Feds Nix HISD Request

By PAUL SIMS
Managing Editor

The U.S. Department of Justice has ruled that the Hereford Independent School District cannot conduct a place system election on April 7, even though trustees had removed the majority runoff requirement which the federal government said might be discriminatory to minorities.

Superintendent Harrell Holder Tuesday night told trustees of the Justice Department's decision, which was made on the 59th day of an allowed 60-day period that began when the department's Voting Rights Office received the school district's request.

HISD, which last year lost a courtroom battle with the federal government over the district's coverage under the Voting Rights Act of 1965, eliminated the "majority runoff requirement" from its place system of electing trustees and presented the revised proposal to the Justice Department for approval.

The Justice Department, like it had done in 1975 after the Hereford school district sought approval after changing from the at-large to place system with runoffs, ruled that the voting strength of minorities is diluted by the procedure.

HISD sued the Justice Department in 1976 and attempted to prove that the district was not a political subdivision as defined in the Voting Rights Act, which was amended to include Texas in 1975 and written to cover any election changes since 1972.

HISD can challenge the Justice Department's latest ruling by going to court again, this time in federal district court in Washington D.C. where only the issue of discrimination can be decided. That option will be discussed when trustees meet in a special session at 8

THE TRACTORCADE of the American Agriculture Movement is on its way to Washington. A check with the AAM this morning revealed no startling new developments; the "hotline" reported only where the tractors on the different routes spent the night Monday.

The farmers in the movement have one goal in mind when they reach Washington. They want the government to restore farm prices to 90 percent of parity instead of the 48 percent now received. Farmers are armed with copies of a 1948 newspaper page from the Lubbock paper to illustrate the big problem.

A look at farm prices on the page shows wheat sold for $3.21 a bushel and a loaf of bread was costing the consumer 12 cents. Now, some 30 years later, the price of wheat is still not up to 1948 prices, hovering around or below the $3 mark, but the price of a loaf of bread has gone to 75 cents. There are many more comparisons to make, but this serves as a prime example.

The things that farmers produce are not subject to the same set of controls applied to everything he must buy. If the laws of supply and demand freely operated for the farmer, he would not be asking the government for help. Whether or not the tractorcade demonstration will make an impression where it counts—in Congress—remains to be seen.

Stock Show Preliminaries

Weigh-ins and initial preparations for the annual Hereford Young Farmers Junior Livestock Show got underway this morning at the Little Bull Barn. At left, LeAnne Hughes of the Hereford FFA lifts the gate on the scales to let her Duroc barrow into a holding area after weighing. An initial problem with the scales, which caused several local exhibitors concern about their hogs and lambs weighing in, was quickly corrected by the Young Farmers this morning and weigh-ins proceeded without a hitch. ### Area's Young Farmers Gather in Hereford

Stock Show To Begin Thursday

By JIM STEIERT
Brand Farm Editor

Competition in the annual Hereford Young Farmers Junior Livestock Show gets underway tomorrow, as exhibitors from Deaf Smith, Castro, Farmer and Oldham counties begin putting swine classes through the showing at noon.

Weigh-ins for the show are being conducted through 5 p.m. today for sheep and hogs, and all steers will be weighed from 8-10 a.m. tomorrow.

Jim McManigal, a former member of the agriculture department staff at West Texas State University and a well-known swine judge in the local area will be reviewing a large field of swine entries to select the Grand and Reserve Champion market hogs.

It promises to be a lengthy afternoon of swine judging with numerous entries from the four-county area, and competition should follow the pattern of former years and remain close.

The livestock show will continue Friday as Bob Kropp of the ag staff at Oklahoma State University at Stillwater begins to judge lamb classes at 8 a.m.

Immediately following the selection of the champion and reserve champion lambs, the steer show will get underway at 2 p.m.

Gene Raymond of Garnett, Kansas, who served as last year's steer judge here will be back in that capacity, and the steer show may run into the early hours of the evening Friday as Raymond proceeds with the difficult task of selecting a winner from a field of ruggedly competitive entries.

On Saturday, the annual 4-H and FFA livestock judging contest will be held at 8 a.m.

The highlight of the local stock show for many of the four county area's 4-H and FFA youngsters will be the annual livestock auction, scheduled to get underway at 1 p.m. at the Bull Barn Saturday.

