Democrats joining push for health bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congressional Democrats say President Bush increased the chances for a medical insurance bill this year - their bill, not his.

"My goal is action this year," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine. "I am very much encouraged by the fact that he (Bush) has offered a plan," even if it is "woefully inadequate."

"We'll try to put a bill on the president's desk," said House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo. "And if we can't override the veto, we'll try to work something out."

The president, on a campaign swing through Ohio on Thursday, announced what he said was a comprehensive answer for tens of millions of Americans who can't afford health insurance.

The president proposed a government subsidy of up to $3,750 per family to help them buy health insurance. The maximum would go to people below the poverty line, and nothing would go to workers whose companies already supply health benefits amounting to more than that figure.

The proposal also contained several initiatives the president said would reform the health care system. They include changes in laws governing medical malpractice lawsuits, and other suggestions for streamlining and cutting costs.

To defray the costs of his plan, estimated at $100 million over the first five years, the president suggested limiting the growth of the two biggest existing government health programs, Medicare, which serves the elderly, and Medicaid, which serves the poor. However, he stopped short of endorsing a specific funding mechanism.

"We'll figure that out," Bush told reporters.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., who as chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee will have a major voice in the debate, compared Bush's plan to a witch's brew - "eye of newt and tongue of frog... but nothing noble and nothing new."

Despite the strong language, Democrats and interest groups praised the president for entering the fray, something he had not planned to do until next year until polls showed public demand for action.

"The president has raised the issue of health care reform higher on the American political agenda," said Horace Deets, executive director of the American Association of Retired Persons. "The bad news is the president's health care reform plan is not an effective prescription for our ailing health care system."

Congressional Republicans found more to praise than the others, but many were low-key in their remarks.

"We are a long way from a solution, but we're closer today than we were yesterday," said Sen. Dave Durenberger, R-Minn., who urged Democrats to work with the Republicans "and look for common ground."

Louis Sullivan, the secretary of Health and Human Services, made clear he didn't see the plan as written in stone.

"This will be a plan where we will need to have the support and the cooperation of the Congress, so that this provides a framework for negotiation and discussion in consultation with the Congress," he said.

Gephardt said Democrats would focus on health care as soon as they finish work on the tax and economic stimulus bill that Bush wants by March 20, and that the party already was looking for a consensus that "Democrats can rally around."

But House Minority Leader Robert H. Michel, R-Ill., was among those who predicted only incremental action this year.

Basketball queen and king candidates

The 1992 Hereford High School basketball king and queen will be crowned Tuesday at a special pep rally at HHS. King candidates include (back, from left) Derek Mason, Leo Brown, Sean Smith and Kevin Kelso. Queen candidates are Kyanne Lindley, Teresa Baker and Jennifer Bullard. All are seniors.

AMARILLO - Forgive him and spare him, says Bishop Leroy Matthiesen.

No, let him die, says the Rev. Jim Smith, reflecting the overwhelming feeling of Amarillo residents over whether Johnny Frank Garrett should be executed for killing a nun.

Matthiesen of the Catholic Diocese of Amarillo has been working for several weeks to spare Garrett from lethal injection. Garrett was convicted of raping and murdering 76-year-old Sister Tadea Benz after breaking into a Roman Catholic convent in Amarillo in 1981.

Matthiesen's efforts on Garrett's behalf drew the attention of human rights group Amnesty International, which then solicited an appeal from Pope John Paul II.

Garrett was an hour away from receiving a lethal injection last month when Richards granted a 30-day reprieve, citing the appeal from the pope.

Garrett, 28, is now scheduled to die on Thursday.

The bishop's outspokenness and subsequent reactions by the pope and governor have angered residents and caused some local church leaders to charge that politics have tried to interrupt justice.

"I think the bishop has a right to stand up for his convictions, but I think he has been too outspoken in this case," said Smith, senior pastor of St. Stephen United Methodist Church in Amarillo.

"Because this affected a person in his diocese, he must show love and forgiveness. But the way of the Lord is to treat all people equally under the law, and this cannot be an exception."

An informal poll taken by the local newspaper showed residents were 10 to 1 in favor of executing Garrett, who broke into the St. Francis Convent near his home and stabbed Sister Benz, a Franciscan nun, before raping her and leaving her to die.

Garrett has said the victim recited the Lord's Prayer while he raped her. "He should die now. It's taken long enough," said Brad Bowers, a local gun shop owner. "The bishop is not talking for the whole community. I think about the family of the victim more than I think about the Catholic church. Garrett took a life and I think he should pay for that."

Matthiesen, who has also spoken out against the Pantex nuclear weapons assembly plant near Amarillo, denied any political motives in fighting for Garrett's life.

"I have no political ambitions," said Matthiesen, who is in his early 70s and has lived in Amarillo for more than 40 years.

"I would invite the critical people to sit here and take the angry calls I get. I have come to say I am no saint, but if I was, I would be the patron saint of lost causes."

"I don't accept that the scriptures teach we have to support all the regulations and laws of the state," he added. "The role in the scriptures was constantly to challenge and shape public policy."

Some blame Richards for making Garrett's case a political concession to Catholics, but Bill Cryer, spokesman for the governor, said Thursday "there was no concession to any church."

"There were some legal matters in Garrett's case that came up and all the governor wanted to do was give them enough time to make sure all the I's were dotted and T's were crossed. It's the least you can do before taking someone's life."

Cryer acknowledged the pope's personal appeal had an influence.

"Any time you get a letter from the pope it certainly makes you pause," he said. "It would be ridiculous to say we get letters from the pope every day because we don't."

Garrett's attorney, Warren Clark, and Matthiesen have argued that evidence gathered since Garrett's trial in 1982 shows the death row inmate was driven crazy by years of sexual and physical abuse.

The Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles considered the evidence during a clemency hearing Wednesday before recommending Garrett be executed.

Matthiesen said Thursday he was frustrated by the board's decision. The bishop said he recalled Garrett playing at the convent as a child and hearing from other leaders at the convent about the boy's abusive home life.

Matthiesen acknowledged Thursday he feels some guilt for not acting sooner.

"At the time we were aware the Garrett family was dysfunctional and we did not take any real action," Matthiesen said. "We didn't have any idea it would end in such tragedy."

"We were insensitive to the problem. And maybe the only good thing that will come out of this is that we will all be more aware of the problems we have with physical and sexual abuse of our children."

Dee Slocum, pastor at Highland Baptist Church in Amarillo, said Garrett's past abuse is no excuse for his crime.

"To be mistreated doesn't give you license to go out and mistreat and abuse someone else," Slocum said. "The price tag has now come due for some poor choices Garrett has made in life and for the crime he has committed."

Garrett spurs more debate

CHICAGO (AP) - Computers now perform some medical jobs better than doctors and the machines are going to get even smarter in the future.

A panel of experts at the American Association for the Advancement of Science meeting here said Thursday that computers can diagnose some diseases better than doctors, more accurately predict which patients will live or die and even give medical advice by phone.

"It's been called automatic medicine," said Kenneth Goodman of the University of Miami medical school. "Some doctors are aghast. The idea of an artificial doctor is appalling to many who went to medical school."

A veteran doctor can call on the human memory of thousands of cases to make a tricky diagnosis. But in some cases, a computer can scan its stored memory of millions of cases, and in seconds make an even more accurate diagnosis, Goodman said.

Terrell Ward Bynum of Southern Connecticut State University said an experimental computer at Georgetown University in Washington is more able than doctors to predict which patients in intensive care will survive.

Another experimental machine can diagnose the precise cardiac state of heart patients and identify those most likely to have a heart attack.

Machines now routinely monitor patients and automatically dispense medicine or pace the heart beat, he said. Other machines are better able than doctors to determine the precise dosage and type of antibiotic to counter infection.

Richards will call session on school finance

AUSTIN (AP) - Lawmakers will meet again in special session to try and adopt a school finance plan, Gov. Ann Richards said.

Richards said Thursday she doesn't know when she will call a special session, but that the Legislature cannot wait until next year to fix the system that was declared unconstitutional by the Texas Supreme Court.

"I'm not going to rush. We're going to take our time so that when we do it, we try to get it right," she said.

The Texas Supreme Court last week struck down the new county education district (CED) system of school funding, but gave lawmakers until June 1, 1993 to adopt a new funding plan.

The delay means lawmakers could wait until their next regular session in 1993 to adopt a new school finance plan.

But Richards said legislators need to work on it sooner so that whatever they adopt can be decided by voters in the form of a proposed constitutional amendment.

