CLARK GRIFFITH BATS HIGH IN TRADING SEASON

'OLD FOX' KNOWS HOW TO TRADE

By DILLON GRAHAM

WASHINGTON, July 7. (AP)—It takes only a glance at Clark Griffith's 1936 dealings in baseball to see that the "old fox" has lost none of his cunning as a trader.

The Washington club owner made eight "swaps" this season and nary a one soured on him.

His most talked-of swap, that which sent the rolisterous Alvin (Jake) Powell to the Yankees for Ben Chapman, hardly can be appraised accurately yet.

When the trade was made Powell was hitting .290 and leading the league in stolen bases with 30.

Chapman pilfered five bases during the fortnight and Powell two. Ben, who won the base stealing honors in 1931 with 61, vows he'll take top honors again.

Russell's work at Boston hasn't been noteworthy, while Joe has won one game and lost two for Washington. However, neither of his defeats could be charged to his pitching.

DOUGLASS JONES, GOLFER SINCE 1933, IS ONE OF THOSE SELF-MADE LINKS CHAMPIONS

19-Year-Old Youngster Cops Munny Invitation

Doug Jones, who surprised a large gallery Sunday by defeating Eddie Morgan 7 and 5 for the championship of the first annual Municipal course invitation golf tournament, has had a great deal of tournament experience for just a 19-year-old lad.

Jones chooses himself as a self-made golfer, because in the three years he has been chasing the elusive pellet he has never taken a lesson. He learned the ABC's of golf and solved his own problems on the Eastland course where he started out.

When he first started playing golf Doug was a southpaw, but he soon changed. He's left-handed in everything but golf.

Niblick shots are Doug's favorite. He's not very consistent with the woods and is often out-driven Morgan was outdriving Jones in the final Sunday, but Doug's irons were working well and he kept in the fairway.

Jones is going after bigger and better things, and has an eye on the state junior tournament at San Antonio this year. He plans to enter. He also plans to play at San Angelo and in the country club tournament here.

Doug moved to Big Spring last September. The Municipal meet here was his fifth tournament of the season. He went to the semi-finals of the West Texas and Philpeco, and made the semi-final round at Hamilton. In the Hamilton tournament he was taken out in the first round, but went on to win consolation honors. He was shooting better than par golf when eliminated.

He was runner-up in the Cisco tournament last year and was medalist at Eastland.

"Eddie Morgan is a great golfer and a fine fellow to play with," Jones said. "He just had a lot of hard luck when I played him in the Munny finals."

Britons Like National Race To Be Rough

English Sportsmen Perish Any Thought Of Modification

LIVERPOOL, July 7. (AP)—A movement inaugurated since the last Grand National Steeplechase to have the famous event abolished on the ground of cruelty to animals, or to have its hazards lessened, promises to die aborning.

Since the subject reached the House of Commons and the home secretary was asked to give it his attention, there has been such a storm of rebuttal from the side of the owners and trainers that there is slight prospect of any action.

Americans may continue to buy their Sweepstakes tickets with every confidence of getting a run for their money—providing, of course, that they draw a horse.

Even Mrs. Violet Mundy, fond owner of the unfortunate Avenger, which broke its neck while running second in this year's race, scorns the thought of modifying Aintree's jumps.

"I shall never forgive myself for running my horse in the National," she says, "but I wouldn't have it abolished or changed. There is no sport in which there is not some element of risk, and perhaps cruelty."

Major Noel Furlong, owner of the twice-triumphant Reynolds-town, blasts the whole proposition.

"It is a grand course and one which British sportsmen should be proud of," he declares. "It is a national institution and I wouldn't have it modified one iota."

"I can't remember a fatal accident to a rider for over 25 years, and until Avenger was killed this year I don't think there has been a fatality to one of the horses in at least 15-years. There are plenty of falls, as in all steeplechases, but most of them in the National cause only minor injuries."

