JEST SOME THOUGHTS—

Well, the rains won't let up long enough for anything to seep into our brain except damp weather, so all our thoughts are kinda damp.

Our actual tornado season is over for the South Plains but we heard a broadcast Wednesday afternoon that there was a tornado on the ground up in Bally County. It's getting to where it is open season for about any kind of weather nowa days.

If you can close your eyes and imagine tall pines, it would be just like living in east Texas for the past week or two. That's how our rains have fallen, and the muggy weather is typical of that part of the country.

It's not that we have anything against wet weather, which we know is very necessary to our economy, but we would like to be able to pull the strings and cut it off when we've had enough. We prefer not, sunny days, and we sure haven't had many of them this summer.

In fact, we haven't gotten to complain a time about how hot and uncomfortable we were.

You just can't depend on anything any more.

We're liable to get up one morning and the sun will be coming up in the west. The other evening when we were at the Methodist hospital in Lubbock visiting a friend, the sun went down in the south.

That's a fact. Looks like by the time we get around to having some hot, sunny weather, it will sure "nough be fall.

The nights are so chilly now that we have wished for our electric blanket a few times, but whoever heard of a blanket in August. We don't dare defy tradition, so we just freeze.

Our feet haven't been warm for many a night now. We're wondering if maybe we could sneak a small heating pad to bed with us, without tradition knowing anything about it.

Anyway, if we stay cold very much longer, we are going to light the furnace.

Perhaps taking drastic steps like this may bring on the sunshine. It's worth a try anyway.

SO, we'll roll off the page for another week.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

(We received the following letter this week from M. Prichard of London, England, where Harlan Cain is residing at the present time. We appreciate his hosts taking time to write, as we know everyone will be interested in hearing where Harlan is, and how he is getting along. We had missed him, but didn't know where he was. First is the letter from his hosts, and then a story follows that they were kind enough to send, Editor.)

Dear Sir, HI am taking the liberty of enclosing just a few lines about Harlan Cain in case you might find them of interest for "The Ropes Plainsman"

In confidence, I am Harlan's hostess whilst he is in London, and we have enjoyed reading his newspaper which he receives regularly from his parents. My husband and I are journalists and we thought a note for you about Harlan might please. He doesn't know I am sending it, but I'm sure it will please him.

With best wishes,
Yours sincerely
M. Prichard

Harlan Cain son of Mr. and Mrs. W.M. Cain of Ropesville is making the best of his stay in London. Although he is working hard at a job in the heart of the great city he finds time to study drama which is his great love. He will have seen, before he returns to Ropes, most of the best plays that are being performed on the London stage.

Harlan has also been able to have instruction from one of the best teachers of speech and drama in London, and it would not be surprising if the intensive which he has made, will not result in him being able to take up very English roles in the plays.

With the many attractions in a city like London, it is to a family's credit when their son can really make such good use of his time, and return so much the richer for his experience. By the time Harlan comes home he should have quite a story to tell his relatives and friends, and behind him he also leaves very many good impressions of a likeable personality, who should have a bright future.

Canning Green Beans

Do you have a surplus of fresh green beans? Can you buy them at reasonably low cost?

To enjoy their summer goodness the middle, try canning them now.

First, prepare the beans just as you would for cooking. Snap or cut into one or two inch pieces, or leave whole if you prefer.

Pack the raw beans tightly in clean jars to one-half inch of the top. Pour in boiling water, covering the beans until one-half inch space is left at the jar top. You may add salt—one-half teaspoon per pint and one teaspoon per quart. Wipe off the jar sealing surface and close according to the lid type used. Follow the manufacturer's directions.

Place closed jars of hot beans on rack in a pressure canner with one and a half to two inches boiling water in the bottom.

Be sure to use the rack to hold jars off the bottom of the cooker.

Tighten the canner lid securely. If the lid has clamps, tighten opposite clamps moderately first, then go back over the whole set tightening each pair as much as possible. Tighten only with your fingers.

Leave the petcock open until steam escapes steadily for 10 minutes; no air should be left in the cooker. (This seems like hours because of the noise) If air remains, the vacuum formed draws liquid off the beans.

Close the petcock when the steam has escaped.

As soon as the pressure reaches 10-11 pounds, (this won't take long when all the air is out) begin to count processing time. Maintain uniform pressure by adjusting the heat or by carefully moving the canner.

Process snap beans 20 minutes for quarts.

After processing, remove the canner from heat, allowing it to cool until the pressure gauge registers zero. Gradually open the petcock and remove the cover. Leave beans in the canner about 5 minutes, then place them right side up on the rack far enough apart for quick cooling. Avoid placing in drafts or on cold surface to prevent jars from breaking.