Richards did not offer any specific plan, saying that many options were under discussion.

She also declined to say whether a tax increase would be needed to satisfy court-ordered reforms to equalize funding between property-rich and property-poor districts.

"I don't think we are at a point where you say, 'You can't do this, you can't do that.'"

But Richards added, "Now I'm realistic. I know there are certain things you can't do to get it through the Legislature."

After meeting with staff members for several hours Thursday, Richards was scheduled to meet with Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, and chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Richards

Montford said he would oppose any tax increase. "I think we can make it work on what's been allocated," he said.

Richards did endorse a recommendation by minority groups to create a blue-ribbon task force to help the Legislature.

"It is going to be very important for us to have a group, a committee that is going to be looking at it not in any selfish interest but in the interest of the children. Undoubtedly we will do something like that," Richards said.

Representatives from the NAACP and LULAC said such a committee is needed to build a consensus on school funding since the Texas Supreme Court has ruled three times against legislative attempts to fund schools equally.

"This political gamesmanship... is wreaking havoc with the future of all our children," said Raul Reza Vasquez, state legal director to the League of United Latin American Citizens. He said the blue-ribbon committee should consider consolidating school districts in large, urban counties.

Lottery rocked by controversy

AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas lottery, which won't be selling tickets for months yet, finds itself at the center of a firestorm of controversy.

Gov. Ann Richards voiced satisfaction with the handling of state lottery preparations, and the game's director said Thursday that Texas has been hit by "notoriously nasty" lottery industry infighting.

But a state lawmaker, contending that serious questions about lottery operations remain, urged creation of a legislative oversight committee. And the Republican Party chairman charged that the lottery is "in chaos."

The governor said lottery officials have acted properly as the state moves to begin instant-win, scratch-off games by July 1.

"I really don't think there have been any secrets. I think everyone has pretty well known what the plan is, and I have expressed to them that I think it is very important for them to go forward. We're talking about a lot of revenue here," Richards said.

The lottery, approved by voters last year, is forecast to bring the state more than $400 million during the current two-year budget cycle.

"They have handled this in the most ethical possible manner by trying to make everyone aware, and I think all the players were," Richards said.

Lottery director Nora Linares said Texans are anxious to play the game and that state officials are working to start one with a process that is honest and aboveboard.

The state will award a contract worth $5 million to $10 million for printing instant tickets, and one worth up to $200 million for computerized on-line games.

Ms. Linares said competition among lottery companies for lucrative state contracts is fierce.

"Lottery industry fights are notoriously nasty, and this nastiness has clearly broken out here in Texas," she said. "Industry lobbyists are doing nothing but harming themselves, their clients and the state with their scud attacks by fax, phone and press release."

The lottery's private consultant resigned this week after news reports that he was related by marriage to an official of the company being awarded a contract to print the instant tickets.

Rep. John Carona, R-Dallas, said in a letter to Ms. Linares that the resignation of consultant John Pittman corrected "the obvious conflict of interest."

"When you have knowingly allowed the fox to guard the henhouse, as was apparently the case in the Pittman matter, you have to expect the concern and skepticism which now exists," the lawmaker wrote.

"My recommendation is that a bipartisan oversight committee be immediately formed from among state legislators to avoid even the remote appearance of future improprieties," he said.

Japanese-Americans fear backlash

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Michi Onuma fears the anti-Japanese backlash might get worse than what he lived through during World War II. Dennis Hayashi has seen harassment complaints jump from one a month to three a week. And Honda dealer Bill Boggs has a lot of customers looking to buy American.

Little by little, the heated rhetoric between Japanese and U.S. leaders - who can't seem to trade anything but insults these days - is causing fear in San Francisco's century-old Japanese-American community.

"Japanese-Americans are sitting ducks," says Karl Matsushita, director of the Japanese American Library.

"There's a feeling that it might get worse," says Onuma, English-language editor at the Japanese-American Times. At 84, he's seen it all before.

During World War II, he was interned at Hard Mountain, Wyo., one of 120,000 Japanese-Americans forced into relocation camps.

In some ways, Onuma sees more danger in today's "buy American" campaign.

"In those days, you didn't have so many of the Japanese business people here," he said. "I think Americans feel more threatened."

The controversy has raged for weeks as Americans complain that unfair trade practices by Japan helped create the huge U.S. budget deficit. Japanese politicians responded that the inferior quality of American products is to blame for the U.S. losses.

On Wednesday in Japantown, a thriving center of houses, businesses and restaurants near downtown, Japan-bashing was an unpopular subject.

"I don't want to talk about it," the man behind the counter at Soko Hardware said, warding off questions with upraised arms.

Coordinator begins job

Promoted to the position of coordinator of the Panhandle Community Services Hereford Center, Martha Galvan previously had been a Job Training Partnership Act sub-region manager in Hereford and Amarillo.

PCS Hereford Center has new coordinator

A personnel change in the Hereford Center of Panhandle Community Services has moved Martha Galvan to the position of center coordinator.

She assumed duties in her new position Jan. 6, replacing Celia Serrano who has been promoted to another position.

As center coordinator, Mrs. Galvan oversees PCS services, including HUD housing, weatherization, transportation, energy crisis and commodities distribution.

Including the coordinator and former coordinator, seven persons are employed in the Hereford Center.

The new coordinator is a lifelong resident of Hereford and began employment through the Comprehensive Employment Training Act. She worked at the Deaf Smith County Library for six months and then was a secretary in CETA for a year.

Mrs. Galvan became associated with the Job Training Partnership Act program in 1982. She was a sub region manager in Hereford before appointment to the Amarillo-Canyon area in the summer of 1990. She has commuted to Amarillo since that time.

Besides having the opportunity to be involved in a broad range of PCS programs, Mrs. Galvan said she is pleased to be working in Hereford again.

She and her husband, Mike Galvan, a machinist with Winget Pump Company, are parents of three children.

Hereford Center is located at 603 E. Park.

Air National Guard training exercise ends with 16 dead

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) - The breakfast crowd had about gone and cook Michael Kelley was preparing for the lunch rush when the huge military transport plane smashed into Jojo's restaurant and smothered it in flames.

"The wall and ceiling, they just came in on us and the grill came out toward me and knocked me down," said Kelley, who was in the kitchen. "I got up and called back, 'Everybody get out.'"

The plane, a Lockheed C-130 Hercules, plunged nose down, exploding into a giant fireball and spewing flaming aviation fuel as it hit the restaurant and the adjacent Drury Inn motel late Thursday morning.

"It looked like Pearl Harbor," said Mark Whitehead, who lives nearby and saw the 60-foot flames and tower of black smoke.

Sixteen people died: the plane's five-man crew, two restaurant workers and nine employees of a plumbing supply company who were meeting at the hotel.

At least 19 others were injured. Ten were hospitalized, including three in critical condition.

An Air Force investigation team from Scott Air Force Base in Illinois was trying to determine the cause of the crash.

"It's way too early to speculate on anything... We're at as great a loss as you are to determine what happened," said Lt. Col. David Moremen.

Jojo's manager Dennis Serio said about 20 people in the restaurant escaped without serious injury. The two who died, he said, were in a corner of the building demolished on impact.

The 24-hour restaurant, part of a chain, and the motel are near U.S. 41 in this city of 125,000, at the southwestern tip of Indiana.

About one-fourth of the restaurant was destroyed. The four-story hotel was damaged mainly by fire. The twisted metal of the plane was not recognizable as an aircraft by the time the fire was out at dusk.

The plane's crew, based with the Kentucky Air National Guard's 123rd Tactical Airlift Wing in Louisville, was practicing touch-and-go landings at Evansville Regional Airport, about a mile away, said Guard spokesman David Altom.

In the routine maneuver, a plane lands and then takes off immediately.

Vanderburgh County Coroner Charles Althaus asked families at a community center Thursday night for dental records and other documents that might help identify the bodies, which he said were burned beyond recognition.

Only the names of the five crew members were released, but the other bodies were presumed to be those of two missing restaurant workers and nine members of the Evansville Plumbing and Industrial Supply Co. The company's vice president, Bruce Stallings, said the nine made up much of the firm's work force and included his brother John.

Moremen said the airplane, built in the late 1950s, wasn't considered an especially old model, and that the C-130 is known as one of the safest and easiest military planes to fly.

The crew's pilot-instructor, Maj. Richard A. Strang, 39, of Floyd's Knobs, Ind., was "highly experienced and had impeccable credentials," Moremen said.

