H. D. CLUB MEETS

The Ropes Home Demonstration Club met June 21 in the home of Mrs. Joe Harris.

The program was given by Benny Redman. Slides were shown of his recent trip to Europe as a member of USA student band.

Members present were Mmes. J. M. Marcy, Charlie Ward, Ronnie Jones, Jimmy Sims, Ronnie Ayers, K. P. Shannon, Bud Rucker, Mansfield Thomas, Edwin Whitehead, and hostess, Mrs. Joe Harris.

Y. H. MEET

The Ropesville Young Home makers met Tuesday at 9:30 a.m., June 28 in the Homemaking Department of the school.

Vivian Liner, a representative of Southwestern Public Service, brought a most informative program on Meat Cookery. We saw filmstrips on buying meat, put out by Martha Logan's research laboratories. Mrs. Liner brought out, in her talk, the 3 T's of meat buying—Total to buy, Tenderneess wanted, Time available to cook it. Bone shape in the meat is a definite guide to tenderness. We enjoyed sampling a delicious roast, pork chops, broiled steak and chicken taco pie. These were garnished with pineapple slices, peach halves and tiny crabapples. This program was one of our most enjoyable.

Those attending were Betty Whitehead, Shirley Streety, Glynda Glenn, Anita Means, Sandra Smith, Mary Ann Jones, LaQuita Moore and sponsor, Carol Weale. Visiting were Vivian Liner, Mrs. Bobby McNabb and Mrs. Shellie Mayfield. We would like to encourage more visitors to attend our meetings.

Our next meeting will be Monday, July 18 at 8:00.

Shooting At Fosters Grocery Sunday Nite

Assault and attempt to murder charges were filed at Justice of Peace Court, Precinct 5, against Gaziel Rodriguez this past Tuesday.

Sheriff Weir Clem said that the charges came from a shooting which took place on Sunday night just across the road from Foster's Grocery, four miles west of Ropes, when John Garza was shot through the hand with a .22 pistol.

Two shots were fired, but the second one missed.

Garza was carried to the South Plains Hospital in Levelland where it is stated he will not lose use of his hand.

It is said the two men are brother-in-laws.

PRICES HAVE VISITORS

Saturday night visitors in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sid Price were her brother, Mr. and Mrs. Doyle Leverett, Beverly and Aneta, and Richard Underwood, all of Hobbs, New Mexico.

DISAGREEMENT

Homer Henderson

Have you ever gone through a day without experiencing disagreement? If you have, it was an unusual day! Most of us find ourselves in disagreement with something or someone. We disagree with everything from government policies or editorial points of view to the way the wife arranged the living room or how so and so called that ball a strike at the little league game. Disagreement is woven into the fabric of human existence. We cannot escape it. We must live with it.

Disagreement can be either creative or destructive. Two friends find themselves at odds over some point of view. Each is convinced at the correctness of his own position. Each time the subject is mentioned, tempers begin to rise; hostility flares. Eventually, it becomes impossible to discuss the subject without anger. Slowly but surely a wedge of silence is driven into the friendship. Disagreement becomes destructive. An open relationship between two friends is destroyed by a disagreement which can neither be resolved nor understood.

Two other friends also disagree, no less violently than the first two. However, each insists upon learning as much as he can about the other's point of view. Hours are spent in honest conversation. Both begin to see some value or truth in the opposite position. Gradually, the lives of both friends are enriched from the mutual sharing of different ideas. Disagreement becomes creative. A friendship is strengthened by frank discussion and deeper understanding of a disagreement. The disagreement may never be resolved, but understanding is achieved.

Just as the way in which we handle disagreement can create or destroy real friendship, it can also make or break a marriage. One professional marriage counselor advises, "Never go to sleep on an argument. Talk it out, and begin the next day with understanding." Notice, he does not say with agreement but with understanding. Two become one in marriage by the commitment to share openly in love. Two become separated, driven apart, by insistence upon winning an argument.

I believe we enter into the creativity of God when we resolve to build deeper relationships with other people even through disagreement.

EASTERN STAR NEWS

Many years of irrigation research have led to the development of a number of basic principles farmers can use to decide the time and amount of water to apply to cotton and grain sorghum on the High Plains, says Hockley County Agent, Bill Taylor.

Scientists have found that cotton uses about one-tenth of an inch of water up to about the square stage. Then the plant's water consumption increases rapidly until it reaches a peak of from .25 to .4 inches per day at the peak bloom stage.

Irrigation should be based on this water-use information says Taylor, but, of course will be influenced by rainfall and the watering capability of the irrigation system.