Improved prices for swine and cattle should spell improved premium prices for much of the winning livestock which moves through the sale ring.

A floor price will be established on hogs, lambs and cattle prior to the beginning of the auction Saturday, and buyers will pay on the difference between their winning bids and the floor price.

The Deaf Smith County Booster Club will be accepting donations at a table in

New C-C President Stresses Involvement

President Ken Rogers outlined plans to involve more people in the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce activities when directors held their first meeting of the new year Tuesday afternoon.

Rogers announced a committee orientation meeting for Feb. 1, appointed directors to serve as liaison representatives between the board and the 14 committees, announced plans for informal "membership orientation" meetings for all new members, called for a concerted effort in industrial development, and announced plans for a membership drive in March.

The board, meeting at 5 p.m. Tuesday in the C of C directors room, reviewed the financial statement for the year, approved a formal set of guidelines for presenting the Hereford Bull award, heard reports from two committee chairmen, and approved a motion to require purchase orders for all committee expenses.

Mary Herring, president of the Women's Division, invited directors and their spouses to attend the women's annual installation dinner next Monday evening. New officers will be formally installed as the "Woman of the Year" will be recognized by the organization. Mrs. Herring also reminded directors of the bloodmobile visit to Hereford on Wednesday.

Milton Adams, treasurer, reviewed the WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter is sounding a key-note of restraint for a Congress whose leaders agree with his austerity, but are already arguing about proper targets for the budget cutters.

"The president charged business and labor and the Congress to work together to beat inflation," said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass. "I will do whatever I can, as speaker, to do what the president wants."

Assistant Senate Majority Leader Alan Cranston was not so effusive. "I differ with the president on the proposal to increase defense spending by huge sums when we are the strongest nation on earth," the California Democrat said.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, called Carter's commitment to fight inflation commendable and said, "He will have the active support of Congress." But Wright predicted "there may be some disagreements as to where the cuts should come."

Carter's State of the Union message, delivered to a joint session of Congress Tuesday night, dwelt heavily on inflation and the strategic arms limitation treaty with the Soviet Union, which the Senate must ratify by a two-thirds majority.

With negotiations on the treaty in their final stages, Carter made a strong appeal for support of the agreement once it is finalized and sent to the Senate, probably early this year.

"I will sign no agreement which does not enhance our national security," said the president.

Moments later, he added: "I will sign no agreement unless our deterrent force will remain overwhelming."

Addressing congressional concern over whether the United States could rely on the Soviets to adhere to any treaty, Carter said, "SALT II will not rely on trust. It will be verifiable."

With its domestic emphasis on austerity, the speech followed by a day Carter's budget for 1980, a document he described as "lean and austere" and reflecting the need for sacrifice "if we are to overcome inflation."

Midway through his first term in the White House and following an election in which inflation emerged as the major issue, Carter called on Congress and the nation to "change our attitudes as well as our policies."

"We cannot afford to live beyond our means. We cannot afford to create programs we can neither manage nor finance, or to waste our natural resources; and we cannot tolerate mismanagement and fraud. Above all, we must meet the challenge of inflation as a united people."

"New Foundation," emerged as the catch-phrase of the Carter address.

"We are building a new foundation for a peaceful and prosperous world," he said in the opening lines. "We build the foundation for a strong economy...."

"We build the foundation for a government that works...."

"We must continue to build a new and firm foundation for a stable world community...."

And the president closed his address by saying: "Tonight, I ask you to join me in building that new foundation - a better foundation - for our country and our world."

Rep. John Anderson of Illinois, third-ranking in the House Republican leadership, said the Carter speech was "an obvious attempt to inspire the people...Despite the constant reiteration

Clements Proposes More Power For Governor, $1 Billion Tax Cut

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Gov. Bill Clements laid out a legislative program Tuesday whose goal, he said, was to reverse a trend of contempt and hostility toward state government.

In his first "State of the State Address," Clements proposed more power for the governor, a start toward property tax reform, $1 billion in tax cuts and a "Taxpayer's Bill of Rights."

"I have seen developing in our state a disturbing pattern, a pattern that has reached extremes in other states. Those extremes are ones of contempt, hostility and disdain on the part of the people toward their government.... We must halt this pattern as it appears in Texas," Clements said.

