Results Of Beef Cattle Feeding Tests Announced

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS: The National Whirligig

WASHINGTON (AP) By Paul Mallon Investigation—The inside fight between the Morgans and the Rockefellers is getting warmer every minute.

The probable results of this inside war are beginning to become very clear. The Morgans are going to be forced to change their business methods.

Most of the senatorial investigators handled Mr. Morgan with kid gloves while he was on the stand.

The Morgans did not fear exposure of illegal business activity or excessive profits because they were guilty of neither.

A school child would hardly been fooled by Morgan's contention that his house had no control over the 137 companies on which his partners serve as directors.

There is always some phrasing going on about the non-shatterable Glass Bank Bill.

$10 Per Head Added Value Is Estimated

184-Day Tests With Yearlings And Hogs Conducted At U. S. Farm

Sixty sleek yearlings just off a 184-day feeding test at the United States experiment farm represent a probable profit to their owners of approximately $10.70 per head.

Results of the annual feeding test conducted at the farm under the supervision of Fred Keating were made public together with valuations placed on the stock by buyers Friday at the annual Feeders Day program.

In excess of two hundred persons were in attendance and a larger number participated in the luncheon given visitors.

Unground threshed milo heads placed the least desirable valuation.

Valuations Friday looked $6.25 per hundred for lot No. 4, $6.10 for lot No. 2 with one out at $5.00, $5.90 for lot No. 1 with two out

WASHINGTON (AP)—The senate investigation of J. P. Morgan and Company recessed Friday afternoon until next Wednesday.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Testimony that the United Corporation, whose books are kept in the office of J. P. Morgan and Company, hold an interest in utility operating companies that do a large percentage of the gas and electric business of the nation, was given Friday to the senate investigators.

George Howard, president of the United—a utilities stockholding concern—testified as to its organization in which it acquired stock in various utilities at $12,000,000 less than the market value from the Morgan banking partnership.

Temporary Truce Believed Signed By Japs, Chinese

SHANGHAI (UP)—Despite strict censorship and official denials due to fear of the consequences, there appeared no doubt Friday that the provisional Chinese-Japanese truce was signed at Miyun Thursday night.

Representatives of the Chinese and Japanese commanders were believed to have reached an understanding that until a formal agreement is signed China will undertake not to send troops into an area bounded by the Great Wall on the south, the Peiping-Mukden railway on the east and the Peiping-Suiyuan railroad on the west.

Home Town Talk

The Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion Post deserve the whole-hearted cooperation of the community in their Memorial Day program to be held Tuesday.

Last year these organizations sponsored one of the best Memorial Day programs held in Texas. Memory of men who have departed this life, but who served their country, many of them dying for it, ought to be hallowed.

Midland has figured out that she received $200 per day in business from tourists on the "Broadway of America." The tourist's dollar, according to Henry W. Stanley, of the extension division of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce, spent its money like this:

The American Hotel Association has shown, according to Mr. Stanley's Midland interview, that each tourist dollar received by hotels is spent as follows:

It is not our purpose to belittle a neighbor, but if you figure Midland receives $200 from the tourists each day, Big Spring ought to be getting $500.

Why not get a slice of this federal money to build a fine paved road on Scenic Drive, extending it from Highway No. 1, the Broadway, to Highway No. 9?

There was the refusal of David "Keg O'Neil" Goldman of Dallas to bow out against two of the toughest foes in the tournament, Willie Hunt and Tommy Cochran, both former champions. Goldman had to go 19 holes.

FOOD STORES
405 Scurry Red & Gregg

There should be a fresh, summer quality about the foods served—they should reflect the spirit of the season. For now the heavier, more substantial foods that have been appropriate throughout the winter have lost their appeal and the taste inclines toward green things, salads, fruits and the lighter meats.

For many lamb is the ideal meat, dish served as a crown roast or as chops. With lamb may be served new green peas, new potatoes and a delectable salad of cucumbers, sliced tomatoes and chopped new onions. To give added piquancy to the lamb serve a mint sauce or sparkling mint jelly. A suitable dessert may be a strawberry meringue or dishes heaped with diced fresh pineapple.

Ham is almost without peer in delicious flavor. Perhaps you may wish to serve a whole roast, ham Sunday, if so prepare it in the following manner to savor the full appetizing quality of the meat.

