Churchmen Explain Stand On Abortion

Rule — "We have no desire to impose our will on the reluctant majority, but we appreciate learning what your congregation thinks about abortion. If you feel as we do we certainly hope for your support."

This imprecation was made in letters sent by the administrative board of Rule First United Methodist Church to pastors and members of the church, concerning the North West Texas Annual Conference resolution on abortion.

The resolution called for a change in the present state law which names abortion a criminal offense. The Methodists at the conference supported the change "that abortion is a Christian, moral and medical concern and should not be handled as a criminal concern, unless the abortion is not handled by a medical doctor, that is, if a medical doctor and a woman decide on a medical, moral and Christian basis that she should have an abortion, they should be able to perform one, without the threat of being sent to prison by the state of Texas."

Members of the Rule United Methodist Church met Wednesday night, June 2, and during discussion, decided to take a definite stand on abortion as Christians.

The administrative board unanimously voted to support the congregation's resolution. The resolution, which appeared in The Abilene Reporter-News Saturday, stated that the local church at Rule is "in support of the abortion laws of Texas as they now stand" and they believe "abortion to be murder and a crime against God, the state and against the unborn child."

The board sent copies of the resolution along with the letters to let the pastors who attended the conference know what they did and to see if the pastors would like to support the resolution.

Copies were also sent to Bishop A. H. Carleton, who was presiding Bishop over the conference, to Dr. Marshall Rhew, district superintendent in the Seymour district, and to members of the Seymour district. Rev. Walker said the members of the Rule church plan to present their resolution to the Seymour district conference in December.

The Rule Methodists oppose the NWT Conference resolution in actuality, condones the bill which was before the Texas legislature calling for abortion on demand — which would make it legal for anyone to get an abortion simply by asking her doctor.

They say since every one is not a Christian, then not every one can make a decision on a Christian basis. So the NWT resolution really is supporting the law on demand, the Rule Methodists believe. Even though the bill was killed, they still want to go on record against abortion for anyone on demand. They support the present law which makes abortion legal only if the doctor feels it is a matter of life or death for the mother or child.

Many lay leaders in Seymour said they personally felt the same as the Rule Methodists, according to Rev. Walker.

"If we receive support for our resolution, we plan to present it to the next annual conference in May of 1972," Rev. Walker stated.

Early Day Teacher Tells Tornado Story

(Editor's Note: Parts of this article were taken from the Abilene Reporter-News recently and was brought on to us. It was written by Hamilton Wright, special correspondent.) " . . . and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven" 2 Kings 2:11.

And so did Mrs. Katie S. Finley of 1709 University Blvd. in Abilene on Good Friday about 1901, when a tornado lifted her from her bed at her home in Rochester, carried her over a church roof and sat her down practically unhurt.

"I didn't go far as Elijah went," Mrs. Finley said, "But when my chariot of fire comes I'll be ready."

Mrs. Finley celebrated her 97th birthday on Good Friday. It was a quiet observance.

Her greatest shock in life was when the tornado dipped down at midnight, picked her up and tossed her high into the air. She passed over the Methodist Church, was swept around the church corner, and set down before its entrance. She sustained only a few bruises. Let her tell the story.

I was boarding at Mrs. Susie Meadows' house. At midnight the tornado struck, I was lifted as the roof went away, and whizzed into the air with timbers and other objects. The tornado carried me over the Methodist Church and then swept me around and dropped me lightly at the church entrance. It was done so quickly I just can't explain in detail. But when I landed I was stiff as a board, my clothing wet with rain. Even the church was almost a complete wreck.

"I finally was able to crawl. As I did I heard the voice of a Mrs. Macomber, beneath the church wreckage, holler at me. Then I heard the plaintive voice of Mrs. Susie Meadow with whom I boarded crying: "Oh Miss Katie, where are you?"

Mrs. Meadow picked me up and took me to the cellar of her home where I had lived. The noted Methodist Circuit Rider I. L. Mills and his wife gave me shelter later.

"The mattress I slept on went along with me in the twister and was found half a mile away the next day, soggy with water and badly ripped. And my valise; to this day I don't know where it went. Mrs. Finley's new hat bought for Easter Sunday was found by a boy near a water tank. The boy said as he found it, "Its Miss Katie's," and returned it.

