Finance Committee Reviews Tax-Cut Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Carter administration - still smarting from a defeat in the House - is taking its case for a tax cut bill to the Senate Finance Committee, where the chairman already is calling for major changes opposed by the president.

If the record of the last few years is any guide, the committee will write a bill that will give more benefits to corporations and investors than would fit into President Carter's idea of tax equity.

The Finance Committee called Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal as its first witness today. He was expected to spell out how much change the administration would be willing to take in the tax bill the president proposed earlier this year.

That bill was shot to pieces by the House after the administration refused until the last minute to negotiate a compromise. But there are reports the administration will be considerably more flexible in the Senate in hopes of getting a bill that would not end in a presidential veto just a few weeks before the November elections.

The measure passed by the House would allow new tax cuts of about $16.3 billion, effective next Jan. 1. The administration appears willing to accept a reduction of that figure, even though the president originally had asked for more.

The Carter administration has two major problems with the House-passed

-The individual tax reductions are tilted toward the upper income brackets. Tax cuts in recent years have given proportionately more reductions to lower income groups, a course Carter wants continued.

-The bill contains a big reduction in the tax on capital gains that would all but wipe out the 1969 "minimum tax," which was designed to ensure that high-income investors pay some tax regardless of how many deductions they have.

Although the president's advisers reluctantly agreed to support some reduction in the tax on capital gains, which are profits from the sale of stocks, real estate and other property, they insist that the minimum tax must be retained.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the committee, has said publicly that he favors a bigger individual tax cut - but that he sees no need to change the "tilt" of the House bill from the upper income

His position on the capital gains tax is for an even larger reduction than was voted by the House. If the economy is to pull out of the doldrums and shake the problem of inflation, he contends, Americans must be given greater incentive to invest.

And the best incentive is to let the government tax away a smaller share of investment earnings, Long says.

Ford Defends Findings Of Warren Commission

DALLAS (AP) - The Warren Commission's conclusions on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy here in 1963 were defended Wednesday night by one of the commission members - former President Gerald Ford.

"I still fully support the Warren Commission's conclusions. The basic conclusions were that Lee Harvey Oswald committed the assassination," Ford told reporters at a reception.

Fifteen years after the history-making gunshots rang out in Dealey Plaza, a House comittee is trying to confirm a report on an often-repeated theory; that there was a conspiracy to kill Kennedy that there was more than one

Bowers, 26, previously served as juvenile probation officer in Hale County. He was graduated from Spearman High School and Wayland Baptist College. At Wayland, Bowers majored in law

Bowers, who is married, is a member of the Texas Corrections Association

"I strongly believe in the single-gun theory," Ford said. "I very strongly disapprove of any variation from that."

Early Sunday morning, Dallas police are to seal off the area in front of the Texas School Book Depository Building, so that the House Assassinations Committee can record gunshots from Italian Army rifles similar to those allegedly used by Oswald. The sounds are to be compared with those taped at police headquarters when a motorcycle

The committee is said to have received a study of the tape by a Massachusetts acoustics company. The report is said to raise the possibility that there were more shots than Oswald could have fired.

Ford disagreed. "The Commission had found no evidence of a conspiracy, foreign or (See FORD, Page 2)

HEW Sec Threatened With Contempt Citation

WASHINGTON (AP) - The sponsor of a motion to cite HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. for contempt of Congress says he hopes Califano will find some way to furnish by mid-September subpoenaed documents describing how major drug companies make their products.

The House Commerce investigations subcommittee voted 9-8 Wednesday to recommend that the secretary of health, education and welfare be held in contempt if he did not turn over the documents. The motion was sponsored by Rep. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn.

Members said the documents were needed for an investigation of whether major drug companies buy generic or chemically named drugs, put their own brand-name labels on them and then charge steeply higher prices for the drugs.

At a hearing on Tuesday, Califano gave the subcommittee confidential data on the generic drugs, their manufacturers and the brand-name drug company purchasers.

But he said Attorney General Griffin Bell had said Califano could not provide documents showing the precise manufacturing process because they are legally protected trade secrets.

"I'm hopeful the secretary will negotiate more seriously in the next two to three weeks before the full committee is scheduled to vote on the contempt citation." Gore said.

"I think he now knows we're very serious about this matter. I predict the full committee will vote the contempt citation as recommended, but I'm optimistic we'll be able to reach a compromise solution between now and that vote," Gore added in an interview.