Strang piloted the first C-130 that landed in Panama during the 1989 U.S. invasion, said Maj. Jeffrey Butcher of the 123rd Tactical Airlift Wing.

The C-130 Hercules is a work-horse for the military, a medium-range craft that carries mainly cargo or people on a variety of missions. The four-engine plane normally has a crew of five. It has a wingspan of 132 feet and is 97 feet long.

SBOE member wants order canceled Governor won't change committee decision

AUSTIN (AP) - State Board of Education member Jane Nelson has called on Gov. Ann Richards to try to turn around the board's adoption of U.S. history textbooks that Ms. Nelson called "defective."

But Richards' deputy press secretary, Chuck McDonald, said Thursday that the board properly handled the acceptance of $20.3 million worth of school books.

A special Education Board committee authorized state contracts for the nine books Wednesday. Since the books came under intense scrutiny in November, publishers and the public have identified 4,289 mistakes in them.

Publishers, who have said the highly publicized errors will be corrected, were fined $356,300 by the state. The fines will be paid in textbooks.

The board also is requiring publishers to provide a correction sheet every six months identifying new errors, which will be subject to higher fines.

Books currently being used in Texas classrooms are several years old.

The Education Board adopted the nine books last month on the condition that publishers correct and pay penalties for the errors, and that the special committee authorize the contracts.

Texas Education Agency spokesman Joey Lozano said in light of the committee action, plans were to move ahead with the contracts.

He said the issue wasn't scheduled to come back before the board, and he did not know of any way it could be added to the agenda.

Ms. Nelson, a Lewisville Republican who is running for state Senate, earlier urged a delay in adopting history books.

She asked Richards Thursday to call for rejection of the books or for the resignation of Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno, appointed by Richards.

McDonald, Richards' spokesman, said, "Obviously, it would have been preferable had no mistakes been made in the first place, but... the board has acted properly to address this very serious problem."

Students complete program

Tierra Blanca Primary School students recently concluded their self-reliance program, "I Can Help Myself", with the final session being presented by Anna Rohrbach.

Rohrbach, the oral hygienist from Dr. David Purdy's office, showed two film strips teaching the children the proper ways to brush teeth. She stressed why it is important to brush and care for teeth.

Students were given toothbrushes, which were donated by Dr. Charles Hennessy, and posters reinforcing what was learned from the film strips.

Sandra Inmon, instructor, also presented each child with a certificate of completion for the six-weeks "I Can Do It" program.

Anyone who is interested in giving a program may call the Hereford Camp Fire Lodge, 364-0395.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am coming to the end of a five-year prison sentence in a state correctional facility. I need to know how to deal with society after my release. I'm not sure about how I should conduct myself around people I haven't seen in five years. What will be expected of me? What should I say to women I take out for the first or second time? Should I tell them I've been in prison?

When I apply for a job and am asked if I have a criminal record, what should I say? I'm afraid if I mention this I won't be hired. On the other hand, if I lie and they find out the truth, I will probably be fired.

It seems that there should be some kind of counseling in prison to prepare people like me for the outside. Some inmates I know who have been in prison for a long time are actually afraid to leave because they don't think they'll fit in out there. Almost 90 percent of these prisoners end up coming back, mainly because they were not prepared to face the outside world.

If you can be of any help to people like me, it will be greatly appreciated by the thousands of inmates who are struggling with this same problem.--F.C., Cranston, R.I.

DEAR F.C.: You are not alone. I've dealt with this problem in my column before. There is a self-help group for ex-offenders that can answer your questions and give you more guidance on living on the outside. It can also refer you to local groups around the country that offer job training and placement, as well as counseling. For more information, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to The Fortune Society, 39 W. 19th St., New York, N.Y. 10011. Its members do an excellent job.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Several months ago you wrote about the "seat belt game." It goes like this: Every time your child reminds someone to buckle up the seat belt by saying, "Are you forgetting something?" he gets a point. After 10 points, he gets a treat.

Our 10-year-old daughter loved that game and whenever we got into the car she would say, "Are you forgetting something?"

About a month ago we were taking a short trip when a man ran a stop light and hit our car broadside, sending our mini-van spinning on its side before flipping upside down. My husband and I were literally suspended in the air, hanging by our seat belts. We were shaken up a bit but sustained only minor cuts and bruises. Our two children, however, were not so lucky. It seems that after playing the little game, they had unhooked their seat belts to "fun rattle."

Our son suffered serious cuts on his leg and ankle. Our daughter was thrown from the van and had a fractured pelvis. The car was totally demolished. It's a miracle that no one was killed.

I am absolutely certain that my husband and I would not have had our seat belts on if it hadn't been for the little game our daughter read about in your column.

You can be sure that no one will ever ride in our car again without a locked seat belt. NEVER. I am convinced that your column saved our lives.--E.W., Silsbee, Texas

DEAR TEXAS: By now I am certain that you have explained to your children they must never unlock the seat belt until they have reached their destination. That accident was the perfect lesson and they must never forget it.

Thanks for letting me know my column was helpful. This is what it's all about.

When in Amarillo, do as the Amarillioans do.

Eat at Gardski's.

Choosing a restaurant in an unfamiliar town doesn't have to be a scary decision. All you have to do is eat where the locals eat. In Amarillo, that means Gardski's. And it has for over 15 years. So next time you're in Amarillo, eat where the locals eat.

Without a doubt... it's gotta be Gardski's!

Freshmen take two of three from Pampa

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

Hereford High School freshman won two out of three basketball games with Pampa Thursday, and the one loss was nearly a win. The Hereford boys' A team came back from a 13-point deficit in the last four minutes and had a chance to win, but a steal by a Pampa player saved the game.

After a close first half that ended with Pampa leading 22-20, the Harvesters scored the first 11 points of the second half to seemingly break open the game. When Hereford came back and pulled within 43-38, Pampa rolled off eight straight points to take command again.

Hereford came back again. Michael Brown hit a three-pointer, Cody Curtis stole the subsequent inbounds pass and Tony Mercer scored to make it 51-43. Moments later Hereford coach Robert Gamboa called a timeout with 2:25 left in the game and Hereford trailing 55-45.

Hereford kept the rally going, and Gregg Kalka's three-pointer cut the Pampa lead to 55-52, but Pampa's Nickleberry hit a free throw to make it 56-52.

Curtis had a pair of steals in the last minute, and one set up Benton Buckley to score. Buckley drove the right baseline, was stopped cold and threw up a fade-away prayer from 12 feet away. The shot went through with 10 seconds left, making the score 56-54.

Nickleberry was called for traveling after the subsequent inbounds pass. Hereford players passed the ball around, looking for an open shot, but Nickleberry redeemed himself with a game-preserving steal.

"Defensively, we played our best game of the year," Gamboa said. "Offensively, our shots didn't fall, but the kids battled back hard and played a good game."

Curtis led the team with 14 points. He was joined in double figures by Buckley with 11 and Kalka and Ashley Noland with 10 each.

The boys' B team beat the B Harvesters 64-43 in a game of streaky scoring. Hereford outscored Pampa 27-7 in the first quarter. Pampa won the second quarter 16-11. Hereford won the third quarter 18-6. Pampa won the fourth 14-8. The most important quarter was the first.

"I've been emphasizing all week that we have to come out strong," Coach Curtis Cotten said. "One thing that helped us was we were able to break their press relatively easily, and then getting ahead and making them play catchup. That was the biggest thing about our game—getting Pampa out of their game."

Raymond Alaniz scored 17 of his 19 points in the first quarter, mostly on layups. Homer Hamilton led Hereford with 20 points, 13 of which came in the third quarter.

In Pampa, the Hereford's freshman girls pulled out a 30-28 win when Jessica Evers hit two free throws with 13 seconds left.

Pampa pulled ahead 15-2 in the first quarter.

"I think we were looking forward to the district tournament (today and Saturday in Hereford) a little, plus we had beaten Pampa pretty easily the last time we played them," Coach Brett Stegall said, explaining his team's slow start.

Also, the Hereford players were surprised by Pampa's shooting. A Pampa player hit a pair of three-pointers, and Stegall said his team is not used to seeing that.

Hereford came back in the second quarter and trailed only 21-15. At the end of three quarters, the Pampa lead was cut to 25-24. Hereford held Pampa to only three points in the fourth.

"The girls showed a lot of character in coming back," Stegall said. "They just kept chipping away." Evers and Leslie Tatarevich each scored six points.