The Republican chief executive received a polite response from a joint session of the Legislature, which interrupted him eight times with applause.

But several legislative leaders said they wanted to see the details before committing themselves to Clements'

"first chapter" program.

LI. Gov. Bill Hobby reacted caustically to what he took as a slap at the Legislative Budget Board, which he heads.

Clements, in repeating his call for $1 billion in tax cuts over the next two years, said the burden to find places to reduce spending was not his.

"To the contrary, those who are attempting to increase the budget by 22 percent over the budget of just two years ago must define in detail and fully justify such increases," Clements said.

The budget board's "bare bones" recommendations for 1980-81 exceed current appropriations by 22 percent.

"The budget board, that notable bunch of free-spending liberals, met for six months...and I trust its recommendations won't vary by a percent or two from the bottom line of the general appropriation act that is passed," Hobby told reporters.

Budget board members come mainly from the conservative wing of the Legislature.

Clements recommended passage of a law establishing a single property appraisal office in each county in place of the dozens that exist in some counties.

"This would mean one data base on valuations and one set of values for all taxing entities...Implementation of this concept will be the most important step to achieve equitable taxation," Clements said.

Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, who has unsuccessfully crusaded for that concept for four years, grinned and led the applause.

The chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, Rep. Bob Davis, R-Irving, said he wanted to see details before endorsing the governor's proposal. Davis said he fears that one city could dominate a county appraisal board.

"I am not ready to turn the countywide appraisal district (in Dallas County) over to the city of Dallas or the Dallas Independent School District," Davis said. The governor said his speech was the

Ann Landers Surgery Fears

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a fairly sensible woman (age 41), and the mother of four fine children. For the last three months I have been avoiding surgery which I need badly. I am running out of excuses.

To be perfectly frank about it, Ann, I'm scared to death of what I might say while under the anesthetic. My husband is the type who would insist on being at my side throughout the entire procedure. When I had the children he didn't leave me alone for a minute.

If I started to talk under the anesthetic it could be the end of our marriage. There's a part of my life he knows nothing about -- as you may have guessed.

Please tell me what to do, Ann. There's got to be an answer but I don't see it. -- Lady With A Past

DEAR LADY: Talk this over with your physician. He's heard it all before -- and so have I. Some people insist on novocaine when their dentists recommend gas, for this same reason.

The simplest solution would be for your physician to bar all relatives from the operating room and the recovery room, and not allow anyone to visit you until you have come out completely from under the anesthetic.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I think it is dreadful the way some people write and tell you off. If they don't like your advice why do they read your column?

Those crass comments about your lip and your Midwestern twang were totally uncalled for. And that man who suggested dental work to improve your speech should have his subscription canceled.

People praise you when you agree with them but when you tell them things they don't want to hear they lash out and become ugly and hostile.

I'm convinced that a lot of folks who write to you for "help" don't want an honest opinion. They are merely looking for support for their own position. They want to shove the column in someone's face and say, "See, I am right."

I think it's time you were told how much we appreciate the work you do. Your column is must reading in our family and has been for over 20 years. You are as sound as the Liberty Bell. -- We Love You In Des Moines

DEAR D.M.: Thanks for your beautiful letter -- but I ought to tell you, dear, the Liberty Bell is cracked.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a father who doesn't have much hair left but I am ready to

News From The Lodge

Wakan Ki Lo Horizon Club, sponsored by Marsh Cattle Company, continue work on their Business Torch Bearer.

Their first stop was at the Hereford Chamber of Commerce, where they were met by Michael Carr, Executive Vice-President. He explained that the chamber is a group of volunteers, both business and individuals, working together for a common goal which is to make the city and county a better place to live. There are 600 members made up of people within the community. The chamber organizes and coordinates the activities of the 11 different committees and each is headed by a director. They do hire V.O.E. students and offer on the job training. Filing, typing, answering correspondence and being able to meet the public are the main requirements for a job position at the chamber.

At the conclusion of the program, Mr. Carr took us on a tour of the Chamber office building. Willa Lawson presented him a Horizon Club pin as a token of appreciation for the program.

