

Mussolini's Troops Occupy Ethiopian Capital

US Legation Is Evacuated, All Are Safe

American Envoy Leads His Companies To British Headquarters

ROME, May 5 (AP)—Premier Mussolini declared tonight "the war is over," and "Ethiopia is made Italian."

After four days of conspicuous bravery under almost constant fire of rioting Ethiopians, the American minister, Cornelius Van Eegert, and his companions took refuge in the British legation, Washington announced that the United States legation was "safely evacuated, after four days of valiant resistance."

Other Legations Attacked Meanwhile a British patrol went into action with machine guns against natives attacking the Belgian legation.

Anxious diplomats watched to see whether the reported entry of Italian troops into the partly burned and looted Ethiopian capital, as reported indirectly from Rome, would put an end to the pillaging.

It was made known for the first time that the French and Belgian legations had been attacked, in addition to the assault staged by rioters and would-be looters upon the Turkish mission.

The call to the British minister, who sat less than four miles away from the American legation, was sent to Washington by radio, telephoned to London and radioed back to the British legation in Addis Ababa.

Among the handful of Americans who had withstood a three-day siege inside the legation compound was the minister's wife, the former Sara Morrison Cunningham of San Francisco.

The British inability to spare a part of its guard to participate in the American legation's defense was taken by some here to indicate that an extremely serious situation still prevailed in the Ethiopian capital.

Fall Of City Is Celebrated

Italy Now Plans To Make Peace On Own Terms, Ignoring League

ROME, May 5 (AP)—Sirens and bells sounded in Rome late today, summoning citizens to celebration after the war ministry received word that Addis Ababa had fallen.

As Rome celebrated, newspapers reflected Italy's attitude toward conquered Ethiopia, holding Ethiopia is no longer a member of the league of nations, does not exist as a separate state, and that peace will be made in Ethiopia, not Geneva.

MANAGER OF REDS SEES RED

NEW YORK, May 5.—(UP)—Popping off in baseball has a way of kicking back sooner or later. Bill Terry found this out a couple of years ago, when he more or less innocently inquired whether the Brooklyn Dodgers were still in the National league...

The Cincinnati Reds seem to feel the same way about Charlie Grimm, manager of the Cubs, as the Dodgers felt about Terry two years ago. It all began this spring when the Cubs visited Tampa to play an exhibition game with the Reds.

When the Reds and their manager, Charlie Dressen, saw the published interview they saw "red." It was the beginning of a beautiful feud. . . . one that flamed into a roaring fire when the Reds invaded Chicago for their 3-game series with the Cubs.

WATKINS, MEYERS IN MAIN GO OF OPENING WRESTLING SHOW

There'll be a hot time in the old arena next Tuesday night as wrestling promoters Herman Fuhrer and Dave Tobolowsky stage their first grappling matches of the year in the outdoor arena west of the Crawford hotel.

High spot on the opening card will be the appearance of Dutch Mantell in the ring as referee for the main go. Despite years of ring service, Mantell is still very active and is one of the most colorful men in the grunt and groin business.

Watkins, always rough and ready, takes delight in choking and gouging his opponents and often mixes with the spectators and referees.

Jack Gorman, a real battle-scarred warrior, will be the spectator's delight in the semi-windup, swapping holds with Dick Trout, U. S. Navy champion.

Gorman appeared here once last year, and although he failed to make it very interesting for his opponent, he writes that he's been training diligently and believes he can beat any of the boys.

memory and forgotten his instructions in his "championship" bout with Dan O'Mahoney one evening early in March the wrestling war now raging might have been averted. But no, Dick had to go in there and pin Champion Dan's broad shoulders to the mat while old Monsieur Jacques Curley almost threw a fit at being forced to watch the proceedings and not be able to turn a hand to prevent the disaster.

The sight of Lombardi stepping up to the plate used to be a signal for all the infielders and outfielders to shift to the left. There was no need of protecting the right side of the field.

Golfers Try Lower Marks

The Lower The Score, The Lower You Want To Be NEW YORK, May 5.—(UP)—Hardly a citizen these days is pleased with his golf score, and that, perhaps, accounts for the fact that a sub-70 round isn't nearly the rarity it was a few years ago.