The team is hosting its district tournament today and Saturday, with action starting at 4 p.m. today in the gym at HHS. Hereford's A team meets Dumas at 5:30, but the game between Hereford's B team and Canyon scheduled for tonight was canceled. Canyon, the tournament's top seed, elected to take a bye, Stegall said.

Other games today are Pampa and Borger at 4 and Randall and Caprock at 7.

The B team will play the Pampa-Borger loser at 10 a.m. Saturday in Whiteface Gym. Hereford's A team will play at the high school Saturday, at 10 if it loses in the first round or 11:30 if it wins.

The tournament's championship game will be at 6 p.m. Saturday at the high school.

Piling on the points

Jacob Lopez goes to shoot for two more points during the freshman boys' B team's runaway victory over the Pampa boys' B team. The Hereford B team won 64-43 in the first game of a doubleheader Thursday in Whiteface Gym. In the second game, Hereford's A team lost a thriller 56-54.

Bengals may take Coryatt

CINCINNATI (AP) - The worst defense in the NFL is looking at Texas A&M inside linebacker Quentin Coryatt as a possible first-round draft choice.

New Cincinnati Bengals coach Dave Shula has been watching Coryatt at this week's scouting combine in Indianapolis. He said Coryatt might fill the bill for the pass-rushing schemes drawn by the Bengals' new defensive coordinator, Ron Lynn.

"You need a big-time playmaker behind the line of scrimmage. You're not going to find that kind of athlete in Plan B. We're taking a long look at him," Shula said.

"I call him a 're-director.' Anything he hits goes in the other direction."

Coryatt put a hit on Texas Christian wide receiver Kyle McPherson last season that broke McPherson's jaw.

"He's not flashy, an intimidator type," Texas A&M defensive coordinator Bob Davie said. "But he's contagious. Wherever he is, they'll respect him because he's a great physical specimen and he just lines up and takes care of business."

Coryatt could not play his freshman year because of low college entrance test scores. He also had to sit out his sophomore season when the NCAA concluded that he cheated during a Scholastic Aptitude Test.

Olympic hosts want medals

Herd spikers sign

ALBERTVILLE, France (AP) - The government is wracked by scandal, the economy's in the doldrums, the immigration problem is exploding. So what are Carole Merle, Franck Piccard and Surya Bonaly going to do about it?

Gold, silver or bronze would provide a nice temporary cure for what ails the French, merci beaucoup. "For France, the Games will be a success if they're well-organized - but not without athletic success, too," Bernard Bourandy, press officer for the French Olympic Committee, said Thursday.

"Even if the Games are well-organized, the French people won't consider them a success if our athletes don't win eight to 12 medals," he said.

Such pressure could feel like Mont Blanc on the shoulders of Merle, Piccard, Bonaly and company in the Albertville Olympics that begin Saturday. France, after all, has earned only 10 medals in the last five Winter Games.

Call it the Curse of Killy. Since Jean-Claude Killy, co-president of the Albertville organizing committee, flashed to three gold medals on his home slopes in 1968, France has racked up a total of - count it - one gold.

French pride, which has taken its lumps in international affairs in recent years, will be on the line for 16 days as the world's best winter athletes return for the first time since Grenoble.

"The French are very proud that the Games are in France," said Jean-Francois Renault, editor-in-chief of the nation's daily sports newspaper, L'Equipe. "A great sporting event can raise the spirits of a troubled region."

The latest woes include a huge uproar over President Francois Mitterrand and his government, already highly unpopular, allowing Palestinian guerrilla chief George Habash to receive medical treatment in France.

Most of the 2,000-odd athletes had arrived by today. Olympics personnel dragged the ski slopes and made last-minute checks before the eyes of an estimated 2 billion television viewers around the world are trained on Albertville for Saturday's opening ceremonies.

France is fielding its best team in years and seems certain to best its two-medal total from Calgary in 1988 - a gold in the inaugural super-G and a bronze in the downhill, both by the skier Piccard.

But Merle and Piccard could change everything with stellar performances here.

The 28-year-old Merle already boasts nine World Cup victories in the super-G, including two on the steep, winding Olympic course at Meribel. She also is a contender for two other skiing golds.

Piccard, a 27-year-old local hero from Les Saisies in the Alps, has been feeling the burden of high expectations, even though the newspaper survey didn't list him as a probable medalist.

"The pressure of being France's top hope in the Olympics was bad on me in December and January. Now that we are at it, that it has started, I feel at ease," he said Thursday. "I expect very good things for me here."

Good things already have happened for the French who live in the Savoy region hosting the Games: hotels, tramways, new thermal baths and other development.

"The French believe with good reason that the Albertville Games are going to restore the economic elan of the region," said Billouin. "Nine in 10 of the people we surveyed are convinced there will be favorable economic returns from the Games."

Trading pin business booms

ALBERTVILLE, France (AP) - A packing list for anyone heading to the Olympics includes several bare necessities: a passport, travelers checks, and plenty of pins.

Trading the colorful pins from companies, organizations, countries and everything in between is big business for some and a source of pride for others.

And it's mighty handy when you want to get that extra towel in the bathroom at an Olympic site. Checks by border police into France can include a request for them and a man in uniform usually gets his way.

"If you give me a pin, I'll talk better," trader Phil Wooll told a reporter, who was out of them. Anything to add to Wooll's collection of more than 10,000.

The boom of the small, decorative badges to pin on clothes has taken on such proportions that European supply no longer can keep up with demand and production has been pushed into Taiwan, partly also because of the lower labor rates.

"The fad is colossal," said pins trader Michel Marechal at a trade fair in Albertville.

The top producer in France, Arthur Bertrand SA, produced "several million pins" last year, commercial director Nadine Dufat said. And the Olympics were largely behind the explosion.

"The market volume has expanded three, four to five times the volume of last year," Dufat said.

It seems every firm, from yogurt to hi-tech equipment companies, has put in an order for Olympic pins.

While some Asian-produced pins can be had for a mere dollar, prices of the usually older, more prized pins can go through the roof, climbing into the hundreds of dollars for pins from the early Olympics.

Pin collectors took Roland Garros by storm last year, grabbing all the pins celebrating the centenary of the tennis Grand Slam event. They cost 50 francs, or about $9.

But Marechal said they now fetch over 1,000 francs, or about $200, if you can find them.

The average Olympic pin sold for just under $10 in Albertville and traders hope the prices will rise once the games begin Saturday.

Despite the glut, there is no fear the current inflationary rates will deflate the market. Some companies bring them in by the bag, knowing they often can be more effective than a tip.

Wooll knows their effectiveness. "The more the better," he said.

