IT'S THE LAW IN TEXAS

BANKRUPTCY

In bygone days when a man got himself hopelessly into debt, the courts would jail him until he paid. Or, as in our colonial days a man became an "indentured" servant, and would come to America to work off his debt.

Neither jail nor servitude proved practical. A man in jail could not earn anything to pay his debts. It was drastic—something like the Siberian salt mines—to send a man to serve for years across the seas.

Through hard luck, illness, easy credit, impulse buying, or shifts in world affairs, men and women may find themselves hopelessly in debt.

Our bankruptcy laws aim to permit an honest but unlucky or weak debtor to turn over a new leaf. They allow him to file a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. He accounts for all of his property and turns it over for his creditors' benefit. The court sets up machinery to get as much of their money back as possible.

The court then adjudges the man a bankrupt. This means, with some exceptions, that the court will discharge him of his debts. Any income he gets after that time cannot be reached in court to pay his old debts.

Debtors may try to gain in ways not intended by the bankruptcy laws. If so, creditors may object. Besides, the courts may deal drastically with such debtors under our criminal laws.

Under the bankruptcy laws, a man is not required to surrender to his creditors certain items. In this State they usually include the family stove, refrigerator, radio, wearing apparel, working tools of one's trade and certain other items which vary with each individual case.

Even though items may be exempt from the creditors in bankruptcy, however, if they were purchased under a conditional sales contract, the unpaid seller may nevertheless repossess such goods despite a bankruptcy; so, too, the holder of a chattel mortgage on such goods may require them to be turned over to him.

FARM PROFIT

Shady Livestock Dealers Still Active

When is a deal not a deal? When it's a skin game! Maybe you've never been "taken" in a livestock trade because you've been cautious or just plain lucky. But the fact is that some farmers are still being gypped by shady dealers who carry on their nefarious practices in spite of heavy crackdowns by USDA investigators.

The Packers & Stockyards Branch of the USDA told Massey-Ferguson researchers that even the toughest enforcement cannot guarantee complete protection against short-weight, worthless checks, and other tricks of the cheaters.

Most of the firms and dealers in the more than 2,000 posted markets throughout the country are honest, and the percentage of off-the-beam transactions are relatively small. However, USDA officials say to be alert to such things as scale tampering, forged sales tickets, substitution of poorer livestock for his own at weighing, rubber checks, or a check by a bankrupt dealer.

Misuse of shipper's funds is another trick. A typical example was the Indiana commission company charged with "using for their own purposes funds received from the sale of livestock consigned to them on a commission basis."

Hardest to pin down for improper practices are the operators who agree not to compete with each other. A prize USDA catch among such dealers involved two who had an understanding that one would bid only on cows while the other would bid on calves. After the sale, the operators divided the cows and calves while the farmers divided smaller profits.

What to do when sculduggery is suspected? Report the matter at once to the nearest USDA Packer & Stockyards Branch. An investigation will be made at no cost to you and, if results warrant it, the dealer will be hauled into court.

Meanwhile, of course, the word is, as always, "be careful before and you're less likely to come out behind."

Mr. and Mrs. G. E. McDonald Underwood of May, who is in accompanied by his sister, Mrs. Memorial Hospital in Brown-Medcalf of Throckmorton, visited their sister, Mrs. Edgar wood. She is in a critical condition.

It's Wise to Prevent Timber And Grass Fires

COLLEGE STATION.—Heavy frosts followed by low humidity and high winds could once again set the stage for wildfire trouble in Texas, warns Bill Smith, extension forester. It was just last year that similar weather conditions combined with a lush growth of grass and weeds produced one of the worst fire periods in recent years. This year, the same conditions exist, but there is one ingredient still missing—human carelessness.

"In order to prevent the addition of this ingredient, Texans should be extremely careful with fires near wooded or grassy areas," Smith says.

In a 13-day period last November, some 450 fires scorched about 71 square miles in the Pineywoods of East Texas. The main cause of these fires, as well as those occurring during other parts of the year, was careless burning of trash, field stubble and weeds.

Smith offers the following suggestions as ways to prevent a repeat of last year's wasteful performance:

Burn household trash, in an enclosed container with a screen cover. This container should be set on bare soil at least 50 feet from the nearest building or wooded or grassy area.

Field stubble should be burned only as a last resort. If burning is necessary, however, a firebreak at least five feet wide should be plowed or disced around the area before the fire is started.

