"Hopefully, both leaders and agents will gain new insights into leadership development that they can effectively put into practice in their particular areas of the state," points out Denmark. "Adult leaders are a vital part of an active 4-H program, and additional leader involvement is important to the success of 4-H."

4-H adult leaders who are interested in participating in the forum may contact their county Extension agent.

These contests are so varied in interests, that each student may find a contest of interest and participate if he so desires. The contests are so designed to have contestants that want to do "their best" in whatever contest entered. Each contest is judged by professionals.

Idalou Farmer Details Methods Used in Growing Cotton to Group in El Paso

If anyone has any doubts about the complexity of modern-day farming, they would have done well to hear W.B. Criswell's address before an audience of cotton industry representatives in El Paso last week (March 4-6).

The Idalou farmer told the gathering of scientists, industry officials, producers and guests how he grows cotton. His remarks came as a part of a panel discussion during the Western Cotton Production Conference.

"I realize that many of you may do a better job of getting a good stand than I do," he said. "However, I do know that a good firm seedbed, good seed and proper planting are important prerequisites in securing a good stand of cotton."

Criswell said he starts his seedbed preparation in the early spring by flatbreaking the land. Then he "floats" the land twice with a land plane to pulverize the soil and firm it down.

"I believe this makes the land work better all year long," he noted. He then applies a herbicide in February or early March, discing it into the soil.

"I try to get my bedding done in early March," he went on, "so that I can begin prewatering. By applying the herbicide ahead of bedding, I will not have to disturb the beds until planting."

Criswell said he usually tries to begin planting the last week in April, depending on when the soil temperature reaches 60 degrees (the temperature at which seed germination readily takes place).

"I try to finish planting by the 15th of May, but on occasion have gone up to June 1st, when my cotton was hailed out," he said.

Working the beds ahead of the planter with either a rod-weeder or cultivator, Criswell "runs a bed roller to firm the top of the bed so that the opening knife will leave a firm opening for the seed."

The Lubbock County farmer said he plants about 30 pounds of acid delinted seed per acre.

"This is probably too many seeds," he explained, "but I want to be sure of getting a good stand of stripper cotton. We usually have some hail during the early part of the growing season and our cotton gets thinned out a bit."

Planting at a depth of 1 1/2 to 2 inches, Criswell said he firms the soil around the seed to make sure there is good contact between

Austin—House members have sent the Senate a bill limiting penalties for speeding up to 70 miles per hour to a maximum $25 fine with no insurance rate penalties.

Representatives also approved extension of the 55 mph speed limit, but did not provide the necessary 100 votes to place it into immediate effect. The present limit, passed more than a year ago in conformity with federal energy-saving mandates, expires at the end of this month.

At issue is whether Texas again goes along with the federally imposed limit and retains eligibility for allocation of $303 million in federal highway funds this year.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe said he fears "there is a very definite possibility" the fine ceiling for speeds over 55 and up to 70 (the old limit) may endanger federal funds for the highways.

Briscoe said he would prefer a simple extension of the 55 mph speed bill as an energy saver, as well as a life saver and a highway aid saver.

However, the Governor stopped short of saying he would veto the fine bill, which provides for maximum penalties, including court costs, of $25 without charge to a driver's violation record.

Representatives hope to force the Senate to go along with the fine limitation by withholding 100 votes from the 55 mph bill until both measures are cleared by the upper chamber.

Registration Plan Passed
 All Texas voters will have to re-register between October 1 and January 21 under a bill passed by the Senate last week.

The relatively non-controversial bill sets up a new computer policed permanent voter registration system for the state.

Once all voters are signed up again, local registrars every two years would send out new certificates automatically. To help weed out ineligible, the certificates will be mailed in non-forwardable envelopes so they will be returned if the voter has moved.

Up to 30 per cent on current voter rolls are believed to be ineligible, mainly by reason of having moved, according to Secretary of State Marh White Jr.

A computerized file will be maintained in the secretary of state's office to help prevent this situation from occurring again under the new law and local registrars will be compensated for removal of ineligible names as well as for addition of valid new voters to rolls.

 seed and soil and to conserve moisture.

"If you don't do this," he cautioned, "the seed will swell and even though you get a shower to bring it up later on, your seed will have lost some of its vigor."

Criswell emphasized that he plants both high quality certified and select seed.

"I always plant enough certified seed so that I can catch my own planting seed for the next year. I am always cautious with the select seed," he pointed out, "because there are conditions during the maturity period and after the cotton is open in the field which can greatly affect the viability of the seed for planting purposes. Excessive rain or cold, damp weather during the latter stages of maturity and after the cotton is open will increase the free fatty acid, thus lowering the germination."