Samaranch rules out blood tests

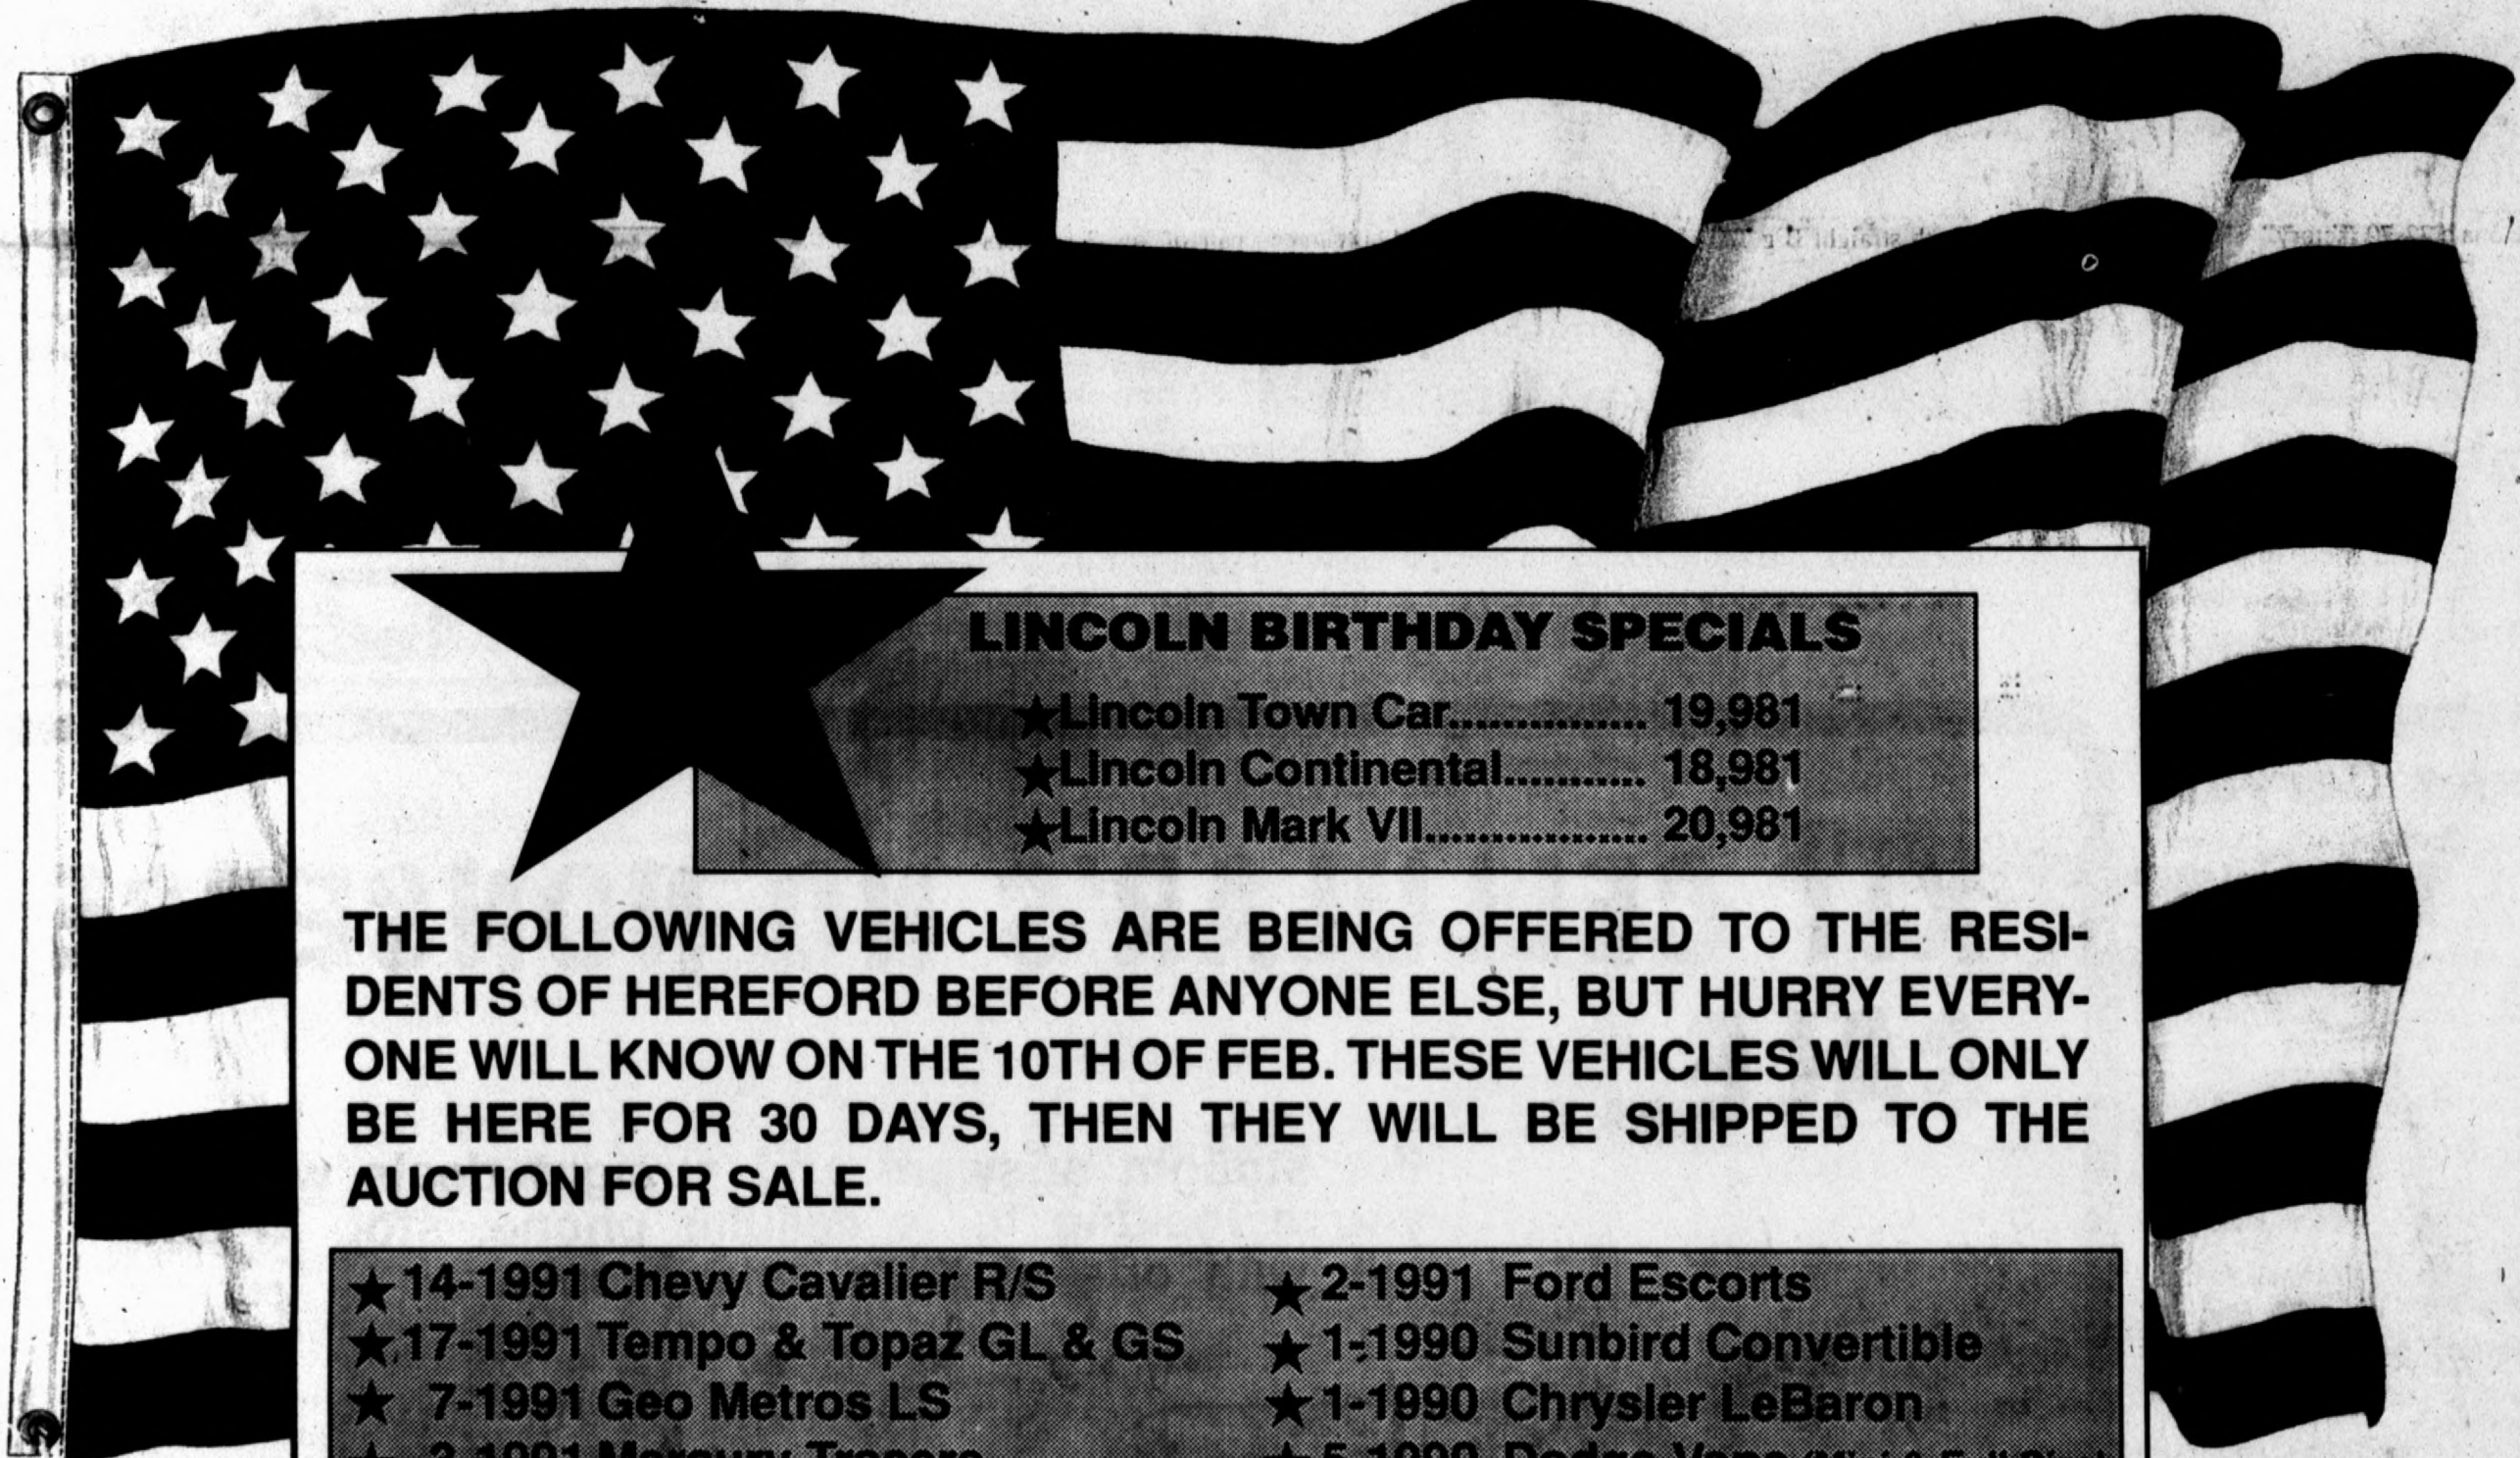

LA LECHERE, France (AP) - IOC President Juan Antonio Samaranch today ruled out the possibility of introducing blood testing at the Albertville Winter Games, a prospect that had divided the IOC and alarmed U.S. Olympic officials.

Putting to rest one of the most controversial issues heading into the Winter Games, Samaranch said at a news conference that blood testing has not yet received approval from the executive board of the International Olympic Committee and therefore will not be used

Miserable first quarter destroys Cavaliers

By The Associated Press
Some NBA teams have no players in Sunday's All-Star game. The Cleveland Cavaliers have two, not that anyone would know after watching their last game before the break.
Mark Price, Brad Daugherty and the rest of the Cavaliers combined to miss their first 18 shots in the second quarter Thursday night and lost to the Detroit Pistons 112-95.
Price made Cleveland's only basket in the period, a 20-footer with 32.5 seconds left. The Cavaliers shot 1-for-20 in the quarter and were outscored 29-8.
"That was probably one of the ugliest quarters in the game's history," Price said.
Detroit's three All-Stars - Isiah

Thomas, Joe Dumars and Dennis Rodman - played that way. Thomas scored 38 points, Dumars had 27 and Rodman added 26 rebounds in the Pistons' fourth straight victory.
The Cavaliers led 29-21 after the first quarter, but trailed 50-37 at halftime.
Daugherty led the Cavaliers with 24 points and 11 rebounds.
Hornets 132, Warriors 113
Kendall Gill, who collapsed from a migraine headache at a shootaround earlier in the day, scored 27 points in Charlotte's highest-scoring game ever.
Gill was taken by stretcher to a hospital and was not released until two hours before tip-off. He made a remarkable recovery, hitting his first six shots.

Charlotte led 24-14 after 7 1/2 minutes and Golden State never again got its deficit into single digits. The Hornets led 74-53 after the most productive half in team history.
J.R. Reid had 19 points for Charlotte. Chris Mullin scored 25 points for the visiting Warriors.
Knicks 102, Rockets 85
Patrick Ewing shut down Hakeem Olajuwon and New York never trailed.
Ewing had 24 points and 13 rebounds. Olajuwon was held to 14 points, seven below his average.
Mark Jackson had a career-high 19 assists and Gerald Wilkins had 19 points for New York. The Knicks broke it open with a 9-0 spurt midway through the fourth quarter, making it 85-72.

Otis Thorpe and Vernon Maxwell each scored 21 points in Houston's fifth straight road loss.
Trail Blazers 103, Mavericks 98
Clyde Drexler got 11 of his 32 points in the last three minutes.
Rodney McCray's 3-pointer with eight seconds left got the Mavericks within 101-98, but Drexler made two foul shots with two seconds remaining. Portland led by 21 points in the third quarter.
Rolando Blackman had 26 points for Dallas.
Hawks 123, Magic 112
Kevin Willis had a season-high 32 points and added 21 rebounds as Atlanta led the whole way.

Duane Ferrell scored 23 points and Stacey Augmon 20 for Atlanta.
Rookie Stanley Roberts and Nick Anderson each scored 24 for the Magic.
Pacers 117, Spurs 106
Reggie Miller scored 28 points and Chuck Person had 24 as Indiana stopped David Robinson.
Robinson, the starting center for the West in the All-Star game, was held to a season-low 13 points.
The visiting Pacers went on a 17-9 spree to start the fourth quarter for a 101-92 lead with 6:32 left.
Bullets 124, Nets 108
Harvey Grant scored 22 points and Washington enjoyed its most lopsided win of the season.

Pervis Ellison added 17 points and Michael Adams had 16 points and 10 assists for the Bullets. Washington led by 15 points at halftime and the Nets never got closer than that.
Derrick Coleman had 18 points for New Jersey.