All burning should be done in the late afternoon, and then only when the wind is low. People contemplating burning should have tools and water handy, and they should stay with the fire until it is completely out.

Leaf Rust Most Destructive of Oat Crop Diseases

COLLEGE STATION.—Leaf rust occurs in all oat growing areas, but it is more likely to cause severe damage in areas of high rainfall or during years of above average rainfall.

This fungus caused severe damage in South Texas in 1958. New races attacked several varieties, and oat plants were killed in early April. Normally, pastures in South Texas produce forage until the middle of May or early June.

Leaf rust reduces the yield of grain per acre, and it causes severe lodging in maturing plants. The fungus produces small, bright orange-red, dust-like bumps (pustules) on the leaves. This dust contains many microscopic rust seed (spores), which are spread by wind.

Temperatures of 70 to 80 degrees are favorable for the disease. Once the disease is on a plant, the temperature can drop below freezing and the fungus will remain dormant, only to emerge again with warmer weather.

The best guard against leaf rust is to grow resistant varieties or those that tend to escape the disease. No commercial variety is resistant to all races of leaf rust, but Suregrain and Moregrain are resistant to a number of races.

Plentiful Foods for Christmas Season

COLLEGE STATION.—Santa's bag of gifts this December will include a bountiful supply of farm-produced foods, reports the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, College Station.