Lone Star Agency was the next stop and we were greeted by Brandy Morrison. She is involved in the insurance area of the company and her job consist of typing policies, filling out claims, answering the telephone and does lots of filing and typing. She was trained on the job and also attends a special insurance school.

Then Susan Stubbs showed us the different business machines you would need to learn to operate. They were a computer, copy machine and a postage meter.

Lloyd Sharp, who has been in real estate for 19 years, told the group about this aspect of work. First you must get a license. This can be done either by attending a college or a vocational school, obtaining so many hours and pass a test. You become a sales person first and must work under a broker for three years before you can qualify as a full fledged real estate broker. There are three kinds of real estate: residential, commercial, and farm. The process for selling a house are: appraisal of property, multi listing, find a buyer and then the financing of the loan. Mr. Sharp likes his job and it is a good profession.

Deanna Pool gave Mr. Sharp a Horizon Club pin for letting us visit Lone Star Agency.

Members present: Susan Brown, Willa Lawson, Karen Cox, Kelly Killough, Rhonda Hollowell, Deanna Pool, and Cristi Crawford.

Leaders: Paula Eubanks and Glenice Thompson.

Bedroom Location Of Prime Concern

NOTE: This is the first in a five part series concerning bedroom planning. It deals with bedroom location.

COLLEGE STATION - Bedroom location tops the list of bedroom planning "ABC's."

Location is important because the bedroom is the most personal room in the home to each family member... people spend about one-third of their lives sleeping, dressing or relaxing in the bedroom, a housing and home furnishings specialist explains.

In planning bedroom location, first consider location in relation to other areas of the house, suggests Glenda Moore with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The Texas A&M University System.

Locate the bedrooms near a bathroom, she recommends. Plan each bedroom with a door opening directly into it from a hall to provide maximum privacy.

Also, for maximum privacy and quiet, locate the bedrooms in the quiet areas of the house. Many plans group all the bedrooms in one area.

However, some families prefer plans that split bedroom areas with the master bedroom in one part of the house and other bedrooms in another, the specialist points out.

This arrangement is an effective way to increase quiet and to separate different age groups.

In a two-story or split-level house, bedrooms are often all on the second level.

However, consider planning at least one bedroom and bathroom on the first floor, especially for older adults or in case of illness.

NEXT: A look at planning bedroom size.

Large Crowd Attends

Recent Square Dance

Merry Mixers Square Dance Club had a large attendance Friday night for the installation of officers and a dance at the Community Center.

Twelve squares danced to the calling of Freddie McKee of Amarillo. Guests included couples from X, Y, L and M

Club and High Plains Promenaders from Amarillo, the Dimmitt Promenaders from Dimmitt and the Country Singles from Hereford.

Members are reminded to make plans to attend the Heart Fund dance Feb. 3 at Dimmitt.

Class of '69 Makes

Plans For Reunion

Members of the Hereford High School Class of 1969 are urged to attend a meeting from 10:30 a.m. - 12 noon Saturday, when plans will be made for the 10th annual reunion. The meeting will be held in the lounge of the Community Center.

Tricia Hill Lemons is chairman of the upcoming reunion, which is tentatively planned this summer.

Improving Community

Depends on Individuals

COLLEGE STATION - "Do you really like the community where you live, or is there something lacking?" is a question asked by a Texas A&M specialist.

If one's community needs a "new breath of life," or if there are some basic needs of the citizens that are not being met, then it's time to organize for action, says a community resource development specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

According to John Henry, the key to community improvement and development lies in these words: "If it is to be, it is up to us."

Community improvement depends on people working together. People have found over the years that by working together they could acquire for themselves the good things of life that they could not otherwise obtain," notes Henry. "The word 'community' itself has become known as identifying a place where people have common interests, needs and objectives."

The Texas A&M University System specialist points out that the whole aspect of community improvement and development hinges on good community leaders. Good leaders know how to listen, communicate and motivate. They also know how to plan and conduct effective meetings, delegate authority and solve problems.

"The Extension Service through its community resource development program stands ready to assist communities in developing leaders and in planning and organizing for action," says Henry. "County agents are the key in this effort; they have a long history of helping people in every county solve their problems."

Through a county program building committee in each county, the county Extension agent and community leaders can determine major community problems and the need for educational assistance, notes the specialist. Once needs are determined, various resources can be mustered, including Extension specialists in a wide range of subject-matter areas.