Bucks 106, Nuggets 97
Dale Ellis and Larry Krystkowiak led a fourth-quarter spree that sent Milwaukee past visiting Denver.
The Bucks, trailing by two points after three periods, began the fourth quarter with a 19-6 surge. Ellis got 12 of his 25 points in the final period and Krystkowiak had 10 of his 14.
Dikembe Mutombo had 27 points, 14 rebounds and six blocked shots for the Nuggets.

Nelson finally gets in All-Star game

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) - After 30 years in the NBA as a player and coach, Don Nelson is finally in the All-Star game. He can't think of a better time to make his debut.
Not only are two of Nelson's players in Sunday's game, but the Golden State Warriors coach also will get a long-awaited opportunity to work with Magic Johnson, a starter for the Western Conference.
"It's a dream come true for me, personally," said Nelson, a member of five NBA championship teams and one of the most successful coaches in league history. "It's always been a dream of mine to coach the guy. It'll be a special weekend because of Magic."

Johnson, who retired from the Los Angeles Lakers in November after testing positive for the virus that causes AIDS, received more votes in fan balloting than any Western Conference guard except Clyde Drexler.
Some people have been critical of his decision to play Sunday, but not Nelson, whose Tim Hardaway has been the best point guard in the West this season but won't start because Johnson was voted in by the fans.
"For anyone to say Magic should not play in the All-Star game is disturbing," said Nelson, who promises that Johnson, who has said he also intends to play in the Barcelona Olympics, will not be limited to a cameo appearance.

To ensure Hardaway received his due for an outstanding first half of the season, NBA commissioner David Stern created an extra roster spot for the third-year pro - the youngest player in the game for the second consecutive year.
Like Nelson, Hardaway and Warriors teammate Chris Mullin support the decision to allow Johnson to play.
"Why not? It's Magic Johnson," Hardaway said. "He deserves a great farewell. ... I think they should let him play next year, too, if the fans vote him in."
"Who knows what the future holds," said Mullin, a four-time

All-Star looking forward to his first start. "Any opportunity to be around him is special. Playing with him again will be a great feeling. He's a special kind of guy."
Hardaway is ranked among the NBA leaders in scoring (23.1 points per game), assists (9.5) and steals (2.06) and is one of the reasons Golden State has the second-best record in the Western Conference.
Still, he isn't upset that Johnson will start ahead of him and likely be the center of attention for three days of festivities that begin today.
"He didn't get what he deserved when he retired. Maybe he'll get it this weekend," said the 25-year-old Hardaway.

Arizona pulls out lucky victory

By The Associated Press
Arizona needed just five seconds to turn an apparent loss into its sixth straight victory.
The seventh-ranked Wildcats appeared headed for a loss Thursday night at Stanford when Adam Keefe, an 83 percent foul shooter, went to the line with five seconds remaining and the score tied at 70.
But Keefe missed the first shot and never got a chance to take the second due to a lane violation. Khalid Reeves then took the inbound pass, drove the length of the court and hit a layup as time expired to give Arizona a 72-70 victory.
"I knew when I got the ball something good was going to happen," said Reeves, who had 13 of his 19 points in the second half.
Arizona (16-3, 6-2) beat Stanford (12-5, 4-4), which has lost four of its last five after an 11-1 start, for the eighth straight time.
The Wildcats overcame 29 points and 16 rebounds by Keefe. Sean Rooks also scored 19 for Arizona and Chris Mills added 17.

