgt.John Szymaszek said it was believed all of them escaped the two-story, wood-frame building without injury.

Neighbors said the dead were John Gratto and his seven children, aged 4 months to 9 years. They said the children's pregnant mother, Sue, had not been injured.

Neighbor Al Knapp said he and his wife were watching television when they heard a scream. He said he ran out on the porch, saw the flames, and heard a woman screaming, "My kids are in there." Knapp said he tried to enter the burning building but "something popped and the whole place went up.'

Fire Chief Ray Lamora said he thought the man and children, whose charred bodies had to be dugout of the rubble, had died of asphyxiation.

"We had a very hard time," he said. "We actually had to dig them out."

Aluminum Wiring Considered Dangerous

WASHINGTON (AP) - A congressman savs families living in homes with aluminum wiring installed between 1965 and 1973 "may be facing an unnecessary and unreasonable risk of injury" because of potential fire hazards.

Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., chairman of a House investigations subcommittee, made the comments Friday after hearing testimony from two federal officials that 1.5 million homeowners have not been warned adequately about potential fire hazards in aluminum wiring systems.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission last year filed suit against 26 manufacturers of aluminum wiring to have "old technoogy" wiring systems declared "imminently hazardous consumer products." However, the case is tied up in legal arguments over whether the commission has jurisdiction over aluminum wiring.

Old-technology systems generally were installed in homes between 1965 and 1973, said Robert Noonan an attorney for the commission.

Robert Kelly, also of the commission, testified Friday that the public generally is unaware of alleged problems with aluminum systems, and that most people don't even know what type of wiring they WBBM said it got its story, aired Friday night, from three sources.

A neutron activation analysis kit used by the sheriff's office detects shot powders and can be used to match a gun and bullet.

"We use the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and the FBI labs. The samples we sent them can tell how much barium and animony were in the shot powder. It's totally reliable and admissable in court," McPherson said.

The addition of a polygraph (lie detector) in the sheriff's office will allow Chief Deputy Art Burotn, who underwent seven weeks of training to learn how to operate the machine, to determine if a subject or witness is telling the truth--a phase of crime-fighting which the county was forced to share with the Amarillo police in the past.

Burton enrolled in the Baster School of Lie Detection in San Diego, Calif., earlier this year to learn how to operate the polygraph and question subjects. He cannot use the machine until he passes the state polygraph board examination, which he plans to take in July.

probably an oversight, but it's still

Over the years, we've found that most elected officials are honest, dedicated, and law-abiding citizens concerned with doing the right thing at the right time. Many times they are unaware of the provisions of the Open Meetings Law. We feel the appropriate official--city manager, county judge, school superintendent, hospital administrator, etc.-should explain these provisions for a legal board meeting.

Anytime a majority of any governmental board gets together in Texas, it constitutes a meeting. In order to do so, an agenda must be posted in a public place at least 72 hours in advance of the meeting, unless it is an emergency session. THE BRAND has a standing request with each board in town that agendas be mailed to us, and that we be notified prior to any emergency meeting.

Executive (closed door) sessions are allowed only for the discussion of personnel, land acquisition, litigation with an attorney, child discipline and a few other minor items. The reason for an executive session must be listed on the agenda and any action (vote) must come in open session.

He said there is no evidence at this point that consumers will not have adequate supplies of meat the next few years. Consumer prices for beef should be comparable to those of 1973 in terms of relative purchasing power.

Recovery of the beef industry from its worst depression since the 1930s will undoubtedly cause the consumer price index to go up, Hopkin said.

The bomb ripped the rear of the bus apart, shearing it into tangled shreds and sending hunks of glass and sheet metal hurtling through the air like shrapnel.

Police described the bomb as an 81mm mortar shell with a watch-operated detonating device. They said the death toll would have been higher had the rush-hour bus been full.

"Thank God the bus was half empty," said Avraham Flazner, a former Chicago resident who suffered a minor shoulder wound. "When I heard the explosion I got up and walked away. I was in a daze. I was lucky to be sitting in the middle of the bus.

Water Rights Studied

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) Settlement of a large water rights claim is like trying several hundred lawsuits at once, a House subcommittee heard

"There are 200 parties in the Middle Rio Grande settlement. We've been in court two years and we're halfway through," said Doug Charoom, assistant chief of the attorney general's environmental protection divi-

"The adjudication process in the courts and the administrative level is a very cumbersome process. Each adjudication suit is actually a combination of one to several hundred regular-sized lawsuits", he told the House Natural Resources Committee water rights subcommittee

Under the 1967 Water Rights Adjudication Act, Texas was divided into 59 water areas. Claims from residents and organization to use water are investigated and processed through evidentiary hearings and district courts. Some 8,340 cases remain to be settled.

The subcommittee's meeting was to discuss the status of claims settlements. Rep. Tom Massey, D-San Angelo, asked what could be done to speed up the process.

It will take time to familiarize state judges with the adjudication procedure, Charoom said, adding that lengthy arguments on the constitutionality of the Water Rights Adjudication Act surface at each suit.

Harvey D. Davis, executive director of the Texas Water Resources Department, said the turnover of young lawyers slows the process.

"We employ young lawyers, And I find the young lawyer doesn't like to travel one week a month and be away from home," Davis said.

Four additional lawyers have been authorized to join the 32-member legal staff, Davis said.

Massey said he remembered during settlement of Concho River claims, the hearing examiner left and the process was set back considerably.

Taxes Consuming

There's good news for most middle income taxpayers this week. You worked the first five months of the year for the federal government, now you can'try earning some money for yourself!

That's what statistics reveal--that most middle income taxpayers fork over about five months of their earnings in federal taxes. During the past few months, we've had candidates come by and express concern over voter apathy.

Our explanation is that voters have given up in effecting any change in Austin or Washington-no matter who is elected to what office, nothing happens. The government spending-and the taxes--keep going higher and higher.

Citizens realize they have lost control of the government and their elected representatives are about as effective as a teaspoon on the beach in altering or changing the course of our government "of, by and for the people."

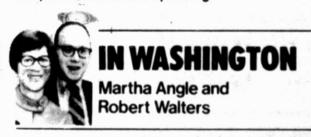

Spending at both the state and national level are more at the mercy of special interest groups than the people. These groups are highly organized, highly motivated and highly effective. It seems everyone is organized to tap the till except the middle income taxpayer who bears the brunt of the till-tapping.

An entire subculture has developed among till-tappers, so that cities, counties and states employ fulltime people to extract an endless number of grants and subsidies from the federal till. "Everyone is doing it, so we've got to get our share" is a common excuse. Our Panhandle Regional Planning Commission is nothing more than an organized effort on behalf of cities and counties in the Panhandle to extract an ever-increasing amount of grants from the federal .

It seems government bureaucracy has grown too big, too cumbersome, too involved for any representative or senator to curb or stop. It is our personal opinion that only the citizens can regain control of the government operation. There is a faint glimmer of hope on the horizon that citizens are becoming aroused enough to take action.

In Tennessee recently, 64.7 percent of the voters passed a constitutional amendment that puts a lid on statewide spending. Similar action is being sought in about 30 states. One such amendment ties the rate of increase in state spending to the rate of growth of the economy and requires that any exception be approved by the

If a lid can be placed on state spending across the nation, an organization will then exist to place a cap or lid on federal spending.

'Special' Not Profitable

WASHINGTON (NEA) - "There are no villains and there is nothing especially sinister in what anybody is doing, says noted writer Herman Wouk. "There is nothing evil about it. It's just the way the balance-sheet mind works.

Wouk, best known as the author of "The Caine Mutiny," is talking about a phenomenon that has turned book publishing into an industry dominated by a few powerful corporations, most of them conglomerates.

Wouk expressed his fears about the future of the publishing business in recent testimony before a Senate subcommittee. Three days later, Joseph D. Duffey, chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities, voiced similar concerns. In a speech before the Association of American

Publishers, Duffey referred to the fading of a revered tradition of independently owned book publishers, succeeded by "the growing conglomeration of publishers, movie-makers and television companies."

Some examples of the frightening trend that also disturbs several influential members of Congress: CBS, Inc., which controls one of the nation's three television networks, also owns two publishers of hardback books - Praeger and Holt, Rinehart & Winston - and two paperback producers — Fawcett and Popular Library RCA, Inc., which controls another network, NBC,

Time, Inc., best known as a magazine publisher, also owns the Book-of-the-Month Club and three book publishers — Viking, Penguin and Little, Brown, as well as interests in television production companies and cable TV. The issue has become a matter of concern in government

'it is the nature of a conglomerate" that subsidiaries acquired by the corporation "shall show not only a profit, but a certain fixed-policy margin of profit.' That balance sheet discipline can be valuable in marketing many goods and services, he concedes. But "publishing is something very special" because books with the greatest social, artistic and literary value often are not commercial successes Because many publishing houses now are tied to firms with large investments in the motion picture and television industries, there is increased pressure to produce popular 'blockbusters' that can generate extra profits for the parent company.

"Publishers may find themselves relegated to the role of suppliers of raw material to satisfy the insatiable demands of the visual media for the new and dramatic," warns

There are other potential dangers as well. Conglomerates with a broad range of economic interests may exert subtle pressure on their publishing houses to discourage production of books that might offend influential politicians, potential business allies and other powerful inter-

THE SEARCH

The media people are upset. Mad, may be a better word for it. The Supreme Court ruled that the police could search their offices without a search warrant. That sounds like a police state and the media should be upset. There are all kinds of bad possibilities which could come from this kind of thing. Harrassment could become a real threat. If the police did not like the way a newspaper or T.V. station was covering the news they could make life miserable by constant searches whether there was anything to look for or not.

To the media people this is an infringment of the right to free speech. They are worried and well they should be. However, there is a bright side to this story.

I have been in several newspaper offices in my time. I have also been in T.V. studios and radio stations. I have never been in one yet where the people were not frantically looking for something someone has misplaced. In newspaper offices it is a piece of copy that has disappeared and no one knows how. In radio stations it is a commercial tape that vanished into thin air. In T.V. studios it is a film due to be run in 3 minutes but lost. Have you ever watched a newscast when some film was not available due to technical difficulty? The technical difficulty is they lost the thing. Let them come in and search, maybe they can help you find the stuff you are looking for.

It is a law of the profession. All media offices are a disorganized pile of papers, notes, tapes, film, chewing gum wrappers, cigarette butts, Pepsi Cola cans and miscellaneous chaos. If there were valuable information there no policeman would have the courage to wade in to look for it. Dare them to search! You are safe.

If they found it they could not read it. There has never been a reporter in the history of man who could write. When I see something one of those guys write I do not know whether to read it or get a prescription filled with

How Less Can Be More

WASHINGTON - There's a new buzzword in economics today. It's called the "Laffer curve." Arthur Laffer is an economist who pointed out what should be obvious: In any economic system, there are always two rates of taxation which yield the same revenue.

For example, if the tax rate is zero, the government gets no revenue.And if the tax rate is 100 percent, the government gets no revenue, because all economic activity will take place as

Carry that concept a little farther: At a tax rate of, say, 20 percent, the government might be able to get the same amount of revenue that it would at a tax rate of 80 percent. Why? Because the lower tax rate would stimulate productive economic activity. And 20 percent of a bigger pie can be as large as 80 percent of a smaller pie.

The significance of the Laffer curve is this: It tells us that there comes a point where the government can actually increase its revenue by cutting taxes.

Many reputable economists believe we are now at that point. That is, if we cut taxes--especially taxes on capital formation-the economy will boom, and the government will actually come out ahead, along with everyone else. There are several good places to make the cuts.

Representative William Steiger of Wisconsin has focused on one of them. He wants to put the capital gains tax rate back where it was in 1969, at a maximum of 25 percent. Under the current law, capital gains taxes can approach 50 percent for individuals and 30 percent for

This proposal, known as the Steiger Amendment, has attracted strong support in Congress. In fact, it has 60 sponsors in the Senate.

One well-known economic study group -- Chase Econometric Associates - estimates that passage of the Steiger Amendment would raise the annual growth rate of the Gross National Product from a level of 3.4 percent to a level of 3.6 percent and create 440,000 new jobs. Federal revenue would increase by $45 billion and the budget deficit would be cut by $16 billion. All of these figures are estimates of the effect that would be created on economic activity between now and 1985, if the amendment were adopted.

