JAPANESE COTTON TRADE

Northern cotton mills, have once again set up the familiar cry for higher tariffs in the name of patriotism, higher standards of living, and American labor.

The pathetic picture of the honest American workman trying to compete with the Japanese coolies on a bowl-of-rice-a-day basis has had the desired effect before, and the textile industry evidently thinks that it will do so again.

The textile industry, however, should not be permitted to ignore the national picture of its own selfish point of view.

Certainly Japanese competition is not as dangerous as it may have been, or could be, under other circumstances.

On the other hand growers and exporters should not be liberal in dealing with Japan.

But Japan will not make these concessions until pressure is brought to bear.

The South should insist firmly upon a reciprocal trade treaty with Japan that will insure maximum cotton exports.

CHAPTER 46
SARAH MAKES A CALL

James' second courtnah' did not progress by leaps and bounds as Miss Julia and Melissa so confidently expected. He gave the summe to it. Most of the courtnah' took place on horseback.

James already had a riding horse, a handsome black gelding with one white foot. He bought a beautiful little bay mare, guaranteed to be gentle and hunted up a saddle. Almost every late afternoon, occasionally in the early mornings, Miss Julia would see him passing her home, astride Ted and leading Lady.

Leslie was always ready and waiting for him. James would dismount, lift Leslie into the saddle and off they would go. Leslie clinging timidly to the saddle horn. James assuring her that there was nothing to be afraid of.

Most of the courtnah' took place on horseback.

Once Miss Julia, frankly eavesdropping from her basement window heard Leslie say, "I'm an awful coward. But I'm not really afraid as long as you keep close to me. If you get a foot ahead I'm panicky."

"Don't worry. I'll stick closer than a brother. You'll get over that presently. It's all a matter of keeping at it."

"I don't know. Ted and Lady are so big and powerful. You only laughed yesterday when Ted reared. I would have fallen right off if I died. Aren't you ever afraid? I don't believe you are. You're giving me a terrific inferiority complex."

"Afraid? Good God. I've spent

BLANK CARTRIDGE WOUNDS MAX

Lacking his usual happy smile, Max Baer, heavyweight champion, is shown in bed at his training quarters in Asbury Park, N. J., recovering from burns received when he was "shot" by a blank cartridge. He suffered a burn under the heart when the pistol was discharged as he rehearsed a radio skit. (Associated Press Photo)

I was an old fool. Perhaps you didn't know." Leslie. Time's passing.

A day or two later Miss Julia went to see Miss Sarah and they had a long and not unamused talk over their iced tea and pound

"Then you didn't honestly care for him?"

"More than my life. That isn't an exaggeration. I sacrificed James to my silly, silly pride. It isn't you I have to forgive but myself. If I could live a thousand years I don't believe I'd ever be able to forgive myself."

"You've already done a lot to make up for it. Why, he's a different man these days. But for my part I won't feel satisfied until I see you two safely married and settled. Don't let him wait too long."

cake. But they kissed at parting and Miss Sarah said quaveringly, "I'll think it over. But I can't help feeling..."

"Stop thinking and start doing. It's mighty little I'm asking of you, considering the interfering busy bodies we were once. But go on, just as you please. It won't make any real difference anyway. Mark my words, James is going to marry Leslie Harris whether you like it or not. The sooner you make friends with her the better."

The next afternoon Miss Sarah in embroidered white linen and white silk gloves and a green sunshade, rang the Harris door bell, card case in hand. She had meant to stay at the most fifteen minutes. She stayed for over an hour. Miss Julia waylaid her afterwards and made her sit down on her porch.

"Well?" asked Miss Julia.

"Well, I actually had a good time," Miss Sarah admitted generously. "Something was said about Father and Leslie began asking me questions. I hadn't had a good talk about Father for years. No one seems interested. He's almost almost forgotten. But Leslie remembers him perfectly."

"So you don't think Leslie's so dreadful?"

"I think she's what Father said--sweet. I asked them all to dinner, but only Leslie accepted. When I think, Julia, that it might have been Leslie all these years instead of that hard cold-blooded Jane."

Miss Sarah broke down and cried and Miss Julia had to take back all her horrid insinuations of the previous day. And then Melissa brought them tall glasses of iced raspberry shrub and cookies and Miss Sarah said she must take the next car. And didn't.

Whirligig

The section of Title II which New York is especially anxious to have amended is Marriner Eccles' proposal that the Federal Reserve Board be given the power to control over open market operations—which means the purchase and sale of government securities by the twelve federal reserve banks.

Another

A New York attorney thinks he has found a scheme for beating dollar devaluation despite the Supreme court decision upholding revocation of the gold clause. In the gold bond covenant it is provided that the bond shall be accepted in payment of federal income tax.

Off-The-Record

The Washington press generally endorsed President Roosevelt's refusal to disclose to congress his off-the-record revelation—at a recent press conference of the spanking he administered, to Big Business spokesmen.