Baked Ham
Soak ham over night in cold water. In the morning place in a roaster and cover again with cold water. Boil slowly four hours. Drain off the liquid and remove rind. Score the fat in squares and stick with cloves. Bake in a moderate oven until juice from pickled crab-apples or peaches.

With this ham may be served spinach or cabbage which has been boiled in the liquid in which the ham was first cooked. Mashed potatoes, green onions and sliced tomatoes are excellent to round out the menu.

It may be that you will not wish to prepare a whole ham in which case a thick slice of ham may be baked in the following way:

Sliced Ham Baked
3-4 inch thick slice of ham.
1 teaspoon dry mustard.
2 tablespoons sugar.
2 tablespoons vinegar.
1 tablespoon water.

Mix sugar and mustard and rub on the surface of the ham. Pour vinegar and water around it and bake in a hot oven for 30 minutes.

Ham Souffle
Put 2 cups of milk in a double boiler and thicken with 2 tablespoons of flour mixed smooth with milk or water. Boil until thick and smooth, add 1 large tablespoon of butter and cool. Separate five eggs and beat separately. Then add to the well beaten egg 1 cup chopped ham and a little pepper. Next add cream sauce. Mix well and add beaten egg whites. Mix and put in large round dish that has been well greased. Bake one-half hour and serve at once.

Asparagus boiled whole and served with a butter sauce is a delicious dish. If you wish, you may surround a platter of asparagus with delicately poached eggs. Another delicious way to serve asparagus is on slices of hot buttered toast. For variety the asparagus may be served in a cream sauce or it is very good with Hollandaise sauce.

Farsley Potatoes
Small potatoes should be boiled and drained. Immerse them in melted butter to which has been added parsley cut in minute pieces. If you prefer the potatoes may be rolled in the dry parsley after they have been dipped in the butter sauce.

Appropriate Salads
A fresh fruit salad is tart and pleasant in flavor, and seems to fit in perfectly with springtime menus. A good combination is sliced apples, pineapple, orange and strawberries. With this may be served the following fruit salad dressing:

Fruit Salad Dressing
Yolks of two eggs.
Pinch of salt.
1 cup of vinegar.
2-3 cup sugar.
1-2 tablespoon cornstarch.
Butter, size of walnut.

Boil sugar and vinegar together and cool. Break egg yolks, add salt, mustard and cornstarch and mix with a little water. Put all ingredients together, adding butter, and HAPPY days are usually healthy days. Why not add to these sunny days!

Poor health and constipation go hand in hand. Get rid of common constipation by eating a delicious cereal.

Tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to aid regularly. ALL-BRAN is also twice as rich in iron as an equal weight of beef liver.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. How much better than taking pills and drugs—so often harmful.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Puts the Jinx on Body Odor!

Science Says Good-Bye to Medicine-Smelling Soaps!

Science has made a new discovery about body odor. It is caused by stale perspiration curds, and requires deep-pore cleansing. It cannot be ended by ordinary soaps, because their sluggish lathers cannot reach into the pores and cleanse them. Instead the soap combines with the waste material and forms clogging curds!

Kirk's Coco Castile soap works in an entirely different way. No matter how hard the water, this 100% pure vegetable oil soap breaks instantly into a searching, bubbly lather. This bubbly lather cleans deep into the pores, actually removes the embedded stale perspiration curds, rinses out completely, and in a flash. Thus if ends body odor at its source!

Delightful to use, Kirk's Coco Castile is entirely free from K. S. (medicine smell). And stimulating to the skin. A big generous cake, half again larger than the average toilet soap, and now at the lowest price in history! At this new reduced price, it is America's outstanding soap bargain. Be sure to ask for Kirk's Castile by name—at your grocer's.

DARLING FOOL

"I think—perhaps I have the feeling you'd be better off starting in some new place," she said heavily. "This is such a small place. You know how people are."

Angle looked suddenly. She hadn't expected this reception. Unconsciously she had braced herself for tears, reproaches, pleas. She had expected to be looked over coldly, scolded, rebuked. This quiet little woman with the gray eyes and the smile upon her face seemed actually to be accepting her.

