THWARTING FROST—Recent study in Oregon showed how thermal waste water from industrial plants can protect fruit trees from frost. This orchard, sprayed with the warm water, escaped damage while nearby trees not treated in this manner suffered heavy losses.

Industrial Waste Heat May Prove Useful For Nation's Farm Crops

Using industrial waste heat to boost agricultural production may sound like a scientist's pipedream.

But a five-year study recently completed in the Pacific Northwest points the way to turning what is now considered a pollutant into a useful tool for farming in all parts of the nation.

Heated waste water discharged from industrial plants has been known to have a harmful effect on fish and plant life in rivers and other bodies of water.

By piping the thermal water into farm lands supporting both orchards and row crops, however, scientists have developed techniques for channeling the waste heat into a surprisingly wide range of agricultural uses. These range from protecting fruit crops from frost damage to cooling vegetation in hot weather.

The $13 million study, largest of its kind ever completed in the United States, was conducted near Springfield, Ore., on seven privately owned farms totaling about 170 acres.

Water for the study—ranging from 90 to 110 degrees—was pumped from a pulp and paper mill on the McKenzie River, about 2½ miles from the project site.

Tests involving the spraying of fruit buds and blossoms with warm water to form protective coatings of ice brought promising results. Scientists report that peach crops treated in this manner yielded full crops while unprotected orchards produced only light crops during the same period.

In hot weather, the heated water proved to be effective in cooling vegetation. By spraying the heated water through the air, scientists found that its temperature was lower than that of the air when it reached the plants. Evaporation also contributed to the cooling effect.

Greatest potential farming use of the thermal water, however, proved to be for underground soil heating.

Dr. Norbert A. Jaworski, director of EPA's Pacific Northwest Environmental Research Lab, said this was demonstrated by circulating the warm water in plastic pipes buried 26 inches below vegetable and ornamental shrubbery plantings. The experimental plot was partially covered by a greenhouse. Greatly increased yields and growth were reported for early spring asparagus, leaf lettuce, and cucumbers.

The higher soil temperatures also accelerated root development of rhododendrons and allowed marketing of some nursery stock a full year ahead of schedule, Dr. Jaworski reported.

Other experiments indicated the warm water can be used for crop irrigation purposes, if systems are carefully managed.

Potential harmful effects of heated water on crops and vegetation were studied from a standpoint of mold and bacteria in the soil and on plants themselves. Scientists say they observed no significant changes in the normal levels of these organisms during the five-year study.

Project scientists believe waste heat could become a sought-after commodity if techniques outlined in the study are eventually put into practice. The major source of this water in most parts of the country would be from electric power plants, they point out.

FRIENDLY ICE—Fruit blossoms, sprayed with warm water during cold snaps in Oregon, wore protective jackets of ice that prevented frost damage.

by Joe Kelly

Aw, shucks, peaches taste a lot better than cotton smells. Just wait 'till next year! That phrase usually is dusted off about this time of year in such places as Waco, Fort Worth, Houston, College Station, Dallas, and, Yes, Lubbock.

Aside from Baylor, maybe no area uses it more than West Texas, where the Cotton Bowl only sees a Texas Tech team every other year—when it plays SMU. It never has seen a Tech Southwest Conference team on New Year's Day.

Now that Baylor has come so close, we hope the Bears win their last two games and that Texas beats A&M. It would be more than fitting that the Bears, denied the Holy Grail of the SWC for 50 years, suddenly become the school that plays host to Penn State.

Baylor richly deserves the honor. Grant Teaff has done a fantastic job with the Bears, who have really put fight into football. They never have given up and they've had a great season.

As for Tech, the Raiders stand at 3-3 and must beat dangerous Arkansas Saturday to finish above .500 in the SWC. Indeed, a win is necessary for a 7-3-1 record, not the worst in the nation.

A lot of folks Sunday were of the opinion that Tech really ought to rescind the Peach Bowl bid. Fat chance. Tech can use the money, to say nothing of the extra practice time. And a win over Vanderbilt, while not exactly like beating Tennessee, wouldn't hurt, either.

As for the late, lamented game against Baylor, it obviously again was a case of Tech's offense playing up to its usual standard this year. Meanwhile, the defense played well, except for the gaping hole that allowed the winning touchdown to score.

But consider the offense. An intercepted pass led directly to the tying touchdown (aided by one of numerous mistakes, a 15 yard penalty for a late hit).