Aintree's 18 jumps, no two of which are same height or width, are zealously trimmed and guarded all year by a staff of workmen.

Each hedge has its own precise measurement, down to a fraction of an inch, and it isn't permitted to vary.

Star Substitutes

Washington's trouble-shooting twins, Ralph Kress and Oase Bluege, have just about clinched honors as the best handy men in the American league. On the roster this spring they were listed as utility infielders.

But at first there was little opportunity for either to see much action for the Senators' inner defense was set—with Lewis, Travis, Myer and Kuhel.

Then came developments that forced a hurried S.O.S. for the veterans.

First Captain Buddy Myer was stricken ill. Kress, the courageous red-head, jumped in at second base, fielded well and hit far ahead of the pace Myer had set this year.

Myer returned to the lineup but Kress did not return to the bench—for there was trouble at shortstop and he hopped over there.

Red has been making all sorts of fancy stops, figuring in fast double plays, and banging the ball for a .313 average through June. It seems of finishing in the first four.

Frank Shows Appreciation For Selection

Manager Joe McCarthy Puts Crossetti On All-Star Team

NEW YORK, July 7. (AP)—Manager Joe McCarthy's gesture of naming his shortstop, Frank Crossetti, for a place on the all-star American league team after the Yankees' shortstop had been overlooked by the fans, was not wasted on Crossetti.

To show his appreciation Frank stepped on the field the next day and gave a dazzling exhibition on just how the position should be played. The Boston Red Sox were the victims of his flashy fielding.

He provided Lefty Gomez with sensational support, going to the right and left for signaling grounders which were potential hits. He topped his display with a stop near the left field foul line that brought cheers from the crowd and a nod of thanks from Gomez.

Bill Werber smacked a hot grounder which went out of Third-baseman Red Rolfe's reach. Crossetti, moving over to back Rolf up, picked up the ball and tossed the speedy Werber out at first.

"And that's the fellow they wanted to leave off the all-star team," McCarthy commented. "The best shortstop in the American league—bar none."

Crossetti is playing the game of his life. The leg injury which hampered him in the past seems to have disappeared entirely. He has been playing a grand defensive game. And, with an average in the neighborhood of .325, is no weakling at the plate. One of the things that pleases McCarthy most is the fact that Frank has shown unexpected durability. He has been in there day in and day out without showing the slightest sign of wear.

The fans may think highly of Luke Appling, as their voting would indicate, but McCarthy will take Crossetti any day.

Moffett To Attend Texas Coach School

Olie Cordill To Play In All-Star Game On August 8

"Speedy" Moffett, who goes from the Steer coaching staff this year to the assistant's job with the Greenville high school Lions, will attend the Texas State High School Coaches' association school in Fort Worth starting August 3.

Olie Cordill, football star here for the past three years, will make the trip with Moffett to play in an all-star high school game at Fort Worth on August 8. The game will be part of the coaching course offered Texas high school mentors.

Cordill, according to reports, will enroll at A. & M. this fall. He has the natural ability to make good, and visited a number of colleges and universities in the Southwest before making a decision.

Baseball Fans Invited To Eat With 'Crackers'

ATLANTA, July 7. (AP)—The Atlanta Crackers of the Southern Association have hung out the "double + header-with - dinner-on-the-ground" sign to jack up attendance. Under the system, the fans bring picnic spreads which they consume on stadium benches.

The first game begins at 5:30, the second is played under the arch lights. Supper is eaten between games.

that Kress is no longer a utility man, but a regular.

Griffith Keeps 'Em

Early in June Bluege's call came. Myer again fell victim of illness. Bluege moved into a position he rarely had played, turned in many fielding gems and powdered the ball.

Normally a weak hitter, it was largely Bluege's heavy stick-work that kept the Senators going. The 36-year-old veteran, who has been with Washington since 1922, is hitting better than ever before in his long stretch of service and far above his lifetime average.

