The Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., and the Textile Research Center at Texas Tech University are announcing a textile orientation tour to North and South Carolina Sept. 10-13.

Purpose of the tour will be to observe the textile industry in those states and its impact on their economies, to let those intensified textile processing areas know of West Texas' expanding textile industry, and to establish better relationships with mills in that area which annually purchase thousands of bales of High Plains cotton.

Director James S. Parker of the Textile Research Center (TRC) said that the orientation tour is one of several steps being undertaken to improve communication and relationships between West Texas growers and Texas Tech's TRC and the major textile industrial centers of the east.

"In addition to the communication that is possible through mail and other long distance media," Parker said, "this person-to-person communication can serve well to improve understanding about the fiber production and the industrial potential of this area."

"We will on this tour extend an invitation, of course, to the eastern textile industrialists to visit West Texas and the Textile Research Center," he said.

The tour will include a day at Springs Mills, whose headquarters is at Fort Mill, S.C. Springs is the nation's fifth largest textile manufacturer and markets a wide range of woven and knitted fabrics for apparel, home sewing, bedspreads, blankets and Springmaid sheets and pillowcases.

The company employs more than 20,000 workers in 24 plants in North and South Carolina.

An unusual opportunity to observe the manufacture of man-made fibers will be another highlight of the tour. The Celriver Plant of Celanese Corporation will be visited on the morning of Sept. 12. The plant is at Rock Hill, S.C., and is a major producer of those fibers.

The McNair Seed Farms has extended an invitation for tour members to visit their research and commercial farms at Laurinburg, N.C. The stop will provide

Social Security Curb

Under the Social Security program now in force, recipients are allowed to earn $2,000 in salary ($2,400 as of January 1st); if more is earned, for every two dollars earned one dollar is deducted from one's Social Security check.

Recipients can receive unlimited monies from dividends, interest, etc., so that the elderly who wish to work, or feel they must work, are, in effect penalized. Nothing could be less fair, nor less desirable.

In two days of hearings recently before the Senate Special Committee on Aging, argument was heard on both sides of this question. The argument to retain the present system is based on the theory that Social Security is essentially insurance against a loss of earnings; it is also argued that only a relatively small percentage of recipients would benefit if the system is changed.

Neither argument is impressive. Since recipients have usually contributed for years to Social Security, to reduce these payments because they have the industry or ambition to continue to work is contrary to the American tradition and work ethic; they are entitled to their Social Security payment as they would be to a pension, and all the more so if more fortunate citizens owning stocks and bonds are to be allowed to earn unlimited amounts therefrom.

Second, the fact that only a small number would benefit from the proposed reform has nothing to do with the principle involved. If only one recipient were affected, the case for reform remains sound—and Congress should enact that reform.

Broker Fees

Senator Harrison Williams, New Jersey Democrat who heads the Senate subcommittee supervising stock exchanges and the securities and Exchange Commission set a time for ending fixed fees among brokers or bring the industry under federal supervision as a utility.

Williams says he appreciates the financial squeeze affecting many brokerage firms and would support a hike in broker fees of perhaps ten per cent if one of these steps accompanies the hike, which would promise an end to a monopoly-type fixed-fee system, coming under growing criticism.

American Telephone recently announced it would sell its stock to employees directly, rather than forcing them to buy through the brokerage fee system; other major corporations, it is hoped, will do likewise.

In supporting a ten per cent brokerage hike at this time, to stave off failures in the industry, Williams would use the hike to gain pledges of reform from the Securities and Exchange Commission, that the present undemocratic system be reformed; reform is past due.

August 14th

United States, Britain, and Holland, the leaders of the Japanese Empire surrendered—on August 14th, 1945.

Although September 1st is remembered as the day the Japanese formally surrendered aboard the battleship Missouri in Tokyo Bay, it was on the 14th of August that President Truman announced Japan had surrendered. The outcome was no longer in doubt (Germany had collapsed on May 8th) but the announcement nevertheless brought an immense wave of relief and celebrating to the United States.

There were scenes in the streets of New York and Washington, and other cities, which have not been repeated since. The entire population was united in expressing its joy, and victory parties were held everywhere.

On September 7th, General Douglas MacArthur raised the Stars and Stripes over his headquarters in Tokyo—the first time in 2,000 years the Japanese had ever admitted total defeat. The flag was that which had been flying over the Capitol in Washington the morning the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor (December 7th, 1941), having followed millions of brave men on the long road to Tokyo.