If only one irrigation will be made, the agent says it should ideally go on at early peak bloom. Cotton to be irrigated twice or more during the summer has been found to produce more efficiently when the first irrigation is applied in the first white bloom period with the others following in the peak bloom period, Taylor said.

More than ten years of studies at the South Plains Research and Extension Center, near Lubbock, indicate that a pre-plant plus two summer irrigations will produce the maximum net returns in the average year, Taylor said.

Each irrigation should apply 3 to 4 inches of water. Additional irrigations naturally increase per acre yields, but he says the yields do not increase proportionally with the amount of water added, except in dry years. Late irrigations are sometimes not paid for by the small increases in yield and they can lower the cotton's quality, the agent said.

Regardless of the number of irrigations following a pre-plant, the first application generally should not precede the first white bloom. Excessive moisture before bloom generally encourages excessive vegetative growth rather than fruiting.

With most farms in the County receiving good June rains, there will be fewer exceptions to this general rule. Situations where prebloom irrigation may pay would include droughty, shallow or sloping soil; irrigation systems requiring around a month to get across the cotton acres, and on early determinate cottons. Prebloom applications, even under these conditions, should be light enough to leave room for a rain following application. Every other row irrigation works good for this. With most cotton planted about May 10 the first irrigation would probably be given around the 10 to 15 of July with the second irrigation being needed about the first week in August. Rainfall could change this schedule.

In every row irrigation, the highest yield per acre-inch of water has been obtained with a pre-plant plus one summer irrigation.

"Even this efficiency may be increased along with increases in per acre yields with the same amount of water, by the use of alternate furrow irrigation," says Extension Irrigation Specialist Bill Lyle of Lubbock.

Taylor said that two other thumb rules worth remembering are that 450 gallons per minute put out one acre inch of water per hour, and that the holding capacity of Hockley County soils range from one inch of water per foot of depth on the sandier soils to around two inches on the tighter soils.

This permits more timely applications of limited water. Proper timing of irrigation is often more important than the total amount applied, Lyle says.

Grain sorghum irrigation is also important when planning the irrigation schedule on most area farms.

Grain sorghum uses less than one-tenth of an inch of water per day up to about the seven leaf stage and then the use rate increases rapidly. Taylor said the peak water use of more than .3 inches occurs between the boot and bloom stage.

Research indicates the best grain sorghum yields are produced when available soil moisture is kept at or above about 45 percent of capacity from the pre-boot to the soft dough stage. But Taylor said this watering schedule is seldom the most profitable and it results in extremely inefficient water use.

Two well-timed seasonal irrigations will generally give good yields and probably near maximum net returns on grain sorghum. The agent says these two irrigations ideally should be applied at pre-boot and at the late-bloom stage.

As with cotton, Taylor says research indicates one irrigation on grain sorghum gives the most efficient water use.

If rainfall is short, the boot stage is the approximate time to apply the one irrigation.

Much of the county feed crops was planted early this year and farmers striving for maximum yield will probably irrigate at least one time before cotton irrigation begins. Some farmers have already completed this irrigation in the lighter rainfall areas.

However, the agent said if conditions allow delaying this irrigation to the milk stage, research shows yields will be better even though earlier moisture stress may shorten the plant more than a foot.