He added that the buildup of free fatty acid occurs in the process of seed deterioration, which usually takes place to some degree in any stored seed. If cotton is harvested under adverse weather conditions, the process is speeded up.

"I always have my seed tested ahead of delinting to check on the germination," he concluded, "and re-checked prior to planting."

Criswell was one of numerous speakers for the three-day regional conference.

Texas Tech in particular and the Southwest Conference in general received a slap in the face Sunday. And, no thanks, we didn't need that.

Less than an hour after Tech demolished TCU Saturday night, everything looked as though the Raiders were on their way to the "Runners-up Tournament." Corky Oglesby said that a scout had liked Tech, particularly Phil Bailey, and that things looked good.

Gerald Myers was pleased, because he was under the impression that he'd be called Sunday morning and invited. Now, the season is over, which is a shame.

Tech would have been a good addition. The Raiders fought back and made a fight of it. They have crowd pleasing ability and would have made a good representative. Instead, teams with much worse records will have their seasons extended. Tech and the SWC got the shaft. Our sympathies lie with the Raiders.

Of importance is the NCAA Regional Tournament coming up this weekend. Tech is host to four outstanding teams and South Plains fans ought to pack the Coliseum.

As in the past, when SMU played here, Tech and West Texas fans should come out and roar for the Aggies. The Saddle Tramps will do their part and it is fitting that everyone get behind the Southwest Conference champs against Cincinnati.

The tournament has an outstanding field, with A&M vs Cincinnati and Maryland vs Creighton. The Bearkats strung 15 straight victories to go from 6-5 at the start, while the Bluejays, in compiling a strong record, barely held off Tech at Omaha.

Maryland, of course, was ranked No. 2 in the nation prior to the ACC tournament and the Terrapins obviously have one of the best teams in the nation.

Coming from such a distance, it's doubtful that Maryland, Cincinnati and Creighton will bring many fans. Therefore, there should be plenty of seats available to West Texans and, if they don't support the tournament, they'll be the losers.

This is one of the great prelims and there will be some outstanding basketball. I hope the coliseum is filled to overflowing. Knowing Bearkat fans, they'll be here, even if in small numbers, while Creighton and Maryland will bring a few.

Dub Malaise was honored Saturday by being one of the 10 players chosen to the all-time, 50-year All-Southwest Conference basketball team. It's a signal honor and richly deserved.

Dub was an exciting player. He was, of course, one of the great shooters. He also was a ballhawk, a good feeder and a defensive man. Polk Robison told me once that, when he saw Dub as a sophomore at Odessa, he could have been starting for Tech right then.

No mention of Dub would be complete, of course, without remembering the Tech-Kentucky game. I mentioned it to him at the reunion of the all stars two weeks ago and he laughed and said that that was the one thing everyone remembered.

Tech was leading Kentucky by some five points, when Dub shot and missed, Kentucky recovered, scored. About that time Gene Gibson took Dub out and sent him to the showers.

"I had hit something like five out of eight when Gibson called time out. He told us not to take anything but "A" zone shots. Well, we had a fast break and I put it up from 20 feet out and missed.

"I looked over and saw a sub, but before he could come in, we got the ball again. And again I shot, but missed. This time the sub came in.

"Gibson asked me if he hadn't told us not to take anything but the "A" zone shots and I replied that five out of eight wasn't bad. That's when he told me to go take a shower.

"I had to walk past all that crowd to the dressing room. The worst part, though, was that the dressing room was locked and I had to come all the way back to get the key!" Dub laughed.

"I got the key all right and Gibson motioned me to come over. When I did, he said: 'For your information, you hit five out of nine.' I guess he forgot that other shot!"

Regardless, Dub was another in a long line of great guards with which Tech has been blessed, men like Carl Ince, Gerald Myers, Del Ray Mounts, Greg Lowery and others. Players like that seldom pass this way and, when they do, they aren't forgotten.

Hope to see you Saturday night. Get out to the coliseum and support Dr. Shelby Metcalf and the Southwest Conference champion Aggies. Let's pull them through to the final playoffs.

Little League Baseball Camp Set This Summer at Waco, Texas

Baseball season is right around the corner and Little League is making plans for its 1975 Summer Camp program.

Dutch Schroeder, Little League Summer Camp Director at Waco, Texas, said the camps are open to boys 9 through 15 years of age, whether affiliated or not with a Little League team. Located on the campus of Baylor University, the camp session is a combination of sound baseball instruction and a healthful all-around recreational program.

The camp experience is geared to building confidence and ability in each youngster while providing solid fundamental baseball knowledge.

In addition to baseball instruction, youngsters attend the camp participate in swimming, tennis, basketball, and other recreational activities. The latest baseball training aids are utilized.