As bad as Washington needs pitching strength, Owner Clark Griffith has several times this year turned down trade offers that would have involved Kress or Bluege.

They may be oldsters and more utility men, but, as has been shown so clearly this year, they are handy to have around.

The Senators climbed into the first division when Cleveland dropped a peg. If the Washington crew can hold the fort they will be doing extremely well this season.

Pre-season dope did not give Bucky Harris' team much chance of finishing in the first four.

HOTELMEN SHUT-OUT SHELL, 5-0

Playing rainy defensive U.M. in the pinches, the Settles Roadrunners won their second victory of the last half softball campaign Monday night by defeating Shell, 5-0.

While the Shell batsmen got to Howard Thomas frequently, he managed to keep his fat offerings scattered pretty well and only twice were the Roadrunners in trouble. Three Shell runners and one Settles man were nipped at the plate.

Settles took life in the first when Redding was safe on an error, advanced to second on a passed ball and was out at the plate attempting to score on Jake Pickle's blow. Joe Pickle punched a feeble hit through shortstop and Jake scored on a misplay.

Two more runs were scored in the seventh when Joe Pickle was safe on an error and Savage brought him around with a home run. Weldon Bryant tallied in the eighth when Redding doubled with him aboard. Safe again on an error at first, Joe Pickle scored on a double by Savage in the ninth to complete the scoring.

Burkhardt for Shell and Savage for Settles led in the hitting with three hits each out of four times to the plate.

Candidates' Labor Votes Are Listed

Record Of Several Texans Is Reviewed By Railroad Brotherhoods

By RAYMOND BROOKS
AUSTIN, July 7.—Railroad brotherhoods have been checking up on all Texas candidates for state office, for congress and the legislature, and this month announced their review of all candidates except the house and senate races, promising that before the first primary.

This report incidentally furnishes a complete roster of the congressional and legislative candidates. Except for incumbents and those who have held their public office, it simply recites: "no record."

Of U. S. Sen. Morris Sheppard, it records that he has cast 42 votes favorable to legislation advocated by the rail brotherhoods, and three votes adverse; and 27 votes favorable to the American Federation of Labor program, and eight adverse.

Houston "has been friendly to labor," and passed the other 30 candidates without comment. These candidates are: Albert Thomas, R. C. Duff, George L. Glass, Earl Jacoby, C. A. Mitchener, John N. Snell, C. A. Teagle, Bates F. Wilson and George W. Dixon.

Sen. W. R. Poage, candidate at Waco, has a showing of 20 favorable, 12 adverse votes; his opponent, Frank Tiry, has no legislative record.

Three of the seven candidates in the Wichita Falls district, Cong. W. D. McFarlane and Senators Ben G. Oneal and Grady Woodruff, have a majority of favorable labor votes; while the others, Ed Gossett, B. D. Sartin, George Backus and T. H. McKee are without legislative background.

In the governor's race, this summary recites that Gov. Allred, "as attorney general and as governor, has been friendly to labor." Sen. Roy Sanderford was recorded with a record of 10 votes for and eight against labor-sponsored measures; with Tom F. Hunter, F. W. Fisher and P. P. Brooks, "no legislative record."

Atty. Gen. William McCraw was recorded "favorable to labor" in the race for railroad commissioner, Commr. Ernest O. Thompson, H. O. Johnson, Goodson Rieger and Frank S. Morris had no legislative background, while former Sen. Carl C. Hardin was shown to have cast 10 votes for labor-sponsored measures and six against.

STATE READY TO PAY GENERAL WARRANTS

Confederate pension warrants including the August, 1935, issue are payable if still held by the pensioners. Transferred warrants are redeemable for issues up to and including August, 1934.

LIQUOR CANNOT STAND THE LIGHT OF TRUTH

William Allen White says: "The more I think of repeal the less I think of human intelligence." If one doubts this conclusion, read the following figures which though taken in one state, are undoubtedly typical of the whole country:

During 1934 here in Massachusetts, 94,885 drunks were arrested, 20,402 more than in the previous year.