She gulped. "Yes—I mean certainly, Mrs. O'Dare. That's what I was telling Bill only the other day. He doesn't exactly see it my way." Her defenses down, she plunged forward, voluble, excited. Bill and she could get a little flat in the city. She could get another job—she always did—and there were as many big garages there. Bill would be sure to find work. She forgot to be careful of her grammar.

"She does love him," the mother thought. "She's really a good little thing. If only— Even in her own mind she couldn't finish the sentence. If only Angle were not so palpably the product of the wrong sort of training, or rather the lack of training, her rebellious heart cried out! Well, it couldn't be helped. You don't choose your own wife. In Mrs. O'Dare's simple code, you made the best of it. Bill came back in awkwardly balancing a tray. He glanced anxiously from Angle to his mother, relieved at what he saw.

"I'll have to be taking Angle back now, mother," he said after an interval, glancing at his watch. "I promised Harnett I'd be back at 8. He's got to drive his wife to the Springs."

He was relieved, she could see that everybody had passed off so smoothly. Poor boy, he had probably dressed the order! She kissed him, something his roughened fair hair. Poor Bill, toughened at 22, anxious in love with the wrong girl! Well, it couldn't be helped. She sighed, watching the flash of Angle's sweater through the greenery. She would do the best she could. She simply would not think what the loss of Bill's earnings would mean to the little family. Kay was beginning to help now. That meant a lot. And poor Monnie! Well, there was no looking ahead, borrowing trouble. You had to live each day as it came. It was the only way.

She went about, straightening cushions, picking up glasses. Kay came in, hair dripping wet from a swim. She had gone with Rissy down to the river.

"Well?" Kay challenged her.

"They've just gone," Mrs. O'Dare sat down, sighing. "She's really a good little thing, Kay. Only so—"

"—she hesitated for a word.

"God bless," Kay finished the sentence for her.

"That's all right," Mrs. O'Dare said, smiling. "I suppose, what she does with the language, but somehow it does."

"Of course it does. Why to go and say 'God bless'?"

"We're all a little foolish, Kay. I want to understand in why she doesn't have Bill. It's true, she's smart, really. Like to read and, he's always been an ambitious."

"I know. That's the sad part. In two years—or less perhaps—I'm afraid Bill will be wondering what he ever saw in Angle. You can't make him understand now. No more trying."

"Not a bit in the world," Kay glanced at herself in the mirror. Her voice sounded grown up. Mrs. O'Dare reflected. Something had happened to Kay this summer. She refused to go back to high school, since Charles Eustace had managed to get this post at the library for her. Kay was old for her age. She would have been in her final year at school but she proposed instead to go to night sessions and study when she could in the daytime.

"I'm old enough to start helping," she had said proudly. Last year at this time Kay would have raged and stormed at Bill for having dared to shirk his responsibility.

She gave her sleek golden locks a final pat and turned to smile at her parent. "Well, that's that!" she observed.

"That's that!" Her mother echoed dryly.

Kay rushed upstairs to change her dress. She was invited to Dr. Waterman's house for tea. There would be other people there, Kay thought, but that wouldn't really matter. They were going to talk over plans for some amateur theatricals to be put on before Christmas. Kay was terribly excited. The Waterman's house was one of the finest in town. The doctor was Charles' uncle. Not even Geraldine Cardigan had ever been invited there. Sandra was asked occasionally when Lansing, the young son of the house, was home from college.

Kay smiled at herself in the mirror, remembering how stunned Rissy had been when she had told her about the invitation—to Sunday night supper meant you belonged to the inner circle in this town.

Crabbe Chosen As Perfect Specimen

KING OF THE JUNGLE

Standards of male beauty have changed in the past twenty years, just as standards of feminine pulchritude are constantly changing. Twenty years ago Prof. Tait McKenzie of the University of Pennsylvania executed a statue, "THE ATHLETE," embodying the average measurements and proportions of the four hundred best athletes of the period. And in this year, Bruce Humberstone, Paramount director, made a nationwide search for a physically perfect youth to play the role of the Lion Man in "KING OF THE JUNGLE." He measured some hundreds of athletes and was almost ready to cry quits when someone recalled the Olympic swimming champion, "Buster" Crabbe. Forthwith young champion Crabbe was sent for, looked over and engaged. And the said young champion is believed more perfect than the composite of four hundred