Also, the Raiders (defense) blocked a Bear punt and the offense again was given great field position on the Baylor 22. Here was where Tech could take command.

Instead, three plays after a first down at the nine, the Raiders had to settle for a field goal. It only delayed the kill. The Raiders simply could not move the ball when they had the chance.

Jim Carlen obviously lacks confidence in his offensive team, otherwise why would he have sprung an eight-man offensive line on Baylor in the tenth game of the season?

It worked the first quarter, worked a little less well the second quarter and failed to work in the third and fourth periods when Baylor was given new life. The Raiders had no sustained power in the last half—and the passing game was almost non-existent again.

I dunno. This year's Tech team unfortunately has fallen into what is becoming a Tech syndrome—high one year, low the next. Oh, the Raiders have a winning record, but the conference title still has eluded Tech's grasp and national ratings this year are gone.

Maybe the schedule change, when Houston starts play, will help. It seems that Tech puts everything into beating Texas and then falls flat. It almost seems the Raiders have better seasons when they lose to the Horns—and they do that more often than they win from Texas.

What is now, four or five unbeaten freshman-JV teams, superior recruiting and yet yo-yo seasons. Suddenly juniors and seniors are beaten out by freshmen. Maybe they are that much better. I wonder. I know the coaches rate their material, so obviously the upperclassmen are not as good.

And maybe ALL the teams, except TCU and Rice, are that much better. But beating Texas and losing to Rice is not what I consider a successful season, not when Tech is really better.

Oh, well, as I said, Atlanta is Peachy and whoever thought Ohio State was No. 1? The same man who said Woody Hayes was a gracious loser and a good sport.

Woody Hayes! It's a miracle that he didn't wrap a down marker around an official's neck. The Buckeyes finally played a team more equal in ability and lost. The shock was felt in all AP sports newsrooms around the nation.

I don't blame Lou Brock for being miffed, to say the least. He had every right to be downright mad, as well as hurt, by the snub from the Baseball Writers, who gave the Most Valuable Player award to Jim Garvey of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Brock set a stolen base record, hit over .300 and had a brilliant year. Unfortunately, I guess, he played for a team that didn't win the title. Poor Lou. He'd have gotten my vote.

I'd give a pretty penny to know how that bunch of hunters I saw in a Stamford cafe made out last weekend. They were busily drinking coffee, talking strong and eagerly looking forward to all the bucks they'd bring home.

Typically, few of them probably brought down a deer. But, for sheer fun, there's nothing to equal the talk before, the comradeship and the post shooting exchange of experiences. Shoot, hunters and fishermen probably have more fun than anyone, and do more to save the ecology of the country than all the do-gooders put together.

The election is over but the problems remain. I want to express my gratitude to the people of this district for their continued goodwill and support. I pledge my continued best efforts in Congress in behalf of our area and the nation. Thank you.

Rays of Hope

by Pat Stanton

Are you defeating yourself and others with your mouth? The Bible very clearly states that this is possible.

Matthew 12:37 says this so clearly: "For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned." This is true based on a preceding verse. The last part of verse 34 reads...."for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."

How is it possible to defeat yourself with your own mouth? The things that we speak forth through our mouths, actually become a part of our lives. If you go around saying how weak, low, and unworthy you are, that is the exact likeness that people will see in you.

If you want to get personal, check your own mouth. Look at the negative things that come out regarding your job, income, children, health, etc.

Some parents are actually keeping their children bound mentally, spiritually, and physically by bad confessions. They keep telling the child how bad he is or how hopeless a situation is. You can have a tremendous part in changing the life of your children if you depend on God's word. By this, I mean that you should find verses which state what you want your child to be, and then believe that whatever you say, it will come to pass.

This belief comes from Mark 11:23. If you don't believe it, just read it and experience the truth of it. You must remember that for the verse to be true in your life, you must be in fellowship with God on a 24 hour schedule.

Many farmers are defeating themselves with their mouth. They say they know that half the seed won't even come up and if it does, the hail, bugs, or something will get it. The farmer could just as easily change his negative words to positive words and reap a greater harvest. The Bible promises the farmer an abundant harvest, if he follows after God's ways 24 hours on a regular basis.

I hear many farmers saying that they know that they won't get anything for their crops this year. This is a defeated attitude that will hinder your income. You could change your confession and believe that God will cause the prices to rise. You should believe this way for twelve months out of the year.

