They Stand When National Anthem Is Played In The Theatre, But There's No Enthusiastic Singing

By MARY WHEALEY

We are a curious race, we Americans. Sometimes, the word stolid or phlegmatic would seem to apply. Then when that attitude has us placed, presto, the observation is wrong.

To stress Americanism, the Veterans of Foreign Wars are sponsoring the playing of the national anthem in the moving picture houses throughout the nation as a defiant gesture to any threat of Americanism.

At a theater this week when such a trailer was shown, the audience heard the words to stand and join in singing the Star-Spangled Banner. Nobody moved, until the strains of "Oh say can you see" were played. Then a man stood up, others followed slowly. The group stood in complete silence. Nobody hummed the words!

A few hummed along in a monotone, afraid of being heard! There was no demonstration, no cheering when the red, white and blue was shown waving in the breeze. Mostly the crowd seemed puzzled.

As the music stopped, the audience sat down, and flashing on the screen was a picture of one of the most loved of all animated cartoon figures. A general relieved laugh rippled over the audience and the show went on. One couldn't help but think of what such a scene might have been if the place had been in France and the song "Le Mar-sailles" or in England and the song "God Save the King."

Somehow one had a disappointed feeling in the great American public but this was followed by stronger belief that here was the answer to how our people feel about war. Mr. John Q. Public is cautious, yes, cautious and more than a little frightened about letting his emotions foster his ideas. Each new generation since the late 1800's has been taught in school, shown via the motion pictures, and heard by word of mouth from the war generation, of the futile gesture America made in 1917.

Each new generation as it has come along has been taught to believe that offensive warfare carried on by Americans in foreign fields is profitable, the slaughter criminal and the situation unchanged. The group that stood to hear the national anthem was not being defiant to tradition but rather waiting to see what was "behind" the move. They were wondering, inquisitive, and just a little skeptical.

One can only hope that this attitude will survive the chest-pounding and flat-waving that is going on in every section of the world. Maybe this is a more healthy frame of mind than existed 22 years ago when crowds jammed the streets in hysterical patriotism, and cheered wildly the finest in American manhood as they marched off to death and destruction.

Beige And Gray Combined In New Spring Outfit

The time of Tamerlane has inspired an American designer's color scheme for spring clothes of 1938, nearly 600 years after the oriental conqueror's reign.

In a season when "Beige-for-spring" is often heard, the designer (Del Monte Hickey) has made wide use of two beiges—"honey-sued" a light champagne tint inspired by the brew quaffed in Tamerlane's Samaritan garden, and "blackthorn," a deeper woody tone, named from a shrub in Asia Minor. "Amaranth," a violet blue, and "tyria," a deep fuchsia-toned red, both found in the mosaics and porcelains of Tamerlane's day, also are used.

Suits In Linelight

Sometimes the two beiges are combined in a color scheme noteworthy because of its novelty. Again they are accented by one of the deeper colors.

Suits are one of the most interesting parts of the collection shown. In a season when suits (with many dress and jacket combinations) are slated for a spring run, they are often designed on an "English silhouette" with jackets fairly soft at the top, fitted at the waistline and firm at the hips. Many of the jackets (often rather brief) have small high lapels and no back collars and are padded forward at the square shoulder line. Skirts are gored and fairly slender without being extremely straight, although some have fullness.

There are many beige suits—blackthorn or honey-sued—sometimes combined with a blouse of the contrasting beige tone and topped by a three-quarter length box coat (with no back fullness) made of big brown, beige and amaranth blue plaid wool. Again they combine an amaranth blue skirt or a tyria rose tailored frock with a fitted striped jacket or a short box plaid coat. The blouses of crepe or taffeta are soft in design and finished with such semi-high necklines as two little points climbing up the throat.

These advance spring costumes are shown with colorful accessories such as necklaces of "tor-toleshell" medallions, a bracelet of iridescent amaranth blue shells or a turquoise scarf whose color is repeated in a bracelet of turquoise shell plaques. The gamsutis and medium-large soft bags (often in the deeper blackthorn beige) are frequently of suede.

Many of the shoes are open-toed and some of them have not-too-thick platform soles of contrasting hue.

The hats of felt or suede shown with suits are softly tailored and fit well onto the head. A buck-thorn beige suede with a brim which rolls up in the back and dips slightly in front has a fishnet scarf wrapped around its crown and a homburg of buckthorn felt is tipped with a long pheasant feather.