The afternoon was devoted to games. Jack Tingle received a ball as a prize for pinning the tail on the donkey. At the refreshment hour the guests were ushered into the dining room where a large birthday cake waited them. The cake was made especially for the honoree by Rankin Daniels. It was iced in white and held 14 blue candles in pink holders. On it was led the following: Happy Birthday, 14 Years. George Goodwin. This was sliced and served with iced tea and pink jello topped with whipped cream. Pink and blue nut cups were favored. Assisting Mrs. Hardee Cross entertained the many guests were: the honoree's mother, Mrs. John Cross; his grandmother, Mrs. J. G. Cross; and Misses Maurine Ethell and Esther Earley. Many of the guests registered in an attractive book which was presented to the honoree.

Man Who Declared He Planned Buying Into Hotel Under Arrest

A man giving the name of Woodfin Holesapple, said to be a member of a prominent New Mexico family, was returned Wednesday from Sweetwater to El Paso, by Chief Deputy Wiley and Robert E. Turner, assistant manager of the Hotel Husman in El Paso. Holesapple was reported in Sweetwater to have made known his intention of investing $50,000 for an interest in the Bluebonnet hotel there, and had been in that city some time. He was arrested on request of El Paso officers and returned to answer a charge of swindling the Hotel Husman of $40. The officer and Turner stopped in Big Spring enroute home to allow their prisoner to telephone relatives in an effort to raise the cash to pay the hotel and also the expenses incurred in bringing about his arrest and return to El Paso. When he left Sweetwater he left behind a valuable gold watch which he had "soaked" with his jailer for five packages of cigarettes.

He was awarded a place at Letterman Hospital, San Francisco, Calif., with a salary; but the recent cut in appropriations at Washington, D. C. forced the army to rescind all awards. John will go to Providence Hospital, Washco, where he had already planned to do his second year of interne work. John has received this honor in spite of the handicap of having to earn his way through. He has worked not only in the summers but throughout the school year. This past year he did night work at Baylor Hospital. Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hatch and Mrs. Mrs. Gerald Hatch of Waco are also expected to join the Big Spring members of the family.

FEEDING

Probable margins of profit were arrived at in valuing gains on top prices offered for each lot as against feed costs per steer. Using this basis of figuring lot No. 4 registered probable profit of $12.50 per head, lot No. 3 $11.92 per head, lot No. 1 $9.87 per head, and lot No. 3 $9.42 per head. Lot No. 1 showed an average gain per head of 375.96 pounds during the 184 days. Lot No. 2 showed 414.31. Lot No. 3 showed 343.80 and lot No. 4 registered an average gain of 289.82 pounds. Low feed prices during the year aided in the splendid showing. After visitors were served a lunch consisting of beans, "Gentlemen from Odessa," onion, pickles, black coffee and bread, they heard speeches. Outstanding speakers were John Burns, manager of the Texas live stock commission of Fort Worth and J. M. Jones, connected with the Texas A & M extension service at College Station. of tick eradication operations. The house passed an appropriation to repay stock raisers for expenses of complying with tick eradication rules, but as an item in the claims and accounts bill, leaving the pink bollworm appropriation in a separate bill. Reason given by Governor Sterling for vetoing a similar appropriation for farmers in this section was that amendments, totaling an additional $500,000, added by the senate, rendered the measure unable to meet the need for which it originally was introduced in the house. Governor Moody had vetoed the bill for the same purpose on the ground that it was unconstitutional as drawn up. Former Governor Ferguson has made known to local interests, through Ranger Williams, that his wife would sign the bill provided a practicable method of raising the money it required to be appropriated could be decided upon. It is understood there is some hope of obtaining passage of an entirely new bill if the one already

"KING KONG"

Ann in his arms again, "King Kong" rips up a section of elevated track and a train crashes to destruction. He leaves a trail of horrible death and terror. A great city is almost never before. All forces of the police department are called into play, but how can puny bullets wound a body that has survived for millions of years? "King Kong" has always lived at the top of a mountain. He wants a mountain now and these man-made peaks are amazingly easy to climb, though his captive thinks any moment her heart must stop beating. Surely there is a limit to the amount of terror she can endure. She can see not a chance in the world for her rescue now! On the topmost peak, like the Pterodactyl on Skull Island, come flying things at "King Kong." He thrushes out a flat and a bombing plane crashes into splinters! He grabs another in his fist—more wreckage. Thousands of bullets are being pumped into his giant body—is it possible he is destined?

