Spradlin, Finley join Rockwall Chamber membership efforts

The Rockwall Area Chamber of Commerce and Visitor's Center has added two new membership development consultants to its staff. Dorothy Spradlin and Trey Finley have joined the chamber staff, according to a chamber news release. The two will lead new partner sales in a part-time capacity.

With the onboarding of nearly 200 new members a little over a month ago, this gives the chamber team time to focus and fine tune retention efforts, while Spradlin and Finley focus on engaging new members and assisting current partners to proper investment levels, according to the release.

"It is a very exciting time for us," said Darby Burkey, vice president of member engagement. "We all know them from different roles of the chamber. They have both been huge supporters and advocates for the chamber, which is why we feel their new roles are especially important."

Spradlin served for several years as a chamber ambassador, which has provided many opportunities to grow both personally and professionally. Since 2003, her background in banking exposed her to many of Rockwall's finest community leaders, opening the door for her to do what she loves, which is serving. Her experience as an entrepreneur and former co-owner of Simply Kate also gives her a unique perspective in the Rockwall business community.

Dorothy Spradlin

She has volunteered for five consecutive years with the Rockwall Rubber Duck Regatta, which supports 10 great organizations, the Boys & Girls Club of Greater North Texas and Meals on Wheels. She served with the Rockwall Women's League 2007-2011, served on the board for Rockwall MusicFest 2010, Rockwall Women in Business 2014, WineShare and Lakeside Biz. She's a member of the Executive Women's Alliance and serves on the board for the Young Professionals of Rockwall.

Finley is the president and head coach at Basepaths Performance. He is a leader in the community, government organizations, non-profit and business. He leads through mastermind groups, workshops, speaking engagements, team training and management coaching.

Trey Finley

Finley speaks to and trains small business owners in the Dallas area on topics such as increasing cash-flow, employee performance and motivation, management styles and marketing strategies.

When he started coaching business owners in 2009, he invested 10 years of coaching and consulting with nonprofits and their leaders, staff and volunteers. His current clients include high potentials and owners in small businesses, non-profit boards and government organizations, according to the news release.

Finley completed the Executive Coaching certification at the University of Texas at Dallas and is licensed by John Maxwell to use his materials with organizations. He completed his master's and doctor's degrees at Abilene Christian University. He is certified as a provider for Tilt365 and DiSC assessments.

"We feel that with Trey's leadership experience and Dorothy's commitment to community involvement, they are both assets to our mission. We are thrilled to have them on our team," Burkey said.

On God's Word

by Timothy W. Burnett

We will be bombarded with attempts to place us under religious and political rules that scorn and punish people for mere actions without injury to others.

A close examination of the U.S. and Texas statutes reveals a strong religious influence. They create an illusion of safety and security for the people. The various prohibition laws are basically "sin" laws, including drugs, alcohol, weapons, gambling, gaming, employment laws protecting laborers. In short they are preventative regulations with attached punishments in many cases.

Based on the accounts in Acts, the Apostles and believers did not strive hard against the abusive governments and their religious partners, which were extremely abusive and tyrannical compared to what is seen in America. It is noted that they resisted the abusive religious sect that had influential control over the government.

Some of the original Apostles were thrown in prison numerous times for openly telling the truth of our Lord Jesus' death and how his Father raised him from the dead and that he still lives seated at the right hand of his Father, with all power and authority from his Father.

Peter and John were arrested and put in prison for telling the truth. While in prison, they were rescued by an angel from God, and instructed to "go, stand and speak in the temple to the people all the words of this life" (Acts 5:20).

In a prior incident, Peter and John were confronted by the Jewish High Priest and family in high positions about the man who was healed while sitting just outside of the Temple (Acts chapter 3).

Notice how Peter explains what happened. He boldly declared that the people present participated in the killing of the "Prince of life, whom God raised from the dead."

The rulers did not punish them and put them in prison because the miracle was "notable" among the people.

Later, Paul was imprisoned numerous times. He utilized his knowledge of the local laws and judicial system, and appealed to higher authorities. This allowed him opportunities to declare the truth directly to the Roman leaders and judges.