"Miss Katie's hat was cleaned and furnished and worn by her sister, Mrs. Hamilton Wright, of Abilene.

Fortunately her large trunk of clothing was retrieved. It provided her with dry garments.

The tornado took a toll of one death, an infant.

Mrs. Finley, nee Katie Slaton, was born, oddly also, on Good Friday, April 1874, in Grandview, Texas where her parents, the Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Slaton from Tennessee were visiting.

She began teaching in 1898 and later taught at Loraine and Rochester. Once she was offered the job to head the Rochester school, after the tornado she declined it.

She and Jess Finley, a Rule barber were married on September 18, 1914 as they sat in a buggy in Stamford. After their marriage they lived at Rule two years. Then they moved to Haskell in 1916 and lived there 16 years. While there Mrs. Finley had a private kindergarten with an average enrollment of 42 pupils.

They moved to Abilene in 1940, where Mr. Finley bartered until his death in 1949.

Mrs. Finley devotes most of her hours to reading the Bible or Christian literature, including the current Sunday school lesson.

Story told only in part.

Years ago scientists and nutritionists discovered that the addition of iodine to common table salt dramatically curtailed the occurrence of goiter in this country. But iodine is only one of many trace elements considered vital to the human diet, according to nutritionists at the Texas State Department of Health.

Iodine is an essential component of the thyroid-gland hormone that regulates the rate at which our tissues breathe. Without it, the tissues use less oxygen, the body slows down, and eventually so does the mind. A limited deficiency of iodine can result in a swelling of the neck known as simple

Some Records Are Required When You File SS Claim

"What do I need when I go to file for my social security?" This is a question asked daily of the social security office, according to R. R. Tuley Jr., manager for the Abilene district.

Most people know they will need their social security number and birth record. However, one record frequently overlooked but usually required is the W-2 form or copy of the income tax return for the last calendar year.

Timely advice from your social security office is this: If you plan to file your claim for social security benefits this year, take your W-2 forms and copy of your 1970 income tax return with you.

responsible for the dwarfism observed in some isolated areas in the Middle East. Besides being necessary for growth, zinc plays a role in the development of sex organs, the manufacture of blood cells, the healing of wounds and burns, and in the utilization of the hormone insulin.

Another essential trace mineral is manganese, which monitors the buildup and breakdown of protein and of nucleic acid, the basic carrier of heredity. It is also important to the development of bones and tendons.

A quick and simple laboratory technique, called "thin layer chromatography," may soon open doors to effective control of many drug abuse problems.

As a screening aid, thin layer chromatography - or TLC - tests can provide information revealing all the components present in a sample of blood or urine. In the clinical lab, TLC is now being used for the rapid analysis of poisons in blood or urine samples. But now scientists have been able to adapt the test to detect more than 1,000 different drugs, ranging from pep pills to heroin.

TLC can be useful in screening for possible presence or absence of certain classes of drugs. Amphetamines, barbiturates and the opiates can be determined in a TLC test.

What that means to drug abuse control in Texas, and across the nation, is very clear. A doctor treating a patient whom he suspects of abusing some drug could send a urine sample to a central laboratory equipped to handle such tests in mass quantities. After receiving the results within three days, the doctor would be better able to deal with his patient's problem.

The Texas State Department of Health may soon be able to offer such a resource to doctors across the state. Methods of funding such a program with federal grants are now being studied.

The proposal is unique because a statewide laboratory service of this type, administered by a public health agency as an aid to all physicians treating drug abusers, does not now exist in this country.

TLC is regarded by some as an ideal tool for mass screening tests. Drugs are absorbed from the urine on a piece of sensitized paper. The paper would then be mailed to the state laboratory. After treatment with a series of solvents, discolorations on the paper would tell an experienced lab technician whether drugs have been used and, if so, which drug.

The availability of thin layer chromatography services would be an inducement for more physicians to participate in the care of drug abusers. And, greater numbers of drug users could be reached before their misuse or abuse of drugs became a health problem or a concern to law enforcement agencies.

Seeking for instant and easy solutions to all problems can lead to many pitfalls, according to Chicago business man, Joseph B. Lanterman, chairman of AMSTED Industries.

Speaking to a group of young people he said, "On the campus, in politics or business, it is tempting to reach for the easy solution... but today there is a great need for solutions based on facts and on study... Leadership must be based on foundations of stone rather than on the shifting sands of whim and prejudice.

