THE TEXAS ALMANAC

The News is in receipt of a copy of the supplement to the Texas Almanac for 1937, which the office I force appreciates very much. It' contains an immense lot of information that is needed in a newspaper, and of interest to the public. This is a book that everyone should have. It is good for the home, and good for the individual. In fact, there should be several copies in the schools, as the pupils could get information that cannot be had from any other book and no library is complete without one, especially a school library.

NEW LAW TO REGULATE DAIRYMEN

The fuaudulent use of grade labels on milk and milk products was outlawed in Texas last week when the legislature passed a bill! ers of Port Arthur and indorsed by the Texas Planning Board. Hereafter when grade A or a grade B, or a grade C is used the milk must meet the specifications of that particular grade. The specifications are those contained in the United States Public Health Service milk ordinance and code. Inforcement of the law is placed with the state health officer. More than 125 Texas cities already have stringent milk ordinances, but the cost of supervising dairies was prchibitive to small rural communities and as a result milk has been sold under all kinds and types of labels. Provision of the few years since a person who think Congress does not have the new laws will insure rural residents of properly labeled milk.

THE OBEDIENCE OF NOAH Lesson for April 25th. Genesis

Golden Text: Hebrews 11:7. The tradition of a great flood s not peculiar to our Bible. Almost every branch of the human race cherishes this bit of folk-lore. The vivid Babylonian story of this overwhelming catastrophe possesses many points of resemblance view where he expects to drill a to the narrative in Genesis, but it lacks a religious message. The glory of the Bible is that it always introduces God. And so our lesson tells us not merely of a flood, but of a God who sent the flood. And it presents Noah not only as a brave hero, but as a true servant of God, a 'sanctified shipbuilder" as one sympathetic student calls him. Now we are tempted to think that the story of Noah has no meaning for our day, that he passed through an experience so unusual, so remote that we cannot derive much help from a study of his strange career. But it is significant that our own generation is very similar in character to the barbarous age of Noah. Our contemporary society is more and more addicted to violence, cruelty, brutality. We are in the grip of dictators eager to plunge us all into the colossal folly and sin of another hideous world war.

And how are we to be saved? Only by such men as Noah who 'found grace in the eyes of the Lcrd." Noah, we are told, like Enoch before him, "walked with God." His name means "rest," and the old story makes clear how patiently and obediently he rested in God, and trusted the divine plan, building the ark even though no rain was in sight. How his neighbors must have ridicules him! But such is the remarkable candor of the Bible that we see Noah in his weakness as well as in his strength. For we are told that after the flood he drank too much liquor. Like the rest of us he was a damaged soul. But the simple goodness of the man outweighs his indecorum.
