Silver Legislation Not To Be Considered By Congress

News Behind The News THE NATIONAL Whirligig

Written by a group of the best informed newspapermen of Washington and New York. Opinions expressed are those of the writers and should not be interpreted as reflecting the editorial policy of this newspaper.

WASHINGTON By George Durno

Stentless

Budget Director Lewis Williams Douglas has made himself known as a first class Treasury watchdog in the last year. But his foot slipped on one little count.

Since last May and up to a couple of weeks ago U. S. Secret Service men have protected the three Douglas children. The youngsters were escorted to and from school daily and an operative slept in the Douglas home.

Presumably the Budget chief feared kidnaping. He is quite wealthy. If he's received threats he's kept the news to himself.

But the law is specific concerning the duties of a Secret Service man. He is charged with detection of counterfeiting, the forging of government checks and documents and the protection of the lives of only the President and his family. All other forms of undercover work are lodged with the investigation bureaus of various federal departments.

The Secret Service is under the Treasury—which also houses the Budget Bureau. Seemingly it was a stunt for a distressed father to turn to the sleuthing agency in his own department when he felt his family needed protection.

It would have been a bold Secret Service chief who pulled the law on Douglas. After all S. S. appropriations must be approved by the Budget Bureau just like those for any other branch of the government!

Wirt

Dr. Wirt's disclosures regarding that Virginia plot to overthrow the existing social order failed to register with the Washington newspaper corps—with a very few exceptions.

One reason may be that the news men recall a certain public document that would have given the Gaty educator a much more important person on whom to hang his "social revolution" than any he named. The document is President Roosevelt's annual message to Congress, read to both houses on the third of last January. In it the President said:

"Now that we are definitely in the process of recovery, lines have been rightly drawn between those to whom this recovery means a return to old methods—and the number of these people is small—and those for whom recovery means a reform of many old methods, a permanent readjustment of many of our ways of thinking and therefore of many of our social and economic arrangements."

Politics

What chiefly interests the reporters are the political implications in the case of Wirt vs. Tugwell et al.

Six Persons Die In Bus-Truck Crash

Collision In Ohio Early Sunday Proves Fatal To Six

ELYRIA, Ohio, (AP)—A special session of the Lorain county grand jury will convene Thursday to investigate the truck-bus crash which resulted in the death of six persons here early Sunday. Prosecutor Frank E. Stevens announced Monday.

Charges of manslaughter have been preferred against William Daniels, bus driver, and Andrew Schaffer, truck driver. The crumpled chassis of a night bus told the tragic story of a highway crash in which six men died. A woman is probably fatally injured and fourteen others less injured.

ELYRIA, O. (AP)—Six persons were injured fatally, a seventh critically hurt, and 14 others received less serious injuries when a Chicago-bound passenger bus and an eastbound truck crashed head-on early Sunday near here.

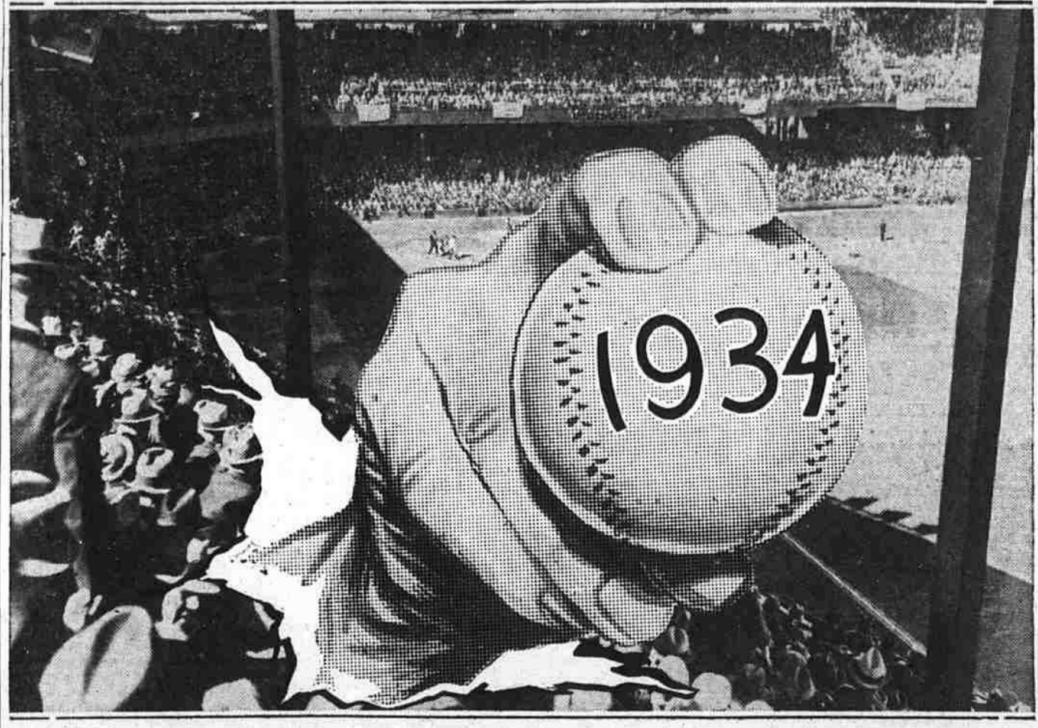

The dead: John Serbon, 35, Holiday Cove, W. Va. Earl Kellogg, 35, Lansing, Mich. Sam Novak, Duquesne, Pa. Floyd Stainaker, Akron, O. Christo Vasilovich, 40, Massillon, O.

Michael Frydrych, 29, New York. At Elyria Memorial hospital it was reported Mrs. Marie Kaser, Huntington Park, Ind., was in a critical condition. She suffered a fracture of the skull and other injuries, undetermined.