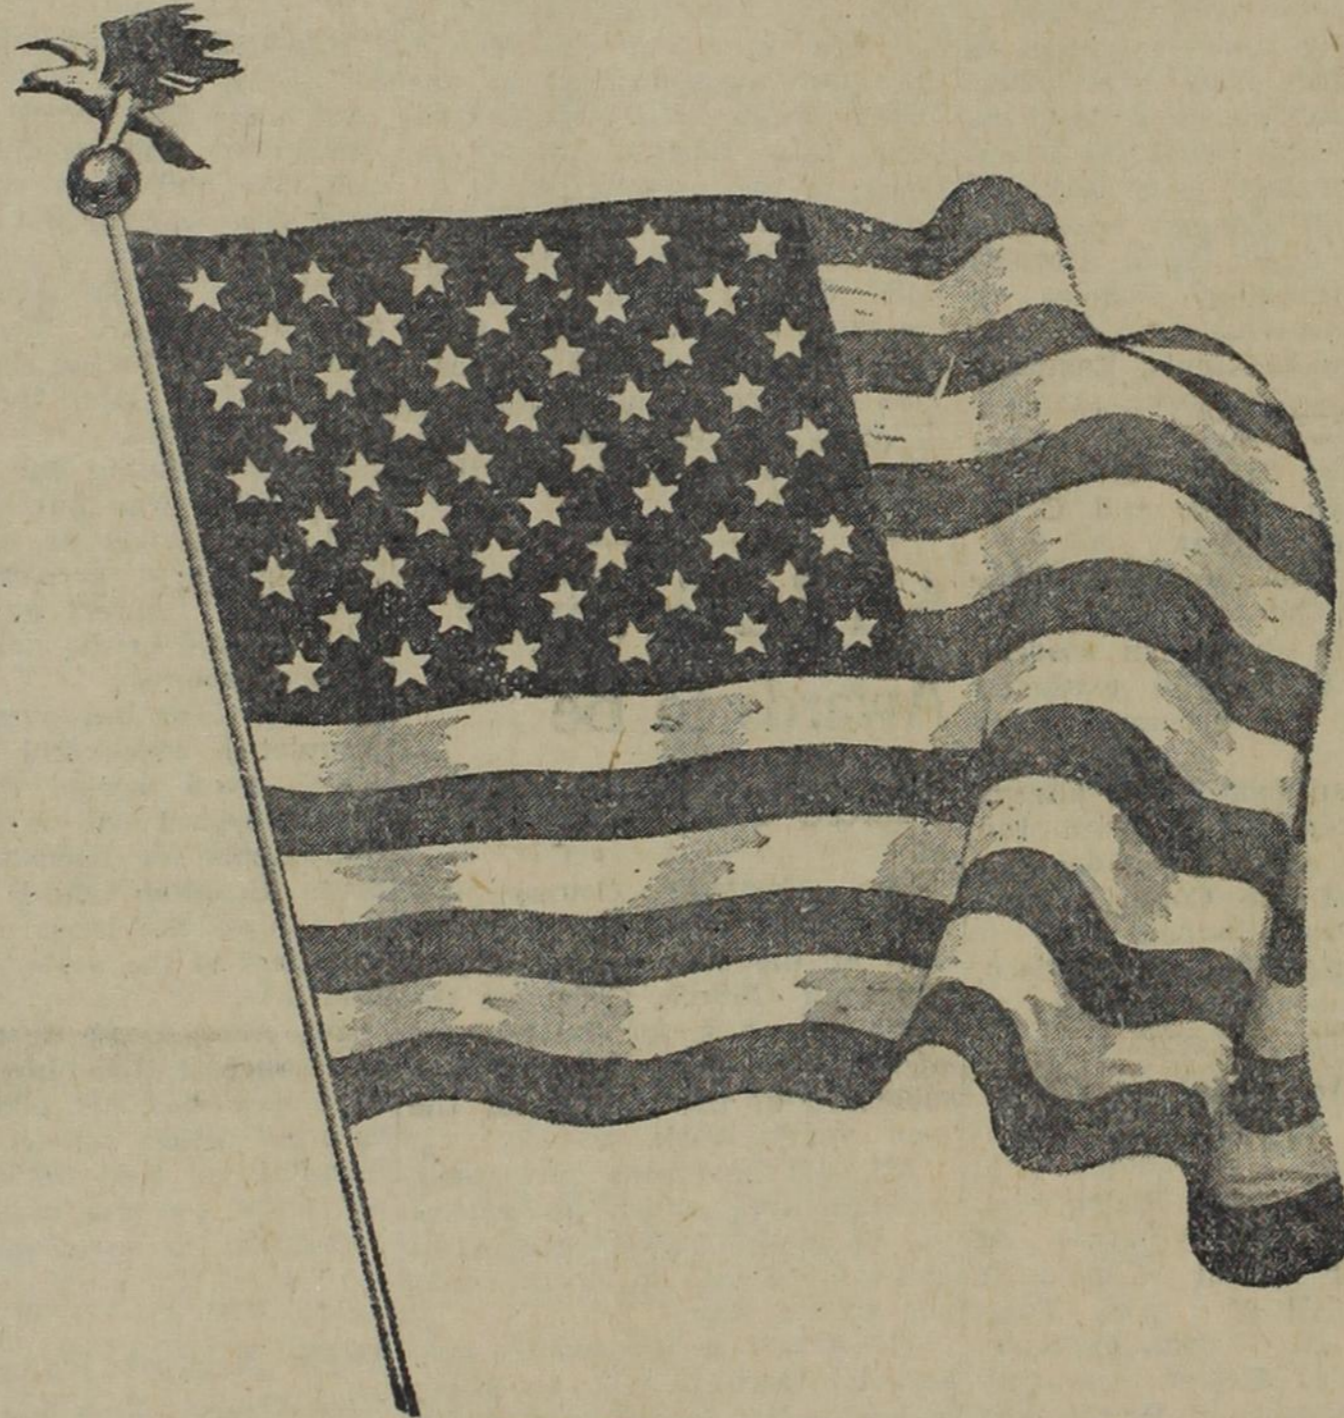

Seven food items will be especially plentiful all month. These are cranberries, broilers, turkeys, onions, dates, peanuts and peanut producers, and vegetable fats and oils.

BUY BETTER-THAN-EVER U.S. SAVINGS BONDS

A new 50-star flag now flies over the capitol of 50 states—symbol of a new America that's bigger and stronger than ever before. And there's a better-than-ever U.S. Savings Bond, too, to help keep our new America strong.

U.S. Savings Bonds are now better in two ways:

1. They mature 14 months faster than before. In E Bonds $18.75 now becomes $25 in just 7 years, 9 months.
2. They continue to earn interest after maturity. If you hold your bonds for 17 years, 9 months, you get $1.93 back for $1 you put in.

Other advantages of U.S. Savings Bonds

- You can save automatically with the Payroll Savings Plan.
- You invest without risk under a U.S. Government guarantee.
- Your money can't be lost or stolen.
- You can get your money, with interest, anytime you want it.

ABOUT YOUR HEALTH

A stupendous total of 45 million individual Texas-grown oysters were sold on the retail market last year. More than 90 percent of them passed through plants on which the Texas State Department of Health had put its stamp of approval covering plant sanitation.