According to the Chase economists, "the reduction in capital gains taxes will raise stock market prices, which in turn will stimulate capital spending and economic growth. The increase in economic activity will increase federal government revenues." All of this economic jargon is just a complicated way of saying this: If you leave more profit in the hands of those who have earned it, they will use it productively.

Unfortunately, at this time the Carter Administration is opposed to this beneficial tax cut. Not on economic grounds, but on the same tired old theological grounds.

Bootleg Philosopher:

Big City Mentality?

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Deaf Smith County grass farm gets riled up a little this week about big city attitudes toward small towns.

Dear Editor:

According to an article I read the other day, Washington politicians, when they get up in the morning, first glance at the headlines on the front page of their paper - I guess to see if any new war has broken out or if any of their friends have been caught red-handed -- and then turn to a gossip column on an inside page.

An official said this marks a return to "the village mentality." I don't believe it.

got to thinking about what "village mentality" means, not what big city people intend it to mean. I used to think I'd discovered a point when I claimed it takes just as much ability to run a bank or any other business in a small town as it does to run their counterparts in a big city, but I had it backwards.

I should have said it takes as much ability to run a big city outfit as it does a small town business. This occurred to me when I read about the head of a big helicopter company claiming he didn't know his company was spending hundreds of thousands of dollars to bribe foreign governments to buy his machines. If he'd had average village mentality he'd have caught on that something was funny.

And here's another example of the lack of village mentality. According to another news story, two professors at Yale University have designed a course to teach teachers how to teach children how to watch television. They want to make sure the kids can distinguish between programs and commercials and between fantasy and reality, so, I guess, they won't try to walk straight up the side of a building like Spider Man.

Try as hard as I can, I can't think of a comment to make about this. I don't believe there's a single kid in Hereford who'd have to go to Yale to learn how to watch television. We've got too much village mentality around here for that.

Yours faithfully,

Jack Maguire:

Talk of Texas

IT'S A WOMAN'S WORLD -More than a century before the proposed Equal Rights Amendment was even thought about, Texas women were guaranteed equal property rights with men.

On January 26, 1839, the Congress of the Republic of Texas passed an act guaranteeing homestead rights to every citizen. The law exempt from foreclosure certain property, regardless of whether it was owned by a man or a woman.

The act permitted a head of household, regardless of sex, to retain "50 acres of land or one town lot, including his or her homestead, and improvements" up to specified dollar amounts. It also prohibited the taking as collateral for debt "the tools, apparatus and books belonging to the trade or profession of any citizen."

The law also guaranteed that any Texan, male or female, could keep up to five milk cows, one yoke of work oxen or one horse, as many as 20 hogs and "one year's provisions."

TRAVELING TEXAS - One of the newest additions to the National Register of Historic Places is a windmill in Pecos County.

It's a Railroad Eclipse Windmill and it's on the Canon Ranch near Sheffield. It was erected in 1898 to supply power to pump water from a well at the ranch headquarters.

Built of wood, steel and iron, it is one of the few such windmills in the country which are still operating.

AH, SHOOT - Texas hasn't had its own army since 1845 and its "navy" has been reduced to some ceremonial vessels. But watch out! The "Twin Sisters" are in action

These are exact replicas of the two cannon which helped to win the Battle of San Jacinto. They survived Sam Houston's win over Santa Anna's troops and went on to serve the Confederacy in the Civil War. Somehow they disappeared in that conflict and were never found.

However, a few years ago drawings of the "Twin Sisters" were discovered in the State Archives and a research team went to work finding the specifics of their history. Then, as a Bicentennial gift to the nation, replicas of the guns were cast.

They were turned over to the Guard of the Republic, a statewide honorary organization of commissioned Army and Air guardsmen. Now the "Twin Sisters" have their own battery. Dressed in uniforms of the Republic of Texas, the guard transports the two cannon around the state and fires them on special occasions.

THE CHANGING TIMES — Blacks and whites were never segregated in the Baptist Church in Independence, Washington County. Men and women

Slaves and their owners sat together in the sanctuary, but students of Baylor University (founded there in 1846) were segregated by sex. Boys sat on the right side of the church; girls on the

Paul Harvey:

Costly Abortions

Abortion-yes or no.

If I have not injected this commentary into that debate it is because I have considered the issue so morally and ethically sensitive that it should be left up to a woman and her God and her doctor. Nobody else. She does not need Paul Harvey's advice--nor the government's intercession. But the Congress is having to deal with the question of how much if any government aid should be given to women who want abortions and cannot afford them. And the appropriations committees of the Senate and House are having to make that politically volatile decision in an election year.

In 1975 the government did pay for some 250,000 to 300,000 abortions at a cost of approximately $50 million.

But last year the Supreme Court decided that, where a woman has a constitutional right to decide for herself whether she will have an abortion, the government is not obliged to pay for it.

The emerging position of government is that the woman will get no financial hel unless her life is in danger or unless the baby was conceived as a result of rape or incest.

HEW Secretary Joseph Califano is vehemently opposed to allowing any federal money for abortions.

With respect for the opposing views in this matter, it must be recognized that abortions are now available and legal to any woman who can afford to pay.

One-in-seven births in the United States is to an unmarried mother. But among black women--according to the National Center for Health Statistics--the rate is one-in-two.

Half of all black babies are born illegitimate. And that proportion is increasing.

About half of all unmarried mothers are teen-agers. Eighty-one percent are under 24.

Those numbers would indicate that most of those mothers did not want those babies. And that introduces one more consideration which may deserve more deliberation than it is getting. Those of us who deal daily with news are never out of earshot even for a day of the cries of battered babies. And any debate over the rightness and wrongness of intercepting the life of a fetus must take into consideration the perhaps larger cruelty when babies are born unwanted.

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) - Defending champion Bay Darnell, a 47-year-old veteran from Deerfield, Ill., figures he has a good chance of becoming the first two-time winner of the Texas 500 today even though he knows his Camaro isn't the fastest car here.

You want something reliable, that's going to run steady all day," said Darnell, whose upset victory last year was the highlight of his long career. "If you put that together with good pit stops, you're going to be in good shape.

"Having the fastest car isn't going to do you any good if you have trouble. You can get lapped down here and still have a chance of finishing well," he

That was the position in which Darnell found himself a year ago, when the faster cars of A.J.

Foyt, Roger McCluskey, Ron Hutcherson, Ramo Stott and Skip Manning all dropped out. In fact, Darnell, who qualified only 10th-fastest, ended up more than 12 miles ahead of the second-place driver just by keeping up a charitable pace for his car.

"The Camaro is a real good car for the short track, where we' do most of our racing. It seems to be at a disadvantage on the superspeedways like this one, though. It's pretty hard on the suspensions and so forth," said Darnell, who divides his time between his piggy-back truck transport business and building and driving U.S. Auto Club stock cars.

"I sold the Camaro I won here with last year to another guy who has it entered here for this race. I built a new one for myself and my teammate. It should be pretty good; it's a newer model with a little better silhouette."

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) Michigan sophomore Steve Howe has a simple pitching philosophy - trying to get the ball over the plate, low.

"It sure worked tonight," Howe said Friday after he blanked hard-hitting Baylor with a one-hitter 4-0 in the first round of the College World Series. The Wolverines will meet Southern California, 9-3 winners over Miami, Sunday

The Bears had been hitting at a clip of .300, and Coach Mickey Sullivan said Friday night's loss to Michigan was the "least we've hit in five years."

Baylor brought out the best in Howe, and also in another -Wolverine sophomore, Vic Ray. Ray hadn't hit a home run all year. But he slammed one with, two aboard in the fifth inning that gave Howe all the runs he

Ali Makes Change

CHICAGO (AP) - For the first time since he rose to boxing stardom, Muhammad Ali has worked out a deal that will make him his own manager, the Chicago Sun-Times reports in Sunday's editions.

The newspaper said that basically, the new settlement phases out Herbert Muhammad's role as Ali's manager. Muhammad, it said, had been getting a one-third cut of Ali's earnings. Under a deal reached at a Chicago law firm, the newspap-

Trade, Marriage Turn Clyde Around

CLEVELAND (AP) - Cleveland Indians pitcher David Clyde says his trade to the Indians and his marriage last fall gave him two new starts in

His first marriage had fallen apart and his pitching career in Texas went the same way after a blissful start.

But now things are looking

Clyde, 23, was traded to the Indians from the Texas Rangers in February.

He had undergone shoulder surgery in May 1976 after beginning the season with an 0-4 record. But he has made a successful comeback.

Now under Indians pitching coach Harvey Haddix he has slowed his delivery and learned more about throwing strikes.

He faced the Milwaukee Brewers Friday, looking for his fourth victory in four starts. He had worked 33 innings with the Indians and allowed five earned runs, for an earned run average of 1.36.

His wife, Patty, who is expecting a baby in July, says Clyde was glad to change

"Boy, do I remember when he was traded," she said. "He called me from Florida where the Rangers were training. He wanted the trade, a fresh start."

Clyde says his wife has brought about a change in his personal life. He added that he now runs two miles daily and the thought of his family keeps him going.

"I hate it," he said. "I hate to run. When I start to hurt, I think of my wife. Then I think of the baby we're going to have in July. I'm not living for myself anymore. I've got a family. And then the two miles are done.

"A few years ago I needed ttling down. I was wild for a while. I did nothing other 18and 19-year-old kids didn't do the first time they were away from home. The only thing is about 200 million people read about them."

Patty said things are really looking up now that David is with the Indians.

"I have a good feeling about this year," she said. "I really like the Cleveland organization. I like honesty. They've been honest with him. They let him know what they were going to do. When they don't tell him something, he doesn't talk much about it. But there is a storm brewing up there in that

Rono Sets Record

By BERT ROSENTHAL AP Sports Writer

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) Remarkable Henry Rono of Washington State, running despite an injured foot. smashed his meet record in the 3,000 meter steeplechase Saturday with a time of 8 minutes 12.39 seconds at the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships.

Rono's clocking bettered the time of 8:18.63 he had set during Thursday's qualifying heat and ended the three-year reign of James Munyala of Texas-El Paso.

Munyala had been attempting to become only the second runner in NCAA history to win the same event, or its equivalent, four times.

But he was over-matched by his fellow Kenyan.

Rono, forced to withdraw from Friday's 10,000 meter race because of the injury after having set meet records in the steeplechase and the 5,000 meter race during Tursday's qualifying, came back with a vengeance in beating Munyala for the first time.

Rono let Hilary Tuwei of Richmond set the pace for the first half mile, before surging in front. The Cougars' sophomore held the lead the rest of the way, continually widening his margin, especially on the final lap, when he virtually sprinted

Rono also holds the world record of 8:05.4 for the steeplechase, set earlier this Munyala finished a distant second in 8:24.0. Henry Marsh of Brigham Young was third and Tuwei wound up fourth. After the race, Rono said, "My foot hurt a little on the water jumps. My aim was to run the same as Thrusday. The early pace was very slow and I was feeling weak at the start.

"I wanted to run with him (Munyala), then in the middle of the race break away," added

Munyala was disappointed with his showing.

"I was not expecting to run that bad a race," he said. "The weather was too hot and there was this burning in my chest. "I'm glad he ran now," said

Pate, a 23-year-old from Mobile, Ala., whose best finish as a pro was a tie for 36th place in the Oklahoma City Open, led Wally Armstrong, Charles Coody and Andy Bean, all 1 stroke behind Pate. Palmer got only one break - when rain hit while he was able to wait out the storm in the house he owns on the 15th fairway.

Pate, who was Armstrong's playing partner for the third round, dropped six birdie putts ranging from two to 20 feet and never took more than two putts on any hole.

Armstrong scored six birdies including one with a 25-foot putt. But he suffered a bogey late in the round to keep him 1 stroke behind Pate.

Leader Husak Satisifies Both Soviets, Czechs

Editor's Note: The writer recently visited Czecheslevakia and was expelled after interviewing a member of the Charter 77 dissident movement.

> By ROBERT H. REID Associated Press Writer

BONN, West Germany (AP) - Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev's visit to Czechoslovakia appears designed to shore up President Gustav Husak, plagued by a persistent dissident movement and challenges within his Communist Western diplomats in Prague believe Brezhnev's support is a major reason the 65-year-old Husak has stayed in power since the Kremlin picked him nearly a decade ago to roll back Alexander Dubcek's liberal reforms.

The Soviets, who keep an estimated 90,000 troops on Czechoslovak soil, want to emphasize their support for Husak as the 10th anniversary of their August 21, 1968 invasion draws near.

