Texas Gets More Jobs

Drought Area Gets 15,000 Of CWA Quota

WASHINGTON (AP)—Harry Hopkins, civil works administrator, said Friday Texas' quota under the program had been increased by a total of 16,000 jobs. An additional 15,000, he explained, had been granted principally for application in drought areas, while 2,000 will help solve the problem of school teachers unemployed due to lack of local funds.

Greece Gives Insult Notice To Move Out

ATHENS, Greece, (AP)—The Greek government Friday granted Samuel Insull an extension to January 31 in the length of time he will be allowed to remain in this country. Previously, in refusing to renew the utilities operator's resident permit, the government announced he would be forced to leave the country January 1.

Donald Richberg, general counsel for NRA, one of the authors of the Recovery Act and long-time friend and champion of railroad labor, in an address before the Cleveland Bar Association reviews the legal basis of the act in a clear, broad-minded manner.

One point that he made clear is that freedom of the individual today depends on more than safeguards against physical violence. It also depends upon economic security.

Quoting from the address: "Those practices which definitely destroy the economic security of great masses of people are clearly destructive of their liberty. In this situation there is neither logic nor legal foundation for the contention that a few individuals have a right guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States to engage in business practices which inevitably destroy the economic security and the freedom of all others engaged in such a business. Such a construction of the Constitution would make it a charter of anarchy instead of a covenant of law and order."

Richberg's words call to mind a statement recently made by this writer in a West Texas publication that if NRA does not nurture and protect "rugged" individualism then Joseph Stalin is a rock-ribbed New England Republican.

The thing is that we did not refer to the type of individualism usually "rugged." The individualism usually given that classification was the stuff that led to the economic disasters of the past three years. It was the doctrine alluded to by Mr. Richberg which conceived of the purpose of the constitution

The business men of Big Spring with cooperation of The Herald have arranged for Santa to make his pre-Christmas visit here. A specially chartered airplane is being used by the old fellow this year and he has sent word through Mrs. Santa from his arctic home that he will certainly be here promptly at 7 o'clock Monday evening.

The high school choral club, under direction of Mrs. Bruce Frazier, will sing a group of Christmas carols at the Main street platform immediately preceding Santa's arrival.

While the club will be operated exclusively for members in the near future the opening is open to the public, with an advance ticket sale in charge of the V.F.W. as a benefit to the National Home for Widows and Orphans.

The dance floor is of highly finished bird's-eye maple and is thirty-two by sixty-four feet. Other features of the club include a smartly appointed reception room, a modern kitchen and tables and booths for patrons.

Counties To Open Road To Hyman Soon

Five-Mile Stretch Will Shorten Distance To Big Spring

Agreement was reached Friday between Mitchell and Howard county commissioners to open a road from Hyman to Chalk, a distance of five miles.

The road will greatly shorten the road distance between Hyman community in the southwestern corner of Mitchell county and Big Spring. Hyman is a community with 129 legal voters. Much splendid farm land is under cultivation there.

People of the community had requested the local Chamber of Commerce to use its influence to get the road opened. The five miles is equally divided between Howard and Mitchell counties. Commissioners Johnson and White and C. T. Watson met the commissioners of the Hyman precinct, and residents of the community and inspected the route of the road.

Members are especially reminded that they may write in the name of any person whose name does not appear on the list nominated by the committee.

Two Stores Burglarized

Undetermined Amount Of Cash And Goods Taken By Thieves

Burglars Wednesday night entered the Jones Dry Goods and C. C. Hardware company stores.

Friday Jones Dry Goods had not completed a check of merchandise to see what was missing. A sizable amount of cash was taken, however.

Entrance was gained by knocking out a window over a front awning.

At C. C. Hardware store thieves entered through a skylight and apparently attempted to break their way into Jones Grocery next door by smashing a sheet rock partition.

They obviously miscalculated and gained entrance into one of the vacant buildings behind the grocery, became alarmed and fled. A check did not reveal anything missing.

Youths Going To Grid Game Are Victims

Dozen Cars Derail Due To Bad Flange; Gravel Buries Dead Boy

MARSHALL (UP)—Jack Powell, Texarkana college student, was killed and nine students injured, three seriously, when twelve cars of a westbound freight train that were riding toward Marshall derailed near Jefferson Friday. All were on their way to Marshall to attend a football game.

