 Herd. Holeman's homer was the only extra-base hit for the Sox.

In Friday's fiasco, the Herd bobbled and fumbled in the critical plays to give Nazareth the decision.

A walk and a single just before an error gave the Swifts two runs in the first, while an error and a home run by Louis Acker gave them two more in the second. A walk, two singles and an error combined for three runs and a 7-0 lead in the fourth.

Hereford finally got one run in the fourth on two singles and a double by Ken Clearman. The Herd added another in the fifth on a walk and an error.

Two walks, two singles, a double by Fred Acker and an error played three more runs for the Swifts in the sixth.

Leroy Holding, a lefty, took the win, going all the way. He gave up 2 runs on 9 hits, struck out seven and walked two.

Donnie Marcontell also went the route, taking the loss for Hereford. He gave up 10 hits, struck out six, and walked five.

The gathering marks the last time the vast district, one of the largest in U. S. Lions International, meets as an area. The district will be divided as nearly geographically equal as possible at the Plainview convention.

More than 1,000 Lions and members of their families are expected at the four-day gathering. Roy Block, a former director of Lions International, will address the district governor's banquet at the National Guard Armory Monday night.

The convention opened Saturday with registration and sports events. Meeting tournaments were held at the Country Club links and at the Plains Bowl bowling alley. A buffet supper at the Country Club starting at 7 p.m., concluded the opening day's activities.

A luncheon at 12:30 will launch Sunday's program after Lions and their guests will have been free to attend church services. The Wayland International Choir will present a concert at 2:30 p.m. at the high school auditorium and at the same site at 4 p.m., Lions will elect their district queen from a possible field of 70 candidates.

A business session at 9 a.m. at the Granada Theatre will nominate governor candidates for District 2T-1 and for the district that is to be formed with division of the present district Hereford will remain in District 2T-1.

The model luncheon will be held at noon, a business session at 2 p.m., and the district governor's banquet at 10 p.m. at the Country Club will conclude the day's program.

Tuesday's agenda will get underway at 7 a.m. with a breakfast for club presidents and secretaries at the Hilton Hotel. He was District 2T-1 Zone Chairman in 1957 and was deputy District Governor in 1958. He also has held numerous district committee posts.

 this year, the farmer who produces excess wheat, will usually receive history credit only for the allotment. In the past, the overproducer received his total wheat acreage as history.

The farmer who produces excess wheat in 1959 may deliver the excess to the Secretary of Agriculture or store it — on the farm under bond or in a commercial warehouse. In that way, he avoids marketing quota penalties, he said.

The grower also gets history credit for his allotment plus diverted acres just as though he had complied with his allotment, Collier said. However, the credit for diverted acres is lost in case the stored wheat is sold or used and the producer becomes liable for marketing quota penalties.

The committee pointed out that there is another type of situation in which the producer exceeds his wheat allotment but produces no marketing excess.

That situation may occur on farms where the total wheat acreage is 15 acres or less; the normal production of wheat acreage is under 200 bushels; the 1959 yield is so low that no excess is produced; or the farm has been approved for the production of up to 30 acres of wheat for use on the farm under the feed wheat program.

In those circumstances, Collier said, the farmer gets credit only for the allotment, not for diverted acres.

Corsetless Moose Set To Cut Loose

By FRANK EOK
ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Five years ago when Bill Skowron came up with the Yankees, several New York baseball writers flatly declared he'd never make the grade at first base. They said he had two left feet and might try the outfield, his position at Norfolk, Va., and Kansas City.

After two years with the Yankees and batting marks of .340 and .319, while platooning against southpaws, some of these same experts not only swallowed their words but wrote that Moose Skowron would become another Lou Gehrig. They pointed to Lou's .295 and .313 his first two years and the fact that Moose is the quiet type.

"That's right," says Manager Casey Stengel of his .303 hitter for five American League seasons. "They also said he couldn't catch a fly ball."

"The only thing wrong with Skowron now is that he turns his head while swinging. We hope to correct that. Bill Dickey has been working with him and I like the results."

Why was Moose turning his head?

Well, he was wearing a corset most of 1958 and it restricted his swing.

While bending down for a ground ball on May 11 (he was hitting .373) he pulled some back muscles, collapsed on the field and was carried off on a stretcher. He had aggravated an injury sustained the previous summer when he lifted an air conditioner in his new home at Hillsdale, N. J. The injury limited Skowron's 1957 World Series service to four at bats, all infield outs.

"I wore a heavy corset from May 20 to about July 20," says the Moose, who this spring is a healthy 28 and raring to bust out for a really big season.

"Dr. Sid Gaynor had two corsets made for me. After using the heavy corset for two months I went to a lighter one. It weighed about two pounds and I used it until Aug. 15.

"Both of them, while they did the job of restricting my movement, were binding. But I wanted to play. I'm miserable when I don't play. I've always played when Casey asked me to play.

"And don't let anybody tell you Casey was down on me last spring because of the false report I didn't care to play third base. Ask Casey. My first two years I sulked a bit because I didn't play regularly when we had Joe Collins and Eddie Robinson. But since then I've been happy.

"After all, four World Series in five seasons and two of them fat winners' checks."

Skowron has been tabbed as a worrier by some scribes but since when does a .400 hitter worry? That's what the Moose hit last spring while hitting fourth between Mickey Mantle and Yogi Berra. He was doing well hitting fourth the spring of '57, too, until he suffered a painful leg injury. This season he may star at No. 4, the clean up spot.

"Let's hope he has had his share of injuries," says Dr. Gaynor, Yankee team surgeon. "It just so happens that he is the greatest physical specimen I have ever examined." And Doc has looked over a lot of athletes from head to toe.

Last fall with his corset in his foot locker, Skowron's bat paced the Yankees in the World Series. In the last three games he drove home six runs. And his two homers in the classic were off Warren Spahn and Lew Burdette.

Moose hit .273 last year. It was the first full season he missed the .300 class. It was also the first time he ever wore a corset. He hopes it will be the last.

About $20 in cash was taken in the school burglary, which was investigated by Hereford police officers April 8. Desks, drawers and cabinets were ransacked, and the money was taken from a cash box used for sale of cafeteria lunch tickets in the principal's office.

Entry was gained through the shop at the north end of the building, officers said. A small window of the door leading to the principal's office was broken when the prowlers apparently tried to pry the molding from the door.

Circumstances of the pair's arrest in Las Vegas is not known by authorities here.