Identification Tag Returned

GRISWOLD, Iowa (UP)—In the summer of 1918, just before he went overseas as a member of the A. E. F., Malcolm Reynolds, oil station attendant, lost the identification tag from his wrist while changing a tire. Fifteen years and two months later, in the autumn of 1933, a friend found the tag and returned it to Reynolds. The friend found the tag about a mile and a half from the spot where it was originally lost.

Police Look For Murderer In Louisiana

Girl's Body Found Near Shreveport In Thickly Wooded Area

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP)—A murderer who tortured his 16-year-old victim before her death was the object of a north Louisiana hunt Monday after discovery of the body of Mae Griffin in a thickly wooded area on the western outskirts of Shreveport near Cross Lake, the city's water supply.

Two negroes wandering in the woods found the girl's body, covered with leaves and rotted wood, which the slayer apparently had attempted to set afire to destroy the evidence of his crime.

Officers had a detailed description of the man with whom the girl left home last Thursday. He had hired the young woman, who was to be married soon, as a maid, but the address he gave as his home proved fictitious when the girl's mother, Mrs. L. B. Peters, became alarmed a few minutes after she allowed the girl to leave with the 50-year-old man.

Police were immediately notified but they found no trace of the girl or man.

Karl Dane Kills Self

Former Movie Comedian Takes Own Life In Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, (AP)—The body of Karl Dane, 47, one of the silent screen's outstanding comedians, who found refuge from bitter disappointment in suicide, lay in the county morgue Sunday, unclaimed.

The actor, who skyrocketed to fame in "The Big Parade" and later was starred, shot himself to death in a modest apartment last night. He was penniless at his death and had been living off the bounty of friends although his salary at one time was reported to have been $1500 weekly.

The coroner, announcing no inquest would be held, said the body would be released to a private undertaker as soon as anyone came forward to claim it.

Miss Frances Leake, who, with the manager of the apartment house, discovered the body of the actor when they forced their way into the apartment after failing to get an answer, disclosed the struggle Dane had made for a bare existence.

Dane lapsed into obscurity with passing of the silent picture. His voice was unsuitable for talking pictures, producers said. For while the actor returned to his former profession of automobile mechanic, and later operated a hamburger stand.

Miss Leake said Dane had brooded over his failure to obtain work in the films. She said she had aided him financially.

Dane apparently had spent his last hours in re-living the days when he was one of Hollywood's best known actors, and his services were in demand by the major studios. On a table near where the body was found lay his huge scrap book, containing photographs, press notices and contracts.

Dane was born in Copenhagen, Denmark. He entered the United States as Rasmus Karl Thekelsen Gottlieb. He changed his name to Karl Dane when he applied for citizenship.

Dr. Tugwell: One-Man Target For Critics

By STEPHEN McDONOUGH
WASHINGTON, (AP)—A little bewildered at "red revolutionist" charges crackling around his prematurely graying head, Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell, the man who has been called "too good looking to get any sympathy," goes quietly about his business as assistant secretary of agriculture.

A mass of detail and routine has fallen upon his shoulders while Secretary Wallace has been drawn deeper and deeper into that inner circle of cabinet members shaping the basic program of the Roosevelt administration.

Those who know him best say this 42-year-old doctor of philosophy who writes learnedly on economics, history, literature and sociology is amused at the stir being made over him.

Frequently a project arousing the wrath of anti-administration leaders is labelled a "Tugwell brain wave," scoffed at for its "pretty language" and set down as a crack at the constitution.

Acc Brain Trustee
Tugwell, known as Mr. Roosevelt's ace "brain trustee," has written several books and doctrines expressed in them sometimes get him in bad with the conservatives on Capitol Hill and elsewhere.

His "The Industrial Discipline," written long before he met Franklin D. Roosevelt, has been the fuel for hours of political oratory on behalf of the constitution, yet Tugwell insists his ideas are not original or revolutionary and points out that many date back to the economic philosophies of ancient Greece.

Doctor TUGWELL

alist. His outstanding characteristic is a deep love of the open country.

Farm-born, but no horny-handed son of toil, the professor likes to roam through his father's apple orchard in Niagara county, New York or stroll over the lawns of his own home on the shores of Lake Ontario.

Shuns Controversies
Tugwell has kept his own counsel and refused to be drawn into controversies.

He feels that much said about his philosophies not only is incorrect but also unfair. He resents inferences that he has a leaning toward Russia. He admits being a liberal, if a liberal is one who is dissatisfied with things as he finds them, but never a scheming revolutionist.

"Liberals," he says, would like to rebuild the station but keep the trains running. Radicals prefer to blow up the station and forego service until the new structure is ready."

The professor frankly favors disciplining the few for the good of the many.

Built A House
Congressional opponents of his pure food and drugs bill made caustic use of his youthful appearance and his title when they quizzed him during committee hearings.

The implication was lost on the man who built a house for himself with his own hands, who wrote a monograph on Thomas Hardy and who said when he came back from overseas military service that the whole thing made him sick in body and soul.

Speaker Stevenson Gives Brief Outlining Law Governing Ouster Of R. L. Holliday As Official

BY RAYMOND BROOKS
AUSTIN—Speaker Coke Stevenson made a 100-page brief of the law governing removal of officials before his summary ouster of Robert L. Holliday of El Paso from the relief commission, and his substitute appointment of Col. Julius Dorenfield Jr.

Mr. Stevenson satisfied himself of his legal authority to remove the official he had appointed. He said he would not contend that it is certain that supreme court will agree with his conclusion. "But," he said, "even if it doesn't, at any rate I will have convinced the 4,000 El Paso people who petitioned it, that I have done my utmost to comply with the expressed will of an overwhelming majority of a citizenship."

