The Sunday School Institute.

The two day's program for Sunday school workers which was opened at the Baptist Church was full of interest to all interested in this work. Mr. Meigs, general secretary of the Texas Sunday School Association, has been for years engaged in this work and has visited nearly all the States in the Union. His talk Sunday at eleven was on 'Why I am in the Sunday School Work." It was very fine and cannot fail to be a help to every teacher who heard him. Miss Minnie Thornbury gave a paper on the Home Department of this work, which contained many thoughts worthy of adoption by the societies of other churches besides the Baptist.

Mr. Meigs talked at 3 p. m. on How to teach with chalk, pencil and object Lesson." This was exceptionally interesting, being illustrated by the use of the blackboard. Rev. Holmes Nichols gave a short talk at this meeting on the subject, "Is the study of the Word sufficient; can a prayerless teacher be a successful teacher of the Word of God?" This was excellent. The address Sunday night was given in the Methodist Church, a large crowd being in attendance and all were interested and For insurance, repairs, etc. on court well pleased. Mr. Meigs talked

These talks cannot fail to be of great benefit to all who The different Sunday schools heard them. The thoughts and ideas of one who has so carefully studied the work are bound to assist every teacher and result in good to the student if put in practice. It is hoped that this will stir up our Sunday school workers to make our schools the best in Texas.

A Good Showing on Cotton.

D. G. Fields, public weigher, reports the weighing of 10,729 bales this season of cotton actually marketed in Colorado by wagon. This does not include all that cotton passing through the Shropshire & Harness yard, nor the Union warehouse nor that hauled direct to the compress. The compress has handled over 40,000 bales.

The yard receipts last season was 7,911, an increase this season of 2,818 bales.

A. S. Hawkins Buys Ranch.

On Tuesday of last week Hon. A. S. Hawkins purchased the Headquarters ranch in Crane county, consisting of thirteen sections of proved-up land and 450 head of graded Hereford cattle, the deal aggregating about $33,000. The cattle sold at $18 around, except 50 head of cows, which sold at $20 around. A bonus of $3 per acre was paid on the land. This ranch is said to be one of the finest in the West, and is located fourteen miles southeast of Monahans. Mr. Hawkins will move from Abilene to Midland about June 1st and enter the practice of law.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I-Bob Brownley creates a panic in Wall street. He is a friend of Jim Randolph of Randolph & Randolph, bankers and brokers. Brownley and Randolph had gone to college together and entered the employ of Randolph's father at the close of college days. Brownley is a Virginian by birth. Beulah Sands, daughter of an old Virginia house, calls on Brownley and tells him her father. has been practically ruined by the stock operations of Reinhart. She hopes to utilize her own money in Wall street in retrieving her father's fortunes before his condition becomes known, and asks for amployment in the office that she may have an opportunity to better understand how her money is invested. She does not want it used in a purely Wall street gamble, but in the buying and selling of legitimate securities. Brownley agrees to help her, and falls in love with her.

CHAPTER II-Brownley plunges in augar stock. He uses the Sands, his own and in addition is backed heavily by the Randolph millions. His coup seems successful, and he tells Miss Sands that she has cleared $1,800,000. But the market had not closed.

The hunter directly facing Bob, was Barry Conant-very slight, very short, a marvellously compact, handsome, miniature man, with a fascinating face, dark olive in tint, lighted by a pair of sparkling black eyes and framed in jetblack hair; a black mustache was parted over white teeth, which, when he was stalking his game, looked like those of a wolf. An interesting man at all times was this Barry Conant. and he had been on more and fiercer battlefields than any other half-score plied all the bids. He has it down to members combined. Frenzied gamblers of the stock exchange have no more use for the dead cocks than have Mexicans for the real birds when they get the fatal gaff. The day after the contest, or even that same night at Delmonico's and the clubs, these men would moan for poor Bob: Barry Conant's moan would be the loudest of them all, and, what is more, it would be sincere. But on battle day away to the dump with the fallen bird, the bird that could not win! I saw a look of deep, terrible agony spread over Bob's face; and then in a flash he was the Bob Brownley who Lalways boasted had the courage and the brain to do the right thing in all circumstances. To the astonishment of every man in the crowd he let loose one wild yell, a cross between the war-whoop of an Indian and the bay of a deep-lunged hound regaining a lost scent. Then he began to throw over Sugar stock, right and left, in big and little amounts. He slaughtered the price, under-cutting Barry Conant's every offer and filling every bid. She rose from her desk with all the quiet, calm dignity that we had been admiring for three months, and stood facing Bob. She did not seem to see me; she saw nothing but the man who had gone out that morning the personification of hope, who now stood before her the picture of black despair, and she must have thought, "It was all for me." Suddenly she took the lapels of his torn coat in either hand. She had to reach up to do it, this winsome little Virginia lady. With her big, calm blue eyes looking straight into his, she said:

"Bob." That was all, but the word seemed to change the very atmosphere in the room. The look of desperation faded from Bob's face, and as though the words had sprung the hidden catch to the doors of the storehouse of pent-up misery, his eyes filled with hot, blinding tears. His great chest was convulsed with sobs. Again-clear, caim, fearless, and tender, came the one syllable, "Bob." And at that Bob's self-control slipped the leash. With a hoarse cry, he threw his arms around her and crushed her to his breast. The sacredness of the scene made me 150,000 shares. I was to have had the

As I looked at her I could not doubt that she fully realized our position, that she was really suffering more than either of us, that she was only acting to ease Bob's anguish. Bob brought out his memoranda, and in half an hour we had the figures. The total loss was nearly three millions. As Beulah Sands' 20,-300 shares had cost less than ours and Bob figured to leave her capital of $400,000 intact, we felt some comfort. Beulah Sands had watched the figuring with the keenness of an expert, and when Bob announced the final figures, which showed that she still had what she started with, she drew the sheet containing the totals to her. "I was willing to accept your assistance," she said, "when the deal promised a profit to all of us, because I appreciated your goodness and knew how much it would hurt your feelings if I were churlish about the division; but now that we all lose I must stand my fair share; I must." Along in the afternoon I received a telegram from him, saying that he was on his way to Virginia, that he needed a rest and would be back in a week. I was worried, neryous. It takes until the next day and the day after, and the week after that, to get down to the deepest misery of an upset such as we had been through. I did not feel easy with Bob out of sight while he was sounding for a new footing. I went to Beulah Sands in hope we might talk over the affair, but when I told her that Bob was to be gone for a week and that I was uneasy, she said is her calm, confident manner: "I don't think there is anything to worry about, Mr. Randolph. Mr. Brownley is too much of a man to allow an affair of dollars to do anything more than annoy him. He will be back all the better for his rest." She dropped her long lashes in a thisconversation-is-closed way that we had come to know meant going time.

I shut off and turned to Miss Sands: "This is no time to stand on ceremony, Miss Sands. Barry Conant is Camemeyer's and Standard Oil's head broker. His being on the floor means mischief. He never goes into a big whirl persocally unless they are out for blood. Bob has exhausted his buying power, and though I tell you frankly that I never speculate, don't believe in speculation and am in this deal only for Bob-and for you-I swear I don't intend to let them wipe the floor with him without at least making them swallow some of the dust they kick Please don't object to my helping out, Miss Sands. Ordinarily I would defer to your wishes, but I love Bob Brownley only second to my wife, and I have money enough to warrant a plunge in stock. If they should turn Bob over in this deal, he-well, they're not going to, if I can prevent it," and I started for the exchange on the run.

It was a battle royala king on one side, a Richelieu on the other. Though there was frantic buying and selling all around these two generals, the trading was gauged by the trend of their battle. All knew that if Bob should be beaten down by this concentrated modern finance devil, a panic would ensue and Sugar would go none could say how low. But if Bob should play him to a standstill by exhausting his seiling power, Sugar would quickly scar to even higher figures than before. It was known that Barry Conant's usual order Sands must breathe. I've learned my from his clients, the "System" masters, for such an occasion as the present was "Break the price at any cost." The greatest master of English prose was John Ruskin, who starting out to be an artist became an art critic, and thence a critic of everything pertaining to human life. He believed the springs of art to lie deep in the from $6 to $20 per acre, easy moral nature of the artist and terms. Also preference rights the moral temper of the age and to take up lands out of 4 leases nation which produced him. By insistence upon these views, he lead his readers to a new understanding of the spiritual meaning of art and awakened them to a new discrimination.

The Victorian period of literature may be differentiated from the literature. The year Edward Phillips of Barclay, Md., of Victoria's accession to the writes: "I wish to tell you that I can throne saw the operation of the edy. In the star, in the stone, in the flesh, in the soul and in the clod."

In this age of science and materialism, the spirit of poetry and imagination was rapidly becoming extinct; when too, from the far east there came a voice like a trumpet, waxing louder, and stronger and swifter, and the cry arose, "The new regime has arrived; Kipling is here!"

He is one of those illustrations taken near at hand, which helps to clear up those vexed questions of novel and tale, of kinds, camps, schools, distinctions, and the right and wrong ways. Nothing is more interesting than his disinterested sense of the real; it is doubtless the quality for lack of more of which, our American and English fiction has turned so woefully uninteresting.