"Extension's trademark is to help people solve their own problems through educational programs," contends Henry. "Through Extension, assistance can be secured from all levels of government, including research from the state's land grant university, Texas A&M."

With educational assistance from county Extension agents, community leaders throughout Texas have worked together to acquire fairs and shows, community centers, electricity, water and sewage systems, fire trucks, medical facilities and services, solid waste disposal systems, beautification programs, senior citizen centers, parks and recreation facilities, farmers' markets, better housing and better jobs, to name a few.

"A visit to the county Extension office, usually located in the county courthouse, can be the first step to bringing about a solution to a community problem or to improving community services and facilities," contends Henry.

Store bacon and other salt cured products no longer than one to two months in the freezer, a foods and nutrition specialist recommends.

Salt hastens the rancidity of fat, explains Marilyn Haggard with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Katharine Hepburn, the star of "The Corn Is Green," which airs Jan. 29, on CBS, describes herself as "Tall, skinny and very determined."

Kate also has something to say about happiness: "I was lucky in my career, by and large. I had to work hard, but I enjoy working hard. I don't think that's a penalty at all. Most people are not allowed to work hard in the thing they like to do. And the profession I'm in is fun. And it's been a profession in which the women were certainly the equals of men. In fact, I think they were superior to men. So my career wasn't a disappointment. And I've known some wonderful people. I had thriving parents, and I've had good health. So, what the hell, I ought to be happy."

The giant, black-clad villain of "Star Wars," David Prowse, takes on an entirely different role in the new production of William Shakespeare's "As You Like It." Prowse plays Charles the Wrestler in the second installment of PBS's "The Shakespeare Plays," which airs on Feb. 28.

COMMENTARY

Donald F. Graff

Freedom for whom?

There are landmarks and then there are landmarks. We Americans, for example, take justifiable pride in such impressive features of the national scene as the Washington Monument, the Golden Gate Bridge, New York City's Flatiron Building and Katharine Hepburn, whose acerbic wit drew a comparison in terms of vintage and durability between the last-cited structure and herself during a recent appearance on the estimable television program, "60 Minutes."

It was a lively interview, ranging over a long career and related subjects, in the course of which the actress delivered herself of a one-word review of current movies: "filth." She also had a suggestion for dealing with the situation which, considering the way decisions have been going of late, made her sound like promising material for the Supreme Court.

"They say, 'Oh, no censorship. No, no — freedom of the press,'" she observed. "The hell with that! They've got to do something."

Well.

Everyone is entitled to an opinion, of course, and there is undoubtedly a large body of it out there in viewfinder which would agree emphatically with this one. Amid all the sex and violence in films these days, it's not easy to detect the occasional redeeming social value.

How to deal with the situation is another matter, however, and one on which there may be a considerable difference of opinion. Who, for example, are "they" who must do something. Congress? The courts? Federal or local law-enforcement authorities? A special agency?

The movie industry is not unfamiliar with the subject. The Hays Office was a power in Hollywood during the '30s. While during that period the studios produced many classics, they were also restrained from picturing much that was true about American life. It might be noted in passing that under the then-prevailing code, two pictures for which Katharine Hepburn was to receive Academy Awards in the '60s might not have been produced — "The Lion in Winter" for its frequently spicy language and "Look Who's Coming to Dinner" for its taboo subject matter, (whisper the name) miscegenation.

Freedom, particularly of expression, is fragile and relative. In the arts, it often is a matter of taste and value judgments. One person's filth can be another's pristine truth, a point that was made not long ago by one of the persistent dissenters on the present Supreme Court, Justice William Brennan:

"I find," he commented in a case involving the radio broadcasting of objectionable language, "... a depressing inability to appreciate that in our land of cultural pluralism there are many who think, act and talk differently from (the members of the court majority), and who do not share their fragile sensibilities. It is only an acute ethnocratic myopia that enables... censorship of communications solely because of the words they contain."

It is certainly an individual's right not to view — and an actress's not to appear in — films which are judged objectionable. That is a matter of value judgments and freedom of personal choice. But a very sensitive line is crossed in a pluralistic society when one individual's or one group's values are made the public standard and applied to others, whether they share such values or not.

That's what censorship is. And pardon us, Kate, but to hell with it.