The relief commission law gave Stevenson three appointments, Lieut. Gov. Edgar M. Witt three, and Governor Ferguson one. It designated two officials—the persons holding office as chairman of the industrial accident board and chairman of the Texas Civil Council.

It said nothing about removals, leaving that to the elaborate and conflicting general law.

And it was the general law that Stevenson so volitionally briefed. The latest decision was back 33 years ago, in a court case in 1901. It wasn't in point, because it dealt with the governor's removal. Mr. Stevenson recognized the policy of holding appointments in the legislative officials was designed to keep them out of the governor's hands; and to that extent, the construction of the law can be by implication only.

In the relief law's enactment, an amendment was offered to give the appointing official the power to remove an appointee. This was defeated. The defeat will be cited in the quo warranto proceedings over Holliday as evidence of "legislative intent" to withhold such power.

The power claimed is by implication from the general statute giving the governor authority to remove any appointed official or that "elected by the legislature" is hang-over language from the time United States senators were named; and only by chance fit the situation of H. N. Christman and Earle P. Adams on the relief commission—the two designated by the legislature by title, Mr. Stevenson said if his power to remove Holliday is upheld, it means Christman and Adams. But in his own case, he had power to make a new appointment; while if Adams or Christman were removed, the places would remain vacant until new holders succeeded to the titles.

"It is a uniform construction," Speaker Stevenson said, "that the power to remove... That is embodied in the grant of authority to the governor. The law having been passed when the appointments uniformly were left to the governor."

The brief recited Former Governor Pat M. Neff's efforts to secure passage of a quo warranto law for the removal of county or district officials, such as district attorneys. The removal law came near getting a court test more recently than 1901, when Gov. Dan Moody made preliminary gestures toward removal of a Ferguson appointee from the state board of control. Moody went so far along toward this that Adrian Pool of El Paso was appointed to the board of control at the middle of Moody's second term, and Rep. John F. Wallace retired from the legislature, when chairman of the appropriations committee, to come to Austin a year early to take a place on the board of control. Mr. Wallace waited until the appointment was to be made regularly at the middle of Governor Sterling's term. Moody's decision was based in part on conflict between special provisions in the board of control statute and in the general law. The board of control law says the governor may remove any member, at any time. But it finally was decided this was only cumulative of the general code, and meant removal "for cause," through court procedure. Had the ouster been attempted, it would have gone to supreme court then. Governor Ferguson never tried to invoke that power, as to the control board.

In several instances—two governors, at least, asking prison commissioners to resign—state officials have refused to quit office when asked to by governors, and have generally invited the governors to "see what you can do about it."

SOLDIERS' REVENGE

Any man who served in the A.E.F. during the World War will be interested to learn of the charges which have been placed against an army medical officer in the Canal Zone, whose court martial is pending.

This officer, it is alleged, had a castor oil complex. A soldier who came in with an injured foot got a big dose of castor oil and was sent back to duty; so did another who came down with appendicitis.

As a result, charges of malpractice have been filed and the officer must appear in an army court.

The doughboys had a saying in the A.E.F. that the army pharmacopoeia contained but two nostrums—castor oil and iodine. You either got dosed with one or swished down with the other, no matter what ailed you.

This, of course, was unjust to a capable and overworked medical staff. But it was an army tradition, just the same—and this Canal one case will stir memories of it in the minds of a lot of ex-soldiers.

JOB FOR YOUTH

Some way must be found to furnish jobs for some 6,000,000 young men and women in the United States, if they are not to drift into chronic malcontent which would make them bad citizens.

This is the theme issued by the New York Commission on Mental Hygiene, which finds in extended joblessness a grave menace to the mental balance of young people.

Young people who want to work and cannot, the committee asserts, tend to discover in themselves "a growing sense of guilt, discouragement, and even chronic malcontent"; and once this feeling has taken root, it is very difficult for them to adjust themselves to the society in which they live.

Stating a problem, of course, is vastly easier than finding a remedy. That the depression has put a great strain on young people is undeniable. Finding jobs for all of them, however, is a thing that can't be done overnight.

Nevertheless, the warning of this committee is a thing well worth keeping in mind.

SPORT LINES

By Tom Beasley

New York at Philadelphia. Boston at Washington (today). Washington at Boston.

Facing the most wide-open fight major league baseball has known during the past decade, American and National circuit clubs today were ready for the 1934 season.

In average seasons, two or three teams at the most, can be given anything like sound chances to win the pennant in each league. This year, however, no fewer than four clubs in the National and as many in the American, would appear to stand almost equal chances of victory.

It would take a keen analyst, indeed, to clearly establish the balance of power between the four top teams in the National—the New York Giants, the St. Louis Cards, the Pittsburgh Pirates and the Chicago Cubs.

The Giants are slight favorites with the experts, but only because they are the world champions, and sports oldest maxim calls for riding with a champion till he falls.

Word has reached us that a Caddy Master will be appointed at the Country Club. The move was made necessary to cut down favoritism shown some golfers by the caddies.

Women golfers of Big Spring and San Angelo will vie here Thursday. The Angelo women were scheduled to have been here last week, but failed to arrive. The local association now totals about eighteen members.

The Country Club house is being renovated for the West Texas golf tournament.

Frank Rose, who hurled a Big Spring team to victory over McConney last July 4th, has dropped anchor with the Midland Colts that year, entrants in the Permian Basin.

"Spike" Henninger, skipper of the Cosden Oilers, is in Breckenridge for an operation. He suffered a fractured shoulder several weeks ago in "run-in" with a tractor.

In case you are skeptical about Big Spring having many golfers, just drive by the Country Club and the Municipal courses some afternoon, Sundays especially.

Millard Cope, Sweetwater newspaper man, gave Big Spring a rub about its track team in a telephone conversation Saturday night. "We didn't do so hot," Cope admitted, "but we bested the Steers."