Oil Profits

Higher gasoline prices are one reason for currently soaring profits among major oil companies. The higher prices were probably eased along, to some degree, by the elimination of independent, cut-rate dealers by the fuel shortage.

The disappearance of independents and the fuel shortage psychology certainly encourage hikes; congressional investigators have charged the shortage was contrived for just such a purpose.

Second-quarter earnings of the major companies certainly show a sharp jump in profits, among most. California Standard earnings were up 42 per cent. Atlantic Richfield profits went up 50 per cent. Standard Oil of Indiana showed a gain of 37 per cent.

Occidental Petroleum earnings were also sharply up over the same 1972 period. Exxon profits jumped 48 per cent, and Gulf, Continental, and other companies experienced sharp increases. Although various reasons are offered by company officials for the upturn, one primary reason is almost certainly higher prices. With soaring profits, it's evident gasoline prices could now (and should be) somewhat lowered. But independent competition, which traditionally held prices down, has in many cases disappeared.

Tips Offered On How To Save on Food Costs

Austin—Whether we like it or not, all signs point to a continuation of food prices at present levels or even increasing levels in the months ahead. The era of "cheap food" apparently is gone for the foreseeable future.

In the meantime, there are several things consumers can do to assist themselves in getting the most for their food dollars. Texas Department of Agriculture home economists recommend the following:

1. Do not resort to panic buying. Revert to your normal buying habits. Food supplies are plentiful. One of the biggest problems now is that consumers are rushing out and buying everything in sign. Hoarding only aggravates the situation. The law of supply and demand is working in relation to food supplies. Right now, demand is outstripping supplies. As a result, prices are continuing to increase.

2. Shop around; look for the best bargains. Read the grocery advertisements carefully in your local newspaper. Compare prices and values. Make out your shopping list in advance, giving top priority to basic needs. Get the best price possible by comparison pricing in your newspaper advertisements; then decide what you can spend for luxury items.

3. Use the cost per serving comparison rather than the cost per pound. Determine which is the best buy. Boneless meat which is all edible is certainly a better buy if prices per serving are considered.

4. Get a copy of the Texas Department of Agriculture's bulletin, "Save on Your Beef Dollars". Information in the bulletin will explain to you what "grade" means, what "yield" means, and how to choose bargain beef. Write to John C. White, Commissioner, Texas Department of Agriculture, P.O. Box 12847, Austin, Texas 78711.

5. Do not "buy up" commodities that cannot be kept indefinitely. Bacon, for example, can be kept only about a week.

6. If you live in a rural area, check with some of the vegetable farmers about buying directly from him. Freezing fresh produce is not difficult if you follow directions. Write for the booklet, "Freezing and Canning Texas Agricultural Products," from the Texas Department of Agriculture address above.

Austin—The biggest oil and gas lease sale on Texas public lands in a quarter century is scheduled October 2.

Land Commissioner Robert L. Armstrong said 1,348,610 acres in 1,712 tracts will be offered for lease consideration.

Most of the state tracts are submerged acreage in the Gulf of Mexico. Nine hundred and 40 Gulf tracts totalling 998,610 acres have been nominated, plus 563 tracts in Texas bays and inlets including 267,678 acres.

Oil and gas firms and individual bidders offer bonus payments via sealed bids on leasing of the state-owned tracts for a period of five years to explore and develop minerals. Armstrong said a record high interest is indicated in potential oil and gas production on state lands. "This will be the largest sale in more than 25 years," said Armstrong.

A sale involving nearly one million acres of land in 1965 brought more than $39 million in bonus payments to the permanent school fund.

Armstrong said the current sale is doubly significant because leases will enable the state to take its one-sixth royalty payment in gas or oil instead of cash.

A court case is now pending to determine if this can be done on existing leases. The "in kind" provision, specifically allowing the state to take oil and gas as well as cash, will be written into the October bid propositions.

Armstrong said this will permit the state to offer cities the option of buying some of their natural gas directly from the state at fair market value.

Single Member Legislative Districts Pushed—First legal move in an effort to have eight more counties divided into single member legislative districts was launched last week.

David Richards, Austin attorney retained by the State AFL-CIO, seeks authority for 10 individuals to intervene in a Tarrant County House redistricting case.

