Turkey Hunting . . .
One of the most challenging hunts in Texas is not the javalina or whitetail, but the crafty old turkey...and the better you know this bird, the better chance you have for success. Game biologists in Texas have predicted a decent crop of birds this fall, due to spring rains in prime turkey country. Wild turkeys were found in this country by early explorers, and were carried back to Europe. During the fall and winter, they feed mostly on winter grasses, acorns and pecans. Hunters will often spot white turkeys in the field, and these are not domestic birds gone wild, but wild turkeys touched by a freak of nature. A full grown Rio Grande turkey will weigh up to 18 pounds. Most hunters prefer a shotgun for turkeys, with heavy loads such as No. 2 or 4 shot. Less than 10% of the turkeys in Texas are killed by hunters, and thousands perish annually by disease, weather, and predators.

Morrow-Truelock Vows Exchanged Saturday

Vows were read Saturday, Sept. 20 at 8 p.m. in the Elgin Avenue Baptist Church of Lubbock, for Karinne Morrow and Sam Truelock. Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Homer L. Morrow of Lubbock, and Mr. and Mrs. M.F. Truelock of Shallowater. Officiating was Rev. D.C. Hamilton, retired Baptist minister.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal length gown of white organza fashioned with a pleated ruffle at the high Victorian neckline and around the edge of the lace insert yoke on the empire bodice. The lace was accented with sequins and pearls, and the long sheer bishop sleeves with cuffs edged in the same pleated ruffling. The A-line skirt had a wide pleated ruffle at the hemline extending to a point up the bouffant back skirt, and around the bottom edge of the skirt which extends to a chapel length train. A satin ribbon encompassed the empire waistline. The bride's bouquet was a cascade of apricot spider mums and white carnations. Something old was a handkerchief belonging to her great grandmother; something new was her wedding attire; something borrowed and blue was a blue garter belonging to Mrs. Mike Lindsey.

Mrs. Sam Truelock

Mrs. Leslie Morrow, sister-in-law of the bride, served as matron of honor. She wore an apricot formal length chiffon dress fashioned with a lace insert on the bodice edged in self material and wide lace cuffs on the full sleeves. The bridesmaids, Mrs. Dennis Armistead and Mrs. Walter Johnson, Jr., both of Lubbock, wore matching apricot chiffon dresses. All the attendants dresses featured full circle skirts with wide ruffles at the bottom. They wore apricot carnation headpieces and carried cascade bouquets of apricot and green spider mums.

Flower girl was Angela Morrow of Grand Junction, Colo., niece of the bride. She wore an apricot organza long dress with white velvet sash and white flowers dotting the lower skirt. She carried a basket of apricot carnations and spider mums, with an apricot carnation headpiece. Ring bearer, Nick Morrow of Grand Junction, Colo., nephew of the bride, was dressed in a white suit with white bow tie and apricot shirt.

Candlelighters were Bart Pigg and Berry Pigg of Lubbock.

The groom wore a white Windsor tuxedo edged in black velvet around the collar, with an apricot carnation boutonniere. Best man, Steve Truelock, brother of the groom, wore a white Windsor jacket with black trousers and apricot shirt. Groomsmen, Gary Young and Leslie Morrow of Lubbock; and ushers Scotty Morrow and Leslie Morrow, wore black Windsor tuxedos with apricot shirts.

Organist was Jay Morrow of Abilene, brother of the bride.

Charlotte Greeson and Delman Hilton of Lubbock sang "Sunrise, Sunset", "Wedding Song", and "Whither Thou Goest".

A reception was held at the church following the wedding ceremony. The bride's table was covered with a white satin cloth overlaid with tulle, draped around the ends and sides with satin ribbons tying wedding bells. The 3-tiered cake was decorated with apricot flowers and pale green leaves and topped with an arrangement of satin bells, net and miniature flowers. The cake was served by Mrs. Tom Purdom and guests were registered by Joyce Hilton.

A crystal Fostoria antique punch bowl was used by Mrs. Mike Lindsey to serve the punch. Nuts and mints were served from silver trays which the bride and groom received as wedding gifts. A silver coffee service was used on another table, presided over by Gerri Leslie, cousin of the bride.

The bride attended Texas Tech and graduated from commercial college. She is presently employed as a data processor at TG&Y Warehouse. The groom graduated from Texas Tech with a BA in psychology and will receive his masters in sociology this December. He will then enter active duty as a 2nd Lt. in the U.S. Army in February at Ft. McClellan, Alabama. He is presently employed in the Physical Therapy Department at St. Mary's Hospital.

After a wedding trip to Durango, Colo., the couple will reside in Lubbock.

Notes and Quotes From Texas Tech

It won't be the first time Steve Sloan has met Texas when he leads the Red Raiders against the Longhorns Saturday. "I played against Texas in the Orange Bowl my junior year at Alabama," recalls Sloan. "However, I went out in the first quarter with a knee injury, but my substitute, Joe Namath, came in and did a pretty good job. It's super when you have a good backup like him."

-TT-

Although he was born in Austin, Sloan has never seen Memorial Stadium except on TV. "Do they play Taps or the Eyes of Texas down there before the game," smiles Sloan.