"The Soviets are apparently quite satisfied with Husak," said one Western diplomat. "He represents stability and continuity and that's what they want."

At the beginning of the year, unofficial reports reaching the West indicated Husak was under attack within party circles for his handling of the stagnating economy and the Charter 77 dissident

One report said Husak actually resigned at one point but was talked into returning by pro-Soviet elements. Another claimed ultra-hardliners were lobbying to split the posts of president and party leader and relegating Husak to the less influential presidency. Although there was no confirmation of the rumors from official sources, Husak mentioned them in a speech last February on the 30th anniversary of the Communist coup.

"There is no crisis here nor will there be," he said. "Let the dogs bark. The caravan goes on."

One of Husak's leading critics was said to have been Jaroslav Hejna, regional party secretary for southern Bohemia. Hejna, 54 and a rising star in the party, was removed from his post and sent last January as ambassador to Bulgaria.

A Western diplomat said Hejna and other party officials from the Czech part of the country were apparently upset over the amount of attention and investment the regime was directing to the Slovak areas.

The government's handling of the dissident movement has also brought criticism, both from hardliners demanding tougher action and moderates lobbying for a softer approach.

When the dissidents published their first manifesto - Charter 77 - in January 1977, the government-controlled news media launched a campaign labeling the signers traitors, parasites and sexual deviates.

But the campaign served only to publicize the charter, which called on the government to live up to human rights guarantees in its constitution and law codes.

'There is evidence that the Soviets and others in the bloc apparently told them they were tired of trying to excuse Czechoslovakia's rather heavy-handed tactics," a diplomat said.

Despite some softening, the regime is still very sensitive about the dissidents and restricts their contacts with foreign journalists. Policemen are periodically stationed outside the apartments of leading dissidents to keep tabs on their movements and visitors.

Sources said five signers of the charter were arrested Tuesday on the first day of Brezhnev's four-day visit, presumably to prevent demonstrations.

Western observers in Prague say it is difficult to measure the impact of the dissident movement on the Czechoslovak public. Many young Czechoslovaks interviewed at random throughout Prague expressed support for the aims of the movement although none admitted to having signed its manifesto.

Hejdanek told The Associated Press more than a third of the estimated 800 signers were workers, although he conceded that the strength of the movement comes from the intellectual class in Prague.

"The situation of Czech culture is worse than in any other Socialist country," Hejdanek said. "Also as a group, the intellectuals are the worst

Eggs, Other Foods Said As Nutritious As Beef

Associated Press Writer

Trying to eat less meat to save money? You don't have to sacrifice nutrition if you know what to look for.

You will get the same amount of protein from three large eggs, for example, as you would from about a quarter of a pound of hamburger.

An Associated Press spot check shows eggs are running between 60 and 70 cents a dozen in most places; ground beef, according to the National Cattlemen's Association latest survey, is just under $1.10 a pound. Three eggs would cost from 15 to 18 cents; a quarter pound of hamburger would cost almost 28 cents.

Here, from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, are the approximate amounts of different foods required to provide 20 grams of protein, one-third the daily amount recommended roast, 5 ounces. The USDA also notes that the lowest-price meat is not necessarily the cheapest. The real cost of the meat depends on the amount you get once it is trimmed and cooked. A lean, on their lips when the house songbird is missing. It is those cursed feathers that make me the store owner's first suspect when his merchandise has been shoplifted, dropped, spilled upon or soiled in any manner. All because I wear a face that's just begging to be condemned for something.

If I were in the police line-up, I'd be the one you'd pick every time, even if I was dressed as Shirley Temple and had the dove of peace perched on my shoulder. I just have a culpable demeanor and the harder I try to appear innocent, the more feathers begin to show.

I recall one specific shopping spree when I was again under the eagle eye of the merchant, who looked upon me as if I had a swastika tatooed on my arm. I tried to assume an air of unabashed innocence, but as his glare began to singe my hair, I could hear that traitorous canary singing my guilt all the way to paradise.

The dreaded moment came. The store-owner approached me. "Madam," he began sternly, "It seems that you might be hiding something under your sweater. I hope that's not one of the towels that you were admiring on our shelves moments

I sheepishly looked down at the bulge to which he was referring. "I've been wondering about that myself," I confessed. "To be frank, I wish it was a towel, but unfortunately, I fear that it's only me and two helpings of last night's dessert in there.'

He colored slightly and inquired about the weather, my health and the white sale across the street. And then he evaporated into the appliance department, to hide behind the refrigerators perhaps'.

The worst part is when it's time to check-out. I would rather cross the Great American Desert in a station wagon carrying a Boy Scout troop than try to give a check in a large department store. My nerves simply aren't circuited to handle that kind of pressure.

If I had the Rockefellers' checking account, I would still break out in hives when the store's credit manager arrives at the cash register to okay my check. His eyes dart from me to the check and back again as if the scarlet letters "OVERDRAWN" will magically appear on my forehead.

I develop a twitch in my right eye and beads of perspiration form on my brow while my hands begin to tremble. My mouth is as dry as if it was guiltier if I was Ma Barker.

I nearly faint with relief when he casually hands the check to the cashier and mumbles his approval.

How I envied the woman behind me who overwhelmed the entire store with her confidence and charm, quickly scribbling a check for $98 and not batting a mascara-coated eyelash while the credit manager gave it the once-over. She breezed out the double doors, leaving a trail of checks hotter than a $2 cookstove.

As I said, it's just the difference in faces--some individuals are encouraged to submit favorite recipes for the tabloid, which will be included in the June 25 edition of The Brand. Brand Women's Editor Kerrie Stelert extended an invitation to all women--and men--who enjoy cooking to share their best recipes with their fellow readers in this locale by submitting recipes for the Treasure Trove.

"This is an excellent opportunity for residents to trade their tried-and-true recipes with their neighbors in the city, 'Mrs. Stelert commented. "We feel certain that the Treasure Trove will be a popular publication with Brand readers."

Questions concerning the Treasure Trove can be directed to Mrs. Stelert, 364-2030.

Program Coping with Problems of Singles

BY KERRIE STEIERT Women's Editor

At the age of 18, Karen entered a marriage that ended abruptly twoyears later in a stormy divorce. She harbors deep feelings of rejection, failure and isolation. Karen needs help before she will be able to enter into a second marriage

Helen's story is different. She also married young, but lost her husband in a different way-he was killed in a car accident. As a young widow, Helen is trying to cope with grief, loneliness and extra responsibilities. She is searching for a way to re-enter the community's social life.

R.W. "BUD" EADES: "The singles exchange ideas and while making new friends in a singles world, they heal some of the deeper hurts."

David is a successful, single businessman who wants to be active socially, but finds "the bar-hopping game" a shallow substitute for companionship. He is lonely, bored and restless. He is hoping to find a place to meet other singles and make friends.

Although these three individuals are fictitious, they represent real people in this community with a real problem--being a single person in a society geared to couples." Whether never married or single through divorce or death, the spouseless citizens of Hereford have a program designed exclusively to meet their needs.

Informally dubbed "Singles Night," the program is a non-denominational, socially-oriented organization providing a place for singles to air their feelings, meet new people and

The current group participating in Singles Night is a happier, healthier one than when the program was initiated five years ago, according to the Rev. Doug Manning, pastor of First Baptist Church and one of the program's founders. The divorced members of the group have "recovered" from their ordeal, as have more than 300 other local singles, who found solace and friendship through the concept.

"It's not for everybody," said Bud Eades, who was one of the seven individuals who had experienced divorce and realized a need for such a program six years ago. "We floundered around for a year, mulling over how to begin the program before Doug (Manning) came to Hereford. He had tried a similar program in Tulsa and helped us get it off the Eades grants that Singles Night does not fulfill the needs of all singles, but says, "They just have to come and judge it for themselves, get the feel of it and see if it meets their

The program is segmented in such a way that singles meet each Tuesday--twice a month for discussions and twice a month for light social evenings. The round-table discussions, moderated in the past by Rev. Manning or the Rev. Jerry Buckner (who has now left Hereford), are undergoing a change in format with five members of the group taking over responsibility as group leaders.

"It's like the twelfth step of Alcoholics Anonymous," Rev. Manning explained. "We're turning the discussions over to the members. After you've been helped, you should help someone else over the ground you've covered. The singles' purpose has always been to help each other."

The program's success, according to Eades, is the fact that it provides "a sympathetic ear from people who understand because they have faced similar problems. They exchange ideas and while making new friends in a singles world, they heal some of the deeper hurts."

Canyon To Feature Watercolor Exhibit

When they're not involved in organized discussions, the singles entertain themselves with a variety of activities where fun is the name of the game. The realm of social offerings ranges from games of volleyball to cardio-pulmonary resuscitation training.

As a special offering to divorced persons who have "not recovered" from their separation from a spouse, the program includes a six-week introductory seminar, "How to Get It All Together after Your Divorce." The seminar, led by Rev. Manning, is designed specifically to "help divorced persons deal with their hurts before they enter the social aspect of the singles program.'

Rev. Manning feels that churches and society in general are negligent in the treatment of divorced persons. "For too long, people have believed that divorce doesn't happen to good people, but it does happen..to everyone. Those people who haven't been divorced are just lucky. There are no good guys and bad guys, just people," he said.

Divorces in America are climbing at a steady rate. Rev. Manning gave some of the reasons why: living in an extremely pressurized society, the easy access to divorce, people's unfulfilled expectations of a marriage and a low boredom level. But, the major reason Rev. Manning cites for most divorces is "people tend to mate too young, without really knowing the person they've married.'

'Recently divorced people or people who have never coped with the hurts from their divorce are in need of more serious discussion than is provided on Singles Night," Rev. Manning related. "In the seminar, we try to help the divorced individual realize that the angers and fears they feel are normal emotions, felt by all people in the same situation. We work through what has happened and help them recognize the symptoms shown during the stages of recovery from a divorce. When they have dealt with their feelings, they are ready to join the regular group.'

The six-week seminar, offered free of charge on a regular basis, is scheduled to begin a new session Tuesday in Rev. Manning's office in the church's Conkwright Building. The size of the seminar group is limited, so Rev. Manning advises interested persons to contact him in advance.

Rev. Manning is hoping that a similar seminar will be developed (perhaps by another church) specifically to meet the needs of widows and widowers, who face different emotional problems than other singles.

Meanwhile, the Singles Night continues to grow and flourish, gaining inner-dependence from its membership, although there is a frequent turnover. The seven individuals who conceived of the program originally remain as its "backbone," according to Rev. Manning. Responsible for the idea of Singles Night, in addition to Eades, were his wife, Helen, Mr. and Mrs. Pat Robbins, Mr. and Mrs. Wender Clark and Marie Stringer.

Several of the Singles Night participants have met and married through the program, although that is not the organization's main purpose. "We want to provide a place for singles to get together, enjoy each other's fellowship and build a happy social life," Rev. Manning said.

All singles in the community are welcome to attend Singles Night, which begins at 8:30 p.m. each Tuesday in the Fellowship Hall of First Baptist Church. Also, divorced individuals are invited to contact Rev. Manning concerning the upcoming seminar.

"In the seminar, we try to help the divorced individual realize that the angers and fears they feel are normal emotions."

"THE BEAUTY OF A CHAIR"

A chair is something to sit on. A chair also can be a thing of great beauty. For example a camp stool can serve as something upon which to sit.

But what modern woman would be content to have a camp stool installed in a prominent corner of her living room in the place of a finely made chair exuding beauty and charm.

What we are leading up to is this: Fine Furniture, modern furniture, goes beyond the point of mere utility. A home is made lovely by its furniture. And the selection of this furniture begins with its purchase at the wholesale level.

That is why we go to the wholesale market to personally select the merchandise we offer our patrons.

We carefully inspect the newest furniture, handcrafted by the nation's leading makers. We feel the finish, check the fabrics, analyze the construction, not from the slick pages of a catalog, but at first hand.

This entails time, trouble and expense, but it's the only way to assure our patrons of a selection that's complete, new and in the latest trend.

We'd like you to see this furniture, knowing as we do, of the pride that the homemakers take in beautiful surroundings for their families.

BY ERMA BOMBECK

Have you seen where the new Cadillacs are offering a digital trip computer on their dashboards?

It's an instrument panel which you program like a computer just before you start the trip. Then, as you drive, you press you a function button and instantly, the lights illuminate to reveal your average speed for the trip, how many miles before you need gas, how long you've been on the road, how many miles to your destination and what time you will arrive.