Texas and Pacific railway officials said the wreck was caused by a broken flange on one of the cars.

Jack Mills, Johnnie Clark and Jack Daines were seriously injured. They were riding on a gravel car which turned over, Powell being buried beneath an avalanche of gravel, killing him instantly. All were residents of Texarkana.

POZNAN, Poland, (UP)—Eleven were killed, four were expected to die and eight others were injured when a train smashed into a car in the heart of the city in a heavy fog. Officials said it was the worst wreck in the history of the country. The victims suffered from cold of 31 degrees below zero.

Carnivals, Shorn Of Gambling Devices, May Again Operate In City

Carnivals, banned from the city limits for several years, can now come back to town.

A city ordinance passed more than a month ago, however, seeks to make the carnival a respectable thing when it comes back.

Carnivals were originally banned from the corporate limits because of disreputable elements and promiscuous gambling devices. It is when they again appear within the city limits they will be shorn of both of these.

A provision in the ordinance declares that carnivals within the city limits cannot carry on any concessions which are a violation of the laws of the State of Texas.

Each carnival operating within the city limits is subject to a city occupation tax and the license fee cannot be remitted regardless of sponsoring organization.

Formula

More monetary maneuvering is going on behind the international scenes these days than you could find time to think about.

Acting Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and other officials look blank and shake their heads every time the story shows up that George Harrison of the New York Federal Reserve Bank is negotiating with higher-ups in the Bank of England, for instance.

These denials can be written off as of the diplomatic variety.

It is true that Harrison has recently approached our British cousins more than once with feelers about steadying the dollar and the pound.

The word "steadying" is used advisedly because the Roosevelt plan isn't ready to stabilize yet—at least not on terms acceptable to London.

Just how much Harrison is talking for the administration and how much he is talking for himself is another question. Harrison has been working on an acceptable stabilization formula since before last June's Economic Conference.

CHAPTER 10

Sonya chose her words carefully. "It's a very interesting species. Wouldn't it make a nice nest?"

Quite true, Curt thought. And quite like a girl to say that. However, her description wasn't exactly scientific. He hated to go on with his questionings—a wisp of hair playing against her cheek was almost his undoing. But he made himself be relentless.

"Do you know what family it belongs to?"

Sonya stiffened a little and glanced up at him, a sharp search in her eyes as though she guessed why he was quizzing her.

"I don't care to give a mere opinion," she parried deftly, on guard. "A person ought to make a microscopic examination before trying to classify."

Curt dropped the subject, slipped the beetle into his pocket and started back to camp with her. He had found out what he wanted to know. Sonya had no idea what the beetle was.

At his first chance he took Ralph and showed him the Cicindela. Ralph knew no more about it than Sonya did, and furthermore he lacked her quickness of wit in getting out of a tight corner. Pinned down for an answer, he pretended to recognize the insect, and gave it a Latin name, but his bluff was a mere smokescreen.

In a brown study Curt set the beetle free and walked over to Paul to tell him what he had just found out. Neither Ralph nor Sonya was an entomologist at all! They knew absolutely nothing about the subject! He told Paul about the beetle.

Paul glanced toward the fire, where Sonya was getting the meal ready. "What are they doing in this country then?"

Curt made a gesture of bafflement. "You tell me and I'll tell you."

"Prospecting, maybe. Cheechakos talk to that."

Ralph wouldn't recognize a gold conglomerate if he stubbed his foot against one; and she's worse.

"Vastationing!"

"I can think of pleasant ways to spend a vacation than water-dogging up this river and taking chances with these Kloosehs. And why should they make such a scene about a mere vacation?"

"Then what's your guess?"

"I haven't got even a guess! All I know is this: whatever they're up to, it's important. They know they're running into danger, know it as well as we do, but they intend to go right on regardless. And another thing—Sonya's the real leader of those two. She's the determined one. Ralph's just a tail to the kite."

Paul nodded. "Yes. It's not hard to see that. But what are you going to do about them?"

Have a show-down with her and let her tell me the truth about this 'hip'."