 As little as possible.

Watson Ready For Season

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Tom Watson, the outstanding player in the game the last two seasons, opens his 1979 campaign this week in the $250,000 Andy Williams-San Diego Open Golf Tournament with one big goal in mind: improvement.

And, he said, he's confident he can achieve it.

"I'll get it," he said. "It's not too far away. I'm looking for improvement in my swing so that I can become more consistent. It's not there yet, but it's close."

Improvement over his exploits of 1977 and 1978 would be almost scary.

Each year he led the PGA Tour in money winnings, last year setting an all-time record of $362,429. Each year, he won the Vardon Trophy, the award that goes to the man with the low stroke average. Each year he was named Player of the Year.

It's the first time anyone has swept the three awards in consecutive years.

In the two-year period he won 10 titles, including the Masters and a second British Open. Both the majors came in 1977. He failed to win one of the Big Four titles last year, but had a definite chance in all of them.

And that was in his mind when he admitted that, as his career progresses, he's becoming more and more major-tournament-oriented.

"Those are the tournaments that draw the attention of the press, the media and the public. My No. 1 goal this year is the U.S. Open. You can't be considered a great player if you don't win the U.S. Open," Watson said.

More immediately, however, he's trying for certain refinements in his swing. After practicing in Florida for a few days, he went to Dallas for two days of work with Hall of Famer Byron Nelson, his long-time friend and teacher.

"We are working on my stance and take-away, trying to get a more relaxed right side to give me a slower, more firm swing. The goal always is to improve."

"Byron said he was more enthusiastic about my progress than he's ever been."

As for the San Diego tournament, that opens Thursday at the Torrey Pines Country Club, Watson said "I'm ready."

"I haven't played competitively since November. I'm enthusiastic and ready to go."

And that, of course, makes him one of the favorites for the $45,000 first prize.

Among the other major standouts are defending champion Jay Haas, a one-shot loser Tuesday in the final round at Phoenix, Lee Trevino, Ray Floyd, Jerry Pate, Tom Weiskopf, Andy Bean, Lanny Wadkins, Johnny Miller, Gil Morgan, Bill Kratzert and J.C. Snead, a two-time winner of this title.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally.

Steve Garvey of the Los Angeles Dodgers was second to Pittsburgh's Dave Parker in the 1978 National League MVP voting. But he was the MVP of the All-Star game and the pennant playoff against Philadelphia.

Lakers Whip Knicks In Defenseless Game

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Los Angeles may be a nice place to visit, but the New York Knicks would just as soon have it left off their itinerary.

The Knicks' first visit to Los Angeles this season resulted in a 147-124 loss to the Lakers. Tuesday night the home team went one better.

Hitting 63 of 92 field goal attempts, a torrid .685 percentage, the Lakers routed the Knicks 148-124 in a game that saw little effective defense played by either team. It was Los Angeles' highest point total of the National Basketball Association season.

Forward Adrian Dantley, making his first start in more than seven weeks after being sidelined by a hyper-extended knee, shot 11-for-15 and scored 30 points. Other Lakers had equally impressive numbers: Jamaal Wilkes was 13-for-15 for 28 points, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar 8-for-12 for 19, Norm Nixon 7-for-9 for 16 and Don Ford 7-for-8 for 16.

However, the hottest shooter of the night was New York's Bob McAdoo, who made 17 consecutive field goal attempts and scored 45 points, his high as a Knick. McAdoo missed his attempt to tie the NBA record of 18 consecutive field goals, set by Wilt Chamberlain, when his 12-foot jumper midway through the final period rattled the rim, and fell off.

In other NBA games, the Seattle SuperSonics beat the Washington Bullets 103-100, the Cleveland Cavaliers edged the Denver Nuggets 108-107, the Chicago Bulls topped the Boston Celtics 100-90, the Indiana Pacers trimmed the Atlanta Hawks 110-105 and the New Orleans Jazz nipped the Kansas City Kings 118-116.

Sonics 103, Bullets 100

In a rematch of last year's NBA finalists, Gus Williams scored 24 points and made nine steals as Seattle erased a 66-49 third-period deficit and beat the Bullets. Washington managed to score just 16 points in the fourth quarter against the aggressive Sonics defense.