Golfers Try Lower Marks

Instead of wondering when he may break 100, Joe Blow now aims at 90. And having attained the high 80's, Joe wonders when he will be in the high 70's, and so on. . . . This was clearly borne out recently at the Miami-Biltmore country club, where Stephen Early and Marvin McIntyre, assistant secretary to President Roosevelt, took occasion to examine their respective games while at the temporary White House awaiting the president's return from his tropical angling expedition.

Lillian Read Hurt Gives Piano Recital

Plays Three Groups Of Selections With Feeling

Lillian Read Hurt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Hurt, was presented in a piano recital Monday evening by her teacher, Miss Elsie Willis. The recital was given at the Episcopal parish house.

Lillian Read played with excellent technique and showed true musical feeling and understanding in the rendering of each composition. Short talks made by Miss Willis before each group added to the enjoyment of the program.

The first group of selections belonged to the classical period in music. They were:

Two Part Invention Nos. 8, 12—Bach.
Adagio from String Quartet in G Minor—Haydn.
Oxen Minuet—Haydn.

The third group, from Schuman's Opus 15, of the romantic period of music consisted of: About Strange Lands and People; Catch Me If You Can; Import at Event; Traumerel.

The recital closed with the following modern compositions: The Pines—A. Matthews.
Waltzing Doll—Poldini.
Song From The East—C. Scott.
Tarantella—Plesconka.

Two violin duets were given by Miss Evelyn Jackson and Lovella Bell. They were "Concerto for Two Violins, No. 3 (1st movement) by Bach, and Danc's "Little Symphony Number Two."

The parish house was charmingly decorated with vases of flowers. A group of friends invited for the occasion comfortably filled the auditorium.

MEETING LAST JANUARY 22, the state executive committee of the interscholastic league passed a resolution to submit the following legislation for consideration of delegates at the state meet last week:
1—Rule barring schools from participation in the league in any contest, the coach in which is paid a percentage of gate receipts, or bonus in any other form. This abuse, of course, is present principally in football.
2—Rule requiring the state committee to suspend any school in athletic contests whose accrediting is withdrawn or cancelled by the state department of education for irregularities of any kind.
On No. 1, the delegates decided to have a referendum, and on No. 2, they decided to delay action until next January 1.

OTHER MATTERS considered:
1—Report of a committee on a plan to standardize awards.
2—Consideration of revision of eight-semester rule requiring all schools to count semesters from time of enrollment in eighth grade as requested by Beaumont high school.
3—Action authorizing the state committee to appoint committees for study of various phases of interscholastic league activities to be held up in various conferences to be held day preceding opening of state meet in 1937, and to make formal recommendations based on such study and conferences to next meeting of this body. Items for conferences, suggestive merely, follow: (a)—Revision of athletic code many with the physical education program of the schools. (b)—Proper organization and administration of county meets. (c)—Proper organization and administration of district and regional meets, with special reference to proper methods of financing same.

THE DELEGATES voted to make further study of No. 1, call a referendum on No. 2, and allow No. 3.

Patrons Not Serious
Half the patrons at wrestling bouts don't take the competitive angle seriously—they merely attend to be entertained. The other half—the ones who believe the matches are contested on the level—wouldn't believe otherwise even if the contestants swore to the contrary on a stack of Bibles.
Curley has never posed as anything but a promoter of entertainment. If folks wanted to believe that his wrestling shows were real, honest-to-goodness tests of skill and strength, Monsieur Curley would be the last person in the wide world to "disillusion" them.
He has been promoting the game for many, many years and it was he who lived up to the business of tussling by introducing the acrobatics which proved so entertaining for some people. You will recall that wrestling blossomed out all of a sudden a few years ago and swept the country. It followed on the heels of the scourge of fairs which plagued important boxing bouts. Fans, in their disgust with the unsatisfactory ending to so many fights, turned to Curley's improved version of the mat sport.