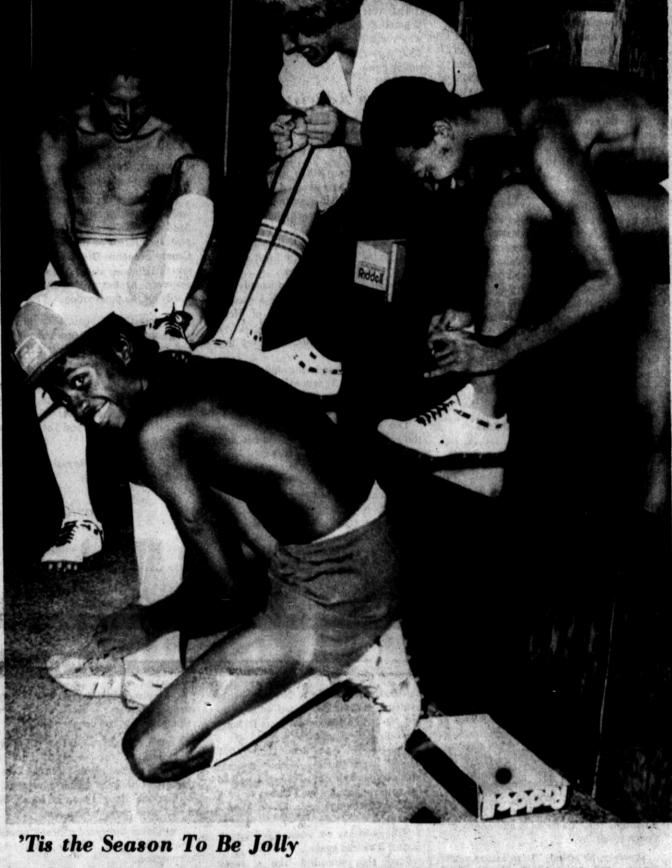

Califano says he and the Food and Drug Administration "are deeply committed both to promoting the use of less expensive generic drugs and to ending the drug companies' practice of secretly marketing generic drugs produced by other manufacturers as their own, more expensive brand-name products.

Gore said brand-name drug companies justify the higher prices "by saying their factory processes are unique.'

"However, we now know that all they do in many instances is contract with generic drug company factories who make the medicine - and then all they do is put their label on it and mark up the price dramatically," he said.

The brand-name companies contend they have one of their employees in the generic drug company factory. Gore said, but the subcommittee wants to know from Califano "exactly what that person does."

In recent years, the subcommittee, headed by retiring Rep. John E. Moss. D-Calif., has voted contempt citations against other Cabinet members but none has gone beyond the full Commerce

Vice president Ken Rogers, presiding over the meeting in the absence of Speedy Nieman, recommended that a letter be sent to board members requesting their opinions on the best time to meet.

The board, in recent meetings, has discussed the problem of director absenteeism and has pointed to the early-morning meetings as a possible reason.

Albuquerque Ballonists Complete Venture

LONDON (AP) - Three New Mexican adventurers floated across the English Channel and into French airspace today, heading for an evening landing near Paris after completing the first crossing of the Atlantic by balloon.

British air traffic controllers said the balloon was 16,000 feet high and situated east of the French channel city of Cherbourg at 8 a.m. EDT, headed straight for Paris at 38 mph. The latest estimates would put them over Paris between 7 and 8 p.m. Paris time 1 and 2 p.m. EDT.

"So far they are on course for Paris and at the moment there is no reason why they should not make it," said Brian Smith, a spokesman for Britain's Civil Aviation Authority.

In a radio conversation with his wife. one of the balloonists. Larry Newman, 31, said they would push on until they "run out of gas."

Ben Abruzzo, 48, and Maxie Anderson, 44, all from Albuquerque, were expected to bring their balloon, the Double Eagle II, down in the Paris area - possibly at Le Bourget Airport where Charles Lindberg landed the Spirit of St. Louis on May 21, 1927, after the first solo airplane flight across the

"We hope they keep going as long as they can," said the ground flight director, W.C. "Doc" Wiley. "We want them to establish a record no one can break. It's a great achievement to cross the Atlantic, but they are in such good shape that I think they can go on for a long time yet."

The Double Eagle II completed the Atlantic crossing at 10 p.m. Wednesday 5 p.m. EDT, Shannon Airport reported, reaching the southwest coast of Ireland 121 hours and 18 minutes after the 112-foot-high, helium-filled bag took off last Friday from Presque Isle, Maine, near the Canadian border.

It was the 18th attempt to cross the Atlantic by balloon, and the 16th from west to east. The last previous attempt, and the closest to being successful, was made two weeks ago by Britons Donald Cameron and Christopher Davies, who ditched 117 miles from the French

At 9 a.m. 3:56 a.m. EDT today, the Double Eagle had floated across southern Ireland, the St. George's Channel and Wales and was being carried along by a 22-knot wind.

One coast guard report put the balloon at 20,000 feet at dawn, another at 10,000, but the heat of the sun on the helium was expected to lift it to 20,000 if it wasn't already there.