It costs to arrest and care for a drunk; therefore Massachusetts had to care for 94,885 under arrest. Who pays those bills? The taxpayer. If that care costs only $1 each, there is $94,885 added to already high taxes. These 94,885 drunks lose wages while drunk. If their wages or buying power is only $1 a day, there is a lost

DRUNKARDS

It is certainly not unjust or un-Christian to speak with force and condemnation, when addressing those responsible for present conditions. The 34,000,000 professed Protestant Christians alone can solve the problems at their pleasure. But up to date, they prefer to strain at the gnat and swallow the camel—the accursed liquor traffic, with all the bumps of iniquity which attach to it. The text, in part, of a sermon I heard this morning was, "Ye must be born again." The church must be born again politically, or that haven of rest, the era of peace, purity, and prosperity, so dearly desired, will never come to this nation.—Chas. E. Stokes.—(Submitted by the local WTCU).

FREE WITH HELP

A whole philosophy of government is bound up in the idea of a referee, with people free to do as they may so long as they do not interfere with others' rights. Government is a matter of definition, of limitations and of machinery to put this idea into effect.

There is to the mind acute conflict with this "let-alone" principle and the thousand and one acts and kinds of paternalism the United States has experienced in the past few years.

Yet in the mind of one Texas editor, this conflict has been reconciled. As we get it, here is the way he solves it.

Without the paternalism of recent years, the nation would have been in chaos, with financial institutions destroyed, instead of restored to stability. Agriculture would have been hopeless, rather than back on the high road. The nation has been sent another 16 billion dollars in debt, toward the present 32-billion peak.

Some of the acts of government were drastic. Yet the government is only to see that each fellow gets an even break. The answer is that the harsh and revolutionary and drastic remedies were simply applied to restore the ability to maintain equality, to leave each element free and to take the feet of some of the giants off the toes of the helpless.

Crop plow-under was to restore a balance, so the grower might live. Help for the needy was to restore a balance, so they could manage, on their own. Aid for financial institutions was to protect, not the banks, but the depositors, in independent self-maintenance.

The appeal now against reactionary court decisions is to allow the individual the same economic freedom that the court itself so jealously protects for his political rights and functioning.

Government in short is to protect freedom, with power to curtail—or to define—freedom so as to make it work. Relief, social legislation, business functions, are to readjust life to the basic condition. Criminal law is to make everybody play the game. Sovereignty is the duty to referee the game, with the power to make the decisions stick.

★ Man About Manhattan ★

By George Tucker

NEW YORK—Personal notes off a New Yorker's staff:

Robert Simmons is one of those cosmopolitans of so many and varied talents that it would require a brochure to catalog them adequately. . . Nevertheless, the real key to his success as a singer on the radio may be found in this conversation between himself and the man who put him under contract.

Arriving for an audition, the director tossed him a batch of musical manuscripts. . . "You'd better rehearse these before you have your audition," he suggested.

"If it's all right with you, I'm ready to sing now," Simmons told him. . . "But most of those manuscripts are very tough—some of them originals. How can you expect to be at your best without going over them once?"

"A good actor should be able to play all the parts, and a good singer should be able to sing all the music," he responded quietly, "and if you will pardon me, sir, I think I am a good singer." . . Yeah, he got the contract.

One of the answers to the heat problem in Manhattan during July and August is to forget it by attending the open air concerts in Lewisohn stadium, where you may hear marvelous symphonic arrangements of Wagner, Beethoven and most of the other great artists for as low as 25 cents. . . Less than a dozen legitimate attractions remain on Broadway, and four of these are hold-overs from other days. . . Spawped by repeal, the famous Connie inn has finally been taken over by the Cotton club. . . In the beginning it thrived in Harlem like a wild orchid in the tropics. . . But the lean years drove it downtown and now Connie has been disposed of.