Spring coats make another interesting section of this designer's collection. Their shoulders are squared and their necklines collar- or finished with small colorful plaques. A number of afternoon coats in beige or navy blue wool have fitted or corselet waists and full skirts. A similar neat-waisted full-skirted line is even repeated in a double-breasted tweed coat designed for spectator sports wear.

Most of the afternoon coats come into the salon over simple crepe frocks of contrasting hue. Other crepe afternoon dresses are topped with brief fitted contrasting jackets. A dark blue one, for instance, walks out with a jacket, accessories and feathered toque of amaranth blue. The whole collection emphasizes the importance of color in accents.

This spring suit—1938 American edition—combines a beige and gray checked wool dress having a pleated skirt with a fitted jacket. Wine colored leather accessories accent it and a feather of the same hue tips the beige felt sailor. (Costume assembled by Bonwit Teller.)

Mid-Continent Eyes Oil Hike In Penn.

Increase In Crude Production Is A Source Of Worry

TULSA, Okla., Jan. 26 (AP)—About the only encouraging element close watchers of the growing petroleum industry could find this week was an upward movement in the price of Pennsylvania crude oil. It was agreed here the increase of nine to 12 cents a barrel hardly could be expected to have any effect in the Mid-Continent areas but at the same time the psychological result was noticeable. The Pennsylvania increase, the first since 1927, was an indication, one market authority said, that the much-discussed increase in general industrial activity in the East had shown a tangible result in the oil business.

There was the cheerful prospect that the upward movement might eventually swing westward to help the Mid-Continent business out of its doldrums. For the moment the Pennsylvania development seemed at least a vague answer to western crude men who have been asking themselves and everybody else whether Mid-Continent crude could be expected to hold at present levels until the usual spring revival.

U. S. EMBASSY STAFF MOVED INTO FRANCE

MARSEILLE, France, Jan. 26 (AP)—The cruiser Omaha, flagship of the United States Mediterranean squadron, reached Marseille today, bringing the United States embassy staff from the Barcelona battle zone.

The only refugees aboard the 16-year-old warship besides the six embassy officials were two executives of the Spanish telephone company, Fred Caldwell, president, and George Dennis, treasurer.

The United States destroyer Badger arrived last night with 22 Americans from Spain.

All United States citizens now have been evacuated from the Catalan danger zone except those who elected to stay behind because of duties.

FRENCH PUT GUARDS ON SPANISH BORDER

PERPIGNAN, France, Jan. 26 (AP)—French officials today ordered every available mobile guard in the Pyrenees department to reinforce posts in "the emergency zone" along France's frontier in expectation of a flood of refugees from Spain.

Jules Henry, French ambassador to government Spain, warned authorities a vast migration, already begun by water, soon would begin by land.

Border officers said Dr. Juan Negrin, Spanish government premier, had arrived at La Junquera, Spain, opposite the French frontier apparently to seek locations for ministries that had fled Barcelona.

Some which moved into northern Gerona province have opened offices in the towns of Gerona and Figueras. Others were expected to go to La Junquera.

DISCUSSES CONTROL OF TUBERCULOSIS

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 26 (AP)—The same methods which have brought bovine tuberculosis under control should be applied to human beings, Dr. J. A. Myers, professor of preventative medicine at the University of Minnesota, said here last night.

Speaking before the seventh annual International Post-Graduate Medical Assembly of Southwest Texas, Dr. Myers said veterinarians have practically eliminated tuberculosis among cattle.

Their program, the speaker said, included isolation of the diseased cattle, treatment of the animals and the education of the cattle raisers.

TWO OUSTED FROM DALLAS PARK BOARD

DALLAS, Jan. 26 (AP)—Mayor George Sprague said two places on the city park board declared vacant by the city council early today probably will not be filled.

Sprague announced, after a 4-1-2 hour hearing before the council, that the places held by Harry E. Gordon and E. J. Ralston were vacant.

The mayor explained that, under the charter, Ralston has 30 days in which to ask a hearing where Gordon was to show cause why he should not be removed from the board. Gordon, vice president of the board, denied allegations that park board materials and labor had been used in remodeling his home.

COAL DISAPPEARS

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 26 (AP)—Anthony Martello has to go down into a mine to get back four tons of coal he put in his cellar. The bottom dropped out of his coal bin into an abandoned shaft.

WITH ALL THOSE CANALS IN VENICE, that Italian city had a flood to add to its watery content. Sudden thaws almost hid the pattern-marked pavement of this midtown square.

Randolph Field Pays No Attention To Defense Talk, Goes Ahead In Work Of Turning Out Fliers

RANDOLPH FIELD, Jan. 26 (AP)—While the nation debates President Roosevelt's request for a gigantic defense program, unruffled Randolph Field—"West Point of the Air"—quietly keeps its attention riveted to the job at hand.