Advantage

New York Republican circles are buzzing with talk of Owen J. Roberts as they haven't buzzed for years. The suggestion that he might be a suitable Presidential candidate next year has drawn an amazingly warm response from men who count behind the scenes.

Research

Congress has passed an act authorizing Col. W. L. Miller, Medical Corps, to retire on full pay and pursue research work at Walter state in the doubtful class.

Bigger—Lewis Douglas is beginning to catch the spotlight again. Watch him edge into it further. Conservatives are pushing him quietly to the fore. He's a personable and convincing spokesman and his budget-balancing speeches are drawing an encouraging fan mail.

Scalps

The Stock Exchange old guard is completely licked so far as control is concerned but is out for a little soul-satisfying revenge. The boys have whetted their sharpest knives for John W. Hanes at today's election. They will feel quite consoled if they can keep him out of a governorship.

Dead

Betting is 5 to 1 there will be no extra session of the New York legislature to reapportion political districts—despite reports that Farley and Lehman are preparing to make the Tiger jump through hoops.

Bus

New York right-wingers are much impressed with the success of Father Coughlin's telegraph technique. Several conservative organizations are planning to develop it intensively for their own purposes. It looks like busy times ahead for Western Union and Postal.

Draft

New York Republicans haven't enjoyed such a hearty laugh in years as they did when Hamilton Fish checked his hat into the Presidential ring. They were particularly delighted by his insistence that the West must demand him before his is willing to heed duty's call. Comment runs that Ham will never catch cold from any political draft that's likely to blow his way.

Grateful

The purpose behind the Chamber of Commerce explosion against the New Deal was to give the Republicans and especially Republican newspapers all over the country something to chew on. Business men serving as backstage engineers of a G.O.P. comeback in '36 got tired of waiting for the party's political leaders to frame a coherent plan of attack and thought they'd start something on their own.

Politician

Not that the "dumbness" it turns out to be that—all on one side. It's true that many members of Secretary Roper's Business Planning and Advisory Council rallied nobly to the White House banner and helped dispel any impression of business solidarity on the NRA and social security issues. But otherwise the Department of Commerce has hardly distinguished itself in its relations with industry.

Leftists

New York's May Day celebrations gave indications of a significant churning in left-wing political alignments. Carl Brodsky—Communist leader—deplored the division between Socialists and Communists and pleaded for a united front next year. An important sector of the Socialist party agrees with him.

Plaintive

The White House is easily winning its silent tug of war with the

THE COWBOY-LAWMAKER AT PLAY

Boots were no hindrance at all to Rep. Percy L. Gassaway, Oklahoma cowboy-congressman, as he showed a few fancy steps while dancing with Barbara Beck, entertainer in a New York night club. It was just a bit of relaxation after his speech in which he blasted Senator Lane and Father Coughlin as "crackpots." (Associated Press)

WESTERN RAILROAD WEEK SET FOR JUNE 10 TO 15

CHICAGO—You'll be welcome 'round the roundhouse during the week of June 10 to 15. The iron horse, which of late has been hanging up new records of speed with safety, will be "at home" to the public in that period, which governments and mayors through a wide part of the nation are preparing to designate as Western Railroad Week.

Chairman Harry G. Taylor of the Western Association of Railway Executives announced today that the public will be invited behind the scenes of railroading. They will be made welcome at round houses, car repair shops and other plants of that transportation field which has been called "America's industrial backbone," and which is now in the van of progress in the nation's schedule, air-conditioned trains and a 1935 summer schedule of the lowest round-trip excursion rates in history.

Several committee members who had privately expressed their intention of voting for the amendment reported plaintively to its sponsors that they had to change their minds. After all, there are work-relief allocations to be considered.

Patched

New York would have loved to listen in on the conversation between Jim Farley and John Curry at Louisville last Saturday. There's no chance for Curry to regain his Tammany leadership but he's a pretty live ghost for all of that—and he may become even livelier. Insiders say he was the ace villain behind the blocking of New York State reapportionment.

Lost

The New York bankers knew exactly how Czesar felt when Brutus rushed at him with a dagger. Oliver M. W. Sprague's support for the banking bill was as cruel a shock. They hardly knew where to turn now that their pet New Deal martyr has joined the legion of the lost.

CONTRACT 1935 RULES EXPLAINED

Either End Play Or Squeeze. We present a bridge lesson from a young lady who although an excellent player, prefers to knit and kibitz. A declarer was set when two finesses were futile. The knitter pointed out that the contract could have been made by either an end play or a squeeze.

The dealer bid a spade, was lifted to two grades by North and then bid four spades, the contract, West and East passing. West opened the king of hearts and continued with a low one after East played the ten-spot. East won the second trick with the jack and then played the ace. South trumped two rounds of spades exhausted defenders' trumps.