Most Christians are living far below their rights, because they have never been taught that their heavenly Father does want them to prosper in all things. We would all have much more money, time, and energy to give in the kingdom's work if we realized this truth. We are to be whole in all areas of our life so that we may reach out to others.

If some people suddenly stopped saying their bad confessions, they wouldn't know how to talk for several weeks.

Some people are already getting ready to be sick this winter. They already know that they will catch the flu and they are telling everyone about it.

Well, I'm not planning to be sick now or next year, because I believe that it is God's perfect will that I always be at my best.

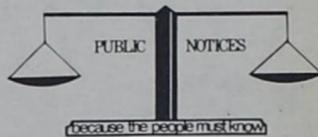

Read the following verses to find out what the words of your mouth will do: James 3:2, Proverbs 6:2, 12:18, 13: 2,3; 15:24, and 18:21.

"Whoso keepeth his mouth and his tongue keepeth his soul from troubles." (Prov. 21:23).

Read Ephesians 4:29 to see what words we as believers are to continually be speaking.

We will never be able to speak words of faith until our minds and hearts are filled daily with God's word.

A leader is a man who gets something done; not a man whose only ability is expressed in criticizing what others have done.

Theme of the Week Series:

Football To A Foreigner

by Cathie Parsley

"Hey, Boss? This is agent Z621Q coming at your from earth. Yes, sir, I'm here at this football game you wanted me to cover. Okay, I'll give you the details, play by play. "Gee, what a place! I can see why the price of tickets is so high. What? Oh, describe it? Sure thing. Well, it's big. It's shaped like a bowl turned upside down. It's got a roof and everything. There are some enclosed boxes around the stadium. I hear that it costs fifty thousand dollars to buy one. Huh? Let me think. It's five. . . carry one. . . squared times fortytwo. . . just keep your antennae straight, I'm hurrying. . . eight million gorbbluks, by our monetary system. Yes, it is a lot, isn't it?"

"They spent all their money on boxes. They didn't have enough to plant real grass!"

"Here come the teams. It's going to be an interesting event, Boss. Let's see, here we have the Dallas Cowboys and the Miami Dolphins. Funny names, huh, Boss?"

"Clothes? Well, the clothes are bulky and they look kind of uncomfortable. One team has white clothes and the other has green clothes. They're both wearing helmets with pictures on them. There are several more men wearing convict suits with whistles hung around their necks. I wonder what they do."

"Okay, the game is starting. The teams are lined up, eleven on each side. The convict is rotating his arm and blowing his whistle. One man in green has just kicked an odd looking leather ball off a plastic thing. A man in white has caught it, and he is running with it. Oops, he didn't get very far. All the men in green converged upon him, and really smeared him. They're all on top of him, Boss! I hope he is still alive under all those bodies.

"Yes, he's all right."

"Wow! Alllll right! Huh? Oh, well, there are these girls standing in front of the stands. They're not wearing much, and they're waving these paper mops. What grace! What form! What style! The players? No siree, the girls! Uh, yessir, the game, sir, right away, sir."

"Now the players are gathered into two little circles. They're breaking up into two lines. They're all in a sort of squatting position, and one man is leaning over the ball. One man, the quarterback, is in a semi standing position. The green teams has men scattered all over the place."

"The quarterback is rattling off some numbers. The lines break up, and they run into each other again. You should hear the sounds they make down there! It sounds like a combination aviary and ape house."

"Another man has the ball now, and he is running with it. He's doing better than his predecessor. He's going farther. He made it into this wide, open area called an end zone. That convict! He's waving his arms again. Oh, I understand now! They made a touchdown. That's how to score points and win the game."

Later, after the game. . .

"Yes, sir, that's all they did. Just run into each other. Yes, sir, they get paid for it. Yes, sir, people pay good money to watch them. No, sir, it doesn't make much sense, does it? I guess we could try it, on a trial basis. Supplies? Well, we need twentytwo men, some different colored, bulky suits, about six convicts, an egg shaped ball, some real grass, and a big first aid kit. Oh, and, sir? We also need pompom girls. Lots of pompom girls."

Spirit Awards

Last Friday, spirit awards were given to a number of people for their support during the entire football season. The students receiving this ribbon are Jean Shipp, Donna Hardin, Cynthia Coffelt, Vicki Roberts, Vicki Cline, Anita Alvarado, Suzie DeAnda, Lori Harrison, and Shelly Adams. Teachers were also awarded for their support. They were: Mr. McCasland, Mrs. Harrison, and Mr. Sherman.