Unattended by the fanfare that heralded her arrival, Mme. Arlette Stavisky has returned to her home in Paris. This demure young widow of the late financial "genius" whose failure precipitated riots last year came over to New York to toil obscurely for $50 a week in a Broadway cabaret. Most of the wise ones thought she was here to gain publicity and that her appearance would last only a few days. But she remained in "Folies de Femmes" at the French Casino for more than three months, working quietly and attempting to forget the fortune that she lost, the death of her husband, and the 16 months she spent in prison before she was acquitted by the French police.

Now she has gone back to reclaim her two children and to arrange, if possible, for the publication of her novel. The word here is that no American publisher would touch it but that two European publishers are anxious to have it. Mme. Stavisky, of the gorgeous wardrobes, the exciting jewels and expensive yachts, will remain in Paris only long enough to arrange her affairs. Then she will return to New York, where, she says, she expects to make her home.

The Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—There is something almost uncanny about Roosevelt luck. Whenever he seems to need a four-leaf clover, he stoops down and picks one up.

On the heels of his Philadelphia acceptance speech, just as folks were looking one another over and wondering which was which among the "economic realists," suddenly the Steel Institute stuck its head out and proclaimed: "Look at us! We're it!"

Furthermore, the steel moguls spent about half a million dollars on full page advertisements in some 300 newspapers in making the proclamation. And this was an amazing break for Mr. Roosevelt.

London's Uncle
For one of the guiding geniuses of Steel Institute publicity is none other than William Mossman, uncle of Gov. Alfred Mossman, London.

Mossman is public relations director of Jones and Laughlin, the big steel firm which had its PWA contract canceled after its suit with the national labor relations board, by which the board was held unconstitutional. Irwin B. Laughlin, a heavy contributor to GOP campaign funds, was named ambassador to Spain by Hoover.

While Mossman is no Charlie Schwab or Andrew Carnegie, he does seem to play an important part in the public relations of the Steel Institute, and democratic campaign sleuths are busy digging up all they can about him. So far they have found that he did some steel lobbying in Washington, and is alleged to have once held up the sessions of the Pennsylvania state senate for two days while he went to New York to confer with the Steel Institute.

All this, however, is small potatoes beside the main issue involved, that of organizing the 500,000 workers in the giant iron and steel industry. In the end, this may not bring Mr. Roosevelt a much luck as the four-leaf clover just plucked.

Both sides are ready for a knock-down, drag-out fight.

Labor Side
On the labor side, the unionization drive has been launched after weeks of careful planning. Behind John L. Lewis and United Mine Workers stand 10 big unions, with a membership of 1,000,000 dues-payers. This army is one-third of the enrolled strength of the A. F. of L. Into the fight the United Mine Workers have poured $500,000, and other unions have pledged large amounts.

Their G. H. Q. is in Washington under the supreme command of Lewis Field headquarters are in Pittsburgh in the swanky Grant building, where various big steel companies have offices. One of these, the Weirton company, which upsets the NRA collective bargaining code, has protested against the steel workers having headquarters there. But for one year at least, the lease cannot be broken.

Auto Workers Next
For 50 years the steel industry has resisted unionization. The last great effort, by William Z. Foster in 1920, resulted in complete victory for the employees. During the NRA, union membership rose to 100,000, then dropped out of sight with the end of the Blue Eagle. The Amalgamated Steel Workers now has a membership of only 10,000 out of 500,000 in the industry.

The United Mine Workers have a compelling interest in the battle. For the steel companies have their own mines—"captive mines"—which have no wage agreements with the union. These can undercut prices, force unionized mine operators to break the agreement.

Other unions cooperating with the miners plan to make this the beginning of a great unionization drive. If they succeed, they will tackle next the automobile industry and other mass-production fields.

Employees' Side
The steel moguls know this. And they are operating with just as close-knit an organization as labor.

