Exemptions Of Poll Tax May Be Issued

Law Cited By Tax Collector Acuff Authorizes Such Action

Loy Acuff, county tax collector, Saturday issued a statement in which he cited an act of the 41st legislature to support the declaration that issuance of poll tax exemption certificates entitling holders to vote in the July 23 primaries is not restricted to the period October 1 to January 31 of the following year but may be issued at any time during the year.

Persons who have become 21 years of age or who had their 20th birthday since January 1 of this year, as well as persons who are maimed, crippled, etc., are entitled to exemptions from payment of poll tax.

Mr. Acuff's statement follows: "Recently there have been a number of inquiries relative to obtaining poll tax exemptions for use in the primary election July 23. In answer I shall advise that the issuance of exemption certificates is not now restricted to the period from October 1 to January 31 of the following year but that in accordance with House Bill No. 128, 1931, acts of the fifth called session of the 41st legislature, such exemption certificate may be issued any time during the year but must be issued to the party entitled to the same before he offers to vote. Exemptions are not a requirement to vote within the limits of cities of 10,000 or more population.

SPORTS ON PARADE

By CURTIS BISHOP

Cosmos has become ambitious in a baseball way. Earl Reid and his brothers and cousins and his good friends, the Walters, entertained the Abilene Oilers Thursday and came out in second place. Today, if our Abilene contemporary has not gotten his dates confused, Cosmos plays Simmons' club upon Abilene sod, which is very good for Johnson grass, etc, but not for baseball, particularly for visiting clubs that are playing the Oilers. Field indicated, however, that he would strengthen his club with players from Big Spring, Foran, and Ackery but this isn't news since everyone knew that Mr. Reid would do that anyway.

Mahoney, the lat, thin chap, and Cromer, the same is unknown to us, are to compose the Howard county team's battery while Simmons has nominated W. L. Crouch of all people. Crouch and Earl Reid were teammates in the City League in 1930 along with Howard Reid, Les Walker, Cook, J. Walker, etc., on the old Mico mine.

Shirley Robbins and Bob Scott tangled today in the Big Spring-Colorado duel in the outstanding singles engagement. Robbins won in their first meeting but has since seemingly slipped a bit from his championship form, not doing so well in his last couple of matches. Fob Harvey of Texas took a decision over the Osage course.

The strongest competitor the locals have, speaking at random without poring over any records, is G. E. Foster, who lays No. 3 and No. 2 on the ladder, and who wins the majority of his matches. We can think of only one match Foster has dropped this season, losing to Frank Rose of Lamona in the Big Spring-Lamesa battle earlier in the season.

Incidentally the big, pleasant lumberman is consistently improving. A championship fighter last season he may be one of the contenders for the invitational tournament this year.

Wave Of Friday Extends To Region Of Great Lakes

CHICAGO, (UP)—The equator bulged up to the Great Lakes Friday on the weather map, bringing tropic temperatures to most of mid-America.

Heat records for this date toppled and all-time records for July may be set.

Early reports indicated 16 persons died of causes attributable to the heat and that 19 others drowned. Prostrations ran into the scores.

The populace sought relief by wearing fewest possible light garments and flocking to beaches and parks.

Hot winds from the southwest added to the discomfort of a broiling sun in a cloudless sky.

Relief was promised for the week-end by weather forecaster C. A. Donnell of the Chicago weather bureau, who said cool winds would blow down from Canada.

He explained the hot wave is caused by a vast "sea of stagnant air" over the mid-continent.

In Evansville, Ind., where the mercury stood in the 90s most of the night, men, women and children in pajamas and bathing suits slept in the parks under police protection.

Prospects that the July 15 record of 96 set last year, would be surpassed in Chicago were all too bright.

Elsewhere over the middle west, temperatures paralleled those of yesterday, when 100-degree marks were set at Evansville, Bloomington, St. Louis, Sioux City, Omaha, Dodge City, Kan., and Concordia, Kan. The highest temperature reported was 103, at Columbus, Ga., 1-4 Hays and Garden City, Kan.

Among the fatalities were: Six persons drowned and two died of prostration in Ohio; five drowned in Michigan; one drowned at Columbus, Ga.; one from prostration at Wheeling, W. Va.; one from prostration in Iowa.

A motorist died after throwing his car out of gear and applying the brakes at Oklahoma City, a victim of the heat; a Nebraskan, crazed by the heat, hanged himself; one drowned at Kittanning, Pa., and one died of prostration at Darlington; two from prostration near St. Louis; a farm hand died of prostration at Penn. N. D., and Onley Edwards, 84, civil war veteran, died at Brainerd, Minn.; one drowned in New York.

Economy Bill Forces H. S. Meskimen Out Of Rural Mail Service After Twenty-Eight Years On Same Route

Sunday morning to most people, but it means more than that to Herman S. Meskimen, veteran rural mail carrier.

It marks the end of the first week's retirement for carrier of R.F.D. mail No. 1, forced from service after twenty-four years in harness. Mr. Meskimen fell victim to the recent congressional Economy Bill which, among other things, held that postal employees having more than fifteen years in service, and of a certain age, be retired on pension.

Under the rulings of the Civil Service Commission, Mr. Meskimen was due four additional years in service, but Congress, seeking to meet a financial emergency, was no respecter of such rulings.

It was July 1st, 1908 that Meskimen backed his horse into the shafts and started with buggy and all on his first run. It took all day to make the twenty-eight mile run and stop at all sixty-eight boxes.

For twenty-eight years he continued making his route without missing a single day, except Sundays and holidays. Not until 1921 did Meskimen succumb to the inevitable automobile. By then roads were sufficiently improved to warrant the use of a motor car in making the rounds.

