A "NATURAL"

On occasion we hear the remark about a product that it's a "natural". To qualify under this term a product must make a real contribution to that market that buys it. It must deliver more in comfort, or in convenience or pleasure, or it must save money for the buyer. If it does any of these things fully, or all of them in part, it's a "natural".

5,500 Turkeys Sold On The Local Market

Approximately 5,500 turkeys have been sold to two buyers in Cross Plains this season bringing growers an average of 28 cents per pound on gobblers and 35 cents on hens on outright sales and those bought on co-operative basis have already paid 27 to 32 cents in advanced prices. Co-operative prices are based on market sales throughout the season and may or may not pay the grower more money than outright sales in buying teason

The bird buying is said to be ninety per cent over in this area and the crop is estimated considerably short of previous years. In former seasons as many as 8,000 turkeys have sold on local markets. More growers are said to have sold their fowls on a co-operative basis than outright sale this year.