'We expect them to cross the Bristol Channel, England and the English Channel about lunchtime Thursday, then the French coast in the Le Havre area and land somewhere in the Paris region at around 8:30 p.m. 3:30 p.m. EDT." press spokesman Jim Mitchell said Wednesday night.

Ray Blames Memory On Discrepancies

WASHINGTON (AP) - James Earl Ray, struggling to convince the House tions Committee he didn't kill Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., blames his poor memory for discrepancies in his various stories.

Committee members promised lengthy questioning today as Ray returned to the witness stand for a second day of testimony about the trip which took him to Memphis, Tenn., on April 4, 1968, when the civil rights leader was shot to death on a motel balcony.

Ray is serving a 99-year prison sentence after pleading guilty to the

But for nearly 10 years, Ray has claimed innocence and offered a variety of accounts involving a mystery man named Raoul who Ray says enlisted him in a smuggling operation and then framed him for the assassination.

The discrepancies between Ray's sworn statement Wednesday and his earlier stories clearly troubled committee members. Its chairman, Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, promised a "quite extensive" cross-examination in an effort to separate truth from fiction.

Women Activists

Continue Book Scrutiny

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - As publishers hear their textbooks assailed by women's right activists and fundamentalists in annual hearings this week, they can take comfort in one thing:

If a text walks the Texas tightrope and lands on the approval list, it likely will be a best seller in other states.

People watch Texas, and usually if a book sells well here, it will be a success elsewhere," said Don Hale of Holt, Rinehart & Winston. "It's like a bellwether. Texas is one of the top five textbook markets."

Hale's commented following the first day of State Textbook Committee hearings on books proposed for use during the 1979-1980 school year.

Two simultaneous hearings continue through Tuesday as 44 individuals and groups scrutinize elementary and secondary books. The committee meets Sept. 11 to make recommendations to the State Board of Education which adopts textbooks Nov. 11.

Cactus Nets Him Cash

EDINBURG. Tex. (AP) - Charles Fitzpatrick's 23-room house and 20 acres of land look as though they have not been cleaned up for five years. Not so, says the 74-year-old entrepreneur. "It's been about seven years since the house was swept out - since my mother died," he said. But what looks like a hopeless maze of junk to an outsider looks like money in the bank to Fitzpatrick. Woven into the tangle is Fitzpatrick's money crop - cactus. "I've advertised as the largest cactus garden in the world for 20 years. No one ever called my hand. I must be right." he said. For 35 years the Georgia native has specialized in cactus - about 2.000 varieties. He has sold untold millions of the thorny plants throughout the nation. The former traveling salesman's business philosophy is simple and indisputable. "If it don't make money we don't do it." he said.

Hence, the mess.

"The money's laving in the bank that I would've used to clean up. I'm a cheapskate," he said.

The cactus is everywhere on his land. But, from looking, you'd never guess it had been intentionally planted. There does not appear to be any rhyme or reason to the planting

"I got one friend that drives me crazv. He wants me to bulldose it up and plant it in straight rows. I'm too tight to have them dig it up and replant it." the cactus king

The cactus business is good these days. Northern dealers grab it by the truck full. For 15 years, a Michigan man bought 40,000 plants every two weeks at 50 cents each.

Fitzpatrick, otherwise glib, is tight-lipped about his profits. But he is proud of his ability to beat the taxman.

"This is the best business in the world. Ain't nobody gonna take inventory here," he boasted.

Fitzpatrick started out with one-tenth of a city lot 35 years ago. He was looking for something "the oil companies couldn't put me out of business with." Of all his money-making schemes, none hit like

"I don't have to do anything with them. They grow better if you water them a little, but that's all," he said. "some of them you just lean up against a tree. See those, that's five backs each."

His advertisements appear in magazines across the nation. The semi-defunct retail store is called Cactus Land. The wholesale business is The Cactus Garden. But the place has gone by a few other monikers.

'I advertised in 35 different magazines and used a different name in each one. Everyone thought I was a crooked as a rattlesnake. I used Cactus Pat. Cactus Jack... Anything with cactus in it." he said with a cunning

His plants are imported from throughout the Southwest and some from as far as Japan. He said he has about 100 people "out in the woods looking for plants." Some of the plants, he guessed, may have been collected by means that are a shade beyond the color of the law.

"Don't tell me where you got them," he said he tells crews that scour the Big Bend area.

Many of the plants are native to Mexico.

"If they ever close that bridge to Mexico I'll be in the boat with the Arabs. I'd get anything I want for them," he said.

Perhaps the biggest mess is the old retail store. It's closed now and a thick layer of dust coats the post cards, mannequins and other assorted junk.

"I haven't got time to clean it up and double the prices. See that box of tommyhawks over there? I'd have to start up an Indian war to sell them all," he said.

Despite the mess, no one complains. His only neighbor is an employee who lives in a house Fitzpatrick fixed up.

