paper is still alarmingly scarce, the fact that the new book contains 608 pages-the largest in historyis considered adequate proof of its value to the public. In harmony with its dedication, a considerable portion of the book is devoted to historical matter. There is a revised history of Texas, from Cabeza de Vaca to Coke R. Stevenson, and account of Texas' participation in World War II. As usual, data and railroad mileage, rosters of state and county officials, Mayors and City Managers, sources of state revenue during the latest fiscal year and articles on Texas counties, with individual maps, are included in the current issue, together with revisions in up-to-date form, covering rail, highway, air and shipping commerce; banking and insurance; Texas athletic events, parks and tourist attractions, schools, libraries, health and hospitals.

In view of the postwar program of economic development, especial attention is given to Texas manufacturing industries between 1940 and 1944, when pay rolls and volume of production more than trebled. There is full treatment also of Texas minerals, of which more than sixty kinds were produced last year, for a total value of more than a billion dollars-the greatest value of mineral producgovernment policies clarify the tive possibilities, as the electrical tory of the nation. come the problems of readjustment and preparation for a return to peace and normal business.

We on the Texas and Pacific look forward to peace with all its blessingsand problems-but with the realization that our mission is not yet complete. Millions of gallant men and women who made this victory possible must be returned safely to their homes-and that's part of our job.

But while doing the job at hand, preparations are going forward to meet the demands of the future. Already the Texas and Pacific has begun the task of straightening curves, reducing grades-preparing for the day when the luxurious streamliners will speed over the rails of the Texas and Pacific.

In the peaceful postwar future, the Texas and Pacific dedicates itself to the task of providing you with the finest and safest in transportation.

Your constructive criticisms and suggestions are earnestly solicited."
