The Savage Beast

The savage beast within the breast of man howls in the dead and silent night—though generations have covered the violent nature with a veneer of civilization, the beast is yet there, hiding, biding his time. One moment the veneer conceals the fangs and silences the growl, the next moment it drops away and the monster in all its horror appears.

That is what happened in Dallas when John Kennedy, President of the United States, was shot dead as he waved a friendly greeting to those who thronged the sidewalks to see him pass. In the twinkling of an eye a thing which was thought impossible in this civilized age had happened. John Kennedy lay mortally wounded, his head resting in the lap of his wife, and Governor Connally was seriously wounded by a hidden sniper, a man who ate a chicken dinner before committing the dastardly deed.

God help us.

What kind of people nurture and raise to manhood such a soulless creature? Spawned in hell and nurtured by the devil, he was turned loose in a world composed mostly of gentle folks—in Texas, among the most friendly people on earth—and here he lived to place a blot on the face of the state; to disgrace a people, the majority of whom would never stoop to such an evil act.

We bow our head in shame.

That such should happen in our state, or even in our nation, causes us to bow in untold grief. As we looked on the stricken face of Mrs. Kennedy we mingled our tears with hers, thinking how terrible it was to have the man she loved shot down by her side, his blood running onto her dress as the light flickered and the soul stood on the threshold of eternity.

You prepare your Thanksgiving dinner—what do you think she prepares? To her dying hour the scene will live in vivid colors in her brain to spring out at her in the silent hours of the night—the crack of the rifle will never be forgotten, and the face of her dying husband will be printed indelibly in her imagination.

God, give her solace.

While we may not have agreed with John Kennedy in many of his acts as President of the United States, we did not wish for him the tragic death which he suffered. If we could beat him at the polls, well and good, if we could not, he became our president. No matter what his religion; no matter what his stand on Civil Rights—no such fate was due him—nor is any such fate due any man in a civilized, freedom loving country.

It will mar the pages of history.

Those who come after us will wonder how we could let such a thing happen. But it did happen. It was so fantastic that for a time people actually would not believe it—even yet we can hardly believe it. Only until we heard it announced several times could we grasp the truth. A President of the United States killed while riding down the streets of Dallas in 1963—it was unbelievable!

It was as if we had ripped a page from a bloody thriller in an age when men were without conscience; without knowledge of God and the Christian spirit. But in moments we realized it was true—realized it with a sinking heart.

We thought the killer must be insane.

But he was not. He was a disciple of Castro enjoying the freedom of American citizenship. A man who was allowed to work and provide for his family, and protected by a friendly government of which his victim happened to head. Can you imagine such a depraved human being?

Probably not, but there are people who can.

Those who abetted and encouraged him—those of his kind will consider him a hero. And when he died from an assassin's bullet Sunday, to them he will be a martyr who has died for a cause.

If you are a decent, law abiding citizen, there is a doubt that you can even imagine such a man being a hero, but we would not be surprised if Castro raises a monument to his memory—a student of communism which he had studied since he was fifteen years old; a believer in what he has studied, who denied the existence of God and declared Christ was an illegitimate child; an enemy to mankind, and a lurking demon whose soul has dropped into the raging fires of hell. Even a mention of him, we imagine, causes the angels to shudder and Satan to laugh with glee.

He is more to be scorned than Judas Iscariot who betrayed Christ, for Judas did repent of his sin and threw the thirty pieces of silver at the conniving priests. But this man did not repent. The difference between right and wrong in him had evidently been so deadened by the doctrine he had embraced he was immune to a feeling of regret and sorrow.

Why such people are not weeded out; why organizations they belong to are not outlawed and the members sent to prison or deported is something we will never be able to fathom. Their motives are the overthrow of the United States Government, the destruction of freedom and the death of all those who believe in it.

Should they have a right to the advantages offered by a free country?

This deed of violence should awaken people to the danger which is eating at us from within, as well as the danger which threatens us from without.

John Kennedy is dead. Let us work to the end that never again will an assassination occur in these United States.

As to the man who killed the assassin in the hallway of a police station in Dallas Sunday morning, he makes it appear Texas yet rests in the lap of heathenism whose people push aside the declaration of God, "Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord", and take unto themselves the right to judge and execute their fellow man.