The quality of the canned product will be no better than the quality of the fresh produce. In other words, use only high grade beans for canning. If you do this and follow directions, carefully, you should obtain olive green beans with fresh-cooked flavor.

For more canning information, contact our office, 894-3159 for a copy of an Extension publication, "Home Canning Fruits and Vegetables."

Why do people eat? Basically we all eat because we have to—

it is simple as that. We eat to satisfy hunger and maintain life. This does not tell the whole story, however. Sometimes it is more important what foods people eat than just the fact that they eat. Malnutrition is not only a disease of those who do not have enough to eat but also of those who do not eat enough of the right kinds of food. In today's affluent age the words "empty calories" are used more and more often. Protein, vitamins and minerals are the three basic elements that add to calories to complete the nutrition picture.

Protein is probably the most expensive nutrient in our diet. Vitamins and minerals are generally more expensive when considered on a pound basis. However, the quantities of vitamins needed in the diet are minute in comparison to the protein needed daily. The average working male requires 55 grams of protein daily. A housewife requires 55 grams and growing youngsters between 12-14 years require 50 grams. The average working male could obtain his needed protein from a pound of club steak, or from a little over a half pound of cheese or from a combination of eggs, milk, hamburger and peanut butter.

Does it make any difference? Since protein is the most expensive nutrient in our daily diet it is interesting to look at the cost of protein in some "protein foods".

The table presents the protein content of some "Protein Foods" and relates their cost per pound of protein purchased. It is well to consider that protein from animal sources is usually higher quality than that from vegetable sources and protein in egg is used as the nutritional standard. By comparing the three sources of protein talked about previously we can see something about what protein from each of these sources cost.

Following is the food, the protein supplied and the cost of each: 1lb. club steak, 59.13; 1/2 lb. of cheese, 56.50; Combination; 2 oz. peanut butter, 14.06; 2 eggs, 13.08; 2 glasses milk (NF solids), 16.05; 3 oz. hamburger, 15.13. This makes a total of 58 grams of protein and the cost .32.

Actually we get some protein from almost all foods. The "protein foods" are the best sources but it is not necessary to consume only these foods for all our protein requirements.

TO ATTEND OSU

Marilyn Jean Merkle of Ropesville, is among 3,916 high school graduates who made reservations to attend one of Oklahoma State University's summer advisement and orientation clinics and enroll at OSU for the fall semester.

The clinics, now in their 15th year, emphasize the personal touch.

The high school grads talk with OSU students as well as faculty advisors about goals and major course emphasis. They also get a first hand look at college life and discuss general and specific matters, such as sororities and fraternities, residence hall living, clothing social matters and the like, as well as the academic side of a college career.

The students take a series of tests while parents are treated to a tour of the campus and a coffee in one of the several lounges in the OSU student union.

The clinics were scheduled through June and July and the last week of August. Classes begin Aug. 30.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Popejoy and children of Riverside, California are visiting with his sister, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Whitlock.

Mrs. Tommy Littlefield, Mrs. Irene Martin and Mrs. Arzie Martin have been visiting with friends who are sick in the hospital. They also visited in Seagraves Monday with Andrew Martin, who is in the hospital there.

TARBOX CITED

State Rep. Elmer Tarbox of Lubbock was among a number of persons cited recently by the Vocational Agriculture Teachers of Texas for distinguished service to vocational education.

The association presented its distinguished service award to a total of 28 persons at its annual meeting.

The awards are presented annually to those persons the association cites for outstanding service to their schools and community, and for support of vocational agriculture programs.

PROGRAM APPROVED

The Texas Highway Commission has approved an expanded program for multiple use of highway right of way.

The policy provides for the construction of parking areas, recreational areas and public parks beneath overhead structures or certain other areas of right of way.

Recreational facilities may include hike and bike trails, nature trails, bridge paths; basketball, handball or tennis courts, children's playgrounds or mini-parks and boat launching facilities.

Generally, the Highway Department will be responsible for construction of the site, but local governmental units will provide playground equipment or other recreational facilities. Cooperative agreements will be concluded with city, county, State and Federal authorities on request.

State and Federal agencies will participate in use of right of way for purposes relating to law enforcement, vehicular weights and measures control, safety inspection of trucks, immigration control, special gas tax inspection and other official functions.

The policy is subject to the condition that should the Department conclude that the facility has become a hazard to traffic safety or to be not in the public interest, the cooperative agreement may be modified or terminated.