By JIMMIE GILLENTE
Anybody can be wrong once in awhile. Even Earl Phillips. Earl sent a gadget of some sort down here with the notation that anyone who can identify it is too old for the draft. However, I have showed it to a lot of people who are too old for the draft and not one, as yet, has made the identification. Don Zimmerman said he thought it was a guide for a hame strap, but our own Brand expert (Atha McIver) says, "Nope, it isn't concerned with harness" — and I would rather have Atha's opinion than Zimmerman's. If you figure you are fairly old and real smart, you might drop in and make a guess.

Wayne Edwards and Jim Bob Allison got off down state to visit the King Ranch and, by some fluke, wound up at Corpus Christi. Wayne was looking over a nice sea-going cabin cruiser, when a prosperous looking fellow started to board the boat: Wayne expressed approval of the craft, and asked if the stranger owned it.

"Not me," replied the man. "I am just one of the crew. This belongs to one of those cotton farmers."

Dub Hair and Blue Turpen are recently back from Possum Kingdom, where they said that you could have held a Hereford townhall meeting, due to the number of local people they saw. They also brought back around 225 fish, mostly sand bass.

This started one of those bachelorshop arguments. Blue figured that the average fish costs $1 each, but Pack London and Abe Martin, both old fishermen, contended that year-in and year-out, the going price on fish will be $25 a pound. Just out of curiosity, I looked the price of fish up in The Brand grocery ads — and they average out at 30 cents a pound. This means a saving of $24.50 a pound on fish, if you spend a dime for a copy of the paper. If you really like fish, it also means that you could save $200 or $300 a year — and still have something left in which to wrap your fish.

A FOUR-DAY arts and crafts show and sale was held in the Henry Sears building this week. Such items as oil paintings, mosaic art, ceramic pieces and fine weaving were exhibited. Added attractions were free registration for several door prizes. (Staff Photo)

Bill Messick and I were visiting the other day, and we decided that Hereford and Deaf Smith County have the best law enforcement situation we can ever remember. Probably among the top 10 in the nation. There is no squabbling between the sheriff's department and the city police; we seem to have ideal law enforcement; all of the deputies and policemen are nice, friendly people — and they all have a lot of horse sense, along with ability. Naturally, Charles Skelton and Henry Aycock come in for a lion's share of the credit in securing and keeping good personnel. They really are a couple of topnotch men, but the whole dad-blamed shooting match deserves plenty of credit. It really is wonderful to have a situation like this area now boasts, and it has been a long, long time since I have heard a serious complaint concerning either group.

J. W. Robinson won some trips and merchandise in the Southland contests last year and, out of curiosity, I asked if he had to pay income taxes on them.

"Doggone right," said J. W. "If the trip is of a business nature, you only have to pay on your wife's part; if it is a strictly pleasure trip, you have to pay on both." The same is true of coats, cameras, and other items. J. W. says the company even sends out a slip indicating the value of the items and the portions which are taxable.

Sam Williams, over Littlefield way, got on the NBC "Price Is Right" show recently, and he was telling me that you sign a two page form before you are accepted. One of the rules that disturbed Sam was the one which required all animals to become immediate property of the contestant, then and there.

"I don't know what I would have done if I had won a jackass or a cow or something alive," declared Sam. "I had just about decided to tie it to a lamp post and call the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. One thing for sure, I knew I wasn't going to take it back to the hotel and get booted out."

Sam also said that you could take the merchandise around to legitimate dealers and get bids. The prices offered, according to Sam, will stand up as the taxable rate so long as they are from reputable firms.

This proves, of course, that all of those questions your wife and teenage daughter answer at home in the living room would not be clear profit — even if they did happen to get on the show which, being from Texas, is often more probable than you might think. When you get down to brass tacks, not many of us are truly able to financially bear the burden of winning one of those big jackpot prize deals. Come, tax time, and the gals would be bound to sell off the things the men prized most.

The post office has been pulling some sort of survey, which means that Elmer Patterson has been walking around with the carriers and making marks on a clip board. Three of the carriers have told me that Elmer is probably the fastest walker in town. Invariably, they seem to finish their routes 20 to 30 minutes sooner than when alone. They don't know if this is good or bad, as suggested that they give Elmer the heavy bag, and carry the clip board themselves. The boys thought this was OK, but wondered if Elmer might not object. Anyway, I notice this week that Elmer is still carrying the clip-board.

More flat grain storage seems to be under construction than ever before. Bill Howard was telling me that Poarch Bros. are fabricating elevator legs for places all over the country, ranging as far away as Dallas.

Urlin Streu recently put in a window which has a double-barrel appeal. The north side is filled with lawn care gadgets, and the south side is filled with fishing and camping gear. Streu says the wives get a gleam in their eye on one side, while the husbands seem to go for the fishing side in a big way.

'Business After Retirement' Keeps Oscar Easley Working With Cattle

By DAN MUDD
BRAND STAFF REPORTER

A "business after retirement" has become quite a profitable investment for Oscar Easley, owner of Easley feed lot 16 miles west of Hereford on the Harrison Highway.

A county rancher for more than 30 years, Easley started his unique "light feeding" operation in 1955 with 600 calves. Since that time, he has bought and sold thousands of young steers to commercial feed areas. He has no worries of ups and downs in packing house price offers, and doesn't find it necessary to sell full-grown cattle when prices are low because "dead weight" in feed lots.

His feed lot consists of eight corrals, which will hold from 150 to 250 calves each, a working area and eight feed and water alleys.

Located near the feeding corrals are two large ensilage pits and a grain storage building. During winter and summer months, the calves are put to pasture near the New Mexico state line.

The lot will hold as many as 1,700 calves at a time. He sold 550 calves this week and about 650 remain at the feed lot.

"My two sons helped me in ranching up to 1955," he said.

Splitting Tortilla Binding In Remote Mexican Wedding

By JACK RUTLEDGE
MEXICO CITY (AP) — Marriage is a simple thing in some of the more remote villages of tropical Oaxaca state.

At midnight, the bride and groom split a tortilla and each eats half. Then the town whoops it up until dawn.

Furthermore, says a reporter for the newspaper Excelsior just back from San Felipe Zihualtepec, polygamy is still common. A man can have as many wives as he can support. Some have eight.

But, although the marriage itself is a simple ceremony, preliminaries can be complicated. Here is an account of the wedding and wedding of Gregorio Bautista, 15, and his bride, Elvira Salvador Gregorio, 13:

Gregorio, hard-working young Zapotec farmhand, fell in love with Elvira.

Following custom, he consulted an elderly man in the vil-asking him to become his "ambassador."

The ambassador — Don Agustin Santiago — first made several calls on the girl's father, each time bringing gifts.

Agreement on a marriage was reached and the night before the wedding Gregorio made a public announcement.