The only thing the highly self-touted Mustang team had to beat was little George Neel—Big Spring's one-man track team. For weeks Henninger has devoted his time to building a winning track and field combination, only to end up near the bottom. Snyder won the events all right, but only after shaving a hile by one-third of a point. The Eagles should have asked for a re-tabulation of points or a toss-up or amputin'.

Here's the schedule of major league opening games for Tuesday, April 17:
NATIONAL LEAGUE
Boston at Brooklyn
Philadelphia at New York
Pittsburgh at St. Louis
Chicago at Cincinnati
AMERICAN LEAGUE
St. Louis at Cleveland
Detroit at Chicago

Dr. J. Stuart Pearce, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of which Mr. Johnson was a member officiated. Wippen Funeral home was in charge of burial arrangements.

Mr. Johnson died at 7 p. m. Friday while he sat in the kitchen at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ollie Williams, whom he was visiting. He and Mrs. Williams were talking. Suddenly her father's head dropped upon his breast. Before medical aid could be summoned he was dead.

The body was brought to Cisco Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Pall bearers for the services Saturday were Jonah Donovan, Homer McDonald, L. A. Harrison, Frank Kitzell and Dr. F. M. Oldham.

Came Here in 1881
Mr. Johnson came to Cisco with his parents in 1881 while the community was a city of tents. His father, T. E. Johnson, helped survey the townsite. He was born April 6, 1878, in Bosque county.

For a number of years here he was engaged in the furniture business with R. A. St. John and H. G. Eppler. Later he was a building contractor. He was twice married, first on November 25, 1903, to Miss Martha Eppler who died in 1914, and again in 1917 to Miss Nancy Schlapfer, who survives him. "I SELL THEM GASOLINE BUT THEY SOLD ME Plymouth!"

A CERTIFIED INTERVIEW WITH VERNON F. KRAUSE OF CHICAGO, ILL.

"Talking with Drivers of 'All Three' Convinced me that Plymouth gives the Most for your Money"

WHEN VERNON KRAUSE decided to buy a new car, he didn't have to take any time off to "look at All Three." He stayed right where he was... in his service station... and the cars came to him.

"I just stayed right here," Krause says, "keeping my eyes open and listening to owners compare notes."

Plymouth won their vote in the low-price field... hands down. But there wasn't just one reason. There were all kinds of reasons.

Some of his customers said how pleased they were with Hydraulic Brakes. Others boasted of having Safety-Steel Bodies. Many of them mentioned the extra comfort they got from Floating Power engine mountings and Individual Wheel Springing.

"It all added up to the fact that Plymouth gave the most for the money," says Krause.

"The most for your money." Isn't that exactly what you want in a new car? Then Plymouth is the car for you. It's the only low-priced car with all four of the vital features you need.

Any Dodge, De Soto or Chrysler dealer demonstrates Plymouth.

1. "I wanted a new low-priced car, but I wanted to be sure I got the best. So I decided to let my customers tell me how they liked 'All three.'"

2. "I found that Plymouth owners got more out of the gasoline I sold them. Plymouth drivers all agreed their cars were easy on their pocketbooks."

3. "I liked Plymouth's looks. But my customers showed me they were a lot more to Plymouth than that. They pointed out other features—like Individual Wheel Springing and Hydraulic Brakes."

4. Mr. Krause with his DeLuxe Plymouth Sedan. Price from $530 at the factory, subject to change without notice. Duplicate Safety Plate Glass at low extra cost. Time payments on the Chrysler Motors C. C. Co. Plan.

What the Well-Dressed Man Used to Wear When Out Walking a Tight Rope in 1891

The shirtwaist with the leg o' mutton sleeve was no handicap to daring lady cyclists of 1900. She'd even ride with one hand if a greeting was due someone. And hats! You just know they wear them.

People held their breaths on July 17, 1891, when Captain Dixon dared death by walking a tight rope across the Whirlpool Rapids at Niagara Falls. Note the captain's natty costume, including the Civil War forage cap—what the well-dressed man should wear when out tight-rope walking.

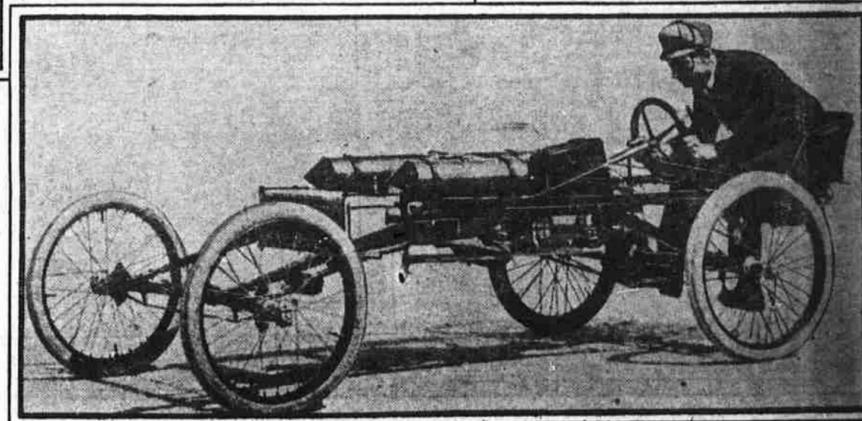

"I don't care! I don't care!" Said Eva Tanguay at the turn of the century, and a nation echoed her. Evidently Eva didn't care how tight her costumes were, nor how many ostrich feathers she trailed behind her.

Atlantans allowed that the 14-year-old boy at the left in this picture was going to cut quite a figure in golf some day, when he and his partner, Perry Adair, 18, beat Chick Evans and Ned Sawyer in a match at Atlanta. But even local pride didn't make due allowance for the fact that he was Bobby Jones.