But he was to enjoy his speed on his original route for only five years. In 1926 thirty additional miles were attached to his run. By the time of his retirement he was daily traveling fifty-eight miles, visiting 193 boxes, and serving 307 pits.

Six cars have been worn out by Meskimen since he took to this mode of transportation. In all he has done a distance of 377,548 miles. And it is a little more impressive when it is noted that he worked 7,344 days, or carrying it still further, a total of 58,752 hours.

Meskimen was the oldest local postal employee in seniority rights. What postal officials thought of him is summed up in a statement from Postmaster Fahrnkamp, "During the entire time he has never been reprimanded for any cause, he has dignified not only the position which he held, but the entire postal service."

It Opposes Sterling

"A SHAMEFUL record of a crooked governor." With this polite reference to Governor Sterling's record, a little journal published in East Texas gets off to a flying start. For four pages the insults to Sterling are heaped one upon another until the finished product is about as filthy as the disseminated oil fields from which it emanated. That Sterling was "guilty of high treason" and "should be impeached" were among the mildest epithets flung his way.

The Herald has often signified its support of Ross Sterling, but it is not through loyalty to him that we look with disfavor upon any scandal sheet that stoops to the cheapest of political propaganda. It is perhaps an odd commentary on American conditions that in the selection of our lawmakers a dignified if not sacred duty—some persons or institutions will inevitably pollute the issue with mudslinging—and worse.

LEAP YEAR BRIDE

by Laura Lou BROOKMAN

CHAPTER XLII
For an instant Cherry thought the words would not come. Her hands, twisting together and hidden by the table, were like ice. She felt as though some terrible, chilling force had taken possession of her. She could not speak. She could not move, but sat there staring down at her plate.

Over and over in her brain the woman pounded. "Dan—and that woman! Here! Dan—and Brenda Vail!"

It was only a moment but for Cherry that moment was a lifetime. She raised her eyes then and somehow found her voice. She said simply, "I'm afraid I can't stay for lunch, Max. A sudden headache—I get them sometimes. If you'll call a cab for me—"

Pearson was all solicitude. If he had noticed the couple so near to each other he gave no sign. He said a few words to the waiter, helped Cherry into her coat and then they were outside on the street.

A taxicab drew to the curb in answer to Pearson's signal. Max would have entered and driven home with her but Cherry shook her head. She sank far back against the cushioned seat as the cab pulled out into the street. Blessed relief to be alone!

How the dreary afternoon passed she could not have told. She reached the apartment, climbed the stairs. Huddled in a little heap on the davenport she lay staring across the room. Cherry did not weep. She did not even try to think the ache in her heart—the ache that twisted and tortured and itched—was like a physical pain. It was so new and so terrifying.

The gray kitten climbed to the davenport, nestled beside Cherry and waited for caresses that did not come. Sunshine faded from the patches of sky outside the living room window. Footsteps sounded on the stairs and then died away in the apartment overhead a radio orchestra played a brassy "orch song."

The whole situation was apparent now to Cherry. Oh, yes! She had been blind not to see it before. Dan's sudden coldness. His frequent absences. How could she have failed to understand what was happening?

The shadows in the room grew darker and outlines were lost in the gray light. Dan came at last. For an instant he stood silhouetted against the hall light. Then he touched the wall switch and the table lamp glowed warm.

Dan said, "Hello" and dropped his topcoat into a chair. He went to the kitchen, filled a tumbler with water and drank it. Returning, he looked at the girl curiously. "What's the matter?" he asked. "Don't you feel well?"

"Cherry raised her eyes. "I'm all right." Phillips seemed satisfied. He began to whistle softly, sank into his favorite chair and unfolded a newspaper. There was silence that was not broken until Cherry spoke.

Her voice sounded flat and unnatural. She said, "Dan, I waited nearly an hour—"

"Waited? It's no later than the time I usually get here."

"I mean at noon. At the library. Don't you remember we were to have lunch together?"

The young man's face was hidden by the newspaper. "Sorry," he said. "I forgot. Couldn't have missed it anyhow because I was tied up on a said it a dozen times before but when you try to drag Brenda Vail into it—"

Cherry whirled about. "I told you not to mention that name!" she warned. "Can't you stop thinking of her even for a minute? Well, then—go to her! I never want to see your face again. I wish I'd never married you! I wish—I wish she were dead!" Her voice fell on a broken sob.

"So you wish you'd never married me! Don't forget it was your idea. I didn't ask you to marry me! Have you forgotten that?"

Cherry cried out as though at a blow. "You—could say—that!" she gasped. "I suppose you never loved me at all? You made me believe you did. You made me think you'd go away! I wish you'd leave me alone!"

She sank to the davenport and buried her head in the cushions. Cherry was weeping uncontrolled. Now her shoulders rose and sank with great shuddering sobs.

For a moment Phillips stood looking down at her. Then he crossed the room, picked up his coat and hat. An instant later the hall door opened and shut.

Cherry did not know how long she lay there. She knew Dan had gone but she did not stir. Gradually her sobbing became more quiet and then stopped altogether. She got to her feet, crossed the room and fumbled mechanically in a bureau drawer for a fresh handkerchief. Her eyes were swollen and red. Cherry caught a glimpse of herself in the mirror and was shocked for an instant because she did not recognize herself.

Upstairs the radio was still turned on and a man was singing. A crooner whose weekly salary was fabulous. The song was a popular one and Cherry had heard it often before. The words were appropriate.

"After I was sold on all the tales you told. Didn't you let your kisses turn from hot to cold? Was that the human thing—"

The song ended on a dissonant note. Perhaps the owner of the radio disliked the ballad or perhaps he was only leaving the apartment to go to a belated dinner. At any rate the radio was silenced.

It was curious how that silence affected the working of Cherry's mind. She was still dazed by the unreality of what had happened. Dan had come and gone away. She
