Upper-Cuts—

Giants of industry and labor are staking what is billed as a "battle to the death" here in Washington. If you could look at the slips already in the referee's hand you might be inspired to lay a ring-side bet labor gets the nod. But don't wager on a knockout. The referee has just got tired of the continued sparring. He has already tapped industry lightly on the chin by way of entertaining the crowd and is about to raise labor's hand in token of victory for this bout.

Administrator Hugh Johnson originally picked his deputies from among his own close business friends. He explained he wanted men around him for the herculean task of coding industry "who speak my language." Four men now have the inside track from all appearances. They are Donald Rieberg general counsel, who was counsel for the Railway Labor Executives' association; Edward F. McGrady, assistant for labor, who was national legislative representative for the A. F. of L.; Dr. Leo Wolman, chairman of the Labor Advisory Board, long connected with the organized labor movement; and Deputy Administrator K. M. Simpson.

Blocked—

All the feinting and left-jabbing industry can do will fail to break down one cardinal defense that labor has. This is the clause in NIRA that gives the employee the right to organize as he chooses for the purpose of collective bargaining, appointing what representatives he pleases for such bargaining. Johnson and his aides have been telling irritated industrialists over and over that Congress, representing all the people, put this clause in the Act.

Collective Bargaining By Labor Guaranteed By Recovery Chiefs

WASHINGTON (AP)—Any and all attempts of industries to interpret in their codes the collective bargaining labor section of the recovery act were ruled out of order Wednesday night by Hugh S. Johnson, the administrator. By settling the long-disputed question, the administrator put the bituminous coal and automobile industries on notice that their codes, now pending, must be altered to eliminate proposed qualifications of the law which guarantees to labor the right to organize in any way it desires for negotiating with employers.

One inch of rainfall occurred in Big Spring Wednesday afternoon and evening. Reports gathered here Thursday indicated from one-fourth to one inch of precipitation extended west at least ten miles, north and northeast eight or ten miles and that approximately one inch fell at Ackerly and a few miles northeast and southwest of there.

Wednesday's rain brought the total for this drought-stricken year to 4.06 inches as recorded at the government weather bureau at the airport. Of this amount nearly two inches, 1.97 to be exact, has fallen in two 24-hour periods, July 16 and August 23. Rainfall by months this year has been: January 19; February 8.1; March 11; April 10; May 49; June 0.1; July 1.81; August 1.07 to date. E. I. Batterwhite, residing in Center Point community, reported a good rain. Norman Reed of Coahoma said he got only a light shower. Ches Anderson, about nine miles west of town, reported an inch of rainfall and storage of considerable stock water. Andy Brown of Ackerly reported an inch fell there but extended only a few miles northeast and southwest. Rainfall was reported along Highway No. 9 northward for several miles. Rainfall also was comparatively heavy south of town.

CHAPTER 50

Frazier came in on Tuesday and wanted Mary to spend the evening with him.

"I am not in the mood to be entertained, Martin," she told him soberly. The strain was affecting her. She had arrived at the point where every way she turned, the figure ten thousand seemed to appear before her in fiery and threatening digits. Wellmade Products was still listed at fifty.

"You're mood proves that you need diversion," he insisted. "Can't you see you are working too hard my dear? All work and no play, you know—"

"Why don't you find someone who would be a really pleasant companion?"

"Now, I ask you if I am not the best judge of that? I shouldn't ask you if I didn't want to be with you more than anyone else in the whole world." His voice lowered to a confidential tone. "Give me a break once in awhile, dear. I won't ask you to marry me or love me, even, if you will let me see you tonight."

His promise amused her and touched her at the same time. She smiled generously. "Okay, then. But I warn you that I'll not be a very gay companion."

"You will be you, and that is quite enough for me." He was jubilant at the thought of seeing her, having her to himself for a whole evening, again.

But when they later sat facing each other across the delicately napiered table in a famous Park Avenue restaurant, Mary was so crushed and numbed with her anxiety that she was oblivious of practically everything in the world except one fact. In another thirty-six hours she would own a fortune for the stock that still remained at fifty and she had but four hundred dollars to her name.

She was miserable as only a person can be who has ventured far sense and is weighed byhand stas sense and is weighed with both the responsibility and the consequences of her folly.