Alliance of Harmony

"We all must work toward the establishment of ideals but it should be done within the governmental framework set up for change. The overthrow of that framework only leads to authoritarian agencies.

tion," he went on, "and that is an atmosphere where the American Dream cannot flourish... What we need now is an alliance of harmony between our people."

Albert Einstein expressed this need for cooperation in these words: "A hundred times every day I remind myself that my inner and outer life depends on the labors of other men, living and dead, and that I must exert myself in order to give in the same measure as I have received."

Cooperative Efforts

Mr. Lanterman added, "As we move forward in our cooperative efforts, we do have cause for optimism... It is true that the voice of crisis is more shrill; the immediacy of our communications media has made it so... But it is not an insurmountable wall of challenge.

"Past generations have faced equally stubborn tasks from their view, but solutions have been found, and their hope for the accomplishment of the American Dream has remained untarnished."

1040 U.S. Individual Taxpayers Ask IRS

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

Q My employer is withholding less income tax from my paycheck this year. Does this mean that I might owe tax next year?

A It could. Income tax withholding rates are lower in 1971 mainly because the standard deduction was increased. Withholding is also lower for single persons because tax rates for this group were reduced.

Q How long must I keep my records for income tax purposes?

A You must keep your records as long as their contents may be material in administering any Internal Revenue law. The Internal Revenue Service cannot suggest a specific time, but certainly all records should be kept for at least three years and many records, such as stock and property transactions, even longer.

Q I am retired with a company pension and an annuity. Can I have tax withheld on these payments?

A Yes. You may use Form W-4P to request the payer to withhold any whole dollar amount. However, the amount to be withheld must be at least $5 a month and must not reduce the net pension or annuity payment to less than $10 a month.

Q My income is low, and I never pay any tax although I file every year to obtain a refund. Is there anything that I can do to stop my employer from withholding taxes?

A Yes. You should file a Form W-4E with your employer. This is a "Withholding Exemption Certificate" in which you can certify that you did not have any tax liability last year and will not have any income tax this year. Your employer must then stop withholding taxes.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Plan on Dying

Some years ago a clerk in a bookstore, unpacking a shipment of new books, found one on the subject of "estate planning." Thinking it must be about the landscaping of large homes, he placed it in the gardening section.

He would hardly make that mistake today. Estate planning has come into its own, used by thoughtful people everywhere to preserve assets during their lifetime and to pass them on wisely—and economically—at death.

this is a field in which the layman needs expert help.

Much information is available from trust departments, accountants, insurance men, and investment counselors. The ultimate adviser, however, should usually be an attorney, since he alone is fully qualified to give the personal legal guidance a program should have.

Some people shrink from the thought of estate planning. But, like it or not, some plan is going to govern the care and distribution of your possessions. The plan could be yours, if you make one. If you don't, state and federal laws—oblivious of your wishes—will do it for you.

Tax Man
Sam Sez
The rules on how much you can deduct on your contributions to a charitable organization have been revised under the 1969 Tax Reform Act. Some exempt organizations that depend on charitable donations report that they are not getting as many contributions since the change in the tax law.

They apparently feel that most of the difference in the amount of the contributions is due to a misunderstanding about the taxability of contributions and that some taxpayers feel that they will have to pay income taxes on the appreciated value of a gift that would have been subject to a capital gain if sold.

There is no tax due on a gift under the new law, but the amount of the deduction has been reduced in some cases. However, if you have valuable property that you would like to donate to an exempt organization (church, museum, educational institution or other charitable organization approved by IRS) you can still get a substantial benefit on your income tax through the donation.

Accent on Health
J.E. PEAVY, M.D.,
Commissioner of Health
One of nature's deadliest phenomena is the tornado - a violent destructive whirling wind that strikes almost without warning and seemingly at random, sweeping everything out of its path as its whiplash tail moves in a narrow path over the land.

The tornado that struck the city of Lubbock last year, like the earlier disasters in previous years in Dallas, Waco, and San Angelo, once again reminded Texans that disaster health planning is the difference between safety and catastrophe.

The Texas State Department of Health has joined with other state and federal agencies and medical associations to see that all areas of the state are prepared in case of a disaster. Consequently, Texas is meeting the 1971 tornado season with one of the world's most complete storm warning systems, and a well-oiled public health relief organization.