-TT-

They call them crunch and crunch and it's a toss up as to who is the most vicious—Texas Tech linebaker Harold Buell or the red-tail shark he keeps in his room as a pet.

"Actually, it's not very big yet," smiles Buell, a 6-1, 210 pounder from Houston Spring Branch, "but I'm hoping it will grow. Right now it just sort of stays in the plants and lurks—but with time and a little training, who knows he may turn into Jaws II."

Hey! Mumbblings of discontent in the ranks. You would almost think that New Mexico had beaten Texas Tech to hear the comments on Sunday. Ah, success, how fleeting is thy glory.

Forget that Tech is 2-0. The Raiders didn't mop up the Lobos as expected. Pass defense didn't look good. There were too many errors. The punting was weak. Boy! Four tough games coming up and if the Raiders don't do better, a month from now it will be 2-4.

And what is being said in defense? Not much, really. Even Coach Steve Sloan was not among the cheerleaders.

"We didn't play well the second half," he declared. "I guess we weren't ready mentally to play."

Steve even opened his postgame conference by saying that there probably wouldn't be as much humor tonight—and there wasn't. He was far more subdued, even though his own particular brand of drollness did creep in towards the end of his conference.

The Raiders didn't look sharp and no one can argue that point. The offense was shut down pretty well the last half, while turnovers plagued the team.

Fumbles and interceptions thwarted promising drives, penalties hurt and the Lobos stung with their passing and a belated rushing attack that kept the pressure on Tech. It was not an impressive victory, even though the Raiders came from behind to win.

Two plays, which offset each other in the long run, almost were forgotten. Sammie Williams dropped a pass that had seven points written all over it. That could have broken the game wide open.

The other was a pass on which interference wasn't called, although it appeared that Tech was guilty. That could well have put the Lobos in position to tie up the game and, with a successful two-point conversion, win all the marbles.

So, instead of optimism about Tech's chances of beating Texas Saturday, there was universal gloom. Man alive, Tech must play Texas, Oklahoma State, Texas A&M and Arizona on successive weekends—and three of those four games are on the road.

It doesn't look promising, but Tech doesn't need supporters with weak faith, it needs believers in miracles. And miracles are known to happen.

In two games the Raiders have used over 50 players in each. They have used a basic bread and butter offense with little trickery. They have played it pretty straight on defense.

In tough games I don't look for that many players to see action, offensively or defensively. I also think that you will see the pass used more and a little more diversity in the attack. In short, don't count the Raiders out on the basis of two games.

Texas, OSU and A&M don't use the pass like either Florida State or New Mexico, both of which have strong aerial games. Arizona will use it more like New Mexico did.

Instead, the first three teams are primarily ground teams. There's a big difference in preparing for such teams, compared to those with outstanding passing attacks. No, the first two games have been ideal for training against the middle part of the schedule coming up, the part that could make or break the Raiders.

Through the first two full weeks of play the Southwest Conference has done well, with 10 victories, 5 losses and a tie. It's a winning percentage.

There have been some shockers, like Oklahoma State beating Arkansas and Rice beating Houston. Otherwise, games have gone about as expected. Baylor apparently is for real and A&M was awesome beating LSU, while TCU may be weaker than expected.

There aren't many conference games for a while, with one this week, one next and no full action until Nov. 8. But by that time half the schools could be eliminated from contention.

Sofar everything upholds pre-season predictions that it will be between A&M, Texas, Arkansas and Baylor. Right now only Tech, Texas and A&M have perfect 2-0 records—and one of them will be 2-1 after Saturday.

By the time this hits the streets Pittsburgh probably will have clinched the National League East and will be set to play Cincinnati, while Oakland may have to wait a day to see if it's Boston or Baltimore—although that race, too, may be decided.

The stretch drive of the Orioles is unbelievable. As of Sunday, they had won 14 of 17, while the Red Sox again had faltered. If the Sox blow it, it will be incredible.

From the standpoint of fairness in competition, it's hard to believe that any court would uphold the NCAA's decision to limit traveling squads in college football to 48 members.

The home team already has an edge and the advantage in numbers makes it even greater. More and more coaches are playing a lot of men each game, especially with injuries dictating the role of substitutes.

But the rule was approved in the first place to save money and fewer players, more money saved. If you figure two to a room, it would be 24 motel charges compared to 30, with additional savings in meal costs, as well as air fares.

Still, to make it even, why doesn't the NCAA rule that the home team may have only 48 players in uniform? It might make no difference in the final score, but at least it would be equal treatment.

Frenship J-V Wins Game

The Frenship Junior Varsity won a hard fought battle with the Cooper JV by a score of 14-8. The Cooper JV scored first and tacked on a 2 point conversion. The touchdown came after a fumble by the Tigers on their own twenty.

The Tigers retaliated with a fumble recovery on Cooper's ten yard line. Lloyd Strong scored the touchdown from 4 yards out and also tacked on the extra point. No scoring was done until 1:30 left in the game, when Nick Olenik took the ball from a Cooper player and rambed 80 yards for a score.

Leading rushers for the game were Lloyd Strong and Gilbert Arvedo. The Tiger JV will play Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at Tiger Field.