Acts also reveals that many other Christians suffered persecution and imprisonment without being released. Many others were killed. All cases involved a collusion between the influential Jewish sectarian leaders and the Roman government.

Peter was released from prison by an angel from God. Paul boldly used the Roman judicial system to the advantage of the ministry, others suffered and were killed.

In all cases, their primary objective was to go, stand and declare the truth about our Lord Jesus. They walked by the Holy Ghost, and suffered with the victorious hope of the Day of Christ (a.k.a. rapture) (See Philippians 1:10, 1Thess 1:10, 4:13-18, 5:9, and 1Cor 15:51-54). Orlando: the new 9/11?

by Ron Paul
 Ron Paul Institute (ronpaulinstitute.org)
 Last week America was rocked by the cold-blooded murder of 49 people at the Pulse nightclub in Orlando, Florida. Unlike the terrorist attack of September 11, 2001, the Orlando shooter appears to be a man who, while claiming allegiance to ISIS, was not actually affiliated with a terrorist group. About the only thing Orlando has in common with 9/11 is the way power-hungry politicians and federal agencies wasted no time using it to justify expanding government and curtailing liberty.

Immediately following the shooting, we began to hear renewed calls for increased government surveillance of Muslims, including targeting of Muslim religious services. Although the Orlando shooter was not in the US, some are using the shooting to renew the debate over Muslim immigration. While the government certainly cannot prevent terrorists from entering the country, singling out individuals for government surveillance and other violations of their rights because of religious faith violates the First Amendment and sets a dangerous precedent that will be used against other groups. In addition, scapegoating all Muslims because of the act of one changed individual strengthens groups like ISIS by making it appear that the US government is at war with Islam.

The Orlando shooting is being used to justify mass surveillance and warrantless wiretapping. For the past three years, the House of Representatives passed an amendment to the Defense Department appropriations bill limiting mass surveillance. But, last week, the same amendment was voted down. The only difference between this year's debate and previous debates was that this year defenders of the surveillance state were able to claim that the Orlando shooting justifies shredding the Fourth Amendment.

The fact that the Orlando shooter had twice been investigated by the FBI shows that increased surveillance and wiretapping would not have prevented the shooting. Mass surveillance also creates a "needle in a haystack" problem that can make it difficult, or impossible, for law enforcement to identify real threats. Unfortunately, evidence that giving up liberty does not increase security has never deterred those who spread fear to gain support for increased government power.

The Orlando shooter successfully passed several background checks and was a licensed security guard. But, just like those who used Orlando to defend unconstitutional surveillance, authoritarian supporters of gun control are not allowing facts to stand in the way of using the Orlando shooting to advance their agenda. Second Amendment opponents are using Orlando to give the federal government new powers to violate individuals' rights without due process. One pro-gun control senator actually said that "due process is what's killing us."

Ironically, if not surprisingly, one of those calling for new gun control laws is Hillary Clinton. When she was secretary of state, Clinton supported interventions in the Middle East that resulted in ISIS obtaining firearms paid for by US taxpayers!

Mass surveillance, gun control, and other restrictions on our liberty will not prevent future Orlandos. In fact, by preventing law-abiding Americans from defending themselves, gun control laws make us less safe from criminals. Similarly, mass surveillance and warrantless wiretapping erode our rights while making it more difficult for law enforcement to identify real threats.

If Congress really cared about our security and liberty, it would repeal all federal gun laws, end all unconstitutional surveillance, and end the hyper-interventionist foreign policy that causes many around the world to resent the US.

Defining character

by Bill Pertler
 Bill Pertler, 38, is a writer and speaker on the subject of character. He is the author of the book "Character: The Secret to Success" and "Character: The Secret to Happiness." He is also the author of the book "Character: The Secret to a Successful Marriage." He is currently working on a book titled "Character: The Secret to a Successful Business." He is a frequent speaker at conferences and seminars on the subject of character. He is also a frequent contributor to various media outlets. He is currently living in Rockwall, Texas.

I've been contemplating character lately. Not as it pertains to a person or Donald. I'm referring to character – as in what you stand for as a human being. To a large extent, your character defines who you are. And whether it is good or bad, strong or weak, your character is built over time through the actions and decisions you make.