"She better not complain. Anyway. her house is probably as nasty as

Middle Class College Grants

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate Wednesday approved President Carter's plan to expand college grants and loans, making them available for the first time to middleimcome students.

The 68-28 vote followed approval Tuesday night of a rival $500-per-student tuition tax credit that Carter opposes.

At the White House, deputy press secretary Rex Granum said the president's position "has not changed. He is strongly opposed to such."

But Granum did not say whether Carter would veto the

The 65-27 vote Tuesday night, indicated strong enough support to override a presidential veto.

The margin by which the House approved its version of the credit last June was far short of the two-thirds majority needed to override a veto.

Even so, Sen. William V. Roth, D-Del., chief sponsor of the bill, said the Senate vote was "a clear signal that tuition tax credits are preferred to the costly, cumbersome Carter both 19.2 or 14 million, and proposal."

At Wits End BY ERMA BOMBECK

In cleaning out the boys' closet the other day I was knocked senseless by a coconut with an Indian face painted on it.

This was followed by an avalanche which included an alligator dressed up like a grand marshall, a human skull with a raven perched on top that said, "Have a Good Day," a snow and water paperweight showing the New York skyline in which the water had evaporated, a beer stein that played "White Christmas" when you lifted the lid, and a funky light that flickered on and off and said, "Lite Up Las Vegas."

As I sifted through the rest -- backscratchers, totem poles, key rings and a blowfish (that brought me into my first contact with acupuncture) -- I tried to imagine how many man hours went into acquiring, transporting, and maintaining all of these souvenirs. Then I saw it: the Robin Hood hat with a feather from the Ionia State Fair.

It was 10 years ago. The family was en route to a camping trip when we were attracted by the Ionia State Fair. As we started to leave the grounds, my son said, "Could I buy this

You speak with forked tongue," Pastorini answered. After the needle treatment, Pastorini said he could sit without discomfort.

He then asked Yennie to work on an ankle that had been a sore shoulder. Wilson and Mike Barber were among those accompanying Pastorini to the hotel.

Wilson said he was on crutches for one of his visits to Yennie's Kansas City office. "I walked out carrying the crutches and played that night," he said.

Yennie also treated Barber, a 7-1.

Federal Reserve Reports Due Close Scrutiny

By CHET CURRIER

AP Business Writer NEW YORK (AP) - The Federal Reserve's regular Thursday afternoon reports on the money supply will get especially close scrutiny in the next several weeks from analysts who believe the central bank's monetary policy is at a crossroads.

After G. William Miller became its chairman early this year, the Fed pushed interest rates steadily higher in its effort to retrain inflation by controlling the growth of the money supply. Then, beginning last month, it seemed to back off while awaiting evidence of the impact of its credit-tightening strategy. Jeffrey Nichols, chief economist at New York's Argus Research Corp., pointed out that the figures on monetary growth in the coming weeks are likely to give the Fed a signal whether more upward pressure on interest rates is needed.

And that, in turn, will do much to determine whether the slowdown in business activity that many economists foresee develops as a minor decline in growth, or something worse.

Foreign-exchange traders will be watching closely too. The dollar's recept slide against some leading overseas currencies, Nichols argued, is not so much the result of any economic fundamentals, but rather "a vote of no confidence" in the way the United States is dealing with its economic problems, notably inflation.

The Fed's efforts are complicated by time lags. It takes time to gather data and determine what is happening with the money supply, and more time before any actions

the Fed decides upon take

Thus, Nichols said, it was late May before the money supply, which had been rising sharply for most of the spring, began to cool down.

Although it showed some wide short-term swings from late May through late July, he said, the net change was relatively small for that period.

Fed could face a real dilemma: Tighten credit some more and risk a serious squeeze on the economy, or let monetary growth keep running at a pace it considers unacceptable. Nichols said there are reasons for hoping that monetary growth will in fact ease off: An easing of the pace of the economy, for one, and the prospect that high interest rates will have their

of interest in their own cultures.

"There's a tremendous variety," Libhart says. "After all, there are 200 tribes in the country, from Alaska to Florida. Their differences are reflected in their arts." Directory listings reflect the rise in public interest. Two years ago 126 retail outlets were listed; now there are 150.

"There's been a big increase in mail orders," Libhart says. "The public wants to avoid the middle man. And thousands of Native Americans either earn full-time incomes through the retail outlets or gain part-time thousands of Native Americans either earn full-time incomes through the retail outlets or gain part-time incomes through them."

The bulk of the retail outlets are in the West: Oklahoma has 24 listed, New Mexico 15, Arizona and Montana 13 apiece. But there are notable outlets elsewhere.