Their plan—practiced in the past—is to transfer work from one mill to another if strikes break in one locality. All members of the Steel Institute will fulfill an order for a member firm on a cost basis, if that firm is tied up by strikes.

Therefore chief fear of the union moguls is that strikes may break out piecemeal in isolated mills. They want a strike in all mills or none at all. One strike in one or two mills is sure to be lost.

Actually, the union moguls don't want any strike for some time—until they are well organized. Miss Perkins also is for this policy.

Strategy of the steel moguls is to provoke a strike before organization has too far progressed. This should not be hard to do. By firing leading unionites, the embryo unions will demand action, and G. H. Q. in Washington eventually will have to yield.

Some of Roosevelt's advisers fear that a bitter large-scale steel strike just before elections. They claim to have inside information that the steel moguls deliberately plan this. There is no doubt that the steel moguls plan to get the coal and automobile industries to cooperate if possible. Such a strike would create terrific industrial upheaval, might put a serious dent in Roosevelt's popularity.

Police Chief Robert L. Jones said business men had besieged him with pleas to "do something" about the strike, which has been in progress for more than a week.

Chapter 42 UNTANGLED

Dirk remembered. Remembered Madame's mention of a pale girl—a fair girl. He said, "I remember. He had never thought of it again."

"Torrobin said if you were a lawyer you weren't a safe prospect. Chow said yes, you were, because you were young. Young enough to be a fool. She gave him your name, said you lived in Westchester, and to look you up. She gave him Freddy Nevin's name, too. Natalie was certainly a talker. But Torrobin said lawyers were out. Said he'd like to get you, himself. Meaning about his nose."

"I went back to the van, and Olga, Pipolo's wife, was there. She said Pipolo had gone out to phone for an ambulance, that we must get Roddie to a hospital. We took him to Bellevue that night. He was still unconscious, and seriously hurt."

"I found your name in the phone-book. More than ever I wanted to see you, since I know you were a lawyer. I knew that Roddie had to break away from Torrobin, whatever happened. I wanted to know about extradition laws; to know if—with only Torrobin's word as evidence—they could take Roddie out of New York and bring him down to Texas."

"Looking back now, seeing more clearly, I know Torrobin could have proved nothing without involving himself. He had used the money. But then—I was frightened. I couldn't think. I wondered if they would take Roddie while he was ill."

"They said that Roddie would live—with an operation, and the right care. I wanted him to have everything. It would take money. Pipolo said he could get the money, would bring it to me. Monday night."

"The show was going to Atlantic City, and Pipolo and Olga were going with it in their trapeze act."

But Pipolo would come back. Olga gave me some money that night, so that I could go to a hotel. They wouldn't let me stay at the hospital with Roddie.

"I didn't go to the hotel. Instead I found out where you lived, and came here to your home—came by subway and surface cars. It was a long trip. I thought I would never finish it. But I knew you would help me if I could find you."

"It was Rupert! I found. I thought Chow had made a mistake. In my wild state I never thought there might be more than one Joris who was a lawyer. But he was a lawyer, he assured me of that. And since I had come so far . . . I found though I couldn't tell him anything. It seemed I couldn't trust anybody with Roddie's secret. . . even Pipolo and Olga. I believe I could have trusted you. But that was before . . ."

"Rupert questioned me about other things. I told him the truth in everything except my name. Even that was the truth. Hope is really my name, though I've never been called that. My father named me Lascia. You know 'Lascia'?"

On a mouse-gray Mustang, close to my side. . . With blue serge, and bright-belled spur. . . "Cowboys like the poem. But my mother tucked in the name of Hope. I think Hope Devine is a name. . . It's embarrassing as a name. But I felt if Rupert knew my name—the name I was known by—he might be able to trace Roddie through it. He might. . . He wasn't himself that night. He might somehow give Roddie away—for I meant to tell him all I must to get advice."

"I couldn't think clearly, as I say. I only knew I was sorry Roddie was known as Roddie in the circus. Only there he was known as Roddie Torrobin. Every one assumed he was Torrobin's son. Only Olga and Pipolo knew he was not."