Such acts of violence make it appear we are yet a bunch of gun toting roughnecks giving little or no value to law and order, making it appear if an individual does not please us we shoot him down as we would a mad dog. The assassin, Lee Harvey Oswald, 23, was in the custody of police—there was no question but he would be executed by due process of law, yet this Frank Ruby, 52, night club operator, took the matter out of the duly constituted authority's hand and, as a wild animal bent on vengeance, broke through men surrounding the prisoner and fired a shot into his body—a shot which ripped through his vital organs and caused death a little over an hour later.

Why?

The question well may be asked, but it may never be answered. Yet it smacks of the underworld, for which Dallas appears to be famous. Did this man who killed a president have knowledge which, if imparted to others, would unveil a plot in which more than one was concerned, and he had to be silenced?

That is a question that should be answered.

We can hardly believe Oswald hatched and executed this assassination alone. We believe it was well planned—so well planned, we think, that if Oswald had not panicked and shot a policeman, he may never have been arrested. But when he was arrested his confederated thought first was of self preservation and immediately his death warrant was signed.

This may be far fetched—it may be idle thinking. The killer of the assassin may have had such love for the President he could not ignore the urge to destroy the man who had blotted out his life.

To say the least, this has been a hectic time for Texas—may it never happen again.

Memphis wins new Textile Plant

Today, because of aggressive leadership, this Texas Panhandle town boasts an active new textile plant making sheets for national distribution. What is more important, the plant's parent company is the world's largest manufacturer of textiles using all known fibers.

This new industry is the Hall Plant of Postex Cotton Mills, a unit of Burlington Industries, Inc. It is designed to have in excess of 100 employees, mostly women, and is an important addition to the economy of this 1400 population community. It is another reason we say big things are happening in General Telephone towns.

These towns are on the move. Community improvements are under way, local resources are being developed, new businesses, new industries are coming in. If your town seeks additional information about expansion, perhaps we can help. Just write our Community Development Department, Box 1001, San Angelo, Texas.

ANSWERS TO SOME QUESTIONS ABOUT PLOW DOWN

WHY NOT WAIT UNTIL MY CROPS NEED NITROGEN BEFORE PUTTING IT INTO THE GROUND?

Nitrogen, in the form of anhydrous ammonia, does a more efficient job of boosting yield when applied early. An early plow down application enables the nitrogen to do the extra job of helping decompose your turned under stubble. This stubble decomposition makes more plant foods available to next year's crop, while putting your soil in better condition to absorb and hold moisture. These extra plant foods and moisture can mean an increase of 10% or more in yield. That can be a big increase in profit! And by plowing down now, the uncertain spring weather can't interfere with your fertilizer program.

IF I PLOW ANHYDROUS AMMONIA DOWN NOW, ISN'T IT LOST DURING THE WINTER MONTHS?

Anhydrous ammonia is the only form of nitrogen that does not leach. When released, the nitrogen attaches itself to the clay particles and organic materials... actually becomes part of the soil.

Even though the soil bacteria that do the work in stubble decomposition need nitrogen; their use of the nitrogen does not reduce its effectiveness. All the nitrogen you plow down in the form of anhydrous ammonia to speed stubble decay is still available to crops in the spring.

WOULDN'T IT BE JUST AS PROFITABLE TO PLOW DOWN ANOTHER FORM OF NITROGEN FERTILIZER?

First of all, anhydrous ammonia costs less per pound of usable nitrogen. And it does not leach! Other forms of nitrogen fertilizer do not attach themselves to stable parts of the soil. Therefore, they are subject to becoming soluble, which means they can follow water movement, up or down, out of the root zone... leaching.

Because early application of anhydrous ammonia can increase yield and nitrogen in this form is not lost during the winter, it makes sense to plow it down now.

EARLY APPLICATION ALSO MEANS THAT YOU WON'T HAVE THE EXTRA PROBLEM OF FERTILIZER APPLICATION LATER ON WHEN YOU ARE SO BUSY WITH OTHER IMPORTANT OPERATIONS.
