GROWTH

Growth excites the imagination. There are those whose interest centers in flowers. Spade-work in the fall brings forth blossoms in the spring. Planning is exemplified in the life of a rose.

We may, in the course of a day, discuss with our personnel institutional objectives. You may take a sturdy fork and pulverize the soil around a budless rose bush. Each involves a bit of imagination for the splendor of days to come. Each recognizes that the completion of a thing adds luster to its attainment.

Banking institutions are barometers of community progress. We hope that the measuring needle, as it points to our bank, will be ever sensitive to fundamental elements embraced by and through the proesses of growth.

Peanuts, Once Slave Crop, Now Yield Growers Millio

One of the romantic tales of history is how peanuts came to the United States.

They came in slave ships. They grew from a few bags used as forage into a crop that last year totalled 1,126,000 tons. The men who cultivated them got $213,000,000.

The man who buys a 10 cent bag in a baseball park reaches clear down to the Incas for his pleasure.

Peanuts began in Peru. The *Conquistadors found the Incas munching them between meals. The Spaniards took them in their treasure galleons back to Spain, where they flourished.

Then they took them to Africa, where they got tied in with the slave trade. The slavers fed them to the natives because they were cheap called them "goobers." When the slavers crammed the natives into holds and began the long journey to America they used peanuts as slave and easy to grow. The natives

Upon landing, the slaves built rude cabins, and planted peanuts near their cabin doors. Gradually peanuts spread through the South and changed from a slave to a money

They continued as a Southern specially until the Civil War. The Yankees captured large stores of them and took them North, where they became popular and confectioners recognized their value as an ingredient in sweets.

In the 1890's a doctor at Battle Creek, Michigan, named Kellogg, crushed the nuts into a creamy mass and called it peanut butter.

Peanuts now are a pricesupported crop. They grow in three principal areas throughout the South and Southwest. The average price per pound in 1947 was 10.2 cents.

About 200,000 tons of the 1947 crop will be needed for farm consumption and to seed this year's crops, the department of agriculture said.

Crushed peanuts produce an oil that is excellent substitute for olive oil. It is used extensively in cooking and as a salad dressing. The pressed cake and meal that remains is sold as cattle fodder.

Peanut hay, which is the dried top of the plant, is a source of important income to peanut growers, who bale it and sell it for stock feed. Hay proceeds often pay the expense of harvesting the crop.