A Good Show
It proved good entertainment for many. There are plenty of people who get a great "kick" out of watching the huge athletes toss each other out of the ring. There are always plenty of laughs at a wrestling show. To stay on the big time a wrestler today has to be an actor. Courage, skill and durability are a big help, but if you can't act—and remember your fans—don't go in for wrestling.
Take the latest "champion"—All Baba. They bill him as the semi-wild Turk. And all chatters about his father who is the Pascha of a tribe of a million half-wild Turks. Turks who live in caverns and sleep on stone floors. Turks who eat raw meat. Turks who . . .
Meanwhile, from another source comes the enlightening information that until a few months ago All Baba was wrestling in preliminary matches on the Coast and his right name is Harry B. Ekekanian.

of McIntyre.

McIntyre Explosive
Following McIntyre around a few holes of golf frequently wards the gallery with such irate remarks as "Nuts, I've had 10 strokes on this hole already; I'll pick up." He seems to find new hope on the next tee—that is, until his tee shot.
Another McIntyre-ism is the use of the "mulligan" strategy for a second shot employed after a previously dubbed shot. Most McIntyre "mulligans" are worse dubbed than the initial shot, however—which seems to serve as a psychological encouragement to the presidential attacks.

Early, with his low 80's, is just as displeased, though not quite so violent, as his fellow secretary. He, too, has a peculiar style of playing golf. While driving is his forte, Early's stance on the tee is a mystery. Few others addressing the ball as Early does could even hit it, yet he manages to blast the ball 225 to 275 yards down the fairway. He stands nearly back of the ball, giving the general idea that he thinks the green is off at a left angle from the tee.
The cases of Early and McIntyre, with their dissatisfaction with their games, raise the interesting question of which mental attitude—complacency or discontent—is the best influence upon a person's golf game.
The discontented fellow, to be sure, is the wrathful fellow, who, in his zeal to conquer the game, will dub many a shot. Yet he is of the fiber that may eventually find the groove of good golf because of sheer persistence.
Complacency Hurts
Complacency, while it's good for the nerves, isn't conducive to ambition, and may spoil good ball players, good halfbacks, good pole-vaulters, good divers, good sticking guards and good golfers.
Gene Sarason, apparently returning to the links form that won him acclaim of the experts some years ago, blamed complacency for the slump that sent him down to the ranks of the only average tournament.

Then there are such youthful stars as Steve Peil, Sinclair Wallace and Miss Virginia Scalfay of Pensacola, Dick Crawford of Mobile, Ala., and Johnny Morris of Birmingham.

Special Edition Copies Mailed to Iraq, Australia

Distance record for mailed-away copies of The Herald's recent big "decade of development" edition reached a new mark today. L. P. Boone, court reporter, mailed copies to correspondents in Baghdad, Iraq, Sydney, Australia, and London, England.
Copies wrapped for mailing are still available at The Herald office.

"I was too satisfied with myself," said Gene, "and I decided that I'd experiment with a few new formulas, feeling that no matter what else I might try I'd still retain the form that had put me up there. That's when I pretty nearly had to find another way of making a living."
With no more fields left to conquer, Ebbey Jones, satisfied with his links accomplishments, withdrew himself from tournament golf. Later, he essayed to return to the pack, playing one tournament a year—the Master's open at Augusta, Ga. Witness his dismal failure. And he must settle somewhat at the self-satisfaction he felt when he sheathed his tournament blades.
So it would seem that it's all right to get out on your favorite meadow, swear at your absurdities, take it out on the ball, and demean yourself for your bad shots. And when you tab your first 78, it would seem quite in order to give yourself a stiff dressing down because of that three-putt business on the 16th that deprived you of a 78.

RED CROSS DECLARES WAR ON HIGHWAY ACCIDENTS

The above accident victim's life was saved by proper First Aid treatment. However, 36,400 others implicated in traffic accidents in 1935 lost their lives. The Red Cross, through its local chapters, is opening First Aid stations in hundreds of establishments along major highways to curb the frightful toll. In the inset (standing) are leaders of the Tyler, Texas, chapter, first in the state to open a highway First Aid station. Sitting are two of the First Aiders, all of whom serve as volunteers and give emergency treatment only until the doctor arrives. After selecting station sites and training attendants, local chapters equip them with 24-unit kits and conduct regular inspections. In Texas 151 of the emergency stations already have been designated.