Take a look at the calendar. There's an "R" in every month between now and April, and you know what that's supposed to mean. It's the oyster season again. More millions of the succulent shellfish are destined for harvest in the next six months from the many reefs in inland bay waters of Texas.

Last year's harvest was put up in 154,000 one-gallon cans, with about 300 medium sized oysters per can. A very high percentage of them were consumed right here at home.

Since oysters are often eaten raw, it stands to reason they would be capable of carrying disease. In the past they did, of course, but today to nowhere near the extent they would if it were not for a little-known program of plant certification and water pollution investigations conducted by the Texas State Department of Health.

The certification program was started back in 1937. It is voluntary, in that there is no law compelling plant operators to seek certification. But in order to sell their oysters in cities which have local shellfish ordinances, plants must be certified by the state health agency. Most major Texas cities have such ordinances.

Certificates of approval are renewable each year. Plants first undergo a rigid inspection by a sharp-eyed sanitation specialist, and rechecks are made monthly thereafter.

The Department approved operations in 42 plants last year, and 30 plants have earned certification to date during the current season.

Open season on oyster harvest in public waters is set by the Game and Fish Commission, generally running from September through April with local variations. But anyone can lease a plot of bay bottom from the State, establish an oyster farm and harvest the year 'round—the only proviso being that oysters will grow.

Incidentally, State Health Department shellfish experts say there's nothing to this "R" month business. It's just that oysters grow fatter in winter, and all winter months have R's. (A weekly feature of the Public Health Education Division, Texas State Department of Health.)

Sportscaster

KERN TIPS

Humble Co. Will Broadcast High School Play-Offs

When football fans all over Texas tune in to the broadcasts of the AAAA and AAA quarter-final high school football games next week end (Dec. 3) they'll probably recognize the announcers.

One will be Kern Tips, one of the nation's top sportscasters, reporting the action in his own inimitable style.

Listeners will no doubt be familiar with the voices of some of the other announcers, too—Alec Chesser of Houston, Ves Box and Eddie Barker of Dallas, Bob Walker of Baytown, John Phelan of El Paso, and Jack Dale of Lubbock.

All of these sportscasters, well-known for their broadcasts of Southwest Conference games, are members of the Humble Company's football announcing staff. And this year Humble has purchased exclusive rights for the play-offs of the two top high school leagues from the quarter finals through the finals.

The final AAAA game will be telecast live over a regional network of TV stations with Kern Tips and Alec Chesser describing the action and color.

This is the first year that Humble has ventured into the hot Texas high school circuit to sponsor broadcasts and telecasts. Although definite arrangements cannot be made until the playing teams are all selected, Humble plans to beam the broadcasts into many areas of Texas.

The high school broadcasts and telecasts will be given the same care and preparation that the Southwest Conference games receive each season.

As Texas football fans know, Humble is no newcomer to the football broadcasting. Just this season the oil company has used more than 225 radio and TV stations in Texas to bring college football to fans all over the state.

So, high school football fans can be assured—that if they cannot get to the play-off games—Humble will bring the games to them.

Poultry and Egg Business Competitive

COLLEGE STATION. — The day when the poultry and egg producer invested more labor than money in his operation is history. Today, one man can produce over 50,000 dozens of eggs or 400,000 pounds of broilers annually.

National Peanut Market Quota to Be 970,000 Tons

Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson recently announced a national marketing quota of 970,000 tons and a national allotment of 1,610,000 acres for picking and threshing for the 1961 crop of peanuts.

Both the marketing quota and national acreage allotments for the 1961 crop are at the levels required by law. Growers approved quotas for the 1960, 1961, and 1962 crops of peanuts in a referendum held Dec. 15, 1959.