For example, the Qualla Arts and Crafts Mutual, Inc., in the Cherokee reservation near Asheville, N.C., is home base for Eva Wolf's river cane baskets and Lucy George's honeysuckle baskets. Scarce walrus tusk ivory carvings are sold — at $50 or more — through Alaska Native Arts and Crafts, Inc., in Anchorage.

The Seminole Arts and Crafts Center at Hollywood, Fla., sells patchwork shirts, blouses, pinafores and handbags. A distinguished Comanche-Kiowa artist, Blackbear Bosin, sells his and other Indians' work through Blackbear's Ltd., Wichita, Kan.

Authentic Indian articles are no longer cheap: A pair of moccasins with good decoration will cost more than $40, says Libhart. Southwestern jewelry sells for $120 or more, and Lucy Lewis's Acoma Pueblo pottery can cost hundreds of dollars.

In the past 10 years there's been a surge of interest in native American arts and crafts. But how can you tell whether what you're getting — kachina dolls, moccasins, pottery, jewelry or carved ivory — is authentic?

There is a way, thanks to the 42-year-old Indian Arts and Crafts Board, run by five commissioners appointed by the secretary of the Interior.

The latest directory — 16 pages — has just been published and it attests to the growing interest in native American arts. It contains 150 listings in 35 states. Each listing gives an address, phone number, highway directions, product specialties, tells you if mail orders are accepted and if catalogs are available.

1.2 billion packs of cigarettes were sold by retailers in North Carolina last year, but only about 740 million of them likely were inhaled in this tobacco

The rest, 38 percent, were taken to other states - by tourists who filled car trunks with cartons by the dozen while passing through the state with the lowest cigarette tax, or by smugglers who hauled cases by the hundreds in huge trucks and made staggering profits.

"Buttlegigging" it is called, and it's big business.

Law enforcement efforts to stop the trade are hampered by the legal sale here and by the difficulty of tracing the cigarettes once they get to high-tax states where resale is illegal.

The illicit industry has flourished because of simple economics - North Carolina, which manufactures 52 percent of the nation's cigarettes, pays hommage to the economic importance of tobacco by levving the nation's lowest cigarette tax, two cents a pack.

It doesn't take many illegal sales to generate a profit when as little as $3.50 a carton, are resold in places like New York City, where the tax is 23 cents a pack, or Pennsylvania, where it is 18 cents, or Florida, where it is 17 cents.

"Anybody'd be foolish not to do it at those prices," said a cigarette dealer, one of hundreds along the main North-South routes. He asked not to be named for fear of the growing interest in smuggling by the FBI and officials here and in northern states.

"If you're paying $7 or $7.50 a carton in New York and see them here for $3.50, you'll get a year's supply and maybe call Uncle Bob and see if he wants some too," he said. "So you end up getting about 300 cartons and pretty soon you've paid for your vacation.'

But investigations in other states say that smuggling is not just a tourist operation but is often run by organized crime

Lesiglation now before Congress would make the interstate traffic a federal offense, giving the FBI jurisdiction in the trade. Another proposal would replace state cigarette taxes with a uniform federal tax, with a rebate to the states to compensate for lost tax revenues.

In New York, meanwhile, the State Assembly has passed a bill to reduce the state tax by one cent and eliminate the eightcent New York City tax on cigarettes. The measure, which is stalled in the state Senate, is intended to reduce the smug-

The trade has meant an estimated $400 million in lost cigarette tax revenues for states other than North Carolina and, some fear, has given organized crime a foothold in legitimate businesses.

The cigarettes are resold at discounted prices on city black markets or are sold through legitimate retailers with fake state tax stamps.

"We think that clearly it's big business. Tourists are just a small part of it." says Milt Lopus, secretary of revenue in Pennsylvania, where three gangland-style slayings have been linked to cigarette smuggling in the past two years.

"It ranges from organized crime to individuals who just come down on their own and bring back a truckload. But we are seeing now that individual territory is being carved out here," he added.

Bulk cigarette sales are legal here, as long as North Carolina taxes are paid and the tax stamp affixed, and most cigarette stands will sell unlimited amounts, no questions asked. One investigator noted:

"There's no secret about it. One dealer said it'd cost $2,000 to fill a car, and he'd throw in a blanket to cover it up."

For big operators, a full truck might carry 60,000 cartons and, in Pennsylvania or New York, a smuggler could resell them with a 50 cent discount and still clear $1.30 or more a

"You're just dealing with fantastic sums of money." said J. Phil Carlton, North Carolina secretary of crime control and public safety and the man in charge of the state's antismuggling efforts. "A $150,000-

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Nearly profit transaction is not unusual."

The trade has dramatically affected legitimate cigarette sales. A recent study by the North Carolina auditor's office, which estimated the amount of cigarettes going out of state, also found that based on taxes, 138 packs were sold for every person nationwide in 1977.

In North Carolina, however, per capita sale was 217 packs; in New York, it was 126 packs, and in Pennsylvania, 120 packs.