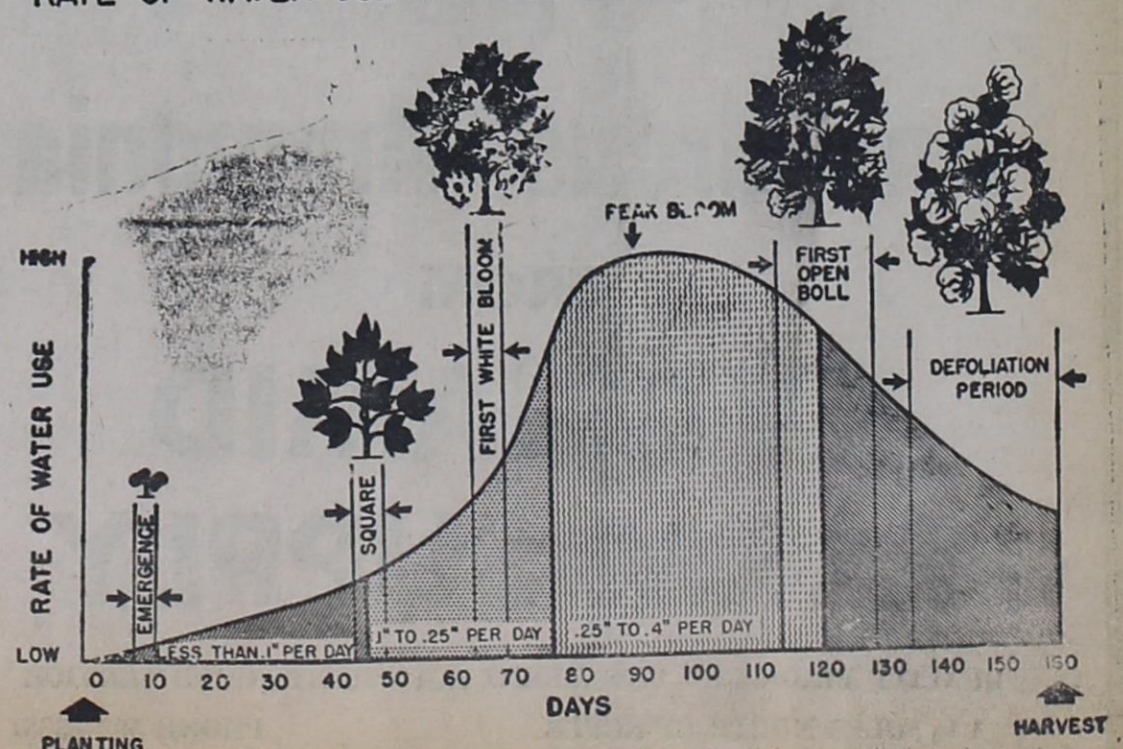

No matter how many irrigations are applied, he says excessive early moisture followed by later moisture stress should be avoided on grain sorghum if possible.

The agent explained that rapid elongation preceding the boot stage followed by moisture stress during grain development is likely to cause lodging as a result of charcoal rot.

This irrigation research information may not always work as expected on any one farm, Taylor said. But local farmers can consider the basic ideas and apply those that fit into their water- and crop situation.

The agent said he has more detailed information on irrigation research and recommendations available at his office.

Nola Knows

By Nola White

Dear Nola - I'm sick of being told how to hold my husband. I wish somebody would tell him how to hold me.

Worn-Out Wife

Dear Worn-Out - It does seem that there is a preponderance of advice on one side and a paucity on the other. My suggestion is that you tell him yourself.

Dear Nola - My husband will soon be 60, but he still fancies himself irresistible to the ladies. When one is near, old young, fat or lean, he puffs up and acts like a nincompoop trying to impress her. I know everybody in town laughs about this and I've kept my mouth shut for nearly forty years. Is there anything I can do?

Mortified

Dear Mort - Keep your mouth shut for another 40 years.

Dear Nola - My grand-dad is always telling me how lucky I am and how easy I have it. Every time I get something new, he says, "I didn't have anything like that when I was your age." This burns me up, plenty. What can I say that would shut him up?

Tom, Jr.

Dear Tom, Jr. - Your grand-father forgets how many problems go along with being young. He's jealous of your years, not your possessions. Try to understand and pity him.

Dear Nola - If a man loves a woman and she loves him, why should he have to provide for her?

Discriminated Against

Dear Against - If you loved the woman, you wouldn't have to ask.

Dear Nola - Are you a Baptist minister's wife?

Think I Know Who You Are

Dear Think - No.

Dear Nola - My girl friend won't hardly let me spend any money on her. She says I work too hard for it (I work in a grocery store) and that I ought to save it for college. We go for walks, watch television, and things like that. What do you think?

Larry

Dear Larry - I think you have one in a million, and you should treasure her for that.

gem she is.

Dear Nola - My brother treats me like he doesn't even know me. We go to the same high school, and he could introduce me to lots of fellows, but I don't even ask that. I expect only that he respond when I speak to him in the hall. At home he is strictly invisible.

Sister Sue

Dear Sue - Sounds like your brother is the one who has a problem. My advice is speak when spoken to.

Dear Nola - My husband's parents and I are in constant strife over our daughter, Jane. Jane is four and runs to her grandparents (who live with us) every time I say, "No". They then give her whatever she wants, or let her do what ever I've refused. I know Tom's mother has been talking to him about what a bad mother I am. Frankly, this is making me sick. They're ruining Jane. What can I do?

Defeated Mother

Dear Defeated - If Jane were to be hit by a truck, you wouldn't stop to ask questions. You'd do whatever necessary to defend her. This situation is unhealthy. Do whatever is necessary to change it.

Dear Nola - It seems like every girl I take out is eager to park. I may be an old-fashioned fellow, but I'm against this and I lose interest mighty fast in girls who are too brazen. What can I do?

Young Man

Dear Young - Walk!