Instructors and counselors for the camp sessions are drawn from the ranks of college coaching and physical education program and from school guidance personnel. All are selected for their ability to work with and understand the problems of youngsters of Little League age.

Each youngster attending the Summer Camp has the opportunity to make new friends as he participates in training, scheduled games and recreation. Coach Schroeder said applications are being accepted for either of the three camp sessions, beginning June 15, June 29 and July 13.

Youngsters and parents interested can obtain information and applications by writing: Summer Camp Director, Little League Baseball, T.S.T.I., Box 1999, Waco, Texas 76705.

When the great men of this earth are revealed in the happy hereafter, there will be many surprises.

THE TREE HOUSE

I remember the big elm trees in the back yard at the home place. One tree in particular was just like a huge friend, it helped us with so many things. It was a shade for hot summer days, protection from a sudden shower of rain, a landmark we could see from far away. It could be a quiet place, a happy place, a place to go and think. I remember how happy I was the day I finally climbed up into it without a boost from someone bigger.

We regarded that tree as a special place even before we built the house but the house added a bit to its character I always thought. The boards came from here, there, and yonder. The nails were old rusty bent ones pulled from the boards, straightened and driven in again. The tools were borrowed from Dad's workshop, sometimes without his direct permission. To this day he swears he never saw his best Disston handsaw again after it was used on that tree house and to this day I swear that saw was one tool we didn't use.

My big brother was in charge of the first part of the construction while the rest of us were assigned to the tasks of pulling and straightening nails and fetching the necessary tools and materials. He nailed the heavier boards in place for the main framework and after that we all had a hand in doing some of the building.

It was no great feat of engineering but, how proud we were when we all climbed inside and shut the door. I can remember peering out through the cracks and how safe I felt, safe from what I don't know but it did seem like a place of refuge.

The tree house was used for several years then torn down I suppose, I really don't know, we moved away from there. As I think of it now it seems that what made it so special was that it was something we thought of and then did, it was ours.

and accident insurance policies "perfectly clear" to the insured.

The bill would require presentation to each policy holder of a simplified explanation of its terms.

The bill, introduced by Rep. Ronald Coleman of El Paso, also seeks to establish minimum standards for health insurance coverage, including a basic level of compensation and uniform application from one policy holder to another.

Courts Speak

Texas Supreme Court held Texas Railroad Commission is without authority to set aside natural gas contracts between Lo-Vaca Gathering Company and Texas Utilities Fuel Company and others.

The Court's 8-0 opinion reversed lower courts which had held the regulatory agency does have authority to allocate gas in times of shortage.

The Third Court of Civil Appeals set an April 1 hearing on a Southwestern Bell Telephone Company appeal from an Austin district judge's ruling which stopped a scheduled $45 million boost in long distance rates inside the state.

AG Opinions

Counties are required to pay reasonable expenses of courts of inquiry for which fees are provided, Atty. Gen. John Hill held.

In other recent opinions, Hill concluded:

- Texas Board of Pharmacy may post a sign informing the public that a prescription department of a retail outlet has been closed on Board orders.

- Probationary and continuing contract provisions of employment in the education code are not applicable to public junior college teachers.

- Deposit of mental hospital patients' money in institution trust funds is constitutional; but the provision may be voidable by inmate action attaching validity of the deposit contract.

Short Snorts

A major new Texas Republican party group, "Associated Republicans of Texas", has been formed to promote election of local GOP candidates and legislators.

The Democratic Party's state rules committee met to talk about a program to increase voter participation, but most of the witnesses wanted to discuss party preference primary legislation.

Governor Briscoe asked designation of Johnson, Cottle, King, Jeff Davis and Childress counties as disaster areas due to weather problems.

blonde who may have had something else on her mind. Things got a little out of hand and at that same moment one of his nose female neighbors came along and thought she saw a lot more than she did. Charlie started the car, went back to the garage, got free of the blonde prospect, drove home and picked up his little wife and was back on Standpipe Hill in 15 minutes, parked in the same place as before. His wife thought he was more amorous than for a long time.

Next morning an anonymous phone call advised Mrs. Grubbs her husband had been seen the day before on the Hill necking a little blonde. The wife wanted to know what time that had happened. The troublemaker said it was between three and four p.m.

Charlie's little wife smiled to herself, smoother her blonde hair and bawled the caller out with: "That little blonde you saw Charlie with between three and four yesterday afternoon on Standpipe Hill, was nobody else but me!"