"Rupert wouldn't advise me, but he offered me a refuge. Such a refuge! It was like a door into heaven. Looking back, I see how silly my thoughts were. I thought he wanted me because he liked me. Of course I realized he hardly knew what he was doing, but even so, I thought I could win him, make him love me, and Roddie would be safe. Roddie would have everything he needed. . . and with Rupert's influence and knowledge of the law. . ."

"Later I realized how wrong it was to bring my trouble into your house, to make it yours and Rupert's. But then I was thinking only of myself and Roddie. . . "And when you came home, and I saw you again—most of all when we sat together on the stair that night—I came near telling you everything he needed. . . something about you made me want to trust you, confide in you. Only I was too tired to straighten it out in my mind—to make it clear. I thought, 'Later.'"

"Early next morning I went to the hospital, and they let me see Roddie for just a minute. I told Mary I had been to church, and I had. There was a service at the hospital. . . "I went and got my trunk, too, with the money Olga had lent me, and I telephoned Pipolo in Atlantic City. I told him where I was staying. Nothing more over the phone. He said he would meet me, as he promised, would send for me."

"He sent a taxi for me, a taxi owned by a friend of his. That was the night of 'The Black Swan.' I told him that night about my marriage—not how it had happened, only that I had married, and whom. Pipolo warned me not to let Torrobin know. . . "Pipolo had sensed that Torrobin had some deadly hold on Roddie and me, and he feared, since I had married well, that he would try extortion of some sort. . . "That was why I hadn't wanted it in the papers—my marriage. I mean. That was why I was glad I had used the name of Hope. Torrobin had never heard that name. . . "Torrobin did not show up at the hospital while Roddie was there."

EVIDENCE IN HOSTESS SLAYING

He was probably nursing his bruised face. Pipolo—knowing I had a secret—asked me if I had made a clean breast of everything to Rupert, and when, I said no, he was troubled. . . "I was troubled, too. It began to look as if marriage might not prove a solution. Yet Rupert seemed to want me to be happy, to be trying to please me. I still hoped I might win him. . . "That night the taxi-driver thought some one was following us and later he told Pipolo that a man came to his house and questioned him, accused him of wrecking his car. Pipolo supposed it was some scout of Torrobin's, but the description of the questioner sounded as if it might have been you. But I began to be afraid. Afraid that Torrobin might have been to you with the truth about Roddie, and poisoned your mind against me."

Dirk held an arm about her. "And so you didn't confide in me?" "I didn't dare. I didn't know what you might do, how you might feel. My whole thought was to get Roddie well, and away. I didn't need Pipolo's money that night, and I was able to pay back what Olga had given me. I had deposited my check from Rupert, and I had brought money for Roddie's operation, and care. . . "You had money on you," Dirk said, "in addition to the jewels? I'd have been more worried still if I had known. It was I following you. I think you know my motives now. I had just got home, when you came to the gate and waved, and went off alone in a taxi, and later picked up a man. . ."

"Pipolo," she said, "He was slaying with his brother, Tony Fazzini. But I hadn't the jewels on. I had taken them off and given them to Rupert. All except the coronet, and it wasn't real. Roddie thought it was. It dazzled him. I knew it would."

She smiled. "So I kept it on, and the dress, too. I wanted Roddie to see them. I wanted him to see me all prosperous and happy—the last thing before he went under the ether. I was so afraid for him. . . "That was why I had gone to church the day before, and prayed and prayed. I don't think I had ever prayed till then."