When the party got ready to go again, he suggested to Nicholas: "Ralph, you're pretty tired; maybe you'd better go with Paul this afternoon so you can take things easy. Sonya can go in my canoe. We'll work ahead and have camp made by the time you come in."

Sonya stepped into his canoe and they started out. She, of the others. By the time they reached the foot of a rapids four miles up stream, they had left the heavily laden boats out of sight around a bend. Portaging around the rapids and the overfalls above, they came out upon a long quiet stretch.

Curt kept putting off his "show-down" with Sonya, for he hated to break into the pleasant mood of the hour. Even after a week of intimate association he never could tell how she would react to something, or what to expect from her next.

Often he tried to analyze the tumult of his emotions toward her. He had never consciously said to himself that he had fallen in love with her. But he did realize now how lifeless were his relations with Rosalie Marlin, how utterly they lacked fire or meaning. As the very heart of the contrast between those two girls, he knew that he respected Sonya, whereas he had never respected Rosalie or anything save her prettiness and as a companion for a light-hearted evening.

At a creek mouth where a family of otters were tumbling about in a foamy overfall, they stopped to catch a string of trout for supper. Giving Sonya his rod, he leaned against a boulder, not in hand, wanting her to have the pleasure of taking them all. At such times, all too rare with her, she appeared to forget herself and shake off the trouble which he had seen on her face that night when he crouched behind the cordwood.

"Like it?" he asked as he lifted the string of trout into the canoe and they started on.

She nodded, her eyes shining.

They skinned along in silence for a few rods just as Curt was thinking up a tactful way of broaching his talk with her, she surprised him with a sudden unexpected question: "Curt, you're not really a prospector, are you?"

For a moment he thought she had pierced his mask and had found out why he really was in there.

"Why, yes," he asserted evenly. "What makes you think I'm not, Sonya?"

"I just can't imagine you as merely a prospector, Curt."

"Why?"

She studied her answer. "I'm wondering how you can be satisfied with a life like this, year in and out, Curt. You're out of things, out of contact with the world; and you're making no contribution to—to-call it human society. For most men it'd be all right, but not for you."

"Why do you single me out?"

"Because, Curt, you've got the capacity for something richer and more useful than a buried-away existence like you're leading. Please, you don't mind my being frank?"

"Why, certainly not," he assured. "But deep down, her philosophy did trouble him, arousing his old fears about the tyranny of duty. He knew that when he went back to the Three Rivers country he would carry her words with him, and that they would lift their voice between him and a complete enjoyment of his adventurous freedom."

VHIRLIGIG—

Sounding—
British representatives in Washington are even inclined to a suspicion that stories of the informal Harrison negotiations were planted. They point to the favorable reaction among our "sound money" advocates every time one of these pieces appears.

Certainly, ever the Britishers here, Mr. Roosevelt knew in advance that London wouldn't be listening eagerly to a stabilization proposition for the pound and dollar while the fanc was off on a tangent.

They are working their heads off to solve two problems: first, what the President really has in mind about money, and second, what Congress will let him do when he tells it what he wants.

The English will tread softly until after they have sounded out the temper of Congressional inflationists.

Dickers—
Furthermore, although our recent price manipulations have been regarded generally as a direct drive to force the French off the gold standard, Downing Street has a notion we really are shooting at the pound.

If the franc goes off gold frightened capital will immediately look around for another haven. The British reason most of it would be dumped into London and do things to the pound that would be all to the merrily for the dollar.

Such a turn might force Britain to deal with us on our own terms of stabilization. They don't like the idea a little bit and presumably will pull a few tricks out of their own bag.

The only hitch is that in Mr. Roosevelt they seem to be dealing at last with a prestidigitator who knows enough stuff for full membership in the international magicians' union.

Patriots—
A lot of nervous American money is now cached in Switzerland. Those who shipped their dollars to the Alps for refuge must be wondering now what will happen to the Swiss exchange if France devalues.

But it is noticeable in the last two weeks that our money gentry seem to be getting over some of their fright. The flow of American capital beyond our borders is slowing down to the point where one might almost suspect the owners of becoming patriots.