The following dawn — the day of the ceremony — he and friends took a gift of pork to the bride's home.

Meantime, Gregorio had stocked his own home with many items: 400 ears of neatly sacked corn, several wrapped packages of carefully cut firewood, bags of sugar and coffee, two turkeys, 20 chickens, several quarts of aguardiente (alcoholic) and matches and cigarettes.

After lunch on the day of the wedding, Gregorio and friends paraded through the center of the village taking his gifts to Elvira's home.

Don Agustin, who headed the parade, knocked on the door and was greeted by the girl's father. The father invited Don Agustin into the house.

After an exchange of pleasantries, the gifts were deposited inside and the ambassador then offered the father a drink of aguardiente.

The town band — a boy with a guitar and his brother with a home-made harp — played several Indian ballads.

At 6 o'clock, a committee of women dressed in their Sunday best escorted Elvira to her new home, Gregorio's abode hut.

Much later the bride and groom met for an important part of the ceremony. Don Agustin gave them a long lecture on married life, its duties and privileges.

Everyone listened closely, although the discourse was long and tedious.

Promptly at midnight the tortilla rite took place.

Gregorio tore the tortilla in two. He ate half. His bride ate half. Presto! They were married.

The crowd broke into cheers and the two-man orchestra broke into music. The village then celebrated until dawn.

Such marriages, of course, are not common in the more civilized, parts of dominantly Roman Catholic Mexico.

But in remote areas, the Indians who lived there centuries before conquering Spaniards came, still retain certain ancient customs.

Future Use Seen In Clay Minerals

COLLEGE STATION — Clay minerals that "grow" like microscopic plants or animals may someday be used to diagnose diseases, to hunt for oil, or to detect submarines or mines on harbor bottoms.

These are predictions of Dr. U. Grant Whitehouse, head of Texas A. and M. College's Electron Microscopy Laboratory, where he and his staff have recently succeeded in becoming the world's first scientists to successfully "grow" the clay minerals under laboratory conditions with ordinary pressures and temperatures.

Employing tiny seeds of clay so small that 10,000,000 lined up would measure less than half an inch, Whitehouse and his staff have produced distinctly these seeds in containers of salt water, using no heat or pressure outside that of the normal room conditions.

"We have employed a method that is a duplication of what nature does to certain clays in turbid, ocean water," Whitehouse says. He adds that under natural conditions tiny seeds of some common clays carried by rivers into the ocean grow and change into distinctly different clay minerals in periods ranging from four to five years.

These particles of clay, or "seeds", are so small that to observe and photograph their growth requires the use of A. and M.'s $30,000 electron microscope, a device that permits photography of minute particles that cannot be handled by conventional optical-type microscopes.

Whitehouse emphasizes that the growth of the clay particles is by an interweaving of several thread-like seeds to form a somewhat larger unit, by fertilizing action of saline waters. Branch like extensions or "shoots" progressively grow outward from the larger seed and recrystallize to produce two different clay minerals as the final "fruit".

The big difference in this growth and that of many microscopic plants and animals is that the change is made, but no life is apparent.

Whitehouse describes the research at A. and M.'s Electron Microscopy Laboratory as fundamental, basic research. "But", he adds, "results" obtained should save millions to billions of dollars in development of methods for solution of many

Sick List Grows Among Families IT'S: HEP POINT OF VIEW

By BETTY BABIONE
It seems that around here almost every family I know has a member ailing in one way or another, or convalescing from something. And in some instances, such as with Mary Frances Lemons and Evelyn Thompson, the whole family has been down with the exception of the mamas. When dad and the kids are sick, mama doesn't have time to be!

After his own bout in the hospital, Bill Dameron got back on his feet in time to walk the floor during wife Nicki's 4th round in the maternity ward. First-grader Kerri, who seems to appreciate her position as "big sister" in the Dameron family, not only waxes ecstatic when queried about her new baby brother but also happily volunteers a detailed account of the welfare and progress of her sister and other brother as well.

I guess the most talked about activity in town, next to last week's Junior - Senior banquet (and its beautiful Southern theme) and this week's arts and crafts sale staged by the Hereford art groups to boost the Community Center fund, is the Amarillo all-city, women's bowling tournament. The tournament has attracted around 90 per cent of our local, Monday night bowlers and with such a good turnout the Hereford girls have an awful good chance of bringing home the bacon. (Well, the awards are in cash instead of bacon and I'm thinking most everyone would just as soon have it that way.) The competition began yesterday (the 25th) and will continue over a four-day period comprised of two weekends. Amarillo's Grand Bowl is the where of it.

May as well mention along about here that Friday morning's "Coffee Bowl" (women's league) still has room for more team members no matter what their degree of bowling experience, anyone who'd like to join the fun can do so by contacting Opal Roberson, league president, or Sally Skelton, league secretary.

SEEKING SHELTER

Sweden Moves Underground

By HANS DAHLBERG
STOCKHOLM (AP) — Watch your step when you go out for a walk in Sweden.

The whole country is undermined, honeycombed with caves and tunnels filled with military bases, garages, factories and oil stores.

For thousands of years the Swedes never realized the enormous advantages hidden in their country's big solid granite mountains. They were looked upon merely as a hindrance to agriculture and communication.

But when air warfare was developed to unexpected perfection in World War II it was suddenly understood that mountains could satisfy the demand for air shelters. Now the big Swedish towns have shelters which can house all their inhabitants.

The large public shelters, blasted out in the dry and silent depths of the primary rocks, have peacetime uses, too.

In Stockholm you won't find a single parking garage. But when you stroll through the quiet churchyard on the top of the Johannes mountain you would never guess that some 10 yards beneath you there is a large garage with parking spaces and a service station.

Stockholm's biggest establishment of that kind is a three-decked car park in the Katarina mountain which has room for 500 automobiles or, in case of war, houses 20,000 people. The roof of granite is 60 feet thick. Sharp angles in the tunnels leading into the shelter are designed to stop pressure waves. The air-conditioning can clean the establishment of radioactivity.

But the Swedes not only want to be sheltered in their mountain caves if the war breaks out. They also would like to keep the enemy from the borders of their country.

So, in order to protect the east coast navy from air raids, one of Europe's major naval bases is hidden in the heart of one of Baltic Sea islands. A solid granite roof, sometimes more than 50 yards thick, and giant shock-absorbing doors make the base A-bomb proof.

Included in this underground base is one of the country's biggest naval repair yards.

Bases of that kind are defended against an attacking enemy by medium range guided missiles, launched from the depths of the rocks.

The elaborate coast defense system consists of a network of fortifications, submarine pens and underground harbors into which destroyers can sail. Many of the top secret air bases all around Sweden are hidden inside rocks, too.