If the motion is approved by the three-judge federal court, judges will be asked to split Travis, Lubbock McLennan, Jefferson, Mueces, El Paso, Hidalgo and Galveston into single-member House districts. Each of the counties now has two or more representatives elected countywide. Richards claims this "unconstitutionally dilutes voting strength of racial and political elements.

Deceptive Practices Aired—State Insurance Board will follow a practice of publicizing names of insurance companies and individuals cited for unfair competition and unfair or deceptive practices.

Board Chairman Joe Cristie, meanwhile, announced eight cease and desist orders issued against firms or individuals in San Antonio, Dallas, Fort Worth, Abilene, Austin, Denton and Atlanta, Ga. for misleading advertisements or sales presentations.

The Board also announced plans to hire a consultant to examine its operations and help make them more effective and efficient. It plans to issue guidelines next month on establishment of Health Maintenance Organizations which provide medical service coverage at fixed fees.

Desegregation grants Approved—More than $13.1 million in federal grants have been approved to aid 54 Texas school districts support special programs to advance classroom desegregation this school year.

Texas grants will go to 31 basic education projects, 18 bilingual programs, nine compensatory programs, three special reading projects and two metropolitan area programs to help reduce minority isolation in large cities which have more than one school district.

A.G. Opinions—A county commissioners court may employ experts to re-evaluate property in the county for tax purposes, but a tax assessor has no such power, Atty. Gen. John Hill held.

In other recent opinions, Hill concluded: Salary checks cannot be withheld from a state employee to repay an overpayment which was not his fault under an improper order.

The State Textbook Committee may not recommend for public school adoption textbooks on which the state is to realize royalties from private publishers. Where there is no such arrangement, textbooks can be adopted containing materials cooperatively developed with independent laboratories financed in part from state Central Education Agency funds.

Texas Receives $1.4 Million in Funds

Urban and rural school districts serving the highest concentrations of children from low-income families in 46 states and the District of Columbia received an additional $28.1 million under grant allotments announced this month by HEW Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger. The state of Texas receives $1,490,717 in grant monies.

The awards are made under Part C of Title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, authorizing special additional grants to eligible urban and rural school districts.

The funds will be used to help defray the costs of compensatory education programs and are in addition to approximately $1.56 billion in Title I grants awarded school systems in Fiscal Year 1973.

Title I, the largest of all grants, serves nearly 10 million educationally deprived children in 13,900 school districts. Projects are designed to meet pupil needs for remedial reading, language development, mathematics, and other instructional programs and services.

The extra Title I money allotted under the Urban and Rural Grant program will be used during the 1973-74 school year. It will help support new or expanded projects for preschoolers and youngsters in elementary school in some 4,000 school districts.

To be eligible for a grant under the Urban and Rural program, a school district must have 20 percent of its school-age population drawn from low income families, or 5,000 such children

The amount each school district receives under the special program is limited by the district's basic Title I grant and the total funds available for the fiscal year.

Sept. 1, according to D.N. Peterson, registrar.

An assembly has been scheduled for 8 to 9:15 a.m., Aug. 29, in the Lubbock Municipal Auditorium for all freshmen who have not pre-registered and new transfer students where they will be given registration materials and a review of the registration procedures.

The remainder of that morning will be devoted to group academic advisement by colleges.

Classes will begin at 7:30 a.m. Tuesday, Sept. 4. Approximately 3,500 freshman students completed registration during early registration periods in late July and early August.

Weekly Market Report

College Station—"The overall food situation is currently in a state of uncertainty," Mrs. Gwendolyn Clyatt said this week.

"Under Phase IV controls, a more normal marketing pattern of fresh fruits and vegetables is expected," according to the consumer marketing information specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

However, demand exceeds supply is showing up on many commodity market reports. This will undoubtedly result in continued higher prices.

It is most difficult to forecast fruit and vegetable supply-price situations at this time, but consumers still can buy wisely if they watch for locally grown and nearby produce, make their own selections and take the best possible care of the items when they get home with home," she said.

Seasonal items include cantaloupes, peaches, nectarines, seedless white grapes, cherries, plums and pineapples.

Also cucumbers, corn on the cob, blackeye and purple hull peas, carrots and okra.

TRAFFIC DEATH RECORD "IMPROVES"

Automobiles kill more Texans every year. In 1971 the death count was 3,594. Yet the death RATE in relation to miles driven went down a tenth of a per cent—to 5.1 for each 100 million miles on the road.