The equitally gowned women all around her and their urbane escorts, were only vague components of a colorful setting; the music might have been a threnetic dirge. In accompaniment to her thoughts "Something is troubling you, dear," Martin concluded, with concern. "Won't you tell me about it? Perhaps I could help you."

"That's nice of you," arousing from her impassivity with an effort. "The fact is, there are a number of things troubling me, but I'm afraid you couldn't help me at all." She tried to affect a gaiety that she did not feel, for his sake. "You shouldn't be drowned in gloom. Business is looking up, you know. Look at Wellmade Products. That should be well."

Mary almost jumped at the word—it was like putting a finger on the vital spot of her painful misery. "Do you really think it will?" anxiously.

"Why not? Are you personally interested?" he asked quietly.

"Oh, I'm always interested—especially in new stock. Don't I do most of the advising of our customers? In a way, I am always tense until I know whether they win or lose. Don't you think I should be sorry that I had any part in your investment, if you should lose several thousand?" evasively.

He gestured with indifference. "Don't take my burdens upon your shoulders along with your own, my dear. Better let me assume yours, instead."

If only she could, she thought, frightened. When he extracted the bills from his well-filled wallet, with which to pay the dinner check, she envied his utter sang froid with regard to all money matters. She wondered how anyone got to the place where money was only the means to the end of living instead of being the end for which one struggled and lived.

For herself she would need to worry. It always seemed to be others' obligations that she was struggling to meet. Mary wasn't old enough to know that it is the self-sufficient and capable people who always must drag after them as long a train of dependents as they can manage, even with difficulty.

Mary wished, mightily, that she might experience a sense of security in knowing Mar. In Frazier and that his immense wealth might be her last desperate resort. But she knew that she never could accept what she needed and wanted from him without returning to him that which he wanted from her.

Nevertheless, it was something of a shock to her when he suddenly announced during the drive home, "I have to tell you, I'm leaving tomorrow for awhile."

"Where?" surprised.

"Is it possible you don't want me to go?" hopefully.

conservative men and extravagant women; or capable, ambitious women and irresponsible men.

No philosophy, however, helped her now. Facts, not theories were her concern. Figures did not lie, particularly when they reminded you every waking moment of such a predicament as Mary faced. And her waking moments were most of the nights as well as the days.

On Wednesday night, she almost wished that she need not live until the morning. There was just a chance—one in a thousand or so—that the market would open with an advance in Wellmade Products. It had closed at three o'clock with the new issue, obstinately, tragically, at fifty.

Tigers Split With Leaders

White Sox Take Two From Boston—Indians Beat Yankees

DETROIT—After outstanding work by Tommy Bridges on the mound and at bat had won the opening engagement of a double header with Washington, 2 to 1, the Detroit Tigers Wednesday suffered a return of their pitching weakness, and the Senators won the closing game, 9 to 3.

Bridges worked the entire first game, yielding seven hits.

Fred Marberry dropped the second game in the opening inning, walking four men, allowing three hits and four runs. Auker relieved him in the first and Hogsett took over the assignment in the third, but the Senators coasted to victory. Stewart went the route for Washington.

FIRST GAME
Washington ... 000 010—1 7 2
Detroit ... 010 000 001—3 10 0

Stewart and Sewell; Auker, Marberry, Hogsett and Paasek.

WHITE SOX 3-13, RED SOX 1-1
CHICAGO—The Boston Red Sox losing streak was extended to nine straight games when they were held to seven hits in a double header and the White Sox swept a twin bill, 3-1 and 12-1.

Sam Jones held them to three hits in the opener, while Ed Durst pitched a four-hitter in the nightcap and was deprived of a shutout only when Kress and Simmons committed errors after two were out in the ninth.

FIRST GAME
Boston ... 000 000 100—1 3 1
Chicago ... 011 000 01x—3 7 0

Fullerton and Gooch; Durham and Berry.

INDIANS 3, YANKEES 1
CLEVELAND—With Clint Brown scattering the Yankees' hits over five innings to outpoint Charlie Ruffing in a pitching duel, the Cleveland Indians Wednesday defeated New York 3 to 1 in the second game of the series.

After the second inning, when the Yanks scored their only run on a pass to Ben Chapman and singles by Lazzari and Dickey, Brown kept the world champions away from the plate. He struck out seven while issuing three bases on balls.