About 150 miles south of Stockholm the Saab airplane factory is buried some 100 feet below the land surface with workshops and accommodations for several hundred workers, including dining rooms. Air conditioning, a very essential thing due to the heat from machines, gives the air constant temperature and humidity.

At Saab, the planes are put together inside the mountain and taken out through a long slightly sloping tunnel. Several other big Swedish enterprises have blasted themselves into the mountains. They all report good results.

Swedes nowadays prefer to heat their houses with oil instead of coal or domestic wood, so there is a large and constant need for oilstores. The Suez crisis two and a half years ago also showed that a sudden break in the supplying of oil immediately causes rationing if the stores are not big enough.

And where could the inflammable stuff be safer than in the mountains? Using closed-down mines the oil companies sometimes have spared themselves the trouble even to cave the mountains.

Walking in Swedish countryside you never can be quite sure there isn't a lake of oil from the Middle East or South America somewhere below your feet.

Bible Words for Today

DANIEL 2: 22 — "He revealeth the deep and secret things: He knoweth what is in the darkness; and the light dwelleth with him". (KJV)

"We are anxious because we can not seem to have any certainty about the future. But God is not bound by such human limitations. He knows what is ahead in our world and in our individual lives. He looks at the future without dismay, for his power is greater than all the forces of evil. All things are in his hands—the past, present future, darkness and light. We can not know the future in any detail, but we can gain insight into God's plans. He reveals to us secrets of his laws which operate through the sweep of time and eternity. To those who seek his wisdom diligently He gives glimpses into the "dark and secret things" of human nature, science, and history. We will fear no evil for we are His, and "He knows what is in the darkness."

Self-Chosen Diet Plans Often Lack In Nutrition

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

The average American woman, who sticks pretty close to her own weight control diet, probably takes too many of her daily calories in the form of sweets, bread and fats.

This was disclosed in a new study of "self-chosen" diets of some 350 Illinois and Nebraska women, who measured and recorded their normal food intake over a seven day period.

All were requested to follow their usual eating habits, ranging between 1,800 and 2,100 calories a day — more for the active younger women, less for the older ones.

The study was a joint project of home economics experts of the Universities of Nebraska and Illinois. Their findings coincided generally with other studies made in other areas of the nation in past year.

Among other things it indicated that women, if they are short-changing themselves on nutrients, are likely to go light on calcium, found in milk, and thiamine, rich in pork and whole grain products.

They are least likely to ration themselves on protein, ascorbic acid and Vitamin A, found in other meats, green and yellow vegetables and citrus fruits.

Although about 17 per cent of the women were decidedly overweight, their favorite calorie-container was sweets and desserts, 23 per cent of their total diet. And more than 50 per cent of their daily calories were accounted for in sweets, table and cooking fats and bread.

White potatoes accounted for less than 4 per cent of their calories; fruits and vegetables only 11.4 per cent, and meat 14.7 per cent.

Nutrition experts maintain generally that the average woman of 25 will maintain her weight — neither gain nor lose — on a daily diet of 2,300 calories. This drops to 2,100 calories for the woman of 45 and to 1,800 for one of 65.

In reporting the study, the home economics experts found that there is need for further nutrition education in many dietary areas, and that "actually the need is often for decreasing the energy (calorie) value and increasing nutritive values" in the American woman's diet.

REMEMBER WHEN?

By Charlo Seeds

The setting was the famous San Francisco Opera House. Here, for sixty-three days, delegates from fifty-one nations gathered to form a world organization that might insure peace. . . not only in our time, but for the future.

In this memorable conference the United Nations was born. There were many stormy sessions, there were arguments and concessions, but at last a ten-thousand word Charter was hammered into shape. . . and unanimously approved.

China's representative was the first to sign, followed by Russia and Great Britain. The remaining nations, large and small, followed. . . until at the last, Secretary of State Stettinius signed for the host nation, the United States. . . as President Truman looked on.

The Secretary . . . voiced the hope of the world when he said that the U. N. Charter signing was not an end of the conference. . . but rather a beginning.

Remember the year?

A lot of men returned to the U. S. that year. . . and one of their first moves was to buy a car. . . not a new one, for these weren't available, but a used one. And as every used car buyer knew, signing the contract wasn't the end of the deal. . . but the beginning!

The year was 1945.

Trouble - free performance is the most important thing to look for in a used car. . . and you'll find the late models on our used car lot have been expertly reconditioned by our top mechanics to give you dependable service! Student Exchange Program Tells World How Americans Really Live

In the vanguard of small town schools to sponsor foreign exchange students, Hereford has consistently emphasized and expanded the program.

While our schools have benefitted tremendously from the exchange, it is also apparent that the entire community has enjoyed parallel advantages. The students from various countries have been generous in appearing before civic groups, service clubs, study clubs, and in visiting with families and individuals.

"We thought all Americans were millionaires, because those we saw at home lived in such a fashion," said an exchange student in a recent service club talk.

This story, no doubt, will be told and retold thousands of times as the 1959 exodus of foreign students starts for foreign lands in June and July.

We do not expect the citizens of all countries to like America and Americans. However, we would like to have these people form their conclusions on honest facts about how we actually live, rather than on the basis of a few Americans made rich through monetary exchange and high salaries in the states.

The foreign exchange plan is contributing more toward this end than any other single phase in existence today. True enough, America is hornsawgled into paying most of the costs on both ends, but the small expenditure is achieving more goodwill than all of the millions of dollars our country is pouring into the rat-holes of foreign aid.

Hereford can indeed be proud of its leadership and accomplishment along this line, and certainly we owe a debt of gratitude to the students and sponsors who have expended so much effort and time to make the student exchange program an outstanding success on the small town level.

Parallel Parking On Main Street

Installation of new parking meter heads around town this week centered conversation on two old subjects: parking meters and parallel parking on Main Street.

The parking meters, most people agree, do fill an important niche in our way of life. Without the meters customers would seldom, if ever, be able to park anywhere near the places they wish to shop, chiefly because the parking spots would long since have been filled by employee cars.

Angle parking, as now practiced, is another situation which could stand improvement. Main Street, quite narrow for maximum safety, is all the more crowded as a result of the present parking plan.

The only cure is parallel parking. This was discussed and finally determined by poll when the meters were installed some eight years ago.

Sooner or later, Hereford will have parallel parking on Main Street. The sooner, it seems to us, the better things will be.

Country Club

Does Hereford need a country club? The question arises from time to time but, like the weather, it is a situation no one does anything about.

Adequate golf facilities and swimming facilities at present are probably the two factors which have most hindered progress on any movement toward a country club.