The state estimate says that of $19.5 million collected in cigarette taxes here last year, $8 million was from packs smoked elsewhere.

But North Carolina cigarette revenues have declined 10 percent in the past two years while smoking nationally has been on the rise, and some officials have credited crackdowns on the trade in other

The state this year began a new campaign to cooperate with other states, mainly out of concern that failure to might damage support in Congress for the federal tobacco loan-price

The FBI has investigated packs bought at those prices, or links with organized crime, and agents from northern states routinely watch large cigarette transactions and follow them

But barring a change in laws or a federal crackdown, as long as the large discrepency in state cigarette taxes exists there is likely to be a black market for cigarettes. And there is little political sentinent here for raising North Carolina's tax.

Naman Draws AAM Fire During TFU Reorganization Luncheon

and much of the luncheon session centered on arguments between Naman and supporters of the American Agriculture Movement concerning goals and policies of TFU and the AAM.

The misunderstanding apparently arose out of an editorial, "The Quick Fix Syndrome," which Naman wrote for the organization's publication.

In explaining the controversial editorial during Tuesday's luncheon, Naman stated, "We are inclined to want a quick-fix for everything, and because of its pervasive influence, television may well be to blame for this. A lot of problems get solved in 30 minutes on TV. We are unwilling to be patient and put the necessary work into the solution of our problems, and the American Ag Movement is a symptom of this national sickness of the quick-fix syndrome," said Naman.

"It takes intelligent work, preparation and long-term effort to solve problems, and they are not going to be solved all at once or with a one-time solution. They will only be solved if farmers understand the situation. And we find much too little of this understanding as we approach the problems. What was done with tractorcades and demonstrations was a good approach at the time--a necessary part, but not the beginning and the end. It confronts the problem only in a small way," he continued. Naman claimed that many of the statements he made in his editorial were taken out of context by AAM supporters, and that he meant no criticism of the movement or its members.

The TFU head fell in line for some tough questioning however, as some of those in attendance took exception to his statements.

"Some of us can't hang on the four or five years it will take present farm organizations to get a program fixed up," commented one farmer in the Naman responded by saying he hopes an immediate solution to inadequate farm policies can be worked out.

'We've got to prepare ourselves better. Most farmers are more informed this year than they were last year, but farmers still don't have a real grasp of the economic facts of life," the TFU head claimed.

Another farmer in the crowd then read a letter criticizing Naman's editorial and the TFU for "trying to ride the back of the AAM to obtain more Farmers Union members in Texas."

The farmer urged all organizations to "pull together and not war against one another at this critical time."

Naman was then closely questioned on what an audience member termed his statement "farmers are not intelligent enough to work for what they Naman denied the statement, repeating that his editorial was taken out of context.

Gerald McCathern, one of the chief spokesmen for the state AAM then commented that the Farmers Union "is the only organization that has taken a stand at the top all the way and advocated 100 percent parity for farmers."

McCathern, a FU member prior to his involvement with AAM, then faced Naman with additional comments.

"Many farmers have their backs to the wall now. They are impatient, and they do have the quick-fix syndrome. They must have it, because they've got to get something done in a hurry," he stated.

"Don't try to bury AAM. It can do many things the Farmer's Union, Farm Bureau and the Grange can't, and it won't be buried. From the outset, AAM has considered Farmers Union one of its friends. You aligned TFU as a friend at the start of the Texas movement. It hurts us much more when a friend is critical,' he continued McCathern then offered Naman a stern warning. "Never, never criticize the ental capacity of a farmer. Farming requires more technological knowledge than it ever has, and even a farmer who is only an eighth grade graduate probably has a better working knowledge of the way things are running than a top government economist. As far as the movement participants being qualified and doing their homework, some of the top people in the movement hold doctorates and master's degrees, and there are a lot of bachelor's degree holders too. And we have transcripts of the testimony presented by farmers before Congress in Washington that should indicate to you that these boys have already been doing their homework for a long Naman responded by stating, "I have been positive on the work done by the AAM protestors. But we're going to have to retrench and do some other things right now. I don't view AAM as anything but a protest, and if it becomes anything more, it will fail. It can't become a responsible organization unless it goes through the same changes the Farmers Union did when it made the transition from a protest movement."

Naman then questioned AAM members about their delegate selection system, the time of local, state and national conventions, and the determination of policy.

"I don't want anyone telling members of Congress a farm policy they say they want unless have a chance to vote on it first. If AAM becomes an organization, it will destroy itself and lose its usefulness," he reiterated.

Following a brief exchange over the internal functioning of the AAM, McCathern concluded the TFU-AAM debate by stating, "The AAM wants no running battle with you or Farmers Union. You are not a member of AAM, you simply participate if you want to and don't if you don't feel like it."