Texas' "local severe weather warning system", the first established anywhere in the world, now has radar storm warning sets in almost all major cities in the state. These stations are all connected by teletype and radio. Any station is able to instantly appraise all other stations of a tornado traveling in their direction. All communities in the vicinity of the twister can be warned of the tornado's approach through normal channels of communications, or through special warning devices.

If worse comes to worse, and a tornado does strike a community, the Texas Health Department stands ready to provide vaccine and public health engineering and emergency nursing know-how to stem the threat of disease or further complications while disaster relief is underway.

The National Weather Service has developed a new system of terminology to more accurately inform you of the severe weather conditions around you.

A "Severe Weather Watch" indicates that weather conditions are such that severe weather has actually developed, and care should be taken. A "Severe Weather Alert" is a warning that severe weather is moving directly into the area.

The same holds true for tornado warnings. A "Tornado Watch" indicates the possibility of conditions existing that could lead to the development of a tornado. A "Tornado Warning" means that a tornado has actually been sighted in the area, and extreme caution should be taken. A "Tornado Alert" means to act fast, a tornado is in the immediate area.

Wishing the outdoor eating season would hurry up and get here? Here's a delicious idea with a touch of Oriental flavor.
Teriyaki Sirloin Kabobs
2 lbs. boneless sirloin steak,
1-inch thick piece
1 cup soy sauce
1/4 cup granulated sugar
2 cloves garlic, thinly sliced
2 1/2" slices of ginger root
6 sliced frankfurter buns (optional)
Cut meat into 1/4-inch wide strips. Make a marinade by combining soy sauce, sugar, sliced garlic and ginger root. Place meat strips in a flat, oblong casserole and add marinade. Let stand for at least two hours, stirring occasionally. Thread meat onto skewers. Grill over hot coals. Or, if it's not quite warm enough for outdoor cooking, broil kabobs at 500° F., turning so they cook on all sides. To serve, cut from the skewer or place grilled kabobs, unskewered, in frankfurter buns. Yield: six kabobs.

Depreciation Reform Is Long Overdue-NAM

Far from being a "windfall" for business, the Administration's depreciation reform program is recognition that current depreciation practice is "years out of date" and a serious obstacle to our export trade, the National Association of Manufacturers said.

Citing examples of this effect from the machine tool and other industries, a NAM representative urged immediate and full implementation of the depreciation reform proposals of the Nixon Administration.

In recent testimony presented to the Internal Revenue Service, George H. Kitendaugh, Manager—Tax Accounting, General Electric Company, said that "the decade following the 1962 liberalization of depreciation allowances has witnessed tremendous advances in technology and a quickened pace of economic obsolescence which in themselves fully justify a substantial shortening of 'useful lives' without regard to current economic conditions."

Also, he pointed out that projections of massive revenue losses from adoption of the depreciation program are very misleading because they make no allowance for the increase in productivity and over-all taxable income.

Mr. Kitendaugh stressed that the proposed changes in U. S. depreciation regulations would definitely improve the U. S. position with respect to our industrialized foreign competitors in recovering the cost of productive investment and laying the groundwork for future gains in productivity.

According to Mr. Kitendaugh, those who complain that the ADR system is not the best form of tax action for supplying a quick stimulus to the economy at this time overlook its most important result—establishing the conditions for sustainable long-term growth without inflation.

The Overall View of Summer

GROOVY—These bib overalls aren't the kind you can keep down on the farm. They're done in railroad striped cotton denim with a bright butterfly permanently perched on the bib front. A favorite with teen-agers, the look's endorsed by Ward's designer advisory council.

SHORT STUFF—Overalls crop up for the sandbox set this summer, too. Here they're done as short-alls in red and navy cotton denim printed with chalk-white stripes and circles. By Prissy Missy of Dallas.

CRAZY-ALLS—Rising to new heights for summer: the workman's overalls... all done up in a stars-and-stripes cotton print. They're teamed with a midriff peasant blouse of white cotton. In junior sizes, the outfit's by Youth Beat of Dallas.

People, Cows and Pigs

Farmers must raise 25,400 additional head of dairy cattle and 433,000 hogs each year to keep up with food consumption for each one million persons added to our population. They will also need 172,000 additional beef cattle.

The Internal Revenue Service must like poor folks - it makes so many of them.