Meanwhile, it seems to us that the question of needing a country club would result in a negative answer. If we actually needed one very much, someone would probably organize it.

Such, at least, has been the record of most other necessities in the community, including a modern hotel.

Nothing probably irks a creditor more than to have his indebted customer pass him in a new 1959 model automobile, while he (the creditor) creeps along in his ancient 1950 model jalopy.

Hereford water rates rank among the lowest 10 cities in Texas, and the situation is best reflected in the beautiful lawns, expansive flower beds and large trees scattered over the entire community.

What other town so far away from extensive water boasts so many boat owners and qualified ski experts as does Hereford?

Progress changes everything, including the possibility of drive in service when you need to mail a letter.

Keep in mind that even if you're on the right track, you'll get run over if you just sit there.—Gas City (Ind.) Journal.

We heard of a housewife who started a budget the first of the year and it's really paying off. By the time she gets it balanced each evening it's too late to go anywhere.—Coon Rapids (Ia.) Enterprise.

The POWER of FAITH by Howard Brodie

FAITH AMERICANS LIVE BY-4

The golf pro chased after a caddie who had stolen a box of golf balls and caught up with him just as a minister was passing by.

"I wish you had built your church closer," said the embarrassed pro, "then we could have taken the boys to Sunday school."

"Maybe we can bring the church to them," answered the minister, and the germ of an idea was born.

The Louisville Country Club's unique "ninth hole Sunday school," where caddies gather around a green to hear about God, has been in operation five years now.

First, the classes were taught by seminary students. Then one Sunday, Bernard Alwes, a professional sign painter and himself a former caddie at the club, went out to give the boys a chalk talk on faith.

Bernie admits he is no theologian, but he sets up his easel on the edge of the green and talks to the boys in a language they understand, illustrating his main points with deft sketches.

It's been quite a while now since the pro has had to chase after caddies for swiping golf balls, and there's no doubt that the Ninth Hole Sunday School has had a lot to do with it.

Motorists List 'Wants' For Tomorrow's Car

What "gadgets" would you like to see installed on cars of tomorrow?

GLENN WILLIAMS—What I would like to see installed on cars of tomorrow would be carburetors and fuel systems that would substantially increase the gas mileage.

GASTON BAER—I think I'd like to have a fully equipped ice box—with all the trimmings.

JERRY MALONE—Lower prices would be the most welcome gadget I can think of. But I would also like to see built-in television and stereo record players.

MRS. GAYLON PATTERSON—Well, personally, I'd like to see automatic drivers like automatic pilots in airplanes. Might be a lot safer than some people who go to sleep at the wheel.

MRS. KENNETH MATTHEWS—I'd like to see a compartment to keep drinks cold built in the car—such as babies' bottles. I also think it would be nice for remote control for highway driving and maybe a distance meter to judge how far another car was away before passing on the highway.

J. M. POSEY—What else could be added to them? There are so many gadgets now it almost takes a genius to work them. But then, maybe you could have radar and just sit in the back seat and let the car drive itself.

MRS. LARRY PASCHEL—I think we need a back-up, seeing-eye system for drivers like me. It might put a stop to some of these dented fenders some of us are always coming up with.

WYLAJEAN QUATTLEBAUM—Maybe they can make them in crazy shapes so it might be easier to parallel park in them. But, seriously, I think it would be a good idea to have some sort of warning device for highway driving at night. Maybe a buzzer to ring when another car is within a certain distance or when it crosses the middle marker.

MRS. FRED RULAND—I'd like to see them cut down on the size of the cars. They seem to get longer and wider every year. There should also be some way to cut down on the gasoline consumption.

MRS. MARIE BROGDON—The only thing I can think of for cars of tomorrow would be a device to tell a driver the distance in front of the car or in back. That would help cut out a lot of people following another car too close.

How many minutes must a person work in Hereford to buy a pair of shoes? Or a dozen eggs? Or a pound of bacon? How long to earn the money for his taxes?

The lengths of time for these items are different locally than they are in other communities because local wage scales are different than they are elsewhere.

On the average, it takes less time than it did five years ago. Out-of-16 key-consumer products investigated, it was found that 10 cost less in terms of hours of labor, one was unchanged and five increased.

This improvement in buying power is the result of the year-by-year rise in wages. Although prices rose also, they went up more slowly. Inflation, therefore, did not wipe out all the gains.

As a result, the average Hereford worker is now able to buy a man's woolen suit with the proceeds of about 22 hours of his labor, a refrigerator with approximately 97 hours, a house dress with 85 minutes, a pound of round steak with 25 minutes, a pair of nylon stockings with 24 minutes and a dozen eggs with 15 minutes.

To have bought the same items five years ago would have required at least ten per cent more in working time.

On the other hand, some costs have risen. A doctor's office visit is now 12 per cent higher, a haircut, eight per cent, and admission to the movies, four per cent.

The figures are based on findings of the National Industrial Conference Board, the Bureau of Labor Statistics and the Tax Foundation.

The BOOTLEG Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his bindweed farm discusses education this week. It's a free country, and he seems to be taking advantage of it.

Dear editor: When it comes to talking about education, I can speak without any conflict of interest, if you understand what I mean, and I was interested in an article I read some time ago about a famous educator who has surveyed the public education system in this country and announced that it was his opinion a high school to be really first class has to have at least 100 members in the Senior class.

Since I didn't go to high school that big when I was in school, I guess you can say he has a pretty good argument, but something turned up in the newspapers the other day that has got me to thinking.

It's about those seven men the country has picked to be the first men to fly off into space. As I understand it, the armed services searched from top to bottom to find the best equipped men, physically, mentally, etc., to make this attempt, and where did the top seven men come from? From small towns most people never heard of before.

Now I know some educator is gonna bust out and say the purpose of public schools isn't to train men to conquer space, but you'd think at least one or two of these superbly equipped men would come from a big city with a big school.

I know it's nicer to have well-equipped schools, and the bigger the school the better chance it has of being well equipped, but I have a notion there are some people in this country it wouldn't make any difference what size school you put them in, they'd miss the boat. And on the other hand, there are some young people who make the boat regardless of how small a school they had to put up with.

I ain't saying if you go to school in a big high school you can't come out pretty well equipped to start getting educated, I'm just saying if you look around among the leaders in all phases of life and assume they all came from big high schools, you'll be a long ways from being accurate.

I've heard that a good school could consist of a good teacher on one end of a log and a good pupil on the other, but there are people who argue that whole thing depends on the size of the log. There are others who say this is true, but there's a shortage of logs.