Quarts—before Congress finally gets

JAMES T. BROOKS
Attorney-At-Law
Office in Lester Fisher Building

through with the liquor tax problem the levy probably will be around $1.50.

So a sounding of sentiment, particularly among southern members, would indicate. Now that whiskey is back they want it cheap and no mistake about it. Chairman Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee sounded the keynote when he suggested the tax should be determined by first arriving at a fair average retail price for hard liquor.

He thinks the consumer should not pay more than $1.50 - $1.50 a quart with the tax representing what's left between cost and fair profit.

Ranking members of the Senate and House Committee were yanked in by Mr. Roosevelt and assured the job of fixing a figure was solely up to them. In fact revenue-raising was to be secondary to the job of making bootlegging an absolute bust.

Chairman Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee mentioned the $2.20 figure. There is reason to suspect Pat wants Mississippi to ratify the repeal amendment and feels an attractive revenue return to his state would be a tempting bait. It is pretty well agreed that a percentage of the federal tax shall be rebated to wet states that have imposed no gallonage tax of their own.

Some of the doubting Thomases around Washington think the distillers may now be holding whiskey prices up so they get a better break on taxes.

Certainly prevailing quotations give them a good bargaining point.

Notes—
The amount of capital notes which the local state banks sold to the R. F. C. (as predicted in this column) was much smaller than the R. F. C. hoped and expected. Only the Guaranty Trust issued more than $5,000,000. Except for the Manufacturers Trust, which acted earlier the cooperation of the others was nominal.

Shorter Week—
General Johnson's prediction of an eventual 30-hour week impressed his Manufacturers Association audience here more than anything else he said. He put it over that however much the distiller code arrangements between his dealers and collective bargaining they might as well whistle for the sun as hope to do what NRA has done in those directions. The thought of a possible 30-hour week will prevent them from yelling too lustily about the 40-hour session most of them have now.

Chase—
Investigation of the purchase of Chase stock by Chase employees has been called off. Officers and ex-officers of the Chase persuaded the Senate committee it wouldn't be worth the trouble. Also it would have been anti-climatic after Aldrich's appearance.

Improvement—
Over two-thirds of the corporations which have reported third quarter earnings to date show better results than a year ago. And 98 percent of the corporations which have acted since October first have maintained or improved their dividend status. It's little things like that that make life tough for the croakers.

The automobile, chemical and oil industries showed the biggest gains but nearly all types of business shared in them. Even the railroads show much smaller losses. The utilities are the one outstanding exception to the improvement rule.

Edge—
Swanky dispensers of alcoholic beverages had good diplomatic connections had a year ago. And now they are in a bad way. The day the lid went off. While ordinary mortals were handicapped by the delay in the formalities making delivery possible these gentlemen started unloading from private automobiles the moment repeal became effective. The automobiles belonged to certain foreign consular officials and the wines and liquors had been stored in the consulates—most of which do not represent wine producing countries.

Cans—
American Cans expects to double its output with the new tin containers for beer. The special lining and patented opener are important. Twenty-four cans can be packed in a cardboard carton with much less weight and cubic content than old-style methods. And how they stack in an ice box!

HOME TOWN—

to be protection for those who "engage in business practices which inevitably destroy the economic security of all others engaged in such a business."

The "rugged individualism" described as having been promoted by NRA is a new type, based on a directly different doctrine. It conceives that individualism, means the right of every man to earn an honest living, maintain his family upon a sound, sensible standard, and lay away something for old age or to meet misfortune.

Technique—
The house of Hallgarten tried a new Securities Act technique in advertising a distillery issue. The announcement was declared to be neither an offer to sell nor even solicitation of an offer to buy. Wall Street cracked: "What do they want to do? Give it away!"

National City—
National City's preferred stock deal with the R. F. C. had its neat when expressed in almost identical language in another federal law. But difficult legal problems have been presented to the Administration when both employer organizations and labor unions have sought to transform the actual authority of the government to prevent a constitutional liberty of contract into a public power to write contracts governing labor relations. Against these pressures the NRA has steadfastly insisted upon preserving the constitutional guarantee of liberty.