Boy, if that little goodie were a undard part of family compact cars and station wagons, it would be the greatest boon to parents traveling with kids since they started selling tranquilizers over the counter without a prescription.

Think of it! An instant answer to all those long-playing mouths in the back seat. "When do we get there? When we gonna have lunch? How long is it going to take? How many more miles?"

Of course, it's the same old story. The expensive cars have all the children's features that should be in the economy cars. Like the limousines with their sliding glass panel that throws the back seat into a pit of silence and spares the driver the agony of sound.

Everyone knows the economy cars need the twirling bucket seats where a mother can whirl around and give the kids a rap without standing on her knees and impaling herself on the head rest to reach the bratee.

They need the electric windows that are controlled by the cockpit crew so that you don't have a child's tongue curving around your no-draft.

Economy cars should have the electric locks on all the doors that keep the adults in the front seat in control, especially when you stop for gas and discover you have to drive through the homemade fudge and the gift shop to check it out. Of course, it's understood that the digital computer would have to be set with a few different responses to car carrying children. But if we've come this far, it may not be too crazy to imagine that someday, station wagons would come equipped with standard buttons on a panel that would illuminate the

Ann Landers Apology to Mom

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Florence While I'm writing this letter I'm crying my eyes out. Mom and I just had a hellish argument. I velled a lot of terrible things at her and when I walked out of the room she was in tears. I've got a real big mouth for a 14-year-old kid and i'm ashamed of myself.

I really love my mom a lot and when I think of all the great things she's done for me I feel rotten. I'd like to say a few things to her through your column if it's all right with you, Mom, I know sometimes I get on your nerves and when you yell at me, it's for my own good. When I yell back, I really don't mean the awful things I say. I'm just being defensive. I love you, Mom. You are the greatest.

I'm begging you to print this, Ann. It will help a lot of moms to know how their daughters really feel. -- Off My Chest In Dearborn, Mich.

DEAR DEAR: Here's your letter, Sweetie. It could have been written by one of a million 14-year-olds. Thanks for being so honest.

P.S. I hope this column gets taped to thousands of moms' makeup mirrors with the message scribbled across the top - "Me, too."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please, just one last word to "Happy Wally," the guy who figures he laid out $3,300 over 22 years to his wife by giving her $10 each time they made love. (She gave him $5 for every refusal. Almost always, it was a "headache.") Your readers faulted Wally for ringing up a sale only 15 times a year.

As I figure it, Wally was a budding economist who did quite well. Assuming he was interested" 360 times a year; they made love 130 times a did not on 230 occasions, or about one night in three. This means a cash flow of approximately $1,300 per year with the net balance of payments only $150. Wally did a pretty-good job of balancing his budget. (Our country should do half as well!)

Others interested in the economics of this problem should note that if Wally paid only $5 and received $10 from Pool Built his wife, his books would be balanced if they made love on two out of every three occasions. Even better, an outlay of $2 and an income of $10 would yield results five out of six times.

My own solution to the problem is to achieve a perfectly balanced budget by making no payments at all. The best things in life are free. -- Math Prof

DEAR PROF: I hate to burst your bubble. Bub, but NOTH-ING is free. Everything in life costs something. You pay either going in -- or coming out. I'll sign this -- No Cynic, Just Realistic

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Settle an argument, please. I can't believe you said in a column that Princess Grace didn't have class. My husband (who has never been wrong in his entire life) says you did. True or false? -- Fur Flying In "Class is grace under pressure." A reader then wrote and suggested "the perfect examples." His illustration: "Prince Grace . . . smiling . . . while wearing a tight girdle.

At Timberlawn, Coons said, the youth's chances of recovering are "fairly good - by no means would I say excellent for this is a very serious problem he

Coons said Christian is a "definite suicidal risk." Matthews said there was a "high likelihood for potential of suicide."

Matthews described what he thought was going through the teen-ager's mind on May 18 the day Rod Grayson Jr., 29, was shot to death in his classroom with a .22-caliber rifle at Murchison Junior High

Young Christian was not in the courtroom during the testimony. At Minton's suggestion, the youth waived his right to hear what the psychiatrists said about him.

Matthews said young Christian was driven by impulses he didn't understand and was wishing someone would stop him. "It was as if he were an automaton, standing outside himself, watching this happen." Matthews said.

He said that morning young Christian had considered killing himself at home, but hid in the closet until his parents and three brothers had left and took a rifle with him, thinking "he had to have a gun after he got to school." At the same time, Matthews said, he was asking himself, "Why am I doing this? What will I do when I get there?'

Russian Flees After Spotted

MOSCOW (AP) - A U.S. Navy Seabee's sudden confrontation with a Russian manning a secret room package with surveillance gear climaxed the latest round in the American Embassy's long war against Soviet electronic snooping, sources reported Friday.

The surprise meeting in the basement of a nearby building prompting the startled Russian to flee in surprise came after American security officers discovered an array of Soviet bugging equipment hidden in a shaft in the embassy's south wing.

American investigators traced the wires from the intelligencegathering devices down the vertical shaft to a tunnel leading into an apartment building adjacent to the embassy, the sources said.

Finally, one of the Navy men assigned to the embassy to handle construction in classified areas was sent into the tunnel, and had a face-to-face showdown with the Soviet eavesdropping specialist monitoring operation of the bugs.

Embassy personnel then bricked up the tunnel.

American officials in Moscow and Washington were reported examining the sophisticated surveillance devices and trying to assess the degree to which the embassy's security had been breached.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Thomas Reston said the United States had lodged a formal protest with the Soviet Foreign Ministry.

There was no immediate comment on the incident by the Soviet government or news agencies.

An official in Washington, who asked not to be named, said there was regular physical penetration of the embassy by Soviets without the knowledge of the United States.

"We're still trying to figure this puzzle out," he said.
"We're doing a technical assessment of the problem right now. But it might take some time to determine precisely how it works."

He said the equipment might be linked to the mysterious Soviet microwave bombardment of the embassy.

Since the early 1960s, the Soviets have been aiming microwave beans at the embassy's upper floors, which contain the offices of ranking diplomats and a variety of electronic intelligence-gather-g equipment.

The peak strength of the radiation has been focused in the vicinity of the ambassador's office on the ninth floor, located about 80 feet from the shaft where the bugging gear was discovered.

Earlier speculation about the purpose of the microwaves has included possible use of the beams to energize Russian bugging devices or to try to foil U.S. electronic eavesdropping efforts.

The sources here said the latest bug-hunting episode began late last week when security men running a routine check spotted a suspicious wire behind a radiator in one of the apartments on the fourth or fifth floor of the embassy's south wing.

The telltale wire led into the ventilation shaft where the bugging devices were secreted. Near the top of the shaft, the sources said, investigators found a dish-shaped antenna connected to the surveillance gear. The investigators followed the shaft down to an underground tunnel. The tunnel passes under a room where Soviet employees who clean the embassy are allowed to change clothes and then into the basement of the adjoining apartment building.

It appeared the bugging devices inside the shaft had been maintained regularly by Russians coming in via the tunnel, the sources said.

There have been several previous efforts in the history of the present American Embassy to ferret out Soviet bugs. The embassy was originally built as an apartment building and turned over to the United States in 1952.

In 1960, a microphone was found beneath the beak of the eagle on a U.S. seal on an embassy official's office wall. Later, U.N. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge displayed the carved-out and wired seal during a U.N. debate on the U-2 spy plane incident.

In may 1964, the State Department disclosed that tearing apart of walls within the embassy had disclosed at least 40 hidden microphones planted on the eighth, ninth and tenth floors.

Newton: 'I get restless when I'm not headed for the wheatlands'

Ripening Wheat Beckons to Long-Time Harvester

By JIM STEIERT

Brand Farm Editor Lloyd Newton concludes a conversation with a trucker concerning the hauling of produce later in the summer. leans back in a chair at the headquarters of his custom making it a few years." farming and trucking firm on South Main, shifts the toothpick

There's a note of wistfulness in his voice as he states, "Last operational costs have been a factor in prompting Newton to cut back his long-time custom harvesting operation and turn to summer was the first one I spent of feedlot industry related trucking

But at heart, Newton is still one of a vanishing breed of men who each spring and summer give in to a wanderlust brought on by the ripening of another wheat crop, and who follow the The declining fortunes of trail of the golden grain wheat farmers and increasing throughout the Great Plains region from late May until the beginning of another school year hastens the conclusion of the harvest run in September.

It's an occupation that gets into a man's blood, and this year as Newton watches custom crews move out for points north with heavily-laden trucks pulling house trailers, combines.

fuel tanks and header trailers behind them, there's a twinge of disappointment that he's not going too. -- It's hard to turn your back on a tradition that has been alive in your family for nearly three generations.

"Dad was a custom combiner. He started following the harvest in 1941, hauling grain for another man, and saw the possibilities in the transition to modern harvesting equipment. Later he passed the family harvesting business on to two brothers. After a brother dropped out, my older brother and I ended up with the business. When my brother died, I took it over in 1957. I grew up with this trade. After you make a run or two on the wheat harvest circuit, you sorta' learn the economic structure of the thing and it becomes something you look forward to," Newton explained.

Newton came to Hereford from Oklahoma in 1953, and began making sojourns into Arizona to launch the spring wheat harvest in that same year.

For the next thirteen years, he followed a harvesting circuit which began in that arid state and eventually ended up in the southern portion of the Dakotas. Dakotas.

"A normal schedule for us on the harvest circuit would have put us into Arizona around May 10, and in some years when it was hot and the wheat ripened up fast, we might even turn up there the last of April. When we finished up in Arizona, we would come back through the Hereford area and hit the harvest here around June 12. before moving on to Holyoke, Colorado by July 4. If we weren't in Holyoke by July 4, we were on the way. Then, we'd move on to Burns, Wyoming by the last week of July. We'd end up in southern North Dakota by late August or the first of September. We were usually home by Labor Day," he explained.

Although Newton stated that he never actually figured up the total number of miles covered with combines and trailers in tow, he indicated that a season of travel and hauling would put 30,000 to 35,000 miles on a truck.

"We never left with less than four or more than eight machines, and we tried never to use a machine more than three years," said Newton. "We'd pull a house trailer to serve as headquarters and take along buses for transit help," he added.

According to the local harvester, getting good help was always one of his biggest problems on the harvest circuit.

'It got to the point that we had a lot of school boys working for us. They seemed to be the only ones who didn't mind the heat, the dirt and the hard work. But, once it was time for school to start in again, we sometimes ended up in a bind to get back home. But there was a lot of real good on-the-job training for those kids, and my own son and daughter grew up on the circuit," he said.

Newton pointed out that upon returning from the summer wheat harvest, his custom crew would gear up for the local fall grain sorghum and corn

We saw a big transition in this part of the country....I think we were among the first custom operators around here to get corn headers, although I don't recall exactly when we started cutting corn...The years kinda' run together when you're on the go that much," he admitted with a grin.

Asked about the best and worst points of custom harvesting, Newton was a bit slow on the uptake in singling out any drawbaeks.

"I always tried not to look for the bad points, although the weather could always be quite a problem. It was always bad to have a harvest run planned and get it hailed out, or have an early snow in the fall lay all of the sorghum on the ground. Then you had to rig pick-up reels or other special attachments to get the crop, and you couldn't carry off things in a routine manner." he stated.

The harvest circuit eventually provides custom combiners with a list of standard customers, and the Newton operation was r.o exception. In fact, according to Newton, bad weather depriving a crew of a standard customer was a cause for grave concern, because it left them on their own in harvesting work. to find whatever remaining wheat harvesting was available in an area.

"You get to the point that you look forward to seeing all of the farmers who are your regular. customers every year. It's just something else you kinda' grow up with in this business -- a tradition." he related.

Newton explained that his family harvested wheat for one some 23 years, and that farmer's eventual cutback in to abandon the summer harvest circuit -- at least for the present.

As equipment costs rose and new crop options came on the scene, Newton branched out his wheat harvesting operations in the late 1950's and early 60's.