Naman then repeated his statement, "I meant no criticism of the AAM."

Attention then focused on the controversial Trilateral Commission, with those in attendance warning Naman that he should "do some serious checking" into the organization and its goals.

The lengthy session concluded with statements by a number area farmers that an active Farmers Union organization here could help local farmers, and that a concerted effort by AAM and TFU toward the same goals could also bear fruit.

Balloon Mail

The French created the first postal system of modern times in 1450 and launched air mail over a century ago. A balloon car-rying 500 pounds of mail soared aloft from Paris on Sept. 23, 1870, during the Franco-Prussian War. Because the free-floating balloons landed in the Prussian camp, Parisians soon switched to pigeons. Plains Cotton To be Down

LUBBOCK - The 1978 cotton crop in 25 Texas High Plains counties will be an estimated 2.1 million bales, 34 percent below last year's record yield, the area cotton agronomist of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service

But that figure may be reduced even more unless early August rains break the area's drouth and night-time temperatures remain high enough to favor fiber development, Dr. James Supak, the agronomist, cautioned. .

Last year, the 25-county area represented by Plains Cotton Groers, Inc., produced more than 3.2 million bales on some 3.6 million acres, Supak said Saturday (July 29) at a seminar sponsored by ContiCommodity Services, Inc. Yields per harvested acre were 424 pounds, or 41 pounds above the 10-year average of 383 pounds

Yield objections for the 1978 acre under adequate irrigation, 335 pounds under light irrigation, and 120 pounds per acre in dryland areas. If the drouth continues, Supak said, further deterioration of the dryland and light water portions of the crop would force a reduction of this estimate.

The 25 counties to which Supak referred are Bailey, Borden, Briscoe, Castro, Cochran, Crosby, Dawson, Dickens, Deaf Smith, Floyd, Gaines, Gara, Hale, Hockley, Howard, Lamb, Lubbock, Lynn, Martin, Midland, Motley, Parmer, Swisher, Terry and Yoakum.

Following the 1977 record, cotton producers in these counties found the outlook for the 1978 crop to be somewhat dismal, Supak said. "In addition to the deteriorating prices, this area faced a drouth situation. Fall rains, which are essential for the replenishment of subsoil moisture reserves, failed to materialize and in many instances, winter precipitation was not even adequate to allow timely land preparation for the coming crop.'

In order to get the crop planted during the optimum period (May 1-20) farmers with irrigation water had to apply a heavy preplant irrigation. Dryland producers had to wait on the spring rains, which in most instances, didn't come until late May and early June.

"When the rains did arrive, they were frequently accompanied by high winds, blowing sand and hail which destroyed a portion of the early-planted crop. In addition, a cool spell which accompanied the rain in early June resulted in an outbreak of Ascochyta or Wet-Weather Blight which damaged or destroyed even more of the early-planted acreage," the Extension agronomist said.

The 25-county area--which according to projections by both public and private sources was supposed to plant around 3.9 million acres of cotton--is estimated to have about 3.5 to 3.6 million standing acres of cotton. Supak reported. Of this total, only about 2 million acres were planted in May and perhaps a third of this acreage suffered some stand loss and delay in growth and development due to weather and disease factors, he said.

"It is often assumed that 50 to 55 percent of the High Plains cotton acreage is irrigated and therefore, not overly vulnerable to drouth effects," Supak said. "This approximation is somewhat misleading in that the quantity of water available for irrigation varies greatly across the area."

Attempts to classify the irrigated acreage into "light water" (adequate water for preplant only or up to preplant plus 1 summer watering) and 'adequate water'' (sufficient water for a preplant plus 2 summer waterings) suggest that less than a third of this acreage falls into the latter category, he explained.

In addition to its availability, the amounts of water a farmer will actually allot to his cotton crop will be tempered by such factors as rainfall distribtion. price outlook for cotton and competing crops, irrigation costs, water needs of other crops being grown, and the date on which the cotton crop was planted, the agronomist said. When combined, these factors make it difficult to evaluate the impact irrigation will have on High Plains cotton production in

Supak said the dryland crop is plainly showing the effects of the drouth. The rains in May and June provided planting and varying degrees of reserve soil

Written Plan Can Aid Cow Herd Improvement

COLLEGE STATION - A livestock specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service says cow-calf producers need to develop a written plan to improve reproductive performance in their beef herds and insure profitable results.

"Such a plan would remind us of details and provide a step-by-step procedure to control and improve reproduction," says Dr. John C. Spitzer.

He emphasizes such a plan is not a straight jacket, and should be constantly reviewed and updated.

"It is essential to individualize the plan to your production system," Spitzer says. "No two beef operations are exactly alike and a plan developed for one ranch will probably not work on another."