Johnson, who retired from the Los Angeles Lakers in November after testing positive for the virus that causes AIDS, received more votes in fan balloting than any Western Conference guard except Clyde Drexler.
Some people have been critical of his decision to play Sunday, but not Nelson, whose Tim Hardaway has been the best point guard in the West this season but won't start because Johnson was voted in by the fans.
"For anyone to say Magic should not play in the All-Star game is disturbing," said Nelson, who promises that Johnson, who has said he also intends to play in the Barcelona Olympics, will not be

Like Nelson, Hardaway and Warriors teammate Chris Mullin support the decision to allow Johnson to play.
"Why not? It's Magic Johnson," Hardaway said. "He deserves a great farewell. ... I think they should let him play next year, too, if the fans vote him in."
"Who knows what the future holds," said Mullin, a four-time play on Wednesday after having his eligibility restored by the NCAA, got the last two of his 25 points on an 18-foot jumper that broke a 76-76 tie.

Louisville 73, No. 20 N.C. Charlotte 63
Reserve James Brewer scored 19 points as Louisville handed visiting North Carolina Charlotte its first Metro Conference loss.
The 49ers (15-4, 4-1) were unable to overcome a sloppy first half in which they hit only 9 of 19 shots and turned the ball over 14 times in falling behind 35-21. Brewer hit a pair of key 3-pointers to keep the Cardinals comfortably in front.
No. 25 Texas-El Paso 78, Colorado State 50
Eddie Rivera had 17 of his 23 points in the first half and UTEP limited Colorado State to seven field goals in each half.
UTEP (17-3, 7-2) took a 39-24 lead at halftime as Rivera bombed away from outside, hitting three 3-pointers.

AIDS infection during game unlikely

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Doctors say the risk of becoming infected with AIDS during an athletic contest is too low to be measured, but college sports officials say it's enough to cause concern.
"It is certainly going to become an issue," said Bill Prentice, coordinator of the sports medicine program at the University of North Carolina. "Magic (Johnson) was the first athlete to come down with the AIDS virus. But as time goes by we will have more and more athletes with this problem."

Precautions against HIV, the virus that causes AIDS, now are a regular part of the instruction athletic trainers get, Prentice said Thursday.
"Up until about two years ago, if an athlete came into the training room bleeding, a trainer would put his hand over the wound and apply pressure to stop the bleeding," he said.
"There were no precautions taken when cleaning and trying to dress the wound. Obviously, those days are over now."

When North Carolina's Eric Montross stepped to the foul line Wednesday night in a contest with Duke, he was bleeding from a stitched gash under his left eye and a cut on the back of his head.
In the age of AIDS, the sight of blood sparked worries, even though doctors give their assurances and there are no reports that anyone on the court was infected.

"Trust me, last night it was one of the first things that popped into my mind when Montross started bleeding," Prentice said. "And I'm sure that was what a lot of people were thinking."

Southwest Outdoors

with Mel Phillips

Last Friday on Lake Fork, Barry St. Clair, an East Texas rancher, established a new Texas record for largemouth bass when he caught a fish that tipped the scales at 18 pounds, 2.88 ounces. For the thousands of bass anglers who hope to catch a huge bass, what does Mr. St. Clair suggest?

First, use 12-pound line in 42 feet of water and fish near the dam in 49-degree water.

Second, use a little minnow for bait, and while waiting for that next big bass, one can pass the time catching crappie.

That's right, St. Clair was fishing for crappie when he hooked the new record. Surely the fish gods are smiling about rewarding a "minnow dunker" while the serious anglers were busy throwing their jig-n-pigs, hawg-worms and big bass lures.

It's the unpredictable nature of fishing that causes the kid in each angler to want to go fishin'.

Speaking of kids--This Saturday morning, Outdoor World '92 in the Amarillo Civic Center will mark the start of the BassMaster BP Casting Kids competition that could lead to prizes totaling $225,000. A special thanks to the Top of Texas BassMasters in Pampa and all the 806 regional bass clubs for making this contest an official event.

Similar to Punt, Pass and Kick in football, the kids will be divided into two age groups (7-10 and 11-14) and take turns as they try to flip, pitch and cast their way to the state championship and eventually to the big money at the BassMaster Classic. It all starts at the local level, and entry is free.

Every kid will receive a certificate of competition. All 12 professional fishermen in town for seminars at Outdoor World will be on hand to meet the kids and give them a quick lesson.

Parents must sign a release form. The fun begins at 10:00 a.m., and entries will be accepted until noon.

While at Outdoor World, register to win the following prizes: a fully-rigged boat, motor and trailer from Y-94 KBUY radio; a weekend houseboat vacation from Lake Amistad Marina; a pheasant hunt for two from the Muleshoe Pheasant Club; and an R.V. weekend at Lakeshore Marina at Possum Kingdom Lake.

Delicious rainbow trout can be caught at the indoor trout tank starting at noon on Friday.

Special deal for all readers--A copy of this column will save you $1 off the adult admission price of $4 (limit one discount per adult). Admission for kids aged 6-14 costs $1, and kids five years and younger get in free. Outdoor World is a family event!

Mel Phillips is an avid hunter, a tournament fisherman and host of a Wednesday evening talk show on KGNC-radio (710 AM). He is also an award-winning member of the Texas Outdoor Writers Association.

Six coaches suspended

AUSTIN (AP) - Six high school basketball coaches had suspensions added to their public reprimands and one-year probation by the University Interscholastic League's State Executive Committee.

The punishments were levied Thursday.

Gonzales High coach Victor Salazar must sit out his team's next two games for holding a boy's basketball practice on Christmas Day. He also received a public reprimand and one year's probation, and was forced to forfeit a Dec. 26 tournament win.

Randy Parks, the girl's basketball coach at Lingleville High School, received the harshest action - a three-game suspension, a public reprimand and a one-year probation - for unsportsmanlike behavior during a Jan. 7 game.

CORYATT

"What makes him tick is that he's hungry, he's only played two years, he's just starting," Davie said. "He feels he's got a lot to prove. He's not burnt out."

Coryatt said he is low-key off the field, but takes an aggressive approach on the gridiron.

"I'm not that way at all off the field. I'm usually watching TV or listening to music," he said. "You've got to be two different people. It's a mean game and you've got to play it that way."

That fits with Shula's philosophy in revamping the Bengals' defense, the doormat of the NFL.

"The first thing I mention to the defensive guys is that we're going to have an attitude," Shula said. "From now on, our defense is going to play to make play to win."

Unlawful methods practiced by some debt collectors

Some consumers who are over their heads in debt may be getting unfair treatment from collection agency representatives.

Some debt collectors are violating the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act by using improper methods to collect debts, said Nancy Granovsky, family economics specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. This act protects consumer from debt collectors who engage in abusive, deceptive or unfair practices.

"Interest rates are dropping for home mortgages, but interest charged on credit card debt is still high at 18 to 20 percent," Granovsky said. "If you owe a lot of money and suddenly lose your job, you could have trouble paying your debts."

Although the act protect consumers, it only applies to third-party debt collectors, she said. Those who make it their business by collecting debts owed to a creditor must abide by this law. Creditors who collect their own debts are not covered by the act.

Granovsky said the law offers these protections:

- * Collectors must fully inform you of the debt they want you to pay. After contacting you once, the debt collector must send a written notice within five days informing you of the amount of the debt, the name of the creditor and your right to dispute the debt and an explanation of what will happen if you do.

- * Collectors must cease communication with you if you do not owe the debt. The debt collector must suspend contact with you if you inform the collector by letter within 30 days that you do not owe the money. The debt collector must give you written evidence of the debt before attempting to collect it again.

- * Debt collectors must respect your privacy. Collectors trying to find a debtor cannot tell others that you owe money, use a post card or indicate on an envelope that they are debt collectors, or in most cases, contact another person more than once to learn of your location.

- * A debt collector cannot contact you at unusual times of the day, make continuous or anonymous phone calls to harass you, contact you at work if the employer forbids communication during working hours, use profanity or other abusive language or threaten to use violence or their criminal means to harm you, your reputation or property.

- * A debt collector cannot impersonate a police officer or government official, misrepresent the legal status of a debt, threaten imprisonment or other action which legally the debt collector or creditor could not take, or make other false and misleading statements.

If a debt collector violates the law, you can notify the Federal Trade Commission, which uses complaints to decide which companies to investigate.