"We had some farmers in Arizona who started growing ensilage corn. We had been hauling it here in late August for a while, but when an Arizona grower put it in, we bought a cutter. That brought on a whole new harvest routine .-- We'd make the wheat harvest in Arizona, come back home with the combines and make the wheat harvest here, then park the combines and go back to Arizona to cut ensilage in August. When we got back here again, it was time to cut maize and corn. We continued that routine up until last year, when we sold the cutter," he explained. Holding his toothpick while making a point, Newton indicated that there has always been a definite "high" for him

"There's a thrill in knowing you're gonna' cut a good crop." he said with a smile. "We cut some 110 bushel per acre wheat in Arizona a few times. When yields are good like that, you can do things the way they oughta' be," Newton added.

According to Newton, pure economics gave him a push into his current trucking business. "Trucks cost so much you have farmer in Arizona for a period of to do more with them than just use them on harvest for four or five months. -- So, we went to... wheat production was partially doing a lot of hauling around here for the feedyards...feed products, manure spreading, that sort of thing. We ended up with a couple of portable feed grinders we use at the feedyards too," he reported.

A garage built in 1964 for overhauling custom harvesting equipment serves as the headquarters for the firm here now, and although trucking is Newton's major business at this point, he is quick to explain that he could get back into custom harvesting if the opportunity arose. He still has two combines parked at his headquarters.

"If the Arizona crop was to come back again, I have enough stuff that I could trade some equipment and be ready to go. But as it is now, you can't make anything with combines sitting in only one place. It isn't economically feasible," he stated.

"If the economics get right, we'll be back on the road with combines again," Newton continued. "But those economics are as tough as a boot. The cost of combines and all of your other investments are so high...it sure would be tough."

According to Newton, the tradition of the nomadic custom harvesting crews is gradually fading from the grainlands of America.

"I know two or three custom harvesters right here in the Hereford area. One of them is making his last swing through the Great Plains this year. another is looking to get out of the business as quick as he can, and I don't know how long the third one intends to go on, but it is getting harder to make it in the business with all of the high costs and the poor grain markets. The days of the custom grain harvesters are fading, and I don't know what will ever replace them ... I sure don't know what we're coming to." he commented

"Custom combining has been good to me," Newton continued. "You just gotta' take the times as they come. If things ever get better. I'll be back on the road come wheat cutting time. I just get awful restless by about the first of June when I'm not out there on my way to the wheatlands. Nothing about the routine around the office here excites me like that wheat harvesting trip did," he concluded with another of those wistful smiles.

Mesquite May Provide Digestible Cattle Feed

LUBBOCK - West Texas ranchers could have their cake and eat it too when research makes mesquite almost as digestible for cattle as alfalfa.

Ranchers then would be able to clear their pasture and still make a profit.

Texas Tech researchers are studying microbiological and chemical means to break down mesquite cellulose material to render it more palatable to livestock.

Dr. Robert C. Albin, chairperson of the animal science department, and one of the researchers, said that although one bacteria in cattle stomachs enables them to use ceilulolytic material, breaking the mesquite down before feeding should make it much more digestible.

Other researchers involved in the experiments include Dr. Lloyd B. Sherrod, professor of animal science; Dr. Harry W. Parker, professor of chemical engineering; Dr. Donald Thayer, professor of microbiology; Thomas E. Vernor, research assistant in chemical engineering; and Cynthia B. Summers, research associate at the Texas

Tech University Center at

Amarillo. The experiments were conducted strictly in the laboratory. No animals were used, although the next step in the research will be to feed treated mesquite to experimental animals.

The laboratory experiments showed that the microbiologically-treated mesquite would enable the animals to digest 30 to 40 percent more of the mesquite, than if it were left untreated, Albin said. Chemically-treated mesquite raised the digestibility level more than 30 percent in the highest rated treatment group.

The microbial treatment involved the use of fermenting bacteria, and the chemical group used varying concentrations of sulfur dioxide.

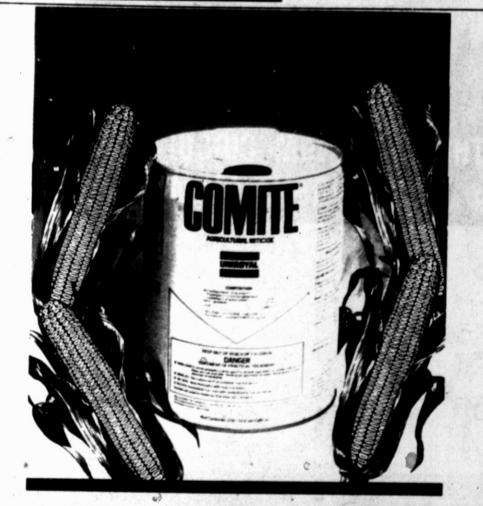

The best-rated treatments on both methods increased digestibility of mesquite to close to that for alfalfa. Alfalfa is one of the most easily digestible roughages for cattle.

The chemically-treated mesquite may be the best method due to economics, Albin said. Though no research has been done on cost, he maintained that setting up microbial treatments might be too expensive.

The economics of the two treatments and the actual effect on livestock will be studied in othe near future. Equipment to process large enough amounts of mesquite for feeding needs to be completed before research can continue.

Gifford-Hill Sells Interest

On The Turnrow By Jim Steiert

Brand Farm Editor

Here's a flash from the newsroom, ripped from the wires of the Illustrious Addle Pated Press (ADPP)....

WASHINGTON, D.C. (ADPP) The U.S. Department of Agriculture issued a report today stating that a recent incident in which a chicken in Kansas complained that the sky was falling could touch off a whole new spiral in the cost of drumsticks and other selected cuts of chicken later

The USDA report stated that the chicken was allegedly struck on the head by a piece of falling sky, and the force of the sky impact wedged the chicken's drumsticks to such an extent that they were left at least an inch shorter.

The report also stated that if the sky continued to fall in the vicinity of chicken growing areas, chicken raisers could be accused of drum-sticking it to consumers by marketing chicken cuts that fall to measure up to previously accepted standards.

In a comment on the USDA report, President Carter accused chicken raisers of perpetrating another round of inflation by attempting to raise fryers in areas where the sky tends to fall, thus leaving consumers with egg on their faces.

"We have already given these people a set of standards to work under, and we expect flocks to be shooed-in under these standards and kept out of the way of the falling sky. We also expect these agri-businessmen to continue working for the chicken feed we have appropriated, as we will immediately veto any other measures in order to retain our status as cock of the walk," Carter crowed.

The Environmental Protection Agency and OSHA were also expected to take a dim view of the lowering skies over the chicken farms, with spokesmen for the agencies claiming that no environmental impact statements had been filed either by the chickens or their owners in the wake of the sky fallout and that the henscratching on recent reports submitted by the chicken firms made even less sense than the government-required reports themselves.

While chicken raisers themselves were not allowed to speak with the President or other government officials to explain the falling skies, the chicken allegedly struck by the falling section of sky crossed the road and avoided reporters, making no comments about the incident or the USDA report....

I know I use the stuff as much as anybody, but over the past several months, a serious question has arisen in my mind over the accuracy, the reliability, and even the fairness of agriculture-related wire service news stories.

Everything sent out by the wire service we happen to patronize here seems to emerge from the clattering machine bearing a Washington, D.C. dateline, a statement from the administration that any farm-related improvement is going to prompt inflation, and a proverbial consumer-advocate-type chip on the shoulder.

Take the past week for example. News about new rises in the cost of food made the headlines, and there, singled out for us by the illustrious news bureau as the chief culprit in all of this was the cattleman and the beef industry.

No mention of the fact that higher prices for beef are good news for a lot of rural American communities like Hereford that make their every day living off the job of feeding the remnant of the American populace. -- And no mention either about the fact that cattlemen had to trim their own herds after a depression in the industry that dates back to 1973. Billions of dollars were lost then. -Just a lot of talk about opening the gates to more imports, government controls, the whole gamut that got the beef industry in such a mess in the first place not that many years ago.

When will government officials, consumer advocate news agencies and everyone else learns that the fastest way to straighten this whole ag market situation out is to let it alone?

I know of another incident, not that long ago, concerning a committee hearing in the Senate over sugar legislation.

I received a wire report on this meeting, of critical importance to our own local sugar growers one afternoon, and got no news from it except that proposed sugar legislation was termed "unrealistic and inflationary" by the Carter Administration and word that Mr. Carter would veto it.

There was plenty of stuff from the administration mule's side, but nothing from the standpoint of the hard-pressed beet grower :-- I was lucky though. A local man who just happened to be at that very same hearing had just flown back home and he made a point of stopping in. -- I showed him the wire story and he couldn't believe the agency was reporting on the same session he had attended. He labeled the wire story misleading and biased, -- just as I had feared it was when I tore it off that infernally noisy teletype.

Sometimes I wonder. Has government gotten a finger on the news agencies? Are they being told what to turn out on ag-related matters. I like to think not, but then, every time I say "naw, couldn't be," here comes another wire story with

Maybe it's not my place to question an outfit we're supposed to be associated with, but I'm just crazy enough to continue tearing up, rewriting or totally junking many of those suposedly factual and unblased wire stories on the farm scene that keep emanating from Washington. I think our own local agriculture people probably have a more realistic grip on the situation as it affects us here anyway .-- I know they're a lot more believable.

Conservation Districts Focus on Soil and Water

By JODIE HART

The purpose of a Soil and Water Conservation District is to focus attention on Soil and water problems, develop annual and long-range proproblems, and enlist help from public and private sources that will contribute to the accomplishment of the government. However, the district is self-governed and has the authority to enter into working agreements with other governmental agencies and with other private organizations to fulfill its goals. Tierra Blanca is the local SWCD for Deaf Smith County.

-The Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation District Board consists of five local landowners: Carl Strafuss, Clint Homfeld, Bill Walden, Johnny Jesko, and Clarence Betzen. These board members meet monthly with Tom Cunningham, District Conservationist for the Soil Conservation Service, to discuss present and future problems of the District.

Final Planting Dates At Hand for Programs

Executive Director ATTENTION COTTON & CORN FARMERS: June 1 was the final planting date for cotton and corn in Deaf Smith County. This does not mean that you could not plant these crops after that date, but if you do not intend to replant the crop or if you plan to go back to another crop on the same land, you would need to file a request for disaster and let us look at it prior to your making other use of the land, in order to be eligible for disaster payments. ACA Survey Shows Farmers Frustrated by Communication Herman Schmitz, wheat farmers important, callers gave the areas.

SPRINGLAKE - K.B. Parish. Only under the wheat grazing Springlake area National Director for the Agriculture Council of America reported that excluding corn or grain farmers feel deeply frustrated that the American people "just aren't getting our side of the story on major farm issues 4- the kind that make us or break us."

The ACA leader said this comment was typical of hundreds coming from farmers and farm wives in almost every state who participated in a "Farm Line" telephone pollconducted by the Agriculture Council of America (ACA) May 24th, on the subject --Agriculture today: what should the American people know about it?"

Some 90 percent said they felt non-farm consumers are not well-informed about farm issues, and underlying most responses was growing concern that "our future is in the consumers' hands, but city people just don't understand our problems."

Calls were taken by a panel of top-level experts on the farm economy including Senators. Congressmen, and spokesmen for the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the White House. Heading up this group were: Senators Bob Dole (R-Kans.) and Carl Curtis (R-Neb.); Representatives Dan Glickman (D-Kans.) and Tom Harkin (D-lowa); USDA's Ray Fitzgerald, Administrator of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, Jim Webster, Acting Director for Governmental and Public Affairs and Kelly Harrison, General Sales Manager; and Lynn Daft, of President Carter's Domestic Policy Staff. about the non-farm public's understanding of farm issues, some 70 percent of the callers said they thought that farmers were well-informed about consumer problems often voicing the comment -- "We're consumers too."

When asked to rate reasons why the non-farm public should understand the farm economy. callers placed the most emphasis on support for farm programs in Congress and the consumer's willingness to accept changes in food prices. Rating statements very important, important or not so "We are doubling the number of four-year scholarships which we award annually, ships which we award annually." said N.W. Freeman, newly-elected chairman of the board. "We will present 100 scholarships valued at $6,000 each to 4-H and FFA members this year. During the coming year, the Show will have 245 students on scholarship -representing a $1.24 million commitment to keep these students in school."

Making the announcement at the association's 1978 annual membership meeting in the Astrohall, Freeman noted that 201 students will be four-year award winners and 38 will be recipients of one-year, $1,500 scholarships. The Show also funds six graduate assistantships at a total value of $15,000. This significant increase is a direct result of the overwhelming support which this Show has received from the public."