This determined-looking little old lady was a terror in her day. Fierce-mustached bartenders quailed when she came smashing into their saloons with a hatchet. By the time the speakeasy had replaced the saloon, Caggle was too old to get an ex-

SOMETHING NEW IN SWIM SUITS

CHAPTER 21 NORMAN'S DEMAND

"Judith, I think you forget my firm represents the Bevins."

"Forget it," Judith's laugh was hysterical. "I'd like . . . oh, how I'd like to. But with Lampere treating me like an unmentionable and you dancing attendance on those two women like a legal pig!"

"You've gone far enough Judith. I hadn't meant to make this Bevins fortune an issue between us, but you're forcing me to it. They warned me you would. I'm beginning to believe they know you better than I do."

"I'm leaving for Galveston again. I'll have to fly back to make court. I had hoped to take you with me, but under the circumstances I think you'd better stay and think things over. Talking only brings on trouble."

"This Bevins affair will blow over and then you and I can settle back into our normal way of living."

"Norman," Judith sat up in bed, alert. "what do you mean, the Bevins affair will blow over?"

"You'll see."

Judith sensed that he knew something more than he was admitting. "But suppose it doesn't?" she countered.

"It will."

Judith jumped out of bed, showered and dressed while Delphy prepared a tray for them. Under the stinging flay of water, Judith professed she would take Cila's advice and wait until Norman had had his coffee, before, as Cila, would say, "starting anything."

She did wait. With breakfast over and Norman glancing at his watch, she spoke.

"Norman, I want you to tell me now, what you meant by saying the Bevins affair would blow over."

"I . . . I can't."

"Alright, then tell me this. If it doesn't blow over, what will be your attitude?"

Norman glanced at her, dark eyes unrelenting, lips in a thin, stern line. "I shall have to ask you whether you will give up the Bevins money, or me."

Prepared as she was, Judith couldn't repress a start as he said this. There was no comfort in the knowledge that the man who spoke was some grim-visaged stranger whom she'd never before seen. Nor did it comfort Judith any to know she had behaved like a fish wife, using Mathile as an issue while she was only a "barb in the flesh."

"Norman," her eyes begged for understanding, though her voice was cool. "I want to apologize for what I said about you and Mathile. I was jealous and hurt. Slim Sanford flew me down so I could be there in time for dinner with you, then I found you were all ready through and she was with you.

"I truly believe it happened as you say it did, only that's it . . . the trawler . . . we don't think alike. You thought more of acting the gentleman than you did of how your public meeting with Mathile would hurt me. The realization that she probably planned the whole thing doesn't make me any the less bitter."

"You mean she conspired with my mother?" he began heatedly.

"No indeed," said Judith. "Your mother is, above all, sporting. She wouldn't play that way. She was probably so intent upon her tournament she wasn't aware that you and Teel were two of the three principals in the Bevins case."

A rare smile crossed Norman's face. "I'm glad you see that," he said, "she really likes you a lot, Jude."

He looked at his watch. "I wish I didn't have to go, but then," his face had brightened, "by the time I get back we can start fresh and Mathile won't have any further call on me."

"Norm," Judith stepped close, "I'm leaving too, I'm making a trip to the dam, leaving this evening."

"Judy . . . Judy you can't do that, I tell you. Not now, not at this time."

"But it's a good time to go, Norman, you'll be away—"

His arms were holding her tight, a desperate tenacity in them—"Judith, remember the night I said that all one needed to make a perfect marriage was enough love? Haven't you enough love to give this up for me?"

"And, Normy, I asked you: how much was enough? Have you enough to go against your principles for me?"

"Judith," he pointed out of the window to where an ink-black cloud was sweeping down from the north. "I have to go, there's a storm coming in and I can't be late for court. Now dear, try to be sensible. You're all wrought up over things, go on back to bed, have a good rest then wake up and read or go to a show."

"Norman, you don't understand. I'm leaving for the dam tonight, I must."

"I see," his arms dropped away from her. He put on a light overcoat, picked up his brief case and his hat. "It's up to you Judy. Take your choice. If you think more of your childish belief that no one else can build a dam, than you do of me . . . all right. Goodbye." He kissed her lightly and left.

Judith raced to the window. She couldn't bear to have him go like this . . . suppose the storm overtook him, his car skidded on the wet pavement and he'd never know how much she loved him . . . she wouldn't go to the dam. Big Tom had asked more than was humanly possible for any woman to give . . . she would stay and help him carry on.

Lightning flashed across the sky, thunder rumbled and darkness closed down. Judith tried to follow in her imagination the race banks and the heart broken resignation of the men who had built them.

Even if Norman were right and she wasn't necessary for the safe erection of Diablo dam, had she the right to leave it to chance?

The shrilling of the telephone caused her to hurry to the instrument. Neither Lige nor Delphy would touch anything electrical during a storm.

"This is Mrs. Dale speaking," she said. "Oh yes, Judge Morgan . . . oh . . . oh!" She sat down suddenly. "yes I'll be down right away, thank you for calling."

She hung the receiver back on its hook, carefully, replaced the telephone and looked out on the rain washed terrace. Morton Lampere had been granted an injunction against her use of the Bevins money until he could contest Tom Bevins' will, and a decision had been handed down.

She had expected it. Her shock came from the realization that Norman had known it and left her to face it without warning her. At least it made her decision more easily reached. She went to her room, dressed and finding the storm quieting, called Lige to bring around the small trunk they had bought in preference to a car for her.

He drove her to the end of the nearest street car line and by the time she reached Judge Morgan's office, she had outlined the path she would follow.

One of Mrs. Nathalie Bevins' first actions after finding she owned the Bevins building, had been to ask newly organized Bevins Construction company to move. Big Tom, owning the building, had never considered a lease necessary and regardless of Judge Morgan's intervention, she was able to demand their eviction.