But don't take my advice on this. As far as I'm concerned, logs are made to fish from.

Yours faithfully, J. A.

Day To Day In Smalltown, USA

Looking over the headlines gives one a better picture of the community than many people realize, and this is especially true with "hometown" newspapers.

In The Brand this week was an item about "Nine Pistols Reported Stolen," but offsetting this probable touch of juvenile delinquency were notices of "Little League Tryouts" and plans for the "New Civic Center Drive."

In baseball, we lost to Dumas—but we managed to sweep our way into six first places in the Literary Divisions of the Interscholastic League contests.

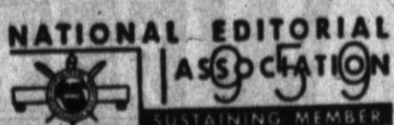

Recreation on the adult level also found its way into the news columns, including an art show and a golf tournament.

On the economic level, business was fair to good—and just to keep our spirits up, there was notice of another wildcat oilwell spudded in north of Dawn.

We have our troubles for sure: occasional reverses, a bit of delinquency here and there, but all in all America really is a wonderful place to live.

Nation's Capital To Go On Daylight Saving Time Soon

By TEX EASLEY

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's capital goes on daylight saving time the last weekend of April, and that will add to the confusion sometimes resulting from the difference between Texas and Washington time.

Not infrequently there are telephone calls from Texas to the offices of Texas members of Congress in late spring and summer months after the offices are closed — calls placed by those failing to realize that at 4:15 p.m. in Texas it's 6:15 p.m. here and most of the offices are closed for the day.

Rep. J. T. (Slick) Rutherford of Odessa and points west point out that his problem is compounded by the fact that El Paso operates on Mountain Standard Time — the only Texas city not on central time.

He tells of getting a call at his home a couple of years ago from a constituent in the El Paso area when the time difference was three hours. It was 7:15 p.m. there and the man "raised Cain because I had left my office" at that time of day, Rutherford recounted.

"The next morning bright and early at 7 a.m. here," he added, "I called him in Texas and chastised him for sleeping so late. By that method, he understood the time lag perfectly."

Incidentally, Rutherford said he had received an inquiry recently as to how Pecos might go on mountain time if it so desired. He talked to Thomas E. Pyne, Interstate Commerce Commission examiner versed in such matters, and learned:

Before 1883 there were no established time standards in the nation. The railroads then adopted the four now in use. Congress made it official in 1919, but there is no procedure or funds for enforcement. A community may adopt any time it chooses.

From Washington north and east, daylight saving time is in effect each summer. Virginia, except for the areas adjacent to Washington, sticks to standard time.

Amana Fact 1

Amana reserve power and efficiency brings temperature down to 0 degrees F. faster and safer than all others tested. Because Amana is engineered and designed and built to be a fine food freezer—not just a "holding cabinet" that "feels" cold.

Amana Fact 2

Amana maintains an even 0 degree temperature Amana has 6 "fast" freezing surfaces of solid aluminum with the cold coils brazed to each. All foods are either directly in contact with, or directly below these "FAST FREEZING" shelves. Amana reaches and maintains 0 degree (F) temperature—thus protecting your frozen foods from TEMPERATURE DAMAGE.

Amana Fact 3

Amana has uniform food storage temperature—many other freezers have long running cycles which indicate lack of freezing capacity. Amana insures "lock-in" nutritional values because of the even zero degree temperature throughout.

"Even Zero Temperature is the Key to Safe Food Preservation."

Tournament In Fort Worth Has Own Selecting Method

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF
Most of the rhubarbs of golf, it seems, happen in Texas. And there's one brewing over at Fort Worth where Colonial National Invitation faces a fight for survival against the encroachments of the PGA.

The PGA wants to name the players who are to be invited to the swank Colonial tournament — or at least name the top ones. The PGA has what it calls the Top Tournament Players system whereby the leaders of the links get paid appearance money.

If they participate in the tournaments they get points on their records and are entitled to several hundred dollars just for showing up at the tournaments the next year.

Colonial is not a TT tournament so the golfers don't get any points for playing there. Colonial already has lost the leading money winner of the year for its tournament because there are not TT points. He's Art Wall, who led the TT last year and can take $300 at each TT tournament this year just for doing it.

Colonial is a select tournament that has its own system of picking the players. It grades them in various ways and it also has some places to be awarded just because it wants the golfers there.

The PGA wants all the top men according to money winnings and TT points in the tournament and has handed down an edict that unless Colonial increases its field from 48 to 54 and allows PGA to name the first 40 it will set up a competing tournament next year. This could work toward elimination of Colonial. If too many of the top golfers chose to play in the competing tournament the Colonial field would be in trouble.

Colonial is handled by an 18-member board of governors. There are strong indications that these fellows never will yield to the PGA on invitations. If it doesn't then Colonial may fade from the golf scene.

Colonial can operate like the Sam Snead Festival at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. There they have a fine hotel that likes to get folds in for a stay and a little golf. There is a tournament to which top names in the game are invited. It is just one of the baits and they really don't care whether they have all the top players or not. A competing tournament at Hot Springs, Ark., doesn't bother them.

The PGA says if Colonial doesn't choose to accept its edict it can have a tournament similar to the Snead festival with a competing tournament elsewhere.

Colonial, it is indicated, wouldn't want to operate unless it felt it was getting the players it desired.

Colonial might, if the circumstances are right, pull out on its own. The past two years have found the tournament taking stiff blows from the weather. If it happens again this time the board of governors might say, "We've had it" and the PGA would be rid of what it apparently thinks is a troublesome situation.

THIRD DOWN PUNT—Dallas Ward, who lost his job at Colorado, is shown diagramming his controversial play. Five men go downfield and five men block in this formation. The punter kicks from about seven yards behind the scrimmage line.

Ward Still Backs Third Down Punt

By FRANK ECK
ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. — Dallas Ward, the Colorado University football coach who lost his job because he punted on third down, says he would do the same thing again.

"You punt on third down instead of fourth when you're up against superior opposition like Oklahoma, perennial Big 8 champion and the team we never could lick," says Ward who can collect a yearly salary for life without ever worrying about Saturday's game.

"A team like Oklahoma can ram the ball down your throat when you try to punt on fourth down."

"One of the biggest mistakes a college team makes comes when it waits too long to punt in its own territory. I got fired because I punted on third down."

Some of the soundest coaches in collegiate football punt on third down, men like Woody Hayes of Ohio State, Paul Dietzel of LSU, Bud Wilkinson of Oklahoma, Bowden Wyatt of Tennessee and Bobby Dodd of Georgia Tech.