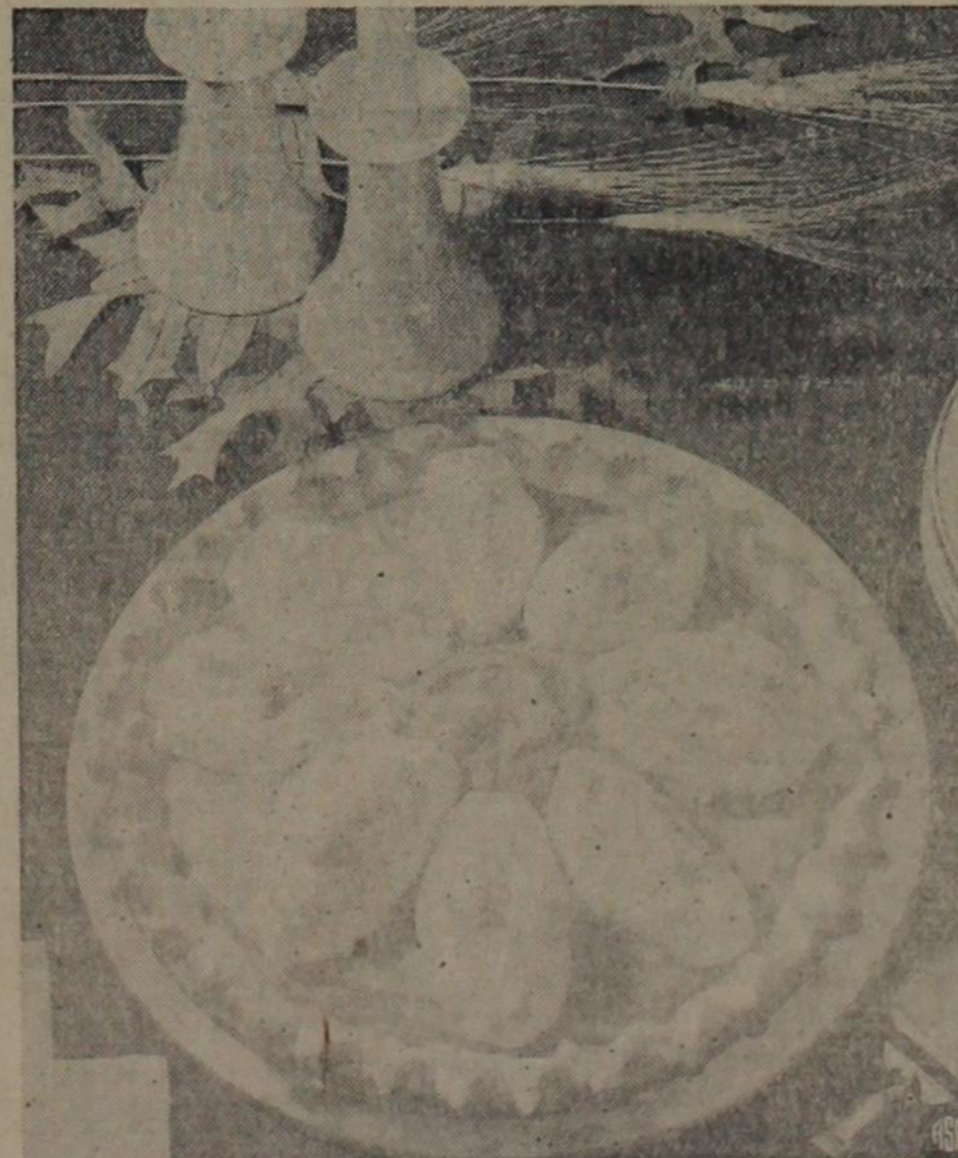

Legislation provides that the marketing quota must be equal to the average quantity of peanuts harvested for nuts during the five years immediately preceding the year in which the quota is proclaimed, adjusted for current trends and prospective demand conditions. However, the quota must be sufficient to provide a national acreage allotment of at least 1,610,000 acres.

In determining the marketing quota for the 1961 crop of peanuts, a "normal" yield of 1,205 pounds per acre was used. This yield, multiplied by 1,610,000 acres — the minimum national acreage allotment — results in the 1961 national peanut marketing quota of 970,000 tons.

No-Cook Pumpkin Pie Filling

As Fall and Winter days approach, thoughts turn to foods associated with harvest and holiday time. Among these foods, much loved pumpkin pie is high on the list. This modern pie filling is ready in a matter of seconds if sweetened condensed milk is used, according to the Borden Kitchen. Just combine the ingredients, and pop into a cooled pastry shell and chill.

Spicy No-Cook Pumpkin Pie Filling (Makes filling for one 9-inch pie)

- 1 (9-inch) baked pastry shell
- 1 (15-oz.) can Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk
- 1/2 cup lemon juice
- 1 (1 lb.—13 oz.) can pumpkin
- 3 1/2 cups cooked and strained pumpkin
- 3 1/2 teaspoons pumpkin pie spice
- 1/2 teaspoon salt

Combine sweetened condensed milk and lemon juice; stir until mixture thickens. Stir in pumpkin, spice and salt. Lightly chill pie shell. Chill in refrigerator until filling is cold.