It was one of the innumerable litigiousness such as Big Tom had had to contend against throughout his married life. He did contend with them, Judith remembered with a thrill, and somehow they had cost him nothing more serious than worry.

But Judith knew that the worry had had its part in wearing down the engineer; now his own company was driven from his own building. Judith had not waited for the end of their time of tenure. Afraid of the having company papers inspected, during their absence, she had moved to temporary quarters in an office adjoining Judge Morgan's.

Upon reaching there she found the judge in consultation with Justin Cunard—"You mustn't worry over this, Mrs. Dale," he hastened to say when he caught sight of her face.

"I'm not," she assured him. "I expected it."

The two men exchanged quick glances of understanding. "As for money," said Cunard "remember I have a couple of producing oil wells at Longview and I can turn them over to the Rio Diablo project at any time . . . the proceeds, I mean."

"Thank you," said Judith, then with sudden thought, "are they going to allow me to go on with the building?"

bar of new faces are going to be seen in high government posts. Quite a few men have been wanting to step out of federal jobs and get back to their own businesses but have felt they should be subject to call so long as Congress was here and might want information.

Notes— The silver and farm blocs have shaped the silver inflation bill till it's horse-high, bull-proof and hog-tight against anything but the biggest stick Roosevelt got. . . . Since the House removed the ban on political influence Congressmen have swamped the Home Owners' Loan Corporation with thousands of demands for jobs. . . . Cuba's investigation of the Chase bank loan will have Washington angles and State Department officials who helped put over the deal are worried.

LaGuardia— Day by day Mayor LaGuardia is getting in Dutch with the Republicans. He's persistently hounded the party legislators in his Albany visits. Republican patronage in the city is next and two or three candidates for important city jobs have been turned down for no reason than that they are Republicans. LaGuardia's chances to be a great man by 1936 are fading fast.

Stockholders— A Wall Street genius has doped it out that the government should pay more attention to stockholders and less to wage earners. He

NEW YORK

Shakeup— What a spring cleaning the Stock Exchange gave itself! To be sure President Richard Whitney was named again. After that the nominating committee went berserk and failed to renominate three of the ten members of the governing board whose terms expired this year. They chose new men instead—practically a wholesale turnover.

You might think that at least the new blood would represent the liberal element which protested the Whitney regime so earnestly but ineffectually. Let's look. Of the three new nominees Laurence Marks is ex-manager of Lee, Higginson's bond department (remember Lee, Higginson?) and is reliably reported to retain Morgan connections. Maurice Farrell belongs to a firm commonly characterized as a Morgan house. Roger D. Mellick replaces his partner Jay Carlisle. You can call it a Stock Exchange new deal if you like but Exchange members who wanted a real shake-up call it something quite different.

Reactions—

The fact that the Old Guard remains firmly in the saddle despite liberal opposition has greatly increased sentiment favorable to federal regulation among the rebels. They see it now as the only hope of restoring the Exchange to the public's good graces although they scarcely dare say so openly. Other members fear the renomination of stanspatters will be interpreted in Washington as a gesture of defiance leading to stiffer treatment by President and Congress than if the Exchange had recognized changed conditions by selecting new officers.

The Old Guard proved that it still knows how to run a steamroller. But the ticket won't bring any cheers from the rank and file.

Sop—

It probably wasn't coincidence that the three governors who failed of renomination—the Messrs. Auchincloss, Harris and Carlisle—were all members of the bitterly criticized publicity committee. Disillusioned liberals ironically remark that maybe this was intended as a sop to their ruffled feelings. It didn't sop worth a darn.

Pressure—

Wall Street conservatives have thought up a new form of pressure to help retain the recent softening amendments to the regulation bill and are working overtime on the President's right-wing advisers. Their story runs this way. The President has said he doesn't want inflation. The longer Congress remains in session the more likely that his hand will be forced by the inflation bloc. Therefore it would be bright for the President to put his weight behind the latest revisions and push the bill through without further debate in order to send Congress home as soon as possible.

It's a neat gag if it works. The amendments lately adopted by the Senate committee leave Wall Street much happier than it cares to let on.

Regulation—

New York observers in Washington—and there are plenty these days—report that Congress is thoroughly fed up with all the arguments about regulation and would like to ditch the whole thing but doesn't quite dare. This state of mind makes it clear that the President's wishes will govern, so the pressure boys are turning from Congress to those supposed to have the White House ear.

Contrary to popular impression, quite a few New York wise men are pulling hard for some form of Exchange regulation at this session. They figure it's in Wall Street's self-interest. They fear that failure to pass a bill would encourage the easy money boys to another speculative spree—which would probably bounce back on the brokers in the form of much more drastic legislation at the next session. The informed have little faith in the self-restraint of market professionals with quick profits in sight.

Skill—

Local bankers are more and more impressed with the Treasury's skill in nursing the federal bond market. The gap between bid and asked prices which prevailed three months ago has been quietly closed and there's no longer any fear among the banks that they might have to sell their U. S. obligations at a sacrifice.

Only the "Mellon 3's" remain below par and those by a narrow margin. It still rankles with local bankers that Ogden Mills thought it a swell joke on them when this issue dropped rapidly in price a few weeks after it came out.

A few months ago the government bond market was so uneasy that the banks were wondering how the government was going to raise a nickel in the future. Now they're wondering how the heck they can get as many bonds as they want.

LaGuardia—

Day by day Mayor LaGuardia is getting in Dutch with the Republicans. He's persistently hounded the party legislators in his Albany visits. Republican patronage in the city is next and two or three candidates for important city jobs have been turned down for no reason than that they are Republicans. LaGuardia's chances to be a great man by 1936 are fading fast.

Stockholders—

A Wall Street genius has doped it out that the government should pay more attention to stockholders and less to wage earners. He has figures and everything to prove that large corporations have more than the latter—therefore their purchasing power should be considered first.