Cavaliers 108, Nuggets 107

Foots Walker hit a jumper over David Thompson with 13 seconds left to give Cleveland the victory over Denver. The Nuggets' Charlie Scott missed a jump shot with six seconds to play.

Bulls 100, Celtics 90

Rookie Reggie Theus and Artis Gilmore scored six points each in the final 7½ minutes as Chicago snapped a five-game losing streak by beating Boston. Chicago trailed 85-78 with 7:29 remaining but outscored the Celtics 22-5 the rest of the way.

Pacers 110, Hawks 107

Indiana shot 13-for-15 from the field and 8-for-8 from the free throw line in the fourth quarter to overtake Atlanta, which had led 81-76 going into the final period. Johnny Davis topped the Pacers with 26 points.

Jazz 118, Kings 116

Jim McElroy scored a career-high 40 points for New Orleans, which led 115-103 with 2:26 remaining but saw the Kings score nine in a row. Otis Birdsong missed a jumper in the final seconds that would have tied the game for Kansas City.

Mays Elected To Hall Of Fame

NEW YORK (AP) — Willie Mays, who loved baseball and played it with greatness, was elected to the Hall of Fame Tuesday by an overwhelming vote.

Mays, only the ninth player ever to be enshrined in his first year of eligibility — excluding the first year of voting in 1936 — received 409 of a possible 432 votes by 10-year members of the Baseball Writers Association of America participating in the annual balloting.

While Mays became the 88th player chosen for induction into the Hall at Cooperstown, N.Y., two other outstanding outfielders, Enos Slaughter and Duke Snider, again failed to receive votes.

Snider, a contemporary of Mays' when he played center-field for the Brooklyn Dodgers, was second with 308 votes, 16 short of the required 324. It was his 10th year on the ballot.

It was a bitter disappointment for Slaughter, a major leaguer for 21 years, 13 with the St. Louis Cardinals, who finished third with 297 votes, 27 shy of the required number. A nominee must appear on at least 75 percent of the voters' ballots to gain entrance to the Hall.

This was the 15th year he had fallen short, and he no longer is eligible unless he is elected by the Veterans' Committee. However, he must wait another five years before he can be considered by the veterans' group.

The late Gil Hodges, another former Dodger finished fourth with 242, followed by ex-Dodger pitcher Don Drysdale, with 233.

At the announcement of his election, Mays was near tears.

"I'm going to have to quit talking," Mays said. "Tears always come when I talk about things I love."

Mays said he could have played a lot of other sports beside baseball "but I picked baseball because it was a game that was easy to enjoy and easy to love. A lot of guys make it hard, but it's an easy game, nice to make a living at.

"I never had a bitter moment in my life playing baseball."

The bubbling, zestful Mays, nicknamed the "Say Hey Kid," retired as a player in 1973 after a total of 22 seasons with the New York and San Francisco Giants, and the New York Mets, for whom he now is a coach.

In addition to Wondrous Willie, those honored their first time on the ballot were Bob Feller, Ted Williams, Stan Musial, Jackie Robinson, Sandy Koufax, Warren Spahn, Mickey Mantle and Ernie Banks.

Mays, a hitter with magnificent bat control, finished his illustrious career with 660 home runs, the third leading total in history, behind only Hank Aaron and Ruth.

He won the National League home run title four times, with 51 in 1955, with 49 in 1962, with 47 in 1964 and with 52 in 1965.

He compiled a lifetime batting average of .302, hitting over .300 10 times, including 1954, when he won the National League batting championship with a .345 average.

Twice, he won the NL's Most Valuable Player Award, with the Giants when they were in New York in 1954 and in 1965 when they were in San Francisco.

He was the NL's Rookie of the Year in 1951 and The Associated Press' Athlete of the Year in 1954, when he led the Giants to a four-game sweep over the Cleveland Indians in the World Series.

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Tornado has signed the No. 1 pick in the 1979 North American Soccer League draft, two-time junior college all-America selection Njogo Pesa, to a two-year contract.

"Pesa is the best goal scorer ever to come out of American college soccer," said Dallas Coach Al Miller, who traded away two players from last year's team to draft first.

Pesa, 21-year-old son of a Yugoslav immigrant, led Ulster Community College of New York to consecutive junior college national championships.
