We Travel--The Hermitage

PART V

The Hermitage, at Nashville, Tenn., is not only a national shrine because of its antiquity but because from it the policies of the United States government were once shaped; for the reason that Andrew Jackson in his time was one of the most powerful political figures in the country.

In that day of slow travel men came from all over the United States to the Hermitage to confer with Jackson.

Andrew Jackson was a southern aristocrat and a part of that life which vanished when the slaves were freed. There can be no question he never considered that part of the Constitution which reads, "All men are born equal", as applying to the Negro—he owned a hundred of them. He took good care of them—he fed them, clothed them and looked after them.

Andrew Jackson served two terms as President of the United States, 1828 to 1836. During those eight years the public debt was paid off and the government was free of debt.

In 1835 one Richard Lawrence attempted to assassinate President Jackson on the steps of the Capitol. In this incident Jackson displayed nerve and bravery, rushing upon his assailant with only his walking stick, and exclaiming, "Let me at him, gentlemen, I'm not afraid."

March 4, 1837, General Jackson left the White House to return to his beloved Hermitage which became the mecca for the leaders of his party. His influence continued in the affairs of the Nation until his death in 1845.

To the east of the mansion is the flower garden which General Jackson laid out in 1819 for his wife Rachel. We walked along the paths between the flower beds and in our mind we could see the tall, thin Jackson as he admired the beauties of nature, and knew that at one time he had stood in the same spot where we stood.

We also looked on the sundial, but we could not tell the time by the shadow.

The garden takes up about an acre of ground and contains more than fifty of the old plant variety, and great hickory and magnolia trees planted by General Jackson.

The garden is the Jackson cemetery where the family is laid to rest. Here is found the tomb of Mr. and Mrs. Jackson, which is beside the regular plot containing members of the family. This tomb was erected in 1831, built over the grave of his wife with a vault left for himself. The inscription of the General's tomb reads, "General Andrew Jackson, born March 15, 1767, died June 8, 1845." The inscription on the tomb of Mrs. Jackson is rather lengthy and was composed by General Jackson:

"Here is the remains of Mrs. Rachel Jackson, wife of President Jackson, who died the 22nd of December, 1823. Her face was fair, her person pleasing, her temper amiable, her heart kind; she delighted in relieving the wants of her fellow creatures, and cultivated that divine pleasure by the most liberal and unpretending methods; to the poor she was a benefactor; to the rich an example; to the wretched a comforter; to the prosperous an ornament; her piety went hand in hand with her benevolence, and she thanked her Creator for being permitted to do good. A being so gentle and so virtuous slander might wound, but could not dishonor. Even death, when it bore her from the arms of her husband, could but transport her to the bosom of her God."

There is the smoke house where the meat was cured and in it was the large kettle in which it was rendered. It is stated it took between 25,000 and 30,000 pounds of meat to feed the household and the slaves. There were two different casts of slaves — the house servants and the field hands. Those working in the house considered themselves a shade above the field hands. All the field hands ever saw of the Hermitage was the outside walls. (Continued Next Week)

TEXAS DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

The Texas Highway Patrol investigated 12 accidents on rural highways in Hockley County during the month of September, according to Sergeant A. E. Roberts, Highway Patrol supervisor of this area. These wrecks accounted for seven persons injured and an estimated property damage of $6,050.00.

The rural traffic accident summary for this county from January through September of 1963 shows a total of 80 accidents resulting in 17 persons killed, 65 persons injured and an estimated property damage of $44,145.

The veteran patrol supervisor listed some laws and procedures for night driving:
(1) Turn on your low beam headlight before dusk. The law requires headlamps burning from one half hour after sunset to one half hour before sunrise, and during daytime when a person or vehicle cannot be seen 500 feet away. (2) The law requires you to keep headlights on low beam when you approach oncoming vehicle within 500 feet and when you are following a vehicle within 200 feet. (3) Do not overdrive your headlights. Good visibility on high beam may vary from 250 to 300 feet. (4) If blinded by oncoming lights, ease off the accelerator and glance along the right edge of the pavement across the hood to be sure you keep in your lane. (5) Watch shoulder of highway for cyclists, pedestrians or animals, and (6) Do not wear sunglasses at night, at dusk or in daytime when visibility is low.