Freeman said. "Without this" enthusiastic backing, we would never have been able to announce this expansion of the program." At the meeting. Allen H. Carruth, Chairman of the Carruth has been a member of the association for more than 18 years and served as a vice-president from 1969-71. He has been actively involved in all phases of show activity and has been chairman of the membership committee.

Fact-Finder Service Offered by Food Group

A new research which smacks of the 21st Century has been brought to Lubbock by the Food & Fiber National Institute of Achievement.

Called "Fact-Finder," the computerized research service puts 15 million bibliographical references at the fingertips of Food & Fiber's terminal operator at 911 10th Street. 'Fact-Finder' is linked to more than 80 data centers of references in everything from

A person merely tells the operator what exactly he or she is looking for and walks out with references which can number in the dozens. A search which would take hours in library references files takes only minutes and costs as little as $10 to $15.

"Fact-Finder" is primarily a public service, so fees cover only costs. Fees vary according to the field in which references are sought and according to whether the customer is general public, student or Food & Fiber

Some fields in which "Fact-Finder" can provide references include art, education, banking law, psychology, taxes, English, history, government, data processing, chemistry, energy, ecology, agricul-ture, food, pollution, and labor relations.

One of Food & Fiber's major objetives is to communicate the impact of changes in food and fiber technology on the American way of life. This information retrieval service is one step in achieving this aim.

Rains Help Boost State's General Ag Outlook

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - The agriculture situation has improved considerably over Texas during the past few weeks although there are still some very dry areas, says Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Crops are making improved growth, and pastures and ranges are greener. Planting of sorghum, cotton and peanuts is active in the High and Rolling Plains and in West Central Texas. Peanut planting also continues in Central and East Texas. Dry conditions continue to hamper peanut and soybean planting in Southeast Texas and the Coastal

Many farmers have baled their wheat and oat crops or have allowed cattle to graze them out rather than produce a grain crop.

Grazing conditions are improving slowly in central and western areas where recent rains fell. However, some supplemental feeding continues in western and southern counties along with heavy culling of cows.

Early peaches are moving to market in East, Central and West Central Texas. The crop generally looks good over the state, as does the pecan crop, although additional rains are needed to allow nuts to fill out.

Vegetable supplies are mixed in the Rio Grande Valley and Winter Garden. Watermelons are being harvested in the Valley and are bringing excellent prices, noted Pfannstiel. However, the crop is short due to drought conditions.

PANHANDLE: Some crops were lost to heavy rains and hail and will have to be replanted. Sorghum and cotton planting will continue active as fields dry from recent rains. Irrigated wheat continues to grow well has been grazed out. Grazing conditions should improve with the rains. Cattle marketing continues active, with prices strong. Wheat harvesting has started in several counties but the crop will be short. The second cutting of alfalfa is being harvested, and bailing of oat hay continues. Peaches and plums are ripening.

NORTH CENTRAL: Some additional rains should help crops and forages. Most young crops are making good progress, with some insect damage. Wheat is about ready to harvest. Early peach varieties are maturing. Grazing continues to improve along with cattle conditions.

NORTHEAST: Most crops are making good progress but need moisture. Sweet potato planting is in full swing. Hay harvesting has started but cuttings have been light due to the lack of moisture. Prospects continue good for peaches, plums and and pecans. Livestock are in good shape, with adequate grazing. Market prices continue

Emergency Use Of 5 New Pesticides Gets Okay

MEMPHIS - Emergency use from USDA, the companies, and of five new, unregistered cotton insecticides will be permitted this year by the Environmental Protection Agency, according to the National Cotton Council.

Fishbacher To Attend SPS Workshop

Marcel Fishbacher, Hereford High School member of Future Farmers of America, has been selected to attend Southwestern Public Service Company's 16th annual Farm Electrification

More than 100 FFA members and leaders will attend the workshop to be held Jun 12, 13 the Episcopal Conference Center in Amarillo.

The FFA members, who come from Texas and New Mexico, will be competing for five trips to the National FFA Convention at Kansas City, Mo. Thirteen hours of instruction are offered in each of three subjects, Farm Motors, Farm Writing and Electric Controls. Two students from the Wiring and Motor courses and one from the Controls course are selected as outstanding and receive the trips to Kansas City for their accomplishment. Each student who finishes the course he is enrolled in is awarded a certificate. Alternates are selected in each course in the event the winner is unable to attend the convention.

Heading the staff of instructors at the workshop are Ken Pollard, Texas A&M Agricultural Engineering Department -Electric Controls; Bobby Browning, Texline - Farm Writing; Don Ham, Dalhart - Farm Wiring; Frank Kennedy, Vega -Farm Motors; and Jay Eudy, Turkey - Farm Motors.

The program for the conference was coordinated by Walter Labay, Area I Vocational Agriculture Supervisor, and Sam Thomas, SPS Agriculture Development, Manager. Glenn Bickel, SPS Power Sales Engineer, will moderate the general sessions.

universities and departments of agriculture in 14 states were instrumental in working out arrangements for the program.

The five insecticides and their manufacturers are Ambush, ICI Americas; Bolstar, Mobay Chemical Co.; Curacron, Ciba-Geigy; Pounce, FMC; and Pydrin, Shell Chemical Co.

All except Curacron were used last year when EPA invoked the provisions of Section 18 of the federal pesticide law to allow use of the insecticides in cases where local and state officials certified emergency conditions existed. Some 2,350,000 acre-applications were made in 1977.

Under provisions of the EPA exemption, the five compounds may be used only on cotton to control bollworms or tobacco budworms, or both, in Alabama, Arkansas, Arizona, California, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Mexico, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Tex-

Francisco.

The exemption this year was liberalized from last year's provisions. EPA removed the starting date of use so that the insecticides may be used any time state and local officials are able to certify that an emergency exists. The maximum number of applications has been raised from five to seven. However, the crop rotational restrictions are un-

Cotton grower James Dyer of Weslaco, Texas, said, "We are glad these pesticides will be available again. Our crop now is under heavy attack, so we need them very much. I have heard some growers say if they hadn't expected this kind of clearance again this year, they wouldn't have planted so much cotton as they did. We really need help down here."

The five companies were notified immediately by the Council so they could start moving products into South Texas and have them available the exemption in Arizona and sas soon as local officials declare California must be further the existence of emergency

Acreage Drop Will Decrease 1978 Texas Wheat Production

AUSTIN--Texas wheat production in 1978 is expected to drop 37 per cent below that of last year. Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown has announced.

The Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service's first spring report forecasts 73.5 million bushels for the summer harvest, based on surveys from sample field plots in growing areas. "This is quite a contrast to the 117-million bushel average harvested between 1975-77, when our farmers were encouraged to plant fence-row to fence-row without adequate markets for their crops," Brown said.

"We had 600,000 fewer acres planted for this year's crop," he commented. "The season began with 5.7 million acres seeded. We have no way to determine from the survey the exact reasons for the cutback, but the combination of low prices, 138-million bushels in carryover stocks and organized efforts to cut back production, plus drought conditions on the Plains were factors."

Low moisture during the growing season on dryland wheat in the Plains has wiped out some production, Brown said. However, irrigated fields are in good to excellent condition now.

Brown said the reduced production should be no reason for consumers to feel the effect in higher bread prices. "While the price of one pound of bread cost 35 cents in January and the wheat it was made from cost three cents, the grain's price actually dropped to 2.9 cents per loaf the following month," he said "and yet consumers paid more, 36.1 cents for the same loaf of

Buffalo Lake in Business After Flood

By JIM STEIERT Outdoors Editor

UMBARGER - If the allocation of more than $1 million in improvement funds from the Bicentennial Land Heritage Program isn't enough to give Buffalo Lake

National Wildlife Refuge a new lease on life, the fact that some 3,000 acre feet of water has drained into the lake here in the wake of recent heavy rains should go a long way toward doing so.

And Panhandle residents, still eager for a readilyaccesible recreation area. could be enjoying water sports related activities at the nearby lake by late this summer after the long-dryimpoundment became a lake again within the last week.

Larry Wynn, manager at the refuge, reports that a whopping 13 feet of water is standing at Buffalo's dam at this time, and he estimates the depth of much of the lake at 10 feet.

According to Wynn, nearly all of the seven miles of lake is covered with water, and the dam is holding with no leaks or seepage.

Federal authorities have already ordered Wynn to get the lake back in the recreation business after the inflow of water, the likes of which have not been seen at this lake since its heyday in the 1950's and 60's.

Wynn reported that water came roaring into the lake following as much as 10 inches of rainfall along the lake's watershed in Randall county during flash flooding in that area in late May.

"The water came in with such force that it knocked down several fences on the refuge and washed out a serie's of dikes on the south end of the lake that have been constructed over the past five years to hold the small amount of runoff we normally receive in that area for waterfowl," Wynn repor-

According to Wynn, the lake cannot be opened for recreational purposes until its water is approved by the health department.

Recreation-eager Panhandle residents were already demonstrating their readiness to adopt the once booming water sports mecca again last weekend however." as up to 250 individuals showed up at the lake for a look and Wynn indicated that he "had to run two boats off of the lake."

The refuge manager estimated that fish could be stocked in the lake once again by late this summer.

Buffalo Lake, in its best years, was widely recognized as an outstanding fishing lake, yielding good catches of bass, catfish and crappie.

Problems with water inflow pollution and other difficulties led to the lake's demise, and it was allowed to go dry in 1973 after some 1,500 acre feet of water turned brackish in the mineral-rich lake and a new stocking of channel catfish proved a failure.

Since 1973, the lake has been turned into a showcase of conservation and wildlife preservation activities, in addition to the refuge's original purpose of serving as a winter haven for ducks and geese.

Wynn emphasized that recreational use of the lake will be somewhat limited, and that any recreational activities will have to be conducted keeping in mind that "they must coexist with the wildlife orientation of the

Although the Army Corps of Engineers conducted a survey of the dam site at Buffalo Lake in 1970 and announced that the structure might prove unsafe for further retention of water, no problems have arisen with the dam and no leakage has been reported.

Interior Department surveyors are expected to visit the dam site soon to determine its condition.

Wynn warned that even with the new influx of water at the moisture-starved lake site, Buffalo will never see a return to the hectic pace of skiing and boating familiar there in the 1950's and 60's. but residents in surrounding areas are heartened just to see water standing once again in the refuge's too-long-dry lakebed.

The funds recently allocated to the lake through the Bicentennial Land Heritage

Program were designated for lake improvements including installation of a solar-powered well on the southern end to provide water for a waterfowl lagoon there, and improvements at the lake's have concerned themselves for years with finding a new water source for the lake, all concerned seem to be well pleased that eventually water came to Buffalo once again of its own accord.

Prairie Dog Diners Growing in Number

HYGIENE, Colo. (AP) - When Lewis and Clark crossed the American West in 1805 they sat down one evening to a meal of prairie dog. Since then, prairie dog epicures have been rare. But the cult appears to be growing.

Lee Robertson, a training specialist with the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources, says he has eaten prairie dogs several times on survival expeditions and finds them "a fine meal." And Jay Warburton of Sterling, Colo., says the more succulent prairie dogs are taken in late summer, fall and winter months.

The name is misleading. The prairie dog is not a dog at all, but a member of the squirrel family. An adult seldom weighs more than three pounds and is about a foot long, not counting the three-to-four inch tail.

He lives in colonies burrowed into the prairie and his coat is a dun color, blending well with the upturned earth. At one time prairie dog "towns" covered most of the rolling plains.

Francis Parkman, an early visitor to the West whose trip was preserved for future generations in "The Oregon Trail," was fascinated by the prairie dog.

AND

alerie The atrol-our-iller.

975) bara

"The number of prairie dogs was astounding," Parkman said of his visit to the eastern plains of Colorado. "Frequently the hard and dry plain was thickly covered, for miles together, with the little mounds which they make at the mouth of their burrows, and small squeaking voices yelped at us, as we passed along." The prairie dog has been hunted by wolves, coyotes, foxes, birds of prey and man. He's done well against all but man's chemical warfare.

Poison has been used to clear out the clusters of burrows to stop damage to pastures and cropland and to land destined for development.

The prairie dog continues to adapt, however, and in nearby Boulder one small "town" thrives on a vacant lot adjacent to a supermarket. These citified dogs have learned to clown for potato chips, sunflower seeds and other goodies.