'THE BOY WHO WASN'T WANTED'

The white casket of 3-year-old Matthew Karmendl, "the little boy who wasn't wanted," is shown on its way to the grave at Altoona, Pa. The slain child's mother and her friend, Roy Lockard, were in jail for questioning. Behind the casket, carried by friends, are shown the victim's father (without hat) and aunt, Mrs. Theresa Kreutner. TENANTS' OPPORTUNITY

Hundreds of Texas farm families are being given an opportunity to rehabilitate themselves this year, according to a recent report from the Resettlement Administration. Nearly all these families have been on relief rolls or have aid of some nature from the government. This year they are being given an opportunity to grow their food and feed for their livestock, with sufficient acreage of cash crops to repay government loans.

Rehabilitation of tenant farmers is one of the most laudable undertakings of the present administration. There are many share-croppers who were forced to leave the farm because of decreased acreage of cash crops, who welcome an opportunity to get back. Under the regular system of tenantry, there is little hope for them to improve their status, which in many cases borders on slavery.

Man About Manhattan

NEW YORK—One of the more hilarious truisms of the Broadway merry-go-round is that Ben Hecht is never able to find Charlie MacArthur, with whom he collaborates on those gawdy dramas for which both are justly famous. MacArthur loves to go places and roars around like a steam-engine while Hecht sits home with a new plot and sulks. "If I could only catch that guy," he wails, meaning the dynamic husband of Helen Hayes whose social activities keep him happily on the go.

They tell me Hecht supplies a major portion of the actual writing while MacArthur contributes most of the "situations" and funny ideas. Hecht himself is one of the fastest craftsmen in the business and can turn out copy with dizzying speed. When an idea assails him he frets until it is on paper. Charlie, on the other hand, writes only when the mood strikes him or when he is compelled to meet a deadline.

One of the funniest circumstances to their rip-snorting career on Broadway is the contretemps that almost traps them every time a new manuscript is written. They lost the third act of "Twentieth Century," for instance, in a taxicab the night it went into rehearsal. Gene Fowler is another of the Hecht-MacArthur school. He and Hecht wrote one play that was a horrible thing to see—a wild, bawdy resume of love at Coney Island.

Red Nichols, orchestra leader noted for his smart trumpet playing, is very glad the French public lost one of its earlier Causes. That was 1749, the occasion of the first appearance of a cornet, or trumpet, in a band. The public booed it and clamored for the government to prohibit its use.

WASHINGTON—Senator Arthur Vandenberg insists that he is not a candidate for the republican nomination. His close friends say his eyes are fixed on 1940. Friends who are not so close tell the story of Senator McNary of Oregon meeting Senator Jim Couzens of Michigan in the republican cloak room last winter and remarking: "Jim, Vandenberg tells me he is not in the nomination race."

Golden Rain

Chapter 29
TORTURE

Mrs. Morgan's eyes, hawklike still, softened. "I used to sing when I was a girl," she said. "All young ladies did, then, as a part of their daily lives. I suppose these might be some of my songs."

"Would you like it? I do hope so. They were my own grandmothers'."

She hurried upstairs, for the cowboy was in the midst of a song which began merrily, "As I walked forth in the streets of Laredo—"

As I walked out in Laredo one day— and she did not know how many streets there were in Laredo, but she did know that the corsets, and fitted boned hooked bodices in Honora's suitcase took some getting into.

They were exquisite costumes. She had read of such dresses in old novels and magazines in the attic. The first was a race-costume, delicately coquettish; a dress that must have taken M. Worth in his heyday weeks to contrive and other weeks to fit.

All one could think of in a dress like this would be lovers and parties and ways to consume more and more parties. Iris's variable spirits rose, as she saw the conquering flirt in the glass. It was fun. Little Iris from Persia, all dressed up like this, and going downstairs to show off before a lot of people!

She paused at the turn of the stairs; and she heard voices below. "Cowboy's all right, but what on earth is this following girl?" "Madame Phina's niece, from Dubuque, Iowa," a girl's voice drawled. "Georgia's passed the word round that she's a scream."