For instance the Bell Telephone system has 650,000 stockholders against 270,000 employees. Statistics for General Motors show 250,000 to 187,000. Other companies in the same boat include U. S. Steel, General Electric, Pennsylvania Railroad, Standard Oil of New Jersey and so on through a long list. Natural observers doubt that the President will be impressed.

New Yorkers with Department of Commerce connections report a first class commercial "show boat." It belongs to Japan and is loaded with samples of what Japan has to sell the world. It is carrying its exhibition down the east coast of Asia to the Straits Settlements and Singapore, and are the Britons mad about it! Japanese cotton mills are slated for China, Dutch East Indies and India. (Copyright McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

Texas Regatta June 3

FREESPORT, Texas (UP)—The annual freesport regatta has been re-set for June 3, according to Commodore Charlie Watson of the Freesport Boat Club, who is in charge of the speedboat classic. It originally was announced for May, but postponed due to conflicting dates of other meets. Racers from Florida, St. Louis, Oklahoma and New England have assured that they will compete, Watson said.

Texas League Opens Apr. 17

All Opening Games To Be Day Time Affairs First Time

By Associated Press The annual Texas league pennant marathon is just around the corner. The 1934 inaugural combats will be played Tuesday afternoon. For the first time in two campaigns, all will be day-time openers. Dallas at Tulsa, Fort Worth at Oklahoma City, Galveston at San Antonio, and Houston at Beaumont's backyard is the opening day schedule.

The race again will operate under the Shaughnessy play-off plan which means that the four clubs finishing in the first division will, at the conclusion of the regular season, engage in a round-robin playoff. The eventual winner will be declared champion and will represent J. Alvin Gardner's league in the annual Dixie Series.

"The Day After Tomorrow"

"A Bible and a Newspaper in every home" —said Benjamin Franklin, whose death on April 17, 1790, we remember this week IF YOU asked the founder of a great library system what reading matter you should place in your home, you might expect him to hand you a sizable list of books. But old Ben Franklin, father of the free library system of our country, being a man to put things first, might have looked over the top of his glasses at you, and repeated "a Bible and a newspaper in every home." Franklin himself was Printer and Publisher . . . and an advertising writer. He recognized, as you do, that good advertising is NEWS. Back in 1780, when a ship came to port with a consignment of India shawls and some merchants announced this in the newspaper, you may imagine that that item meant more to the ladies of the day than the usual chronicle of somebody's cow "lost, strayed or stolen." An editor gathers up the news from all corners of the globe, just as a merchant gathers up his stock of goods. Then the story of both is carried in the newspaper. Both mean a great deal to every reader.

San Angelo Invites West Texans To Library Meet

A District Library conference will be held in San Angelo on April 19, Thursday, at the District Court room. The purpose of the meeting is to arouse interest in the establishment, maintenance and extension of libraries in Texas.

Various phases of the work will be presented by the president of the Texas Library Association, State Library organizer and other speakers. Discussions from the floor will center around the problems of the County, School and Municipal Library.

The San Angelo Lions Club has offered its Thursday noon meeting for a joint luncheon with the members of the conference. Visitors will be guests of the Board of City Development at this luncheon.

The Tom Green County Library will be open for inspection at all times during the day and visitors will be cordially received.

Since this is the first year that any effort has been made to create library sentiment in West Texas, it is particularly anxious to have a good attendance. The San Angelo Board of City Development asks that a group of representative citizens from Big Spring visit San Angelo and attend the Library Conference on Thursday, April 19th. The conference will begin promptly at 9 a. m.

Mysterious Smith And Company To Play Ritz Theater Five Days

The development of amusements, or public entertainment is a chapter in world history that is seldom told, yet nothing is more fully characteristic of a nation than the type of amusement for which the people have a passion.

The earliest form of entertainment seems to have been the order of the modern Magic Shows. The wily Hindoo, with his bag of tricks finds mention in many histories. In our own land, Magic did not gain full sway until the arrival of Hermann, The Great. This Master Magician did much to popularize Magic. Others have followed in his wake, reconstructing, elaborating and inventing new illusions until the modern representative of this ancient art has gone far beyond even the Great Hermann's most astounding hopes.

Mysterious Smith, whose company comes to the Ritz for an engagement of five days, starting Tuesday numbers in his repertoire of illusions that would have gladdened the heart of Hermann. They would have been impossible for the Great Master because in his art it would have been possible to create them. The Mysterious Smith show is literally a show of a thousand wonders. Without laying claims to any supernatural powers, Mr. Smith performs seeming miracles before his audience with amazing rapidity.

Probably the most sensational effect achieved by Mysterious Smith is the escape from a sealed casket. Men who have seen him perform this illusion have been moved to explain, like the country fellow when he first saw a camel, "There ain't no such animal." It is almost unbelievable, yet done before your very eyes so that it can not be disputed. Despite Mr. Smith's statement that he performs no miracles, you will almost be inclined to accuse him of falsehood.

The work of Madame Olga, a remarkable Mentalist who assists Mysterious Smith will also leave an indelible impression on your mind. Personal questions of every nature are quickly and correctly answered and many who have followed the Madame's advice have been immeasurably benefitted.

No one should pass judgment upon the Mysterious Smith Show until they have seen it. Every profession has its fakes, frauds and imitators. It is not strange, then, that there should be dishonest Magicians, but it will not take Mr. Smith long to convince the public of this city that he does not belong to that class. He will amuse, entertain, amaze and enthrall you. You've never seen anything quite like the entertainment offered by the Mysterious Smith company.