Ward, dropped by Colorado on Jan. 23, could take it easy for the rest of his life if he wished. Eight years ago he was given a full professorship for life at Colorado.

"If I don't get the kind of a football job I like," says Ward, "I'll coach the golf team at Colorado, or it's got to be something in physical education."

Ward, the type who would rather coach football than eat, described his third down punt formation for this writer at the point just above bottom of cuff. Cut two pieces of buckram, same shape as cuffs but a half-inch smaller all around, and insert in cuffs on both sides. Stitch cuffs together to one inch from top.

Now pull left-over dress fabric through cuff on one side and tie on top to form handle. Or you may use a small silk scarf in harmonizing color.

You may make this bag in a basic summer color, such as beige or gray, and vary it indefinitely by changing the handle. Or you may have a bag to match each costume, simplifying your work by assembly-line techniques, cutting out several bags at once in different colors of felt.

Such a bag also is an excellent idea for gifts or church bazaars.

A Proclamation

The greatest heritage of American citizenship is a system of government under laws devised by elected representatives of the people for their protection, and administered by courts in which every citizen enjoys equal standing.

Adherence to the rule of law has enabled the nation to grow and prosper. It also has been a vital element in our own community life. The whole structure of our business, religious, social and cultural life rests upon laws. Every citizen is dependent upon them in his daily affairs, and for the protection of his person and property.

call public attention to the contrast between government under law in the United States and government by force behind the Iron Curtain.

In Hereford plans are under way of observing Law Day U. S. A. with special programs in the schools and before many of our local organizations.

NOW therefore, I Woodrow B. Wilson, Mayor of Hereford, Texas, do hereby proclaim Friday, May 1, 1959, as Law Day U. S. A. in Hereford, Texas and call upon all citizens, organizations and schools to join in this observance emphasizing good citizenship and respect for law.

WITNESS MY HAND in the City of Hereford on this 22 day of April, 1959.

s/ Woodrow B. Wilson
Woodrow B. Wilson,
Mayor of the City of Hereford, Deaf Smith County, Texas.

In our reliance upon the rule of law in our daily affairs we may at times take for granted the benefits we derive from it. It is appropriate, therefore, that the President of the United States has proclaimed a day for national recognition of the importance of law in American life, and of its effects upon the well-being and happiness of each citizen.

The observance, known as Law Day U. S. A., will take place on May 1, 1959. In countries under communist rule the same date has been a time for demonstrations of the military force, upon which communism relies to maintain its political domination over the people. No better time could be chosen to

MARK OF THE JUDGE

How To Make A Handbag Wardrobe

By DOROTHY ROE
The fashionable ensemble look of 1959 often demands a special handbag for every dress — a project prohibitive in cost if you buy everything ready-made.

But the woman who sews her own may have a wardrobe of coordinated dresses and handbags at pin-money prices, with a minimum of time and effort. All she needs is a little fabric left over from the dresses she has made, plus some felt to match and the skill to put them together in a smart handbag.

An effective summer handbag, easy to make, is a simple felt pouch with a dress-fabric handle and a scrap of buckram for stiffening. Decorative edging is done with scalloping shears.

Easy directions for making the bag have been worked out by local sewing center experts. First cut a pattern from a piece of paper 15 inches square. Mark four inches in from each corner along bottom and side edges. Join marks, to create a triangle at each lower corner. Cut off corners along line. Measure down three inches from top of square and fold top over to form cuff. Cut off corners in the same manner as bottom corners, but measure three inches instead of four.

Open out pattern and pin to felt. Cut around edge with scalloping shears, to give scalloped outline. Cut two identical pieces. Fold top cuffs over and stitch down. Take two vertical tucks in both sides of bottom of bag to give pouch effect, making tucks four and a half inches apart and 3/8-inch deep. Stitch sides together, working on right side of fabric and starting from point just above bottom of cuff. Cut two pieces of buckram, same shape as cuffs but a half-inch smaller all around, and insert in cuffs on both sides. Stitch cuffs together to one inch from top.

Now pull left-over dress fabric through cuff on one side and tie on top to form handle. Or you may use a small silk scarf in harmonizing color.

You may make this bag in a basic summer color, such as beige or gray, and vary it indefinitely by changing the handle. Or you may have a bag to match each costume, simplifying your work by assembly-line techniques, cutting out several bags at once in different colors of felt.

Such a bag also is an excellent idea for gifts or church bazaars.

RETALIATION
TOLEDO, Ohio — Ward Schlacter, 25, disturbed a raccoon when he ran wiring through a crawl space under his house to rig up a hi-fi radio set. A few days later the raccoon apparently retaliated by ripping out those and other wires and plunging the house into darkness.

PAR IS 70 FOR OPEN
MAMARONECK, N. Y. — As has been the case in recent years, par for the U. S. Open golf championship to be held next June 11-13 on Winged Foot's West course has been cut from 72 to 70. The course will measure 6,873 yards with a par of 35 on each side.

Mrs. De Valera's Quiet Living May End In June

By MICHAEL ROONEY
 DUBLIN — Back at the turn of the century, a slim blonde taught American-born Eamon De Valera to speak the native Gaelic of old Ireland. Then she married him and stepped quietly into the wings while he moved center-stage to become one of the leaders of the new Ireland.

Now Sinead De Valera is almost 70 and even among the Irish she is practically unknown.

If Prime Minister Eamon De Valera should be elected President of Ireland in June — and hardly anyone has any doubt about the outcome of the election — his little white-haired wife may find things changed. Instead of quiet seclusion and self-effacement she may move

Club Studies Milk Desserts

The Wyché Home Demonstration Club met recently in the home of Mrs. Marvin Axe of the Flagg Community. Mrs. Axe is a former member of the Wyché Club.

Mrs. Charles Packard presented the program on "Desserts Made With Milk." She stressed the point that in order to ease nervousness and induce sleep one should drink at least three glasses of milk a day. She also demonstrated how to prepare a butter roll.

Various milk desserts and the preparation of such desserts were discussed by the group. Committee reports were heard and plans were discussed for the county luncheon to be held April 27.

Members present were Mesdames George L. Olson, C. R. Dameron, E. C. Hewitt Jr., Charles Packard, Norman Hodges, W. P. Axe and C. F. Newson.

American Navy, winning new renown for his new name, John Paul Jones.

His famous retort to an offer of surrender came when his small flotilla of French Navy ships attacked a British supply convoy just before it reached English shores. Tackling a protecting frigate, he rammed his enemy and joined in a furious battle that raged for hours. As usual, he won.

But after America won her independence, there was no place for Captain John Paul Jones in the peace-time Navy.