Hunters still pursue the prairie dog and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, noting that modern rifles have made the animal more available to tables, recently published some suggestions for preparation. Survival expert Robertson advocates the simple approach. "To cook: skin, clean and wash. Place green stick lengthwise through animal and cook over campfire. Alternate method: cook in front of aluminum foil reflector oven. Baste with butter until light

When the chips are down, Robertson said the prairie dog can be wrapped whole in mud and placed in hot coals. But he cautions: "Don't undercook." Warburton, noting that the prairie dog's diet consists mainly of grasses and roots, can be "cooked in much the same manner as squirrel and rabbit." He calls them a delicacy.

ENERGY EFFICIENCY AND THE FUTURE

NEW YORK (AP) - A "new generation" of commercial buildings, incorporating energysaving designs and features, was predicted at the recent Energy Conservation Awards presentation here.

In a keynote address, Charles E. Peck, a vice president of Owens' Corning Fiberglas Corp. said that one event which will help produce this new generation of buildings is: large financial institutions, which provide mortgage money, will begin to insist that the commercial buildings on which they hold mortgages are energy-efficient. Statewide building codes will begin mandating higher levels of energy conservation, he predicted. The Energy Conservation Awards competition is spon-sored annually by the corporation, and honors energy-efficient construction as a means of encouraging improved energy savings in all forms of conDU Backers Plan Dutch Dinner organization funded solely by

The Magic Triangle area of Deaf Smith, Castro and Parmer counties will move a step closer to the formation of an area Ducks Unlimited chapter when a dutch treat dinner and information gathering meeting is conducted here June 13.

The meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. at K-Bob's Steak House, and sportsmen from Dimmitt and Hereford who are interested in getting an area DU chapter going are expected to attend.

Farrell Copelin, DU regional director for the North Texas and Oklahoma Region, will be in Hereford to address the gathering, and will present facts on the DU organization in addition to a film on the workings of the unique conservation group. Copelin, a resident of Edmond Oklahoma, has had extensive experience with wildlife agencies in that state, and has also done wildlife work in Colorado. He joined the DU staff tax-deductible contributions from sportsmen and waterfowl lovers.

Funds from the organization are used to acquire and preserve nesting habitat in the Canadian provinces which prove the "duck factory" for most of North America's waterfowl species.

Wetland projects developed by DU have been credited with saving the nation's waterfowl resource from destruction after market hunting and drought nearly wiped out the duck and goose population in the 1930's. Last year, DU projects were among the few nesting areas with adequate water during a serious Canadian drought.

Ducks Unlimited funds go beyond America's borders, where Duck Stamp funds cannot be used, to continue important conservation work.

Individuals interested in the information session may contact local Game Warden Chuck Cosper at 364-4723 or Jim Steiert at 364-1855 for more information.

Smallmouths Bound for Status As Significant Sportfish for Texas

AUSTIN - Over the long haul, the smallmouth bass will be the most significant of all non-native game fish introduced into Texas waters, in the opinion of the Texas Parks and Wildlife and western parts of the state. Department's director of fisher-

Bob Kemp said that this may surprise some fishermen who figure the striped bass, or even the walleye, will have more impact on fishing than small-

"But you have to keep in mind that we got started earlier on stripers and walleyes, so their programs are a bit more advanced. But I feel that within a matter of just a few years Texas will be the number one state in the nation for smallmouth bass fishing."

shoreline by the thousands. In the wild, the tiny fish are easy prey for a variety of predators, but with current hatchery techniques a good survival ratio usually is possible, Hutson said. Once dispersed in the fertilized rearing ponds, the fry grow rapidly, attaining a length of about an inch and a half inonly 20 days. Then the ponds are drained and the fry are ready for shipment and stocking.

'We get about 9,000 to 10,000 eggs per box for each spawn," Hutson estimated. And if we're lucky we can get four spawns per year from each pair of bass."

That's why, barring unforseen disaster, Hutson thinks his crews will be able to meet the approximate 1.7 million smallmouth fingerling goal for 1978.

"And, another advantage is that we can use the same brook fish year after year." Hudson pointed out. This is in stark contrast to the striper and walleye programs, which always necessitate a feverish search for brood fish each spring.

All in all, smallmouth bass rearing is time-consuming, but fisheries experts feel that once over the hump of establishing breeding populations around the state, a self-perpetuating fishery of the scrappy fish will provide sport for future generations.

Question Raised Over Exotic Fish

keep popping up among Texas bass fishing enthusiasts when the state's fish the state's fish stocking program is discussed.

They are: (1) Why is the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department stocking a variety of exotic fish but not native black bass, when more people fish for black bass than any other species? And, (2) Won't striped bass, walleyes or hybrid stripers eat young black bass and otherwise crowd out the native species?

Fisheries director Bob Kemp said these questions were considered long before the department started placing the exotics in the state's waters. 'First of all, we want to emphasize that we aren't trying to replace the black bass, because it still is the number one freshwater sport fish in Texas," Kemp said. Then why not stock native lack bass?

'We learned a long time ago that it does no good whatsoever to keep adding fingerling-sized bass into waters where there is a standing bass population," Kemp explained. "This is because even on heavily fished lakes, fishing pressure cannot reduce the breeding population enough to damage reproductive potential....therefore, putting more fingerlings in a lake is in effect trying to do a job that nature does far more efficiently.

"A lake will support only a definite number of bass per acre because of available food and habitat. A bass population stabilizes at this level and receives no benefit from additional stocking of small fish," Kemp continued.

But won't exotics like striped bass compete with native bass?

"Of course any time you stock a predator fish you have no guarantee it won't eat some native game fish, but it's been demonstrated in lakes throughout the U.S. that the addition of stripers does more good than harm to black bass populations," Kemp said.

"The Santee-Cooper lake system in North Carolina is a good example of the effect stripers have on a fishery. This

"Look at Lake Calaveras, Falcon and Toledo Bend,' Kemp mused. "You can't find three better black bass lakes in Texas. Calaveras has a strong population of hybrid stripers, Toledo Bend is full of pure stripers, including the state record caught there recently, and Falcon has been stocked with almost a million stripers.

"We have studied bass club records to get an idea where the trophy-sized bass are caught year in and year out, and in almost every case the best black bass lakes are those which also have strong populations of stripers or hybrids," Kemp

"An interesting example is Lake Nasworthy at San Angelo," Kemp continued. "In 1976, bass tournament fishermen had to spend fewer hours to catch a bass over six pounds there than in any tournament lake in Texas. And that lake is without question the best hybrid striper lake in the state, with two state record fish taken there just recently.

Other lakes shown to have high fisherman success rates were Oak Creek, Tyler, Murvaul, Pat Mayse, Conroe and Livingston," Kemp noted. "At that time, lakes Oak Creek, Murvaul and Livingston had received only native or Florida bass; the rest have been stocked with one or more non-native species."

The bass club statistics also revealed that there were only four lakes during 1977 tournaments which yielded more than one trophy bass (over six pounds). They were Toledo Bend (three), Twin Buttes (three), Town Lake (two) and Blundell (two). All had been stocked with striped bass, hybrids or walleye. Town Lake had received all three. Of the 16 lakes yielding lunkers, 13 had non-native introductions, Kemp

"What we (the department) are really trying to do is utilize areas of lakes which are not good largemouth bass habitat, and never will be." Kemp said. "Lets's face it, most Texas lakes are 'over the hill' as far as black bass production is concerned. When a lake is new, bass fishing is good because the habitat and forage are there. But after a few years, the bass population shrinks to a very small percentage of the total, and bass occupy only a very limited portion of the

We feel that the introd tion of the Forida strain of largemouths to Texas waters will do more than anything else to improve bass fishing." Kemp said. "This year we're stocking about five million Floridas in more than 30 water bodies around the state because the Forida variety has demonstrated an ability to grow faster and to a greater maximum size than the tive Texas bass. Finally, after listening to everybody else's fish tales all spring, perusing over any number of candid shots of stringers of bass and turning nearly as green as the moss I've been watching Roland Martin and Bill Dance haul those bucketmouths through on the boob tube for interminable periods on Saturday afternoons, -finally, I'M off and gone fishing.

You can ask my wife--the trip didn't come any too soon. She told me Thursday that if I didn't make it to the lake by this weekend, she was personally going to point me in that direction and shove me out the door. She also threatened to give me to the gypsies. (Every fisherman should be so lucky as to have such a wife.)

Of course, I can understand how she feels. When the fishing bug bites, it's kinda hard to live with a fella' who hasn't gotten any closer to the fishing hole all spring than what Roland or Bill's camera crews took him.

Maybe getting ready to go and looking forward to the trip are two of the biggest factors that add to the fun of goin' fishin'.

But then, that preparation is a two headed monster in its own right. How many fishing rods do I take alone? What are the fish gonna be hitting on? I'm tired of balogna sandwiches, so what am I

There are a hundred and one little nagging questions that arise when you suddenly realize that you really are headed for the lake. The all-consuming need to go fishing keeps those questions in the background until you finally get an opening. --- Then I guess they just surface as

I always thought it would be neat to have a rig with everything you'd ever want to take on a fishing trip already in it and ready to go. -- All you'd have to do when you decided it was time to go fishing would be to go hop in, crank up and head out for the designated lake or stream.

But then, I guess that would do away with a lot of the fun of anticipation and preparation associated with one of these fishing escapades.

As it is, I guess I'll stay happy with my wild state of confusion just before a fishing trip as I scramble around to get rods, reels, tackle boxes, water cooler, ice chest, lantern and other necessities rounded up and in the pickup.

And my wife will keep sighing with relief every time I manage to line a trip up. She'd rather have me running in circles wondering what I'm gonna' take along than ranting about never having the opportunity to do so and burning up with fishing

The National Rifle Association reports in the May 24 edition of its "Reports from Washington" that the comment period on the proposal for a system of computerized firearms registration as suggested by the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms has been

The comment period was originally scheduled to close May 22, but because of an overwhelming response from gun owners across the nation, the period has now been extended to June 30.

Recent reports show that BATF was expecting only about 7,000 responses to their proposal, but they have received more like 170,000 in recent weeks with mail pouring in daily.

The mail has been overwhelmingly against the BATF proposal, as Americans have voiced their strong opposition to any further gun controls or registration.

If, by chance, you haven't commented on this issue yet, comments should be submitted in duplicate to: Director, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, Washington, D.C. 20226. The recent heavy rainfall has played havoc with the initial nesting efforts of much of the local pheasant populace, according to Chuck Cosper, Hereford's TP&WD game warden.

Cosper reported that the greatest loss of nesting habitat was in the areas surrounding local playa lakes, where pheasants seek out the heavy cover that is common there as nesting sites.

Many of those sites are now lost for the nesting season, but Cosper wasn't too worried about a dramatic reduction in pheasant production here

"Most of the birds that lost their first nest will probably renest in another location. There will be opportunity for them to raise broods throughout the summer, provided they can find sufficient cover in local fields," Cosper commented.

It's hard to say if there were severe losses of brood stock due to drowning after heavy rains caused high water in many localities, but pheasant have remarkable recuperative powers if given half a chance, and we could still see a good crop of birds this fall with a little luck.

While we're on the subject of birds, The Brand carried a front page picture Thursday of three fledgling barn owls that were picked up by a local resident on an area ranch.

What we neglected to say in the cutline accompanying the photograph of the three still-too-young-to-fly owls was that the individual who picked them up and brought them home with him was breaking a state wildlife law, and is subject to a citation for his action.

Wild animals are meant to be just that--wild. They wouldn't be where they are normally found if they weren't meant to be there in the first place, and that's where they're supposed to stay.

You may be impressed by the cuteness of a baby animal you find out in the wild and decide that it needs adopting, but when you take one home, you're almost certainly signing its death warrant.

These wild animals very rarely survive in captivity, and those three little owls that might one day have grown up to be valuable birds of prey will probably not live more than a few days. -- They can't feed themselves and their mother won't take them back, now that they have been robbed from Wildlife Department biologists. The most severely arid region appears to be centered around Uvalde, Kinney, Maverick and Zavala Counties, according to biologist Jerry Cooke of Pearsall.

Farther south, the popular deer-hunting counties of Webb and Zapata also are dry, Cooke said, but there has been enough rainfall to sustain the brush species which comprise most of the deer food in that area.