Mothers And Babies First Slogan For Child Health Day

AUSTIN—"Mothers and Babies First" is the slogan for Child Health Day, which will be held on May first, according to Dr. H. N. Barnett, director, Bureau of Child Hygiene. Texas will join with the other states in the nation-wide celebration. There is a special significance in this year's celebration because children are always among the greatest sufferers in periods of hard times.

Child Health Day is a challenge to all adults to take stock of the health needs of all children, babies as well as those of school age, in their communities. All should be interested in furthering all measures to conserve health and promote happiness of children. An examination by the family physician at this time would not be amiss. He can detect signs of malnutrition, unsound teeth, heart defects, poor vision, poor hearing, and many other defects and can advise the parents of the proper treatment necessary.

Parents should take an inventory of what they are doing for their children, to see if they are neglecting anything that should be done to remove health handicaps.

It is suggested that every community in the State conduct suitable exercises on May Day. Texas has always taken a prominent part in this observance and each year numbers of clinics for babies and pre-school children are held. In this way a community-wide interest is centered on the small child. Teachers, children and members of clubs are enlisted to establish year round activities for the betterment of mothers and babies.

San Jacinto Day To Be Observed April 21

AUSTIN—It is fitting that San Jacinto Day each year should be observed by the Texas State Historical Association, which this year will hold its thirty-eighth annual meeting in Austin, at the University of Texas, on Friday and Saturday, April 20 and 21, according to Mrs. Coral H. Tullis, secretary. The association each year holds parts of its session on April 21, known as San Jacinto Day in celebration of one of Texas' most important historical events, the Battle of San Jacinto, in which this state gained her actual independence from Mexico.

Howard Pair Going On Pump

Oil Rises In Humble Two Settles; Schermerhorn Plugs Back

Two Howard county oil producers in the making prepared to go on the pump as the week closed.

Humble No. 2 Settles, in section 132, block 29, W. & N. W. Ry. Co. survey, had 1700 feet of oil, bottled at 2428 feet Schermerhorn No. 8 Rumsey, Abrams & Fraser, in section 13, block 33, township 2 south, T & P Ry. Co. survey, plugged given early this week. The respective rights of Holliday and Dorendfeld await decision.

In this situation, selection of Miss Marie Dresden for Relief Director was an effective move. She has been recommended to the Texas Relief Commission by high officials of the national relief organization. So long as she is director Washington cannot well object to cooperating with Texas in the ground of dissent and uncertainty in its makeup. Whether the state as a whole will raise the objection some counties have made to having "outsiders" sent to manage their relief is another question. Miss Dresden will have the year's necessary voting residence in Texas in August.

Under The Dome At Austin

By GORDON K. SHEARER

AUSTIN (UP)—State Ranger headquarters lack a liaison officer. Despite the Rangers' reputation for fearlessness and effectiveness, seldom do they learn of a bank robbery or a hijacking until informed by the newspapers or press associations.

Whether due to jealousy, forgetfulness or other causes, sheriffs notoriously neglect to call the Rangers when they notify other officers of such things.

Chief L. G. Phares of the State Highway Patrol has installed mechanical equipment in his office which keeps him in direct contact with police reports in the patrol's search for the slayers of patrolmen at Grapevine. Ranger headquarters lack such equipment.

For fingerprints, the Rangers must rely on the state penitentiary or Austin police headquarters.

Headquarters here deny knowledge of the reported equipment of a Ranger automobile for pursuing bandits. It was reported to have been armored and to have bullet proof glass.

M. N. Chrestman, Dallas, and Earle P. Adams, Crockett, appear to be the only members of the State Relief Commission, beside the Governor, who are sure of retaining the jobs. The relief act specified that the chairman of the State Judicial Council and the chairman of the State Industrial Accident Board should be members of the relief commission. They occupy those places. Ed Hussion, Houston, was appointed by the Governor. E. E. Giesecke, Austin; W. A. Brooks, Jr., Giesecke, Austin; Tyler, were appointed by Lieut. Gov. Edgar E. Witt. Robert L. Holliday, El Paso; Houston Harte, San Angelo and Jack Reid, Junction, were appointed by Speaker Coke R. Stevenson. Recently Stevenson removed Holliday and named Col. Julius Dorendfeld, Amarillo, instead.

Legality of the removal of Director Adam Johnson may hinge on whether Commissioners Giesecke and Dorendfeld were entitled to vote to remove him. But Johnson's friends cannot well question Giesecke's vote to remove because if he had no right to vote to remove he had no right to vote for Johnson when he was elected 5 to 4 last February. Giesecke voted for him then.

Judges, like others, are prone to write too much. That is the fly in the ointment of the Supreme Court's recent ruling that from now on Commission opinions, approved by the court, shall have the full force of opinions by the court itself. Heretofore the court approved or disapproved the decision. It did not attempt to endorse all the reasoning.

Two examples illustrate: An opinion written in a Court of Criminal Appeals case, mentioned that the case was under an old statute, not under one passed by the 48th legislature. Newspaper men remember passage of no such act, though one was recommended by a legislative committee. Inquiry showed the act had not been passed. The reference was eliminated from the opinion. It was merely surplusage and did not affect the decision.

Another judge seen by a colleague puzzling over a decision, asked the trouble. "I don't know what it means," said the judge. "Who wrote it?" he was asked. "I did," he confessed.

The Nicest LAXATIVE for Busy People

Just as autos have replaced horses, science has developed and proven a new, more thorough and prompt-acting laxative called Feen-a-mint. Feen-a-mint is the delicious chewing gum laxative. It contains a laxative ingredient regularly prescribed by physicians. Feen-a-mint is better than old-fashioned laxatives, because chewing distributes the laxative uniformly into the system, thus insuring a "full" action without shock or irritation to even the delicate digestive organs of children. The prompt, gentle but complete action of Feen-a-mint does not interfere with usual duties. Rid your system of constipation's headaches and sluggishness.