Iris, angry, and yet not knowing what else to do but to go on, came down the stairs. A tall mirror across from her reassured her a little; still she was trembling as she went into the center of the room and, standing before the piano with a small cleared space to move in, performed to that most difficult of audiences, a group in a private room.

The first songs she sang were out of a book from someone named Harrison Millard, a passionate, sentimental, romantic—but with a real sweetness and appeal. She stood there, smiling, winning, gay, and began.

She had the men from the beginning. She would have had the girls, too, she knew,—for audiences are easily swayed one way or another—if it had not been for Georgia. For the first stanza she held them.

Then Georgia, crouched on her cushion, a little way out of sight, began to whisper, as Iris could tell by the low ripple of inattention and amusement that started to go through the room.

To sing these songs adequately Iris had to evoke a mood in her listeners. She had done it at home. She knew she could have done it here. But Georgia was evoking another mood, hostile, ridiculing. And the group were Georgia's friends, not hers. Iris sang on, valiantly, sweetly.

Mrs. Morgan, erect in her chair, was taking the songs seriously; so was Allan; and Dicky Hamilton, easily moved, a little affected by his drinks to begin with, had his eyes full of tears.

But fight as she might, when she came to the end of her first group of songs, Iris knew Georgia had spoiled her performance for her; and furthermore, that from the beginning, egging her on to sing for a fool of her. She hadn't known there were girls like that.

Mrs. Morgan held out a hand as she passed her. "Thank you, child, you brought back some of my youth," she said. "I used to sing those Millard songs."

She answered mechanically as she went upstairs to change to the costume for the second group of songs. She passed through the group again; and she paused deliberately to hear what the speakers on the stairs were saying.

"Long, long ago," next, I suppose," said the girl's voice, "that horrible cheery one about Cousin Jeehah coming to tea."

"Shame to egg her on to make such a fool of herself," said a boyish voice. "Oh, Georgia has something up her sleeve. Girl must have a claw on Allan, or he wouldn't be giving a dinner-party."

"Sure," said the boy. "I was a dumb bunny. Allan can stand everything but feeling that something he likes isn't liked by the crowd. Has to be perfect for the Grand Mogul."

The words did something for Iris; instead of being hurt, she was furious. Her fighting spirit rose. This wasn't Georgia's house, it was Allan's. She'd been asked to it, after all. She'd make these silly amused "sophisticates," even this double-crossing Georgia, in a phrase of Georgia's own, "take it and like it."

She ran angrily into the bedroom they had given her for a dressing room and tore off the Worth costume. She was to have put on a quaint hoop-skirted frock next. She stood for a moment staring at it, her eyes blurring with tears.

Morgan would have fought for her if he had been here. Morgan would have backed her up. Would she never stop loving Morgan, who did not love her any more?

She put on the dark "Show Boat" dress; she thrust her hair down her forehead like Helen Morgan's—and she ran down the stairs, across the room to the piano. She dropped the music before Owen, and sprang onto the side of the piano.

She never knew how well she sang. All her longing for Morgan, all the passion of her anger at the girls and men who had ridiculed at Georgia's bidding, all her natural talent went into the passion and pathos of that one song.

They were silent, first—then rapt—then moved, held, hers absolutely. She sang it through. She stood there, smiling, winning, gay, and began.

'HEX' SLAYER WHO HANGED SELF

John Tryka and his wife, Magdalene, shown a few hours before he hanged himself in his jail cell at Buffalo, N. Y. Both were arrested for questioning in the slaying of Adolph Boettger, 63-year-old masseur. Police had planned to charge Tryka with the Boettger murder. (Associated Press Photo) went on to the other Helen Morgan song—"Why Was I Born?" The bright light shone on her slim quivering figure, its air of brave carelessness that covered only too imperfectly abandonment and hopeless grief. When she finished there was a hush; then applause, applause, rapt applause. She had won out. She had made them take it and like it.

She slipped down from the piano, tossed dark head held high, red lips smiling. Something hard and victorious made her able to stand there, taking their congratulations, their admiration. Easy, after all. A pack of cards. A flock of sheep.