Homecoming Today At First Presbyterian

Homecoming will be held at the First Presbyterian church Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock service. Every member of this church is urged to attend and answer to his or her name at roll call. The pastor, Rev. John C. Thorns, will preach on "The Consequence of Believing—Reconciliation." There will be no evening service because of the high school baccalaureate service to be held at the First Baptist church.

Rev. Thorns Moves From Coahoma To Sterling

Rev. John Thorns, who has been pastor of the Presbyterian church at Coahoma several years, has moved to Sterling City, where he has accepted the Presbyterian pastorate. Rev. Thorns, one of the first Boy Scout leaders in the country, has done a great amount of social welfare work in connection with his preaching activities at Coahoma and Foran.

Whirligig

Even the groups which own their subsidiaries are far from happy. They are deathly afraid that Congress will abolish consolidated returns. They have heard significant whispers to that effect. It is notable that the prospective victims of the new taxation are not even dreaming of doing any direct lobbying. They figure that they would cook their goose for keeps. Instead they are privately discussing how to hasten repeal and get from under that way. Some of them are willing to spend serious money if it will speed up the cause. At least one prominent Wall Street dry has become a convert since discovered what the new taxes would cost him.

Repeat

The inside objective of repeal organizations is to get ratification by July first of states representing over half the national population. If they succeed they believe Mr. Roosevelt can be induced to call a conference of governors from states which have not yet acted. This is something more than a vague hope although no commitments have been made. J. P. Morgan's statement in support of private banks was his own idea and chiefly his own handiwork. He sold his associates the idea that the best defence was a strong counter attack. No one on the inside expects it to change the trend of events but they think it will help Mr. Morgan make a good personal impression. Mr. Morgan is not the dominating force in his firm that his father was. The house has an inflexible unwritten law that no partner has authority to commit the firm to any proposition without the approval of his associates at a party men's meeting. The discipline is perfect. Decisions involving millions are made on the basis of

The American Offer at Geneva

In examining the American proposal submitted by Mr. Davis at Geneva, it is necessary to bear in mind at all times that certain of the present frontiers of Europe were established by force of arms and have never received the moral consent of the defeated nations. The Pullah-German frontier is the most conspicuous example. The prohibition upon the union of Austria with Germany is another example. Still another is to be found in the frontiers of Hungary.

The same treaties which established these frontiers provided that the defeated and aggrieved nations should be so disarmed as to prevent them from forcing a revision. This one-sided disarmament has been supplemented by a series of military alliances among the victorious nations. The treaties, however, acknowledged the right of the vanquished to seek revision by diplomatic means, which in fact amounts to the right to attempt to persuade the victors to consent to changes. The treaties also contained a promise that the victors would eventually reduce their own armaments to the level stipulated for the vanquished.

The present crisis at Geneva turns upon the fact that Germany is demanding definite action by France to reduce her armaments. Thus far France has refused to take action on the ground that the superiority of French armaments is the only existing guarantee of the present frontiers. To this French thesis the German government, through Chancellor Hitler, has responded with a public pledge that Germany would not seek to change the frontiers except by the pacific means provided for in the treaties. The French reply, which has not been formally given but is inherent in French policy, is that pacific pledges by a nation which has a deep sense of grievance can not be relied upon, and that Germany, any Germany but perhaps particularly Nazi Germany will lift the end force as much revision as it can. Therefore, the French have insisted and will no doubt continue to insist, that they will move toward actual equality of armaments with Germany only as they receive guarantees which would definitely prevent Germany from resorting to force to compel a revision of the treaties.

In the last analysis the French position is that since Germany is in moral rebellion against the Versailles Treaty, what counts is not what Germany says she will do about frontiers, but what Germany can do about them. The disarmament of France would enable Germany to do a great deal. Therefore, France can not disarm unless a dependable substitute is provided for the military strength which France is asked to give up.