On the other hand, Cooke said the eastern part of South Texas -- east of State Highway 281 -- is depend.

yearling deer. Fielding Harwell, a biologist assigned to the department's statewide deer harvest survey, said the current drought in South Texas is the worst in that area since 1971, when dry conditions caused some local deer die-offs. Harwell said in some areas the deer are surviving better than cattle because the brush on which deer feed is coming through the drought better than the grasses upon which cattle

Deer Shooting Nets Heavy Fines

AUSTIN - Two recent episodes of illegal hunting of imported axis deer in Kerr County proved expensive for the four poachers involved,

Texas Parks and Wildlife Department Game, Wardens David Sinclair and Eric Bishop, along with district law enforcement supervisor W.C. Walker, apprehended a Florida man who had shot and killed an axis deer buck on the Black Bull ranch. After spending a night in jail and facing charges of discharging a firearm from a public road, criminal mischief, trespassing and hunting without non-resident hunting license, the man eventually paid $519.50 in fines and $750 restitution to the ranch owners.

A month later, Sinclair and Bishop received a call from the South Fork Ranch foreman Sam Selman who told them that three men were shooting into the ranch from a truck on State Highway 39.

The wardens arrested the

TEXAS PARKS AND WILDLIFE DEPT.

WILDLIFE NOT GAME

LUBBOCK - Mention wildlife and most Texans envision deer, quail, turkey, and other game animals and birds, but the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department also has the responsibility for managing non-game in our state.

Under the heading of. non-game are 17 mammals, 13 birds, 24 reptiles, 13 amphibians, and 14 fishes. The P&WD has established limitations on the taking, possession, transportation, exportation, sale and offering for sale of these species which the department considers necessary to manage the

"The impact of increasing human development and habitat destruction are continuing to have a drastic affect on Texas wildlife," said Bill Brownlee, non-game biologist.

"It is likely more species will be placed on the present endangered or threatened list if habitat continues to decrease at the present rate," Brownlee continued.

Endangered species on the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service list and present in Texas are also on the P&WD endangered list. Some 46 mammals, birds, reptiles, amphibians, and fishes are included on the list in Texas. Fish and wildlife classified as endangered are species threatened with statewide extinction when the department finds that the continued existence of the species is determined by destruction, drastic modification, or severe curtailment of it's habitat; its overutilization for commercial or sporting purposes; disease or predation; or other natural or man-made factors. The Non-game Act established by the Texas legislature in September 1973 is operated from General Revenue Funds with five field specialists and one secretary statewide.

One non-game study completed by this section of the P&WD in January 1978 is entitled 'Supporting Information Initial Species Listing for Non-Game Regulations" and is available by writing the P&WD, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, Tx. 78744.

This report lists 81 species with information on each including scientific name, range, feeding habits, reproduction, documented sightings, and possible reasons for increase or decrease in population.

The P&WD must, in addition to non-game management, investigate the affect of the different species of aquatic plants on human life, navigation, and recreational uses of public waters.

The P&WD has found 12 plants including hydrilla to be potentially harmful in Texas. These plants are classified as 'noxious aquatic plants' meaning the plant thrives in water, marshes, or swamps.

Private ownership of individual specimens identified as "noxious aquatic plants" may not be disposed of except by means that will prevent their introduction into marshes, swamps, or waters of the state.

Also, the P&WD regulates the importation, possession, sale or release of all species of fish, or fish eggs which are harmful or potentially harmful to human or animal life as determined by the department

On this list are eight fish including certain piranha and

As the wildlife observer can see, there are certain species of wildlife that are endangered, non-game, noxious or harmful. Through regulation and study by the P&WD, the residents of Texas may enjoy our abundant resources with a decent chance of viewing species whose numbers are often less than a

"There's more to boating than just fuering up, loading gear and friends aboard and casting off. Skippers need basic skill in handling a boat. Unfortunately, we know from experience that only a token number of untrained boaters ever take the time or have the inclination to seek this important basic training. It is a sobering fact that only about 20 percent of today's boaters have any basic training in boating or seamanship....even though courses in boat handling know-how are available at no cost."

The officer explained that the Coast Guard Auxiliary offers boating courses for various groups, and the courses for novice skippers are reaching

Late Park Arrivers Trying New Check-In

AUSTIN - A simple device that has been installed at several state parks can solve many problems for late-arriving campers. Harold Allums, Texas Parks and Wildlife Department regional parks director at Tyler State Park, devised the plan whereby campers can check themselves in at bulletin boards outside the headquarters build-

Maps, similar to those used in Six Flags Over Texas, show the location of numbered campsites. One list on the briefing board shows which sites are occupied and reserved, while another indicates sites that are available. Campers can select a site, remove it from the available list, and add their names to the occupant one.

The board also can be used for other functions, such as for passing messages among campers and for notes to be left for friends arriving late. This can be helpful when families or groups wish to camp together but travel separately. This method prevents such awkward situations as latecomers disturbing others by trying to locate sites in the middle of the night, or having to move the next morning if they have camped unknowingly in a reserved spot. Some of the parks where the ,briefing boards have been installed include Eisenhower, Atlanta, Caddo, Tyler and Bonham. If the idea catches on it may be expanded to other parks across the state.

Detroit River, the world's busiest inland waterway, handles more tonnage annually than either the Panama or Suez Canals.

in furbearers in the last decade, and he expects the interest to increase as the public becomes aware of the economic and recreational impact these species have on the state.

"I hope we can enter into a new era based on wise use of these furbearers and predators as a resource in Texas," said Stevens. "Not just because fur prices are currently higher than usual, but because we need to have a full understanding of the role these animals play in the state's ecology."

Stevens pointed out that one of the traditional problems surrounding furbearers is how, and by whom, they should be harvested. "I have been both a hunter and trapper all my life," he said, "and I can understand how the trapper and dog man can have different viewpoints about how to use the resource."

"But Texas is a tremendous state, and I feel we can work out a way for everyone to have the opportunity to enjoy hunting and trapping," he added.

Stevens said the first steps in the furbearer management plan will be to (1) determine populations of furbearers in all sections of the state and their role in that particular ecology. (2) determine the annual harvest of all species through statewide questionnaires and surveys, and (3) determine the amount of hunting and trapping pressure which can be tolerated by each species without damaging overall populations.

Moreover, he said, the OSHA

new regulations do not impose tuted, such as great use of unnecessary or uneconomic masks and respirators on the job. .

Marshall, in his memo, acknowledged the $625-million figure as accurate but said annual costs thereafter would be more like $84 million. And he told Carter that extensive testing already has shown that respirators and other altenatives would not be effective.

has been primarily in the Possum Kingdom region, dealing with deer, turkey, quail squirrel and dove projects. He will continue half-time with Possum Kingdom-Permian Basin wildlife projects while working at his new assignment. Inquires about the state's furbearers may be directed to Stevens at Box 266, Clifton, TX

You need an examination by a doctor. You may have what is called intermittent

Wicker needs a face lift By Polly Cramer

POLLY'S PROBLEM

DEAR POLLY — Would you please tell me how to give wicker chairs a face lift? — ABBIE DEAR ABBIE — A frequent going over with the brush attachment on your vacuum will keep the dust out of those many crevices. Wash with warm water with about a tablespoon of ammonia added for each quart of water and rinse thoroughly with clear water. I had my wicker chairs, that had been treated to countless coats of white paint, stripped by a professional furniture stripper to eliminate that flaking and peeling that often occurs.

When repainting use enamel paint. It can be sprayed on or applied with a brush that should always be full of paint and always stroked in the same direction. My experience is that a tremendous amount of spray paint is required, making the job quite expensive. Clear varnish could be used on natural wicker. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — For a year my husband kept promising to make a sand box for the children but he never seemed to. get the time. Finally we came up with a simple, inexpensive solution that has worked well. We bought a four-foot plastic molded play pool for $5 and filled it with? 280 pounds of sand (which cost us another $5). For a cover to keep the rain out I rounded the corners on an old plastic shower curtain to make a circle. The edges were turned under and on the sewing machine I stitched a casing. Through this was run non-roll elastic. It looks like a giant shower cap and pulls all the way over the sand box to keep the rain out and to keep the sand from blowing away. DEAR POLLY — I am an avid worker of crossword puzzles and have found that using a red pencil or pen does wonders for those who have less than perfect eyesight. —

DEAR POLLY — I use votive candle holders as containers for miniature flower arrangements. They are great when using violets, pansies and fuchias.

DEAR POLLY — My children do not like to finish the milk left in their cereal bowls when the cereal is gone. So I give each of them a plastic straw to drink it and they think this is a treat and drink it all. — BONNIE

Allen's Death Sets Off Confusion

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) the unexpected death of U.S. Sen. James B. Allen has added more uncertainty to the already confusing political landscape in Alabama.

The 65-year-old senator died month when he said he had changed his mind and would not apparent heart attack and cambling down the stairs of a coastal resort condominium at Gulf Shores, Ala.

That created a rarity for Alabama politicians: For the first time in this century there are clear shots at two vacant U.S. Senate seats.

Fellow Democratic Sen. John

ced that he will not seek re-election this year.

And Gov. George C. Wallace, nearing the end of his third term, dropped a political bombshell that surprised even his closest aides earlier this changed his mind and would not run for Sparkman's seat.

Wallace can make a temporary appointment until a successor to Allen is elected in a special election.

In theory, Wallace could step down and ask his successor, Lt. Gov. Jere Beasley, to appoint him. However, a Wallace Sparkman has already announ- spokesman said Allen's death alter their plans in this year's

A special election is required by law since Allen's death came more than four months before the next general election.

Most state politicians declined to comment Thursday on whether Allen's death would upcoming elections, saying political speculation would be inappropriate and discourteous so soon after Allen's death.

Meanwhile, flags flew at half staff today in Alabama to mourn Allen's passing.

Wallace called the senator's death a "deep personal loss." Allen had served as lieutenant governer under Wallace from

And from Allen's present and former Senate colleagues came praise for his skills as a parliamentarian.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd said Allen "commanded respect with his mastery of the rules and his courtesy on the floor."

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D. Mass., who often found himself on opposite ends of an argument from Allen, said the senator was perhaps the greatest parliamentarian ever to sit in the United States Senate."

And former Sen. Sam Ervin, a North Carolina Democrat, said, We really can't afford to lose Jim Allen. He had intelligence. he had industry and he had the courage to stand up for what he new to be right.'

Allen's most celebrated stand came against the two Panama Canal treaties that were approved by the Senate March 16 and April 18.

Because he frequently held the Senate floor for hours during debate on the treaties, Allen's voice became known to millions who listened to the live broadcast of the proceedings on National Public Radio.

His voice was already familiar in Alabama, where his political career spanned more than three decades.

Funeral services were planned Tuesday at Gadsden, Ala., Allen's hometown.

DEAR POLLY — I save empty tomato and fruit juice cans and cover them with gift wrapping paper or various pretty cards I have received. When pasted on I have pretty vases to use for taking a bouquet of flowers to someone sick at home or in the hospital. — DORIS.

DEAR POLLY - To keep from having to look for my fly swatter, I glued a small piece of magnet to the handle with white glue. Now I stick it to the side of my refrigerator and always know where to find it. - MERLE.

Send your helpful hints to Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper. DEAR POLLY - When I wash windows, I go over them the last time with paper towels, but do not throw them away. I stuff them in a half-gallon milk carton that has the top cut off. This is kept under my sink and these crumpled towels are ready to use for wiping grease from the frying pan. TRUDY.

DEAR POLLY - When I buy a washable window shade that is too wide, I save the excess to use for drawer liners. It's good for shelf and pantry liners, too. - J.J.

DEAR POLLY — Throughout the year I save all the worn-out socks. I cut off the bottoms and sew up the remaining part with the ribbing, and the children use these to wear in winter when playing out of doors. This saves their good mittens for school and dress-up. I use both tube and regular socks. My children always have warm hands. — DONNA.

DEAR POLLY — When a recipe calls for a greased pan, it can be a messy job when you use your bare hand. I use a plastic bag slipped over my hand and then put the grease on the bag. When finished, pull bag off from the inside and the butter or grease is inside and your hands are not greasy. — MICHELE.

DEAR POLLY-When cutting buttons off a garment I find using a seam ripper does the job faster and does not cut the material. - RUTH.

DEAR POLLY - I used to rake leaves and then put them in the wheelbarrow to be carted to the oil drum I burn them in. One day I, spotted my little girl's hard plastic swimming pool and thought it would hold a lot of leaves, and did it ever! I must have dumped what would have been about 10 wheelbarrow loads into the pool and, as it is light as a feather, I took hold of it and dragged it behind me and saved a lot of trips to the oil drum.