The gain—from 5.2 to 5.1—was not enough. For one thing, the "gain" was actually a loss of 34 lives; deaths in 1970 were "only" 3,560. Only a 4% increase in miles traveled saved the Texas scorecard from a brutal beating. The estimated economic loss was the greatest ever: $1,045,000,000.

Traffic safety experts haven't given up. They still have hope of achieving the Department of Transportation's goal: Reduce the death rate by one-third by 1980.

Priority safety programs are hopefully plugging away at the deaths-per-100-million-vehicle-miles figure. It will have to drop to 3.6 to achieve that one-third reduction.

These priority programs are pretty basic:

- Safer cars.
- Safer roads.
- Safer drivers.

Safer driving means, among other things, more sober driving. Seven per cent, rated as "problem drinkers-drivers," cause an estimated one-third of highway deaths.

Clearly, we must keep these problem drivers off the road. And the best way to do that is to keep them out of automobiles. Research is being directed to that end. It should be supported.

SPORTS

by Joe Kelly

Maybe it's a sign of age, but if what we're watching on television Saturday is major league baseball, the 1947 Lubbock Hubbers would be the world champions.

That isn't to belittle those '47 Hubbers. Instead, it makes them look even better. Unless I am old, crotchety and jaded, today's major league action reminds me more of the old Sophomore League. The bats, balls, bases, uniforms look the same, but there the resemblance ends.

I am not sure that the oldtime Yankees, who showed their wares in an abbreviated game last Saturday, couldn't be leading the American League East today. That is, the oldtime Yankees right now.

Those of us unfortunate enough to see the two major league games last week, Monday and Saturday, must have been struck by the lack of cohesion. It was pretty sad baseball. Not only was the fielding horrendous, the pitching was atrocious.

From what I have seen so far, with the exception of Bob Gibson and a few others, most of the so-called pitching is throwing. Get the ball in the vicinity of the plate and hope the batter swings.

I'm not sure that you can blame it all on the pitching. If you get the batters to hit, there's no assurance that the fielder will know what to do with the ball hit to him. But any pitcher who gets two strikes on a batter and then walks him on four pitches ought to be fined.

It all adds up to a decline in ability. I still maintain that you can't have the kind of expansion we've had and still have enough players of true major league ability to man 24 rosters.

Errors there always have been, always will be. But those of both commission and omission are increasing. We have the designated hitter, a narrowed strike zone, bobbywhip bats, more rabbit in the ball—and what do we have? Simple. We have offensive baseball that is offensive, to use two meanings of the word. It's enough to make you cry.

Speaking of crying, there's been plenty of moisture North of the Red River. The pride of Oklahoma, the Sooners, got caught with their fingers in the cookie jar.

Instead of the proverbial slap on the wrists, both the NCAA and the Big 8 unbuckled the belt and let the Sooners have it. In the written reports of reaction by Sooner bosses you could almost feel the rain of tears. Oh, my, but this was harsh action!

Some institutions think that they can violate rules with immunity and receive only a cursory penalty, such as, tut! tut! You shouldn't do that. My, My, but that was naughty. Don't you all do that again.

Fortwith, those institutions gleefully express deep feelings of regret, and go right on violating the law. After all, "everybody does it."

Does every do it? I doubt it. I think that the vast majority of institutions are honest and aboveboard in their operations. I also think that the few who cheat should have the book thrown at them to preserve the integrity of the collegiate system.

I was as shaken as anyone when Tech found a basketball player without enough hours, costing the Raiders the championship. But, to Tech's credit, there was no coverup attempted.

I think that if athletic directors were completely honest, they'd admit that the college athletic scene has grown topheavy. The emphasis has been, and is, in most cases, on football.

Football is a tremendously expensive proposition and, in most instances, other sports suffer. Football, with some exceptions, carries the financial load. Like the squeaking wheel, it gets the grease. College athletic programs are designed around football. It's that simple.

But, until philosophies change, it will continue that way across the United States.

An investigation started the other day amuses me no end. It concerns primarily announcers on radio and/or TV becoming "homers" for the teams on which they report.

Any radio, TV or sports reporter is guilty, in spades. There is no such thing as an impartial person in regards to sports. To this day I get as nervous as a coach before a Tech game and I live and die a little with every win or loss, and I never attended Tech.