"We have declined to approve of any governmental effort to write particular wages down at the request of employers, or to write such wages up at the request of employers. Agreements between employers and employees entered into as the result of bona fide collective bargaining have been approved—thus sustaining liberty of contract. The legal force of existing agreements has been recognized. It is from the law provisions for maximum hours and minimum wages; but these provisions have been written into codes either on a basis of agreement between those representative of various interests involved, or as the necessary decision of a controversy submitted to the arbitration of the administration.

"The fixing of maximum hours and minimum wages is essentially an emergency measure sanctioned by the overwhelming pressure of public opinion. It has become intolerable longer to permit millions of persons to be employed and millions to work at starvation wages, while business itself was being stopped by the unfair competition of overworked and underpaid labor. We may assume that out of the increasing integration of trades and industries, which is being promoted by code-making we may develop business standards and means of their enforcement which will eventually make unnecessary any governmental fixing of even maximum hours and minimum wages. It seems plain that it is socially and economically desirable to avoid rigidities in the wage structure, and to avoid determining the standards of labor relations by a legislative or executive fiat.

"But in the emergency it seems necessary to confer a limited power of regulating the basic terms of employment upon administration agencies; and this exercise of power can be legally justified by the same principles in accordance with which rentals were regulated in a time of war, and in peace-time emergency, the hours and wages of railroad employees were regulated by an Act of Congress.

Johnson Gets Twenty-Seven Foreign Stations, Places First in Contest

Out here in West Texas, noted for the poorest radio reception in the world, Helms Johnson won first place in an international short wave radio reception contest. Johnson placed ahead of hundreds of other contestants because he picked up stations from every continent in the world within sixty days.

His received verifications from 77 stations on foreign soil.

Short wave stations picked up by the North American continent could not be counted.

Friday he received a beautiful trophy for his achievement from H. Gerbach, editor of Short Wave Craft, a radio magazine.

The trophy, mounted on an ebony base, is in silver finish. A globe of the world is balanced on the wing tips of two eagles. On the surface of the globe an etching of a radio fan at his set appears. Poles on the globe in a statuette of goddess, holding high a torch.

Johnson's name and distinction are etched in at the base of the trophy. It is to be on display in Cunningham and Phillips No. 1 store.

All of Johnson's receiving was done on a sort of home made affair. He acquired a National set and added to it. E. F. Hauser installed addition parts and perfected the hook-up.

Plain As Cowtown
"You wouldn't believe some of the stations would come in so clearly" said Johnson. "Germany comes in any day just as clear as Fort Worth. Madrid, Spain is just perfect. You never miss a word."

He speaks of Melbourne, Australia and Moscow, Russia, in the same breath. Japan is a next door neighbor to him. Italy, why that's just another station. Santo Domingo, now there's a station that gives a thrill when you pick it up. Its got only five watts.

Gets Europe
"Russia comes in good from about 6 a. m. until ten o'clock," said the winner. "France is good until about 9 a. m. and most European stations are on about that time."

"At midnight you can pick up Australia. When it's midnight Saturday here it's 4 p. m. Sunday in Sidney."

"Japan is good from about 3 a. m. until 5 a. m." And he can recall station after station in country after country. Furthermore, he knows the station call numbers.

His unusually good reception has won for him a position as radio post observer. He gathers information which enables short wave stations to keep a complete log.

Supt. Blankenship Talks On Importance Of Cooperation To East Ward P.-T.A. Group

The East Ward P.-T.A. met Thursday afternoon for a very entertaining Christmas program. Mrs. Woods presided over the meeting.

Mrs. Long's room gave the program, consisting of several Christmas group songs and a play, "A Bit of Puritan Fun."

The membership sang "Silent Night." Supt. W. C. Blankenship gave a fine talk on "The P.-T.A. and Its Use." He stressed the importance of children's education and of cooperation between parents and teachers, saying, "Our nation will be what our children make it but we can not teach them what we do not know. Tutors are not popular for children's training, because the child will grow up by himself and lack association with other children. Children taught privately are not as well able to adjust themselves as others."

Teachers, like parents, should love their pupils. They should study the problems that arise before correcting a child. The parents and teachers should work their problems out together. This would do away with many misunderstandings—one of the main purposes of the P.-T.A. The time to develop