"If it (the complaint) is an FTC violation, we will write a letter on behalf of the consumer and ask that company try to work out something with that person," said Debby Spears, consumer outreach specialist at the FTC Dallas Regional Office.

Spears aid the FTC investigates and works up cases on companies that show a pattern of violations and numerous complaints.

To obtain more information about your rights under the act, contact the Federal Trade Commission, Public Reference Section, Washington D.C. 20580 or send complaints in writing to the FTC regional office, 100 N. Central Expressway, Suite 500, Dallas, TX 75201. If you have questions, call the Dallas office at (214) 767-5501 (12:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. weekdays).

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: My husband, age 64, is plagued with shortness of breath, but doesn't feel the need to go to a doctor. He is not a person who is concerned with health matters. He developed cataracts 10 years ago and had one unsuccessful operation.

His difficulty with breathing has increased in the last two years. Now, when he exerts himself he is short of breath. At times a cough or sneeze will open his breath. A friend said he might have emphysema. He also has a lot of phlegm to get rid of.

I've heard some enzyme is lacking in the system of people with this malady. Anything you could tell us would be appreciated. I don't want him to wait too long to get help. I think that is one reason men do not live as long as women. They think that if it isn't broken completely, you don't need to fix it.

DEAR READER: Many things can cause such symptoms. Emphysema and chronic bronchitis can. But so can congestive heart failure. His first step is to see a doctor to find out exactly what he has.

Chronic bronchitis and emphysema are common causes of shortness of breath. The airways in the lungs are partially obstructed and the lungs cannot exhale all the old air that is trapped in them. Chronic bronchitis is associated with an increased production of mucus and chronic cough.

There is a form of emphysema that is caused by the lack of an enzyme that causes destruction of elastic tissue in the lungs and leads to emphysema. But the most common cause of chronic obstructive lung disease is smoking. If your husband smokes, he should stop at once.

Early treatment for chronic bronchitis and emphysema may even halt the progress of the disease. Even in advanced cases, rehabilitation can enable a person to become independent and live a much better life. I have discussed this in Special Issue 37-02, Chronic Bronchitis and Emphysema. I'm sending you a free copy.

Have your husband read it. Others who want this special issue can send $3 with a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/37-02, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077. Perhaps that will help encourage him to see a doctor.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am a weight lifter who previously competed at the state championship level. I now lift weights and add more cardiovascular training to my routine. I am concerned about the supplement L-tryptophan. I have consumed amino-acid supplements that contained L-tryptophan for five to six years. I have read about a disease called eosinophilia myalgia that occurred in people taking L-tryptophan tablets. Are people who take L-tryptophan as part of a multi-amino acid or protein source afflicted too? This issue is vital to many people taking protein supplements.

DEAR READER: The eosinophilia myalgia complication occurred in quite a few people. When carefully studied, it appeared to have come from one source that made the tablets. A variant in one of the ingredients affected the way the body builds protein and caused the body to react to the abnormal protein. This has not occurred in other products.

However, I must add there is no reason to take amino-acid or protein supplements for body building. You can get good quality protein from lean meats, milk and dairy products that is just as good, is less expensive and tastes a lot better. Taking isolated amino acids may not be a good idea either. That may affect your ability to use other amino acids your body needs.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I have peripheral neuropathy. My feet and legs tingle and go to sleep. A neurologist said there was no cure. I'm 67 years old. I feel great otherwise. It happens when I stand too long or walk too slow. I have to sit down for relief. Could you suggest anything that could help me?

DEAR READER: The brain and spinal cord are referred to as the central nervous system. All other nerves to the body are the peripheral nerves. Any disease of any of these nerves is a peripheral neuropathy. Sensations of numbness, tingling, burning and pain are transmitted by sensory fibers of the peripheral nervous system. The important point is, what causes the neuropathy: an inherited disorder; inflammation; toxicity, as from alcohol; a metabolic disorder such as diabetes; nutrition or mechanical, such as pressure on nerves. Some of these can be helped, such as relieving pressure on nerves or stopping alcohol soon enough before permanent damage occurs, and correction of nutritional disorders. Others cannot. However, it never hurts to have a second opinion to search for a cause, which will answer whether or not something can be done.

WHEN YOU HAVE SOMETHING TO SELL, NEWSPAPER SELLS IT BEST.

No matter what it is you're selling, newspaper can sell it best. You can show it. Describe it. Explain it. Compare it. Offer a coupon for it. And cover your entire marketplace with it. All in one day. And for a lot less than radio and TV.

And the unique thing about newspaper is that it adds credibility to your message. People believe it when they read it in the paper. Maybe that's why retailers use newspaper more than any other medium?

Newspaper. It delivers.

NEW YORK (AP) - Michael Jackson is going on tour to promote his new album and raise money for charity. But don't expect to see him perform in the United States.

Jackson announced Monday he will begin an 18-month world tour this summer and hopes to raise $100 million for his Heal the World foundation. Money will go to environmental causes and several children's charities.

The tour will be sponsored by Pepsi-Cola. Asked how much Jackson will earn, Pepsi's marketing vice president, Peter Kendall, said, "A lot."

Kendall said the tour probably will begin in England. No U.S. dates are planned, he said.

Don't introduce infants to solid foods too early

Parents eager to start their infant on solids may want to postpone the porridge for the time being.

A researcher at the Children's Nutrition Research Center in Houston suspects that introducing solids into the diets of infants too soon could rob them of important minerals.

"We know that infants can digest cereal relatively well as early as one month. However, the extra protein and calories contained in the cereal are lost in the stool," said Dr. Robert Shulman, associate professor of pediatrics at Baylor College of Medicine.

Shulman has also found that the stool of cereal-fed infants contains increased levels of nitrogen, a building block of protein. "I want to know where this nitrogen is coming from," he said.

Shulman suspects that the nitrogen in the stool is caused by either diet or nitrogen-containing cells that line the intestine.

"Is the nitrogen coming from improperly digested formula and cereal or does the cereal cause the intestinal cells to slough off at a more rapid rate than normal?"

To find the answer, Shulman will follow the diets of male infants at the center's metabolic Research Unit. He believes the answer will help scientists understand how the introduction of cereal affects digestion.

"This information may help us determine the most nutritionally beneficial time to introduce cereals into an infant's diet, learn more about the components of nutrients and, in the future, allow pediatricians to design diets where nutrients complement rather than inhibit each other," he said.

In the meantime, he encourages parents to avoid the temptation to introduce cereal to their infant's diets because they think their infant needs to gain more weight, they prefer the convenience and availability of baby foods, or they mistakenly believe that added solids help an infant sleep through the night.

THE CALL OF A PROPHET

THE TITLE OF PROPHET, IN BIBLICAL TIMES, WAS TRADITIONAL. IT CARRIED NO BY-LAWS OR GROUND RULES FOR CONDUCT, BUT IT GAVE GOD WITNESS AGAINST TYRANNY AND SINFUL BEHAVIOR HERE ON EARTH. THE PROPHETS WERE BEYOND THE TEMPTATION OF WORLDLY PLEASURES. NOR DID THEY ASK FOR A REWARD FROM HEAVEN FOR THEIR SELFLESS LABORS. THEY WERE COMMANDED TO PROCLAIM GOD'S LAW, NOWHERE IN ANTIQUITY CAN BE FOUND SUCH A SUCCESSION OF MEN WHO WERE THE SPOKESMEN OF GOD AND THE AUTHORITIES FOR PROCLAIMING HIS WILL. MOST OF THEM SEEMED TO HAVE COME OUT OF THE WILDERNESS WEARING THE ROUGH GOATSKIN GARMENTS OF THE DESERT HERMITS. THEIR HARD, STONY STARE WAS CAPABLE OF PIERCING TO THE VERY SOUL OF THE PERSON THEY ADDRESSED....

THEY COULD GO FOR DAYS WITHOUT FOOD OR DRINK, AND THEIR DEDICATION TO GOD HAD NO COMPROMISE. THEY WERE NOT PARTICULARLY WELL EDUCATED MEN NOR DID THEY HAVE TO BE, BECAUSE GOD SPOKE THROUGH THEM. AS A CASE IN POINT, WHEN ELIJAH CALLED ELISHA TO FOLLOW HIM AS A PROPHET (1 KINGS 19:10) WHERE DO YOU SUPPOSE HE WAS... DEEP IN SPIRITUAL STUDIES? OR DELVING INTO MOSAIC LAW? NO WAY... HE WAS OUT IN THE FIELDS PLOWING BEHIND A YOKE OF OXEN.