Evolution

by Rev. Robert Adams
Ropes Church of the Nazarene
Maybe people did ascend from lower animals, because some church members seem to be stubborn as mules about church work, sly as a fox in their business deals, busy as bees in spreading the latest gossip, quiet as a mouse in spreading the gospel, but they have eyes like a hawk to see the mote in a brother's eye. They are as eager as a beaver about barbecues but lazy as a dog about prayer meeting and mean as snakes when things don't go their way. They are as noisy as crows in calling for the church to advance, but slow as snails in visiting the lost and the unchurched. Many are night owls on Saturday night and bedbugs on Sunday morning, slippery as eels on Sunday afternoon and scarce as hen's teeth on Sunday night.

the Spirit still moving upon the people, many came seeking salvation from God, and praise God all claimed victory at the close of the altar services.

Though the revival services closed Sunday night, the Spirit that brings the heartfelt revival still lingers upon the people of Ropesville Church of the Nazarene.

Home Town Tales Retold

by Mack Stanley
Charlie Grubbs was a salesman at the Ford Garage. He had a very jealous wife and had to do some quick thinking to stay out of the doghouse with her. He was a real quick thinker though, no doubt about it.

This The Year For Post-Emerge Herbicide? Sugar Prices And Labor Costs Would Indicate So

There are two questions a sugar beet grower should consider in deciding whether or not to use a post-emergence herbicide this year. First, what are the alternatives to a post-emergence herbicide? And second, will the contract price for beets be as high as it was last year—making it worthwhile to do everything possible to increase yields?

The answer to the first question in the past has been the use of hand labor. This is likely to become a less reliable alternative in the future. Hand labor is becoming more expensive and government efforts to stop the flow of illegal migrant workers may drive the cost of legal migrant workers even higher. Also, it is obvious that unemployed persons from the urban areas are not going to move to the farm to hoe beets—they just don't know how.

The answer to the second question right now seems to be yes; by most indications the contract price for sugar beets should remain very high. Demand on the world market is strong. This would make it desirable for a grower to do everything possible to increase his tonnage and assure a high sugar content.

Most sugar beet growers (approximately 75%) have been using pre-emergence herbicides at or before planting time, and while generally effective, no pre-emergence herbicide will control all problem weeds, especially red-root pig weed. Some depend on moisture in the soil for activation and dry conditions can inhibit their effectiveness. Too much rain can cause runoff.

As a result, many growers are using post-emergence herbicides to eliminate weed "escapes." University studies have shown that a program using pre-emerge and post-emerge herbicides, if properly conducted, is an efficient as hand labor and less expensive.

Early post-emergence sprays should be applied after the beets reach the two true-leaf stage and before the weeds get too large (two true-leaf stage for some and four true-leaf stage for others). If the early post-emerge works by contact action, as is usually the case, the weed must be small enough to be affected and the beet must be big enough to withstand the spray.

Band width is usually 7". To make sure the chemical is properly banded, the grower should gauge the width of the band by measuring from the top of the beet to the spray nozzle, not from the ground to the nozzle.

In good growing conditions, where beets and weeds are growing rapidly, the grower doesn't have much time to apply the early post-emerge. He must be ready to go in there and treat within three or four days. This is one reason why several herbicide manufacturers recommend a pre-emerge. Heavy rains on the first day of the three or four day period during which the beets should be sprayed may prevent the grower from getting out in the field. Without the control provided by the pre-emerge, he would have a serious weed problem on his hands.

One problem that occurs in many sugar beet growing areas is red root pigweed. Some pre-emergence herbicides are effective against this weed, but may not provide sufficient control, as mentioned before. A post-emerge such as Betanex can be used in this case since it is effective against red root pigweed. It is a new product which was formerly marketed by NOR-AM under the experimental label of Betanal-475.

Unlike previous post-emergence herbicides, this one does not need directed sprays or low gallonage application, permits simple, easily assembled spray equipment and can be sprayed right over the top of the beets.

Post-emerge herbicides can help prepare beet fields for thinning, whether done by hand or machine. If thinning is done by hand, the post-emerge helps prevent costly labor premiums for weedy fields. If thinning is done by machine, a post-emerge helps provide more efficient thinning with fewer skips. Mechanical thinners can't tell beets from weeds, so the cleaner the row, the better the stand.

With all post-emergence sprays, it is strongly recommended that the manufacturers' instructions be followed. Damage may be caused if the crop is under stress—from the use of other chemicals, extreme heat (85°F), insect injury, disease or even bright sunlight—if the product is not correctly applied. Fortunately beets do have the ability to recover fast from such mishaps.

The Spirit Fell

Ropesville Church of the Nazarene closed its revival services Sunday, March 9th with the Spirit of God bringing great victories. The Rev. Russell Harris brought the word of God during the week, and the Gospel News Singers joined him for the weekend. The Spirit of God was faithful to the Christians who had been praying for God to move in a mighty way upon His people. Sunday evening the Holy Spirit moved through the singing and the preaching of God's word. With