He eagerly jumped at the chance to command a Russian task force for Catherine The Great. His well-drilled crews trounced the Turkish invaders and he was, unknowingly, tabbed as the beautiful empress' next lover.

A plot prevented this with trumped-up criminal charges and he was finally released to France. Numbed by pain, Jones petitioned to rejoin the American Navy. He died in Paris shortly before orders signed by President Washington reached him.

He was just 45 years old.

Summary: Schoonover has done a masterful story of "The Revolutionary" who lived an extremely full life, but is known today only because of one well-known moment of courage.

into the spotlight of public scrutiny that goes with the Presidential office.

Devoted wife of a famous husband, Sinead De Valera is a woman whose name rarely appears in print. Few people in Ireland would recognize her photograph. She could walk down any Dublin street without a head being turned.

She never appears at state functions and is never seen in the Prime Minister's big black limousine. There are no collections of her bright sayings, veteran Dublin reporter says she has never been reported as saying anything.

Seven years younger than her famous husband, she is a shy, soft-voiced woman, just over five feet tall, with a gentle, wistful smiling face that recalls her girlhood beauty. She dresses always in black, her hats and clothes belonging to an earlier age. The modest De Valera home at Cross Avenue, Booterstown, in the south Dublin suburbs — it is called Teach Cullinan, or House of Holly — has always been more of a home than a Prime Minister's residence.

The De Valeras have lived there for more than 25 years, and for Mrs. De Valera especially it means more than the stately splendor of the former residence of the British Viceroy, now called Arus an Uachtairin, the Presidential Palace.

It has been suggested that the family will continue to live in the House of Holly, even if De Valera becomes President. The state residence, it is believed, may be used only for official purposes and the new President, as much a home lover as his wife, would return daily to his quiet suburban house after transaction of state business.

But Mrs. De Valera, who is happiest with her family and her grandchildren, cannot hope to escape entirely from the heavy round of social duties falling to the wife of the President. Some of the burden could be carried by her unmarried daughter, Dr. Mairin De Valera, who may be deputed to act as hostess. This would mean that Dr. De Valera, who at 46 is a brilliant scientist, would relinquish her post as lecturer in botany at Galway University. She has made an intensive study of the development of seaweed for industrial and medicinal uses.

Another daughter, Eimer, might help as she lives in Dublin, but she is married to civil servant Brian O'Cuiv and has a family of her own.

De Valera and his wife celebrate their Golden Wedding next January. Their half-century of marriage has been marked by partings and peril, tragedy, defeats and triumphs.

Sinead Flanagan was 21 when she married the tall, American-born teacher of mathematics in January, 1910.

It was a pupil-teacher romance with a difference, for the couple first met when Sinead — or Janie, as her name was known in the Anglicized form — was a teacher of the Irish language in the resurgent Ireland of the early 1900s.

The school she taught in, and to which the scholarly De Valera came as a pupil, was Leinster College of Irish, founded by Dr. Douglas Hyde, who became Ireland's first President 30 years later.

Their love for the native tongue, which brought them together, has remained a strong bond between De Valera and his wife over the years. In her own right she is entitled to recognition for an important contribution to the Irish revival movement, for she has written many children's plays which are regularly produced at schools throughout the country.

These simple little plays are Mrs. De Valera's only known interests outside her own household. They are never produced in the big theaters. Mostly they are staged in small halls for little Gaelic gatherings and in children's drama competitions at schools and convents.

Sometimes Mrs. De Valera will turn up for an opening performance. She will sit quietly through the play and then, just as quietly, slip away.

 An End to Seclusion?

OFF THE Shelf

By H. A. TUCK
 He once said, "I have not yet begun to fight" and then went on to win a sea battle. That is about the extent of knowledge most of the world has about a great man of history.

"The Revolutionary" by Lawrence Schoonover is a remarkable historical novel about the life of one Jock Paul, whose star of fortune rose to the heights simultaneously with the growth and freedom of the tiny American colonies.

Born in a small Scottish village, Jock Paul was the son of a gardener. Realizing that in knowledge there was power, he absorbed a vast education from the local Anglican priest. His brother was kidnapped into the British Naval service, but escaped in America.

Jock sailed to the colonies to get trade information from his brother and remained to set up a ship provisioning agency. He prospered quickly, but sailed as First Officer on a slave ship going to Africa.

At the end of the voyage, he was made a captain and again returned to Africa, where he helped stop a native rebellion, gaining a devoted chieftain for himself.

Circumstances, which seemed to favor Jock Paul, gave him a wholesale slave business, but he gave it up to sail again.

But Jock lost his ship, cargo and money through treachery. Taking the name "John Paul" he became a Shakespearean actor in the Caribbean islands, finally giving it up to return to America and another sailing post.

Becoming a captain once more, his career was prosperous, but short. He was accused of murder, but finally cleared himself.

He was alternately a privateer and a captain for the young

Student From Greece Talks At Lions Meet

Helen Hidiroglou, a Hereford High School student from Athens, Greece, was program speaker at the Hereford Lions Club meeting Wednesday noon in the ballroom of the Jim Hill Hotel.

Miss Hidiroglou gave a brief sketch of her native country and compared it to the United States. She is in the United States on a visa, and is not an exchange student.

She told the group that when she first came to Hereford, she was surprised to see the number of cars parked around the school, and was further surprised to learn that most of them belonged to students. Students in Greece, she explained, go to school on bicycles and are not allowed to drive cars until they are at least 18 years old.

She said there are about 2,000,000 people in Athens. She pointed out that all cities in Greece are large, and that all villages are small. Most families have servants, as cost is little to hire them.

Politically, Greece has a king, but the king has little power. A prime minister election is held every four years.

In 1945, Miss Hidiroglou said there was a communist revolution in Greece. About 30 per cent of the population is made up of communists, she estimated.

She said that her people are afraid of Russia, and that they feel they would obtain little help from Americans if the need should arise in event of an invasion.

There is quite a number of Americans living in Greece, she said, and those who live there are considered wealthy as they work for Americans and are paid in United States currency.

She said schools in Greece are not co-educational, and that students do not like their teachers, as a general rule. If a teacher should see a girl with a boy on the streets, the incident is usually reported to the principal of the school.

Examinations in school are very difficult, and students learn by memory. Often, they must quote complete book chapters, word for word, on an examination sheet to answer a question.

She told the group that there is a Lions Club in Athens, and that her uncle belongs to the club.

Economy is built on tobacco, wine, beer and rice products. Salaries are low, she said, and prices are low.

Guests at the meeting were Lions' District Governor Billy Hunter of Amarillo, and Jim Robinson, father of Lion J. W. Robinson.