Mrs. Morgan detained her again, as she began to move away. "I want you to perform my charity performance this summer," she said. Iris could not think why there was a sudden stunned hush after the old lady had spoken. Allan broke the silence after old

Mrs. Morgan's invitation, speaking in Iris's ear, behind her, as she stood ready to move away from her position in the spotlight of applause.

"Dicky Hamilton's on the edge of doing the worst soft-shoe routine in God's earth," he said. "Come on up and see my Matinees."

He maneuvered her with a woman's ease behind the others, opened an unexpected door which led up a steep flight of dark stairs, and another which led to a quiet low-lit room.

The walls had been so painted as to make them seem to curve in a concave. Instead of the old-fashioned chandeliers of the rest of the house, this place was swept bare of everything which reminded one of anything but the man himself.

Tall lightning posts of a sort she had not seen threw a clear indirect light over a desk in one corner; on another wall were hung the collection of modernist painters; there was a long wide couch covered with furs and a collection of horns and heads which told her that Allan collected more things than odd painters.

The draperies were few, more skins lay on the floor. It was an odd room. It said, "Anything which does not concern and interest me does not matter in the least." She looked up at Allan, with the gentle limppiness and quietude about him, and felt a little frightened.

"Like it?" said his soft light voice. He smiled at her. The pink spots on his face were deeper than usual, as if something excited him. She sat down on the low broad couch, with its cover of dark silky fur.

"Yes, I do." She felt suddenly that she must rise, move about look at the pictures, talk about them—anything but sit there, low on the couch in her black Helen Morgan dress, with Allan, flushed and quiet, watching her. (Copyright, 1933-36, Margaret Widdemer)

Iris is the center of an embarrassing scene, tomorrow.

ADVANCE—NOT RETREAT

Mystery Monument near North Evans, N. Y., erected to the memory of Father Zurcher, fearless crusader for total abstinence.

But the "mystery memorial" has much of interest, even without the mystery. It occupies a strategic place, beside the highway at Southwestern Boulevard and Eighteen-Mile-Creek road near the scene of Father Zurcher's pastoral labors in North Evans, not far from Buffalo, New York. The front exposure bears an engraving of St. George in combat with the dragon and beside it a nearly life-sized relief of the great priest. Inscribed in the granite is the legend:

"As his patron, St. George, fought the symbolic dragon of the Apocalypse, so the Rev. George Zurcher fought the demon of alcoholism and other abuses, and suffered persecution by those who should have blessed and assisted his efforts—all that will live Godly in Jesus Christ will suffer persecution. 2 Tim. 3-12."

The figure of Father Zurcher holds in one hand a book called "The Father Matthew Man" which he edited and distributed for many years during his life.

On the back of the monument are the words, "Work, Zeal, Conviction, and Knowledge," together with quotations by a number of eminent leaders of the Catholic church on the subject of temperance. Among these are the following:

Pope Leo XII: Let pastors shine before all as models of abstinence. Pope Pius X: Let the clergy everywhere put themselves in the very van of the struggle against alcoholism.

Cardinal Ferrari: No bishop fulfills his whole duty who does not fight alcohol with all his energy.

Cardinal Manning: The chief part to the workings of the Holy Spirit of God in the souls of men and women is intoxicating drink which is our shame, scandal and sin.

Archbishop Ireland: Any church in America that refuses to come out in favor of abstinence shall be considered as an odious excretion of her soul.

Father E. W. J. Lindesmith: We can never succeed in doing away with the thousands of mortal sins committed every day on account of strong drink, unless the Popes, Cardinals, Bishops and Priests become total abstainers.

Father Kubacki: Alcoholism incapacitating the brain to clearly understand correct principles and weakening the will to abide by them, is the cause of all human misery, sufferings and troubles—economic, social, civic and religious. (Submitted by the local WCTU.)

JACKSONVILLE MAN NEW HEAD OF ETC.

HOUSTON, May 5. (AP)—Tom E. Acker, Jacksonville banker and mayor of that city for the past 12 years, last night was unanimously elected president of the East Texas Chamber of Commerce. Acker succeeds A. G. "Pat" Mayse of Paris.