It is completely natural to get wrapped up in the team on which you report. The difference is in someone like Jack Dale, who can do such an impartial job that you would never know that he lived in Lubbock. Unfortunately, Jack Dale's are few and far apart.

Band Practice Underway at Frenship High

Mr. C.A. Bundrant, band director, expects to have about 90 in his varsity band again this year.

The band began practice on Monday of this week. They are practicing on a new style of marching, which is the G.I. style. In keeping with this they will play a different type of music, suited to this style of marching.

They will have a new spectacular entrance to the stadium at football games also. Quoting Mr. Bundrant, "They will enter the stadium in a blaze of glory, you will really like it."

Mr. Bundrant in a letter to the bandsmen said, "Our potential this year is the best ever, but we cannot have a top band unless all students do their part. This year we are going to have a non-nonsense, hard working, disciplined, serious band. This is the year of no foolishness, the year of the greatest Frenship Band ever!"

You will hear more and more talk about boat safety—safer boating and safer boats—as time goes by.

Both the boater and the boat builder will be important factors of an intensified, many-sided campaign for safer boating. Also playing an integral part will be the manufacturers of the various items that belong on the safety list—the buoyant cushions, life-saving rings, life vests, lights (spot and signal) and even the anchors.

Under the new Boat Safety Act, no craft not constructed or equipped in conformance with Federal regulations can be operated on Federal waters.

Peter M. Wilson, executive vice-president of the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers, pointed out at a boat dealers seminar in Seattle, Washington, recently that the boat owner himself has the primary responsibility to ensure that his craft is fitted out according to Federal regulations and thereafter maintained to those standards.

So, the boat owner is included, too. Wilson told the dealers that in addition to their responsibility to make sure that the boat they sell meets all standards, they should provide a conversion service for old craft to make alterations which may become necessary after standards for new boats and equipment have been researched and developed.

Boats and boating safety also dominated the discussions recently held at Hilton Head Island, South Carolina at the Sixth Annual Marine Aluminum Derby conducted for the Press by the manufacturers of aluminum boats.

Among the many safety features discussed were increased flotation in the craft itself, spill-over panels (splash wells) to prevent swamping, better fire-resistant characteristics of construction, stronger collision-shock resistance, gasoline spillage prevention, and driver-education programs.

With pleasure boating increasing in popularity, and more fishing and skiing throughout the nation, something must be done to reduce boating accidents. The new Federal regulations are just the beginning.

Courtesy and consideration of the other fellow are human characteristics that are difficult to write into law. But these two factors play an important part in safe motoring—be it on land or water.

Santa Fe Loads More Grain

Santa Fe Railway loaded about 89 per cent more grain on its line in July 1973 than in July 1972, John S. Reed, chairman and chief executive officer, announced in Chicago.

This July the railroad loaded 23,766 cars, equivalent to about 62 million bushels, compared with 12,563 cars, or approximately 33 million bushels in the same month last year. For the twelve months ending July 31, 1973, Santa Fe handled just under 200,000 carloads, or about 540 million bushels of grain, counting both cars originated on Santa Fe lines and those received from connections, Reed noted.

"A unique factor this year has been the continuation of grain shipments direct to Gulf ports for export rather than to inland terminal elevators for storage," Reed said. "This has adversely affected our ability to furnish cars because of the longer haul and the greater turnaround time for our freight equipment. The export movement is continuing at a fast pace and while we are still very tight on cars."

Food Nutrients

This is the fifth and last article in a series concerning food nutrients. Calcium will be discussed this week.

Calcium is the most abundant mineral element in the body. Teamed up with phosphorus, it is largely responsible for the hardness of bones and teeth.

1 can cream of celery, mushroom or tomato soup
1/3 cup water
3 cups cooked macaroni
1 tablespoon finely chopped onion

About 99 percent of the calcium in the body is found in these two tissues.

The small amount of calcium in other body tissues and fluids aids in the proper functioning of the heart, muscles, and nerves, and helps the blood coagulate during bleeding.

- Calcium is not absorbed into the body completely.
- The extend of absorption varies with individuals and conditions.
- Human adults can be expected to absorb from 20 to 50 per cent of calcium in a mixed diet.

Milk is outstanding as a source of calcium. Appreciable amounts are contributed by cheese (especially the cheddar types), ice cream, certain dark-green leafy vegetables (collards, kale, mustard greens, turnip greens), and canned sardines (if the bones are eaten).