It is obvious that no such substitute is to be found in the Kellogg Pact or in the machinery for conciliation set up at Geneva. All these pledges of peace, which are backed only by public opinion, to not, as the French see it, meet the issue, which is: What is to be done if Germany, made powerful by having equal armaments, follows the precedent set by Japan, and on the ground of national necessity and with a conviction of moral right, move to rectify the frontiers? To put this question is in effect to ask Great Britain and the United States what they are prepared to do to prevent the status quo from being disturbed by force. On the answers which Britain and America give to France depends the amount of disarmament to which France will consent. For the French, it must always be remembered, have no illusions about the frontiers of Versailles. They know they were imposed by force. They believe that only by force can they be maintained. They are convinced that in this generation the choice for Europe lies between peace on the existing frontiers and another European convulsion.

The problem of European disarmament is, therefore, dependent upon the guarantees which Great Britain and the United States are prepared to give that frontiers will not be revised by force. The problem is difficult because it requires that France, Poland and the Little Entente should accept pledges of future action from London and Washington as a partial substitute for the actual power of big guns, tanks, and aircraft.

What kind of pledges of future action are London and Washington able to give? This question has been asked ever since the Peace Conference. It was answered first by a proposed three-power treaty, which both the United States and Britain refused to ratify. It was answered again in the Covenant of the League which, under Article XVI, calls for the boycott of a treaty-breaking state. But the United States, in refusing to join the League, destroyed Article XVI. It not only refused to join such a boycott, but, since it reserved the old rights of a neutral, it made it impossible for Great Britain to enforce a boycott. For with the United States outside the League, action by Britain under Article XVI would have meant a conflict with the United States over neutral rights.

The new element in the American proposal at Geneva is the promise that if the United States agrees with the judgment of the powers, it will not enforce its neutral rights if the European powers blockade and coerce an aggressor. The exact words are that "if we concur in the judgment rendered as to the responsible and guilty party, we will refrain from any action tending to defeat such collective effort."

We do not, it should be noted, promise to join that collective effort. We promise no positive action of our own.

What, then, does the promise amount to? In substance it amounts to saying that it is for Great Britain to declare how far she will go in supporting the status quo. The promise offers nothing directly to France; France will not regard as important a pledge to refrain. The promise is an invitation to Great Britain to define her policy. For it is Britain and Britain alone, which is able to provide France with a security equal to actual armaments. Every since the American rejection of the League, Britain, because of American neutrality, has considered herself inhibited from defining her policy. By the American offer at Geneva that inhibition is greatly reduced, if not wholly removed.

It would, therefore, appear that the next substantial move toward reduction of armaments must be made not in Berlin, or Rome, or Paris, or Washington but in London. For only Great Britain can translate the American offer into a reality on which some actual

QUADRUPLETS GET DIPLOMAS

Perhaps the only set of quadruplets in the country to reach maturity intact are the Keys sisters of Hollis, Okla., who have just been graduated from high school together. Left to right: Mary, Leota, Roberta and Mona. They will be 18 years old June 4. (Associated Press Photo)

It is perhaps somewhat misleading to look immediately for "a decisive step in general disarmament," and perhaps unfortunate to raise expectations of that kind. The hard fundamentals of the problem can not easily be dissipated. The European frontiers are what they are. The victorious powers will not consent now to amend them; the vanquished will not really consent to abide by them. Promises to keep the peace depend, therefore, ultimately upon the power to enforce the peace. That power is now held by France and her allies. The reduction of that power can only be by substituting the power that

Britain alone can supply. How far Britain will supply it depends upon her own national policy reviewed in the light of our offer not to interfere. And our offer depends upon the evolution of American opinion. The world is at a point where it is dealing not with diplomatic abstractions, but with substantial differences of national interest.

The matter is so complicated that the good faith of the various nations can not be tested by the rapidity with which they consent to these radical alterations of their national policy. The changes required are so difficult and go so deep that it would be vain to expect them to come quickly. The test of good faith is, therefore, not how many "decisive steps" are taken in the next few weeks. The test is the patience and open-mindedness with which each nation will continue to explore this infinitely difficult problem and the evidence it is able to offer that it is aware of the difficulty and honestly interested in finding a solution.

My mother-in-law thought Cardui would help me. After I began taking it my appetite increased. I rested better at night. I kept taking Cardui until I felt well and strong.