SCAR-FACED PUBLIC ENEMIES INDEXED IN ROGUE'S GALLERY

As the inquiry into slaying of Mrs. Florence Thompson Castle, Chicago night club entertainer, was continued, police were checking the activities of all men with whom Mrs. Castle was friendly, in an effort to solve the bizarre killing. The broken paving brick with which she was beaten to death while in bed with her 7-year-old son, stained cloth, lipstick and other clues are shown as they were exhibited at an inquest. (Associated Press Photo)

CINCINNATI, July 7. (AP)—By their scars police some day may know criminals just as they now trace down "public enemies" by their fingerprints. . . Because witnesses in two killings remembered prominent scars on the faces of the slayers, Lieut. George Schattie, head of the Cincinnati homicide squad and crime laboratory, devised a system of classifying various marks on criminals' faces. . . Submitted To Washington Schattie also has submitted his method of criminal investigation to the United States bureau of investigation at Washington. . . The homicide squad had run up against a stone wall seemingly in solving two murders. Studying the clues, Schattie noticed that witnesses invariably mentioned scars by which the killers might be identified. . . "If we had a scar method of classification," mused Schattie, "we'd soon know whether the murderers had a criminal record."

Developed in his Mustang For six months, he worked on his system before perfecting it and bringing it to his chief's attention. Now he has a two-month job of compiling a scar identification file for the Cincinnati police. . . "When this file is completed," he says, "we ought to be able to identify many persons wanted for crimes but whose names and fingerprints we do not have. . . "We'll classify the marks, and

Drouth Cuts Wheat Yield In Northwest 100 Million Bushels

CHICAGO, July 7. (UP)—Drouth in the northwest cost farmers 100,000,000 bushels of wheat in June, private crop experts reported today. . . Chicago's five private grain statisticians in their report on wheat conditions at the first of July estimated the spring wheat yield this year would total 134,000,000 bushels, 102,000,000 bushels less than predicted a month ago. . . The report emphasized drouth damage in the Dakotas and Montana where wheat fields have baked under scorching sun for three months. The drouth, combined with a plague of grasshoppers and chinch bugs, has cost the agricultural northwest an estimated $100,000,000. . . Wheat prospects throughout the northwest are even less favorable than last year when the worst black rust plague in many seasons wiped out thousands of acres almost ready for harvest, the grain experts reported. The final yield in 1935 was 170,000,000 bushels. The indicated yield of spring wheat this year is 102,000,000 bushels less than the average. . . The total wheat yield for the United States was estimated at 631,000,000 bushels, which means the country will be on a wheat importing basis for the fourth consecutive year. Domestic requirements for food, feed, and seed, usually total around 650,000,000 bushels.

DENVER (UP)—Monkeys live in comfort at city park zoo here. A former two-story stable building has been converted into a monkey house with a tunnel running below around from the building to a miniature island of trees and shrubs, surrounded by a rock-walled moat. . . within a few minutes we'll be able to produce a picture of a criminal with scars similar to those noted by witnesses. . . Schattie's method is to divide the head and neck into nine parts, each numbered. The forehead is numbered 1; a scar on the right side of the forehead would be noted as R-1, on the left side as L-1. The nature of the scar and any pertinent facts about it would be noted.

Walter Millies, bought from Brooklyn for $5,000, has come through well as a reserve for Cliff Bolton and is hitting .304. Pete Appleton, tried and found wanting by New York, Cleveland and Boston, came to Washington via the draft from Montreal for $7,500. He has won six and lost five.

The Senators may be a bargain-counter team, put together by shrewd trades and purchases, but they're the surprise of the junior loop.

Roy Johnson and Carl Reynolds. Used irregularly, Reynolds has played well. His hits have been timely. Manush is out of the Red Sox lineup and Joe Cronin, the story goes, has confided to friends he got the worst of the deal.

Johnson was immediately shipped to New York with pitcher Bump Hadley for pitcher Jimmy DeShong and outfielder James Hill. DeShong, regarded by McCarthy as only a relief hurler, is the No. 1 pitcher on the Senators' staff. He had 10 victories and four defeats through July 1. Hadley, an oldster who could do nothing for Washington in 1935, has been successful as a relief pitcher for the Yanks, aided materially by the new "murderers' row."