That job—preparing young men for the long grind necessary to become finished aviators—requires approximately 150 instructors for three classes of approximately 244 men each annually entered in the army's only air training school.

"All we know about the proposed defense program is what we read in the papers," says Col. John Brooks, commanding officer.

"We have no plans for expansion, and so far as we know, the program doesn't affect us. Maybe if it is enacted into law, it will."

Col. Brooks said Randolph Field was operating at about capacity. "Our problem is one of air space," he said. "We use outlying flying fields now and about the only way for expansion would be for us to take more outlying fields, and there aren't enough available."

He said the army could, of course, establish another training base elsewhere.

President Roosevelt suggested to congress that a minimum of $325,000,000 was necessary to build up the defenses of the United States.

Most of the money would go toward developing the air service.

As a part of the plan, 20,000 civilian pilots would be trained annually. Money would be turned over to the National Youth Administration, which in turn would allocate it to various colleges and universities for courses in instruction.

TO ERECT SIGNS

Erection of signs along the Buffalo Trail, road which loops around the city park extension, is being planned here as a cooperative measure between all troops, said C. S. Blomshield, district chairman, Thursday.

Troops No. 1 and No. 2, sponsored by the Rotary and Kiwanis clubs, respectively, are to erect a large sign at the drive entrance with the inscription: "Buffalo Trail—Boy Scouts of America—'Building Boys Beating Mending Men.'"

Other troops will be asked to contribute sign markers along the trail and to erect signs at their troop sites.

DEL RIO-TO-DALLAS HIGHWAY SOUGHT

AUSTIN, Jan. 26 (AP)—House members from districts ranging along a line from Dallas to Del Rio pledged themselves today to promote construction of a highway between the two points.

After a conference with the highway commission the legislators decided to organize groups among their constituents for promoting the streamlined thoroughfare, estimated to save from 150 to 200 miles.

Rep. Kai Segrist of Dallas said Highway Commissioner Harry Hines told the group he personally would inspect the proposed route for which only two links of right-of-way were needed, those between Mason and San Saba and Goldthwaite and Hamilton.

Segrist said Rep. Albert R. Cauthorn of Del Rio reported the Mexican government was interested in the proposal and was considering possibility of extending the thoroughfare from Del Rio to Mexico City.

COMMITTEE TO VISIT SCHOOL FOR DEAF

AUSTIN, Jan. 26 (AP)—The house elementary committee plans an inspection trip tomorrow to the Texas School for the Deaf, located in Austin, whose management was subjected to a special committee investigation by the preceding house.

The visit will be on invitation of T. M. Scott, superintendent of the school. The special committee which has made a long investigation of Scott's administration has not yet reported to the legislature.

Subcommittee members will visit other institutions at Galveston, Terrell, Abilene, San Antonio, Wichita Falls, Waco and Corsicana. Rep. Rawlins Colquitt of Dallas, who made the motion for the inspections, said there had been some criticisms of affairs at the institutions.

Wool Growers Will Combat Trade Pacts

Treaties Blamed For Lower Prices, At Angelo Session

SAN ANGELO, Jan. 26 (AP)—Western ranchmen prepared today to throw the full force of their National Wool Growers' association into a fight against United States reciprocal-trade treaties with other nations.

Most of the leaders who spoke before the 74th annual three-day convention which closes here tonight, blamed reciprocal treaties for causing lowered prices during the last year.

Secretary F. E. Marshall of Salt Lake City, among others, castigated Secretary of State Cordell Hull for his silence regarding a rumored treaty with Australia.

Marshall said the state department's refusal to make a statement would mean next spring's wool clip would bring thousands of dollars less than normal because eastern buyers would make their purchases with assumption the tariff on Australian wool would be lowered.

F. E. Mallin, secretary of the American National Livestock association, Denver, declared the reciprocal trade policy was devised to lower the tariff.

"This device may well prove to be a major disaster economically and a stupid blunder politically unless a halt is called to the surrendering of domestic markets to foreign producers," he said.

Roger Gillis, major producer of Texas wool and spokesman for the industry, pictured Secretary Hull and his assistants, Francis B. Wayne and Sumner Wells, as inexperienced from a business standpoint. He said they were creating trade pacts with foreign nations to the ultimate disadvantage of American producers.

"Every pound of wool and every pound of butter coming into this country displaces that much wool and that much butter and also robs American labor," he said in discussing tariffs.