As a mom, I think about the character of my kids. It's important to instill good values in our kids. And, although our kids may not ponder it deeply as we do, it's important to them as well. Especially as they enter the real world and forge a way for themselves. You can be a successful and athletic and charismatic and good looking, but if you don't have good (strong) character then none of the other stuff is going to last anywhere. At least not for long. And at least not anywhere you're going.

It's hard to hand out advice to my kids like it is candy (while they love me like I am an empty Kit Kat wrapper in the middle of the chocolate floor), and have come up with some unsolicited thoughts on character. I put this ever-useful mom information in an acronym because I enjoy playing with words almost as much as I enjoy giving my kids advice. Character: Caring, Humble, Ambitious, Respectful, Ethical, Trustworthy, Responsible, Empathetic, Ambitious, Respectful, Ethical, Trustworthy, Responsible, Empathetic.

Caring. A person of character cares about others in the truest sense. She has the ability to empathize and understand the emotions of others. She is kind not just to people, but animals and Mother Earth. She cares about the world around her.

H – Humble, honest and heartfelt. I couldn't narrow this one down to just one "H" because they are all key. A person with character approaches life wholeheartedly; he is 100-percent behind the tasks set before him. He is honest in his abilities, humble when faced with difficulties and, more importantly, with successes.

A – Attitude. It makes all the difference in how we see things. A person with a positive attitude can move mountains; someone with a negative attitude gives up before even trying. When a person of great character is faced with a difficult task, her first thought is not, "I can't," but "How?"

R – Responsibility. I fear this trait is lacking in our it's-not-my-fault culture. When we fail a test, it's most likely because we didn't study, not because the teacher is out to get us. We will all make mistakes. Owning up to them is part of learning not to make those same mistakes in the future. A person of character takes his responsibilities seriously. He admits when he messes up and then he moves forward.

A – Ambitious actions. Again, I couldn't pick just one because action and ambition go often go hand in hand. A person of character is not only ambitious, she puts those ambitions into action – most often for the betterment of others, and in the best case scenario tries her best to be anonymous. (There's another one.)

E – Ethical. A person of character contributes – to the community, family, charities and wherever he is needed. He seeks out opportunities to give to others because time, energy and talent should be shared.

T – Trustworthy. Making good on obligations and commitments is important to a person with great character. She can be trusted to keep a promise. She is loyal to friends and family and is known as a person of her word.

E – Ethical. The dictionary defines this as humane, moral, respectable, decent, honest and noble. I couldn't have summed it up better myself. A person of character is true to himself while being true to others. He follows the rules. He has a honed moral compass and has it pointed straight in the direction of decency.

R – Respect. A person of character respects others as well as herself. This often involves putting the needs of others before her own. She admires and is grateful for the abilities, talents and achievements of others and demonstrates acceptance of people with differing opinions and beliefs.

Our character determines how we respond to the circumstances in our life. It is the core of what makes us who we are as individuals. As spring blossoms into summer and we see our kids graduate – whether from college, high school or kindergarten – I hope they (and we as parents) are spending as much time and energy building their character as we are with sports teams, summer reading and the multiplication tables. And even more importantly, I hope we all realize we are still building ours.

Heath Hawks earn scholarships

The Hawk Huddle football boosters, Heath Hawks Community Athletics and the Moran family awarded scholarships from the Ethan Moran Memorial Scholarship Fund to 13 graduating football seniors from Rockwall-Heath High School on June 3.

There were multiple fundraising opportunities throughout the year to raise the money that was awarded through the RHHS Hawk Huddle golf tournament, HHCA concession sales and HHCA fundraising events totaling $17,500, according to a news release.

"HHCA is an outstanding organization that teaches the fundamentals of football while also encouraging growth based on the basic principles of Christianity which will help the boys develop a solid foundation that will help them live out life with purpose," Mickey Moss, the head football coach at Rockwall-Heath High School, said.

"HHCA was established ten years ago and it is exciting to see some former HHCA players as part of our graduating class," Daniel Moran, president and coach with HHCA, said.