Acker, who helped organize the East Texas chamber, voiced the opinion that the Centennial year, 1936, marked the beginning of a century of great progress for the region.

Mayse told the convention in the annual president's report that "our nation is enjoying a steady national business recovery and East Texas is sharing the recovery in a remarkable manner."

DUST BOWL FARMERS COMMENCE PLANTING

DODGE CITY, Kas., May 5. (AP)—Cheered by spring rains, heavy enough in spots to flood dust fields, farmers in sections of the Kansas and Oklahoma dustlands got a start today on their drought-delayed spring planting.

Field work, held back by the weather and intermittent dust blows, began after overnight rains quenched dry fields. The rains centered in eastern sections of the dust bowl, missing Southeastern Colorado and the Texas Panhandle.

estimated at $513,000,000, compared with $418,000,000 in the same month last year.

Employment Gains
Most cities referred to widespread employment gains. In Virginia, factory employment was 15% higher than 1929 according to the Richmond report. Buffalo reported machinery and metal plants increased employment 5% and wages 10 from mid-February to mid-March. Continued improvement and stronger demand for farm help was reported by St. Louis. Indianapolis reported highway projects in 77 counties would employ 12,000 and additional thousands on construction projects. Relief families in Detroit declined from 22,206 to 21,986 in the week. Jacksonville reported the Florida Re-employment office had dropped 1690 women and 500 to 600 white collar workers.

More Construction
Most sections reported continued gains in construction. New York reported expanded residential construction mostly with Federal funds with private capital lagging. First quarter building permits in Atlanta were highest since 1929. A $500,000 marine and rail terminal was started in Detroit. Sharp gains were also reported by Wilmington, Cincinnati, Minneapolis, New Orleans, and Cleveland.

Diversified Industries sustained high operating levels. Minneapolis reported the early opening of iron mines in four towns on the Mesabi range. Steel production continued at a high level in Cincinnati, St. Louis, Birmingham, Cleveland and Pittsburgh with Buffalo reporting the best rate in six years. Portland salmon packers opened the season at 11 cents, higher in six years. Detroit reported a million dollar expansion program by the Grand Rapids Varnish Corporation. Widespread industrial expansion in New England was reported by Boston with activity in Springfield resulting in a shortage of skilled mechanical labor. The upstate division of the steel industry was at a seasonal peak.

was to meet the TRC requirements for an accredited unit to distribute its food and clothing.

Future operation of the association remained clouded in doubt as it has been indicated that county officials might not be willing to continue paying as heavy a bill as those presented for the past three months. Leaders in the welfare movement recently have renewed efforts to put the charity agency on a permanent basis. Checks for the last three months have been issued by the commissioners court over the protest of Judge Garlington.

FORMER PASTOR AND WIFE VISITORS HERE

Rev. and Mrs. W. G. Bailey of Albuquerque, New Mexico, are guests at the Crawford hotel for several days. They are enroute to their home, after visiting their daughter, Mrs. Lova May Stovall in Stamford, who was critically injured in an automobile accident several weeks ago. They reported her condition as improved when they left.

Rev. Bailey, former pastor of the First Methodist church of this city, is now presiding elder of the Albuquerque district of the New Mexico conference of the Methodist church. He was transferred from Stamford last November by Bishop Boas of the Northwest Texas conference. Dr. Bailey said he was very well pleased with the New

City Awarded Lions Session

District 2-T Convention Will Be Held In Big Spring In 1937

Big Spring was named host city for the 1937 convention of District 2-T Lions. The Herald was advised this afternoon in a telegram from Childress, where the current session was being concluded.

The city was chosen by acclamation, its invitation being unopposed. Elmer Dalhart was elected district governor.

General members of the local club, headed by Joe Pickle, president, attended the Childress session. They were backed in their bid for the 1937 meeting by W. T. Strange, chamber of commerce manager, and a troupe of entertainers under direction of Robert Riegel.

Telegrams asking the Lions to convene here next year were sent to the session Monday afternoon by various organizations and firms of the city.