The Texas A&M University specialist suggests that cattlemen should first review their herd's reproductive perfor- much additional feed will be mance. This includes listing the number of head, the herd's average calving interval, number of calves weaned and other pertinent reproduction information. Spitzer says it's important to be as specific as possible.

"If you cannot accurately answer these questions, it will point out deficiencies in management that can be corrected with a simple records system."

The next step in the written plan is to review herd objectives or goals. What size herd is wanted? How short should the calving season be? Will the cows be bred artificially?

Answers to questions like these will help set serious goals, he contends.

"If you don't have goals, you may be no further along in 10 years than you are now," Spitzer warns producers.

The third step in reproductive management plan is to realistically inventory resources. These include land and its carrying capacity, feed, labor and financial status. As the plan's fourth step, goals, should be reconsidered to determine if they are attainable with the resource constraints identified.

The fifth step is to define the methods and alternatives to be used to reach these objectives. Find answers to the problems that are hampering progress. Can the calving season be changed to another time of year? How can the calving season be shortened? How needed? What management changes are needed?

Data from applied research projects can provide answers to these types of questions and help producers see the effects of various management changes. Spitzer suggests cow-calf producers then calculate costs and returns to determine if dollars invested result in increased profits. As a final suggestion, the livestock specialist says the program should be continually evaluated for changing situa-

"If your results are not as expected, criticize your plan, change it and make it better," Spitzer suggests. New goals should constantly replace those reached. To insure future profitability, he suggests developing a three-to-five-year plan for reproductive management.

Anti-Breeches

Trousers became popular in America after the War of 1812 as a reaction against the silk breeches-and-hose syndrome that smacked too much of things British. The Duke of Wellington actually helped popularize trousers in England by wearing them to state functions. Early trousers were simply some-thing to protect the fancy breeches when riding, simi-

G.E.D. TESTS

Will be given next at Hereford School Administration Building August 21 and 22, 8:30 A.M. both days. It takes a day and a half to take the five tests.

Advisor Shortage Worrisome

LUBBOCK -- There is a shortage of food in the world today, but even more worriso is the shortage of people who can advise the world's farmers on how to make appropriate use of technological resources and

'Short-term humanitarian assistance can help nations overcome temporary food shortages arising out of natural disasters, but a lasting impact can only be achieved by training individuals in the lesser developed countries through educational and technical assistance programs," Dr. William F. Bennett, interim dean of Texas Tech University's College of Agricultural Sciences, com-

More than 40 international students enrolled in the agricultural sciences program at Texas Tech are working toward undergraduate and graduate degrees in subjects ranging from food technology to agricultural engineering and agricultural economics.

'Most of our students are from Africa, especially Nigeria and Kenya, along with others from South America and Southeast Asia," Bennett said.

A majority of the international students enrolled at Texas Tech are sponsored by their governments or are dependent on their supported by the U.S. Agency for International Developme (AID)," he said.

The Texas Tech dean said that he was satisfied with the academic performance of the international students on the basis of comparisons of their grade point averages with those of average American students.

"International students usually work harder because they are aware of their deficiencies and are trying to adjust to a new educational system. It is also important for them to finish schooling here as soon as possible and return home."

Desert Plant May Well Prove Salvation of Seagoing Whale

LUBBOCK -- A desert plant may save the magnificent sperm whale from extinction and Texas Tech University is holding a conference to find out how.

An endangered species, the sperm whale has been the only source of a unique liquid wax for decades, and in 1975 more than 20,000 sperm whales were killed to produce the wax. Jojoba, a slate green, twiggy stunted shrub that grows under desert conditions, also produces the same wax. Jojoba's liquid wax can be produced more economically and in larger quantities than the whalers can supply.

The potential uses of jojoba and other desert plants will be discussed during the Interna discussed during the International Arid Lands Conference on Plant Resources at Texas Tech University, Oct. 8-15, 1978.

"Desert plants,' conference organizer Dr. J.R. Goodin said, can be put to several uses if the appropriate technology is developed. Guayule can be used for producing rubber, atriplex is a protein source for forage, and aloe vera is a traditional antiseptic." Guayule, atriplex and aloe vera are all desert attending.

Goodin and Dr. David K.Northington, both of Texas Tech's Department of Biological Sciences, are organizing the conference. The university's International Center for Arid and Semi-Arid Land Studies (ICASALS) is one of the co-sponsors, along with the Committee on Desert and Arid Zone Research (CODAZR) of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Consortium of Arid Lands

Institutions (CALI), and the

ing Committee. The international conference will determine the current status of, and recommend approaches for, improving the use of plant resources of arid and semi-arid regions. Food, fiber, forage, industrial, medicinal and energy uses of arid land plants will be discussed during the week-long meeting.

Arid lands scientists from at least 20 countries are expected to present papers at the conference, while several others have indicated interest in