These people supported the Mustangs through thick and through thin. They deserved these awards.

Varsity Girls Scrimmage Held

Last Saturday, the varsity girls had a scrimmage against Crosbyton, at Crosbyton. The three high point girls for SHS were: Cindy Coward, 19 points; Vicki Roberts, 6 points; and Kim Young, 6 points. They did a great job, which in turn brought a win over Crosbyton. The final score was 48 to 32.

Attention All FHA Girls

by Charles Krebbs

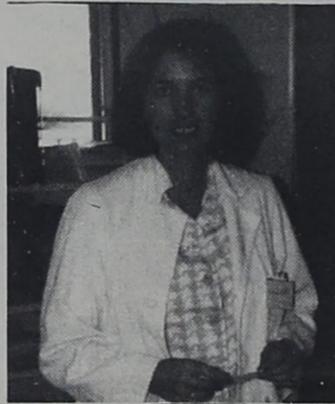

The superintendent has informed us that no student may pay for his or her letter or jacket! And letters cannot be placed on personal items such as sweaters. To be blunt, students cannot wear any articles given them by the school that cost more than $20.

There is one alternative though, students can receive jackets with printed information in place of letter and after graduation place their letter on their jacket.

This five year old rule will probably be amended in the spring of '75, so juniors this year will be able to receive their jackets, but seniors won't.

This was probably a good rule five years ago, but not now that inflation has hit.

Teacher Spotlight

by Anita Alvarado

The teacher we would like to recognize this week is Janice M. Dillard.

Miss Dillard attended two years at Decatur Baptist College and two years at North Texas State University in Denton. She graduated with a bachelor of arts degree in biology and chemistry. She spent the next three summers getting a teaching certificate at NTSU.

Miss Dillard taught two and a half years in Ralls, three years at Odessa, and is going on five years in Shallowater.

Janice has taught biology, chemistry, physics, advanced science, physical science, general science and Algebra I.

Some of her favorite activities are camping out, playing the piano, and working in her yard.

She is full of spirit when it comes to any activity at school. She has enjoyed teaching here and hopes to continue. Miss Dillard is well liked by all students. She is a great teacher and a great friend.

Senior Spotlight

This weeks Spotlight is Felicitia Mercado. She is 19 years of age and born on March 31, 1954. Felicitia has attended quite a few schools, included are Roosevelt, New Deal, Cooper, Ropes, and is currently attending here at SHS, where she plans to graduate.

After graduation she wants to get a job and have a happy life.

JV Last Game News

by Chet Webb and Alex Grice

Last Thursday night the Shallowater JV played Stanton at Todd Field. This was the best game our JV has ever played. The first half 42 points were scored; and it stayed that way for the rest of the game. Everytime the Mustangs had the ball, we scored. Frank Cuevas had 3 touchdowns and 1 extra point; Chet Webb had 3 touchdowns; Billy Glenn had 2 extra points and two interceptions; and David Monteith had 1 extra point. Offensive line players are Ricky Hawkins, RE; Tim Reep, RT; Tony Ruck, RG; Clay Dixon, C; Danny Green, LG; Rod Warren, LT; Joe Valdez, LE. Curtis Lester also played on the line part of the time.

The second half had no scores made. the JV's second team was in the game most of the second half. They did pretty good, too. Both teams were hitting but Stanton's team suffered three injuries as Shallowater suffered two. For a little team, Stanton packed a pretty good punch.

Defensive linemen are: Harold Hance, LE; Chet Webb, HBLB; Tony Ruck, NG; Curtis Lester, LB; Jesse Longoria, S; Danny Green, LB; Tim Reep, RT; David Monteith, RE; Joe Valdez, HB; Frank Cuevas, HB; and Billy Glenn, HB. The Junior Varsity finished out the season with a fine 82 record.

We would like to thank the coaches who made it all possible. We would also like to thank our supporters and our fine community. Let's get 'em next year.

The newspaper staff would like to thank Chet for his writeups. He did a great job in reporting about their games. Thank you, Chet.

These are all the players of the JV team composed of freshmen, sophomores and juniors.

Emotional Pep Rally Staged at Shallowater High School Last Friday

by Janie Serna

On November 15, 1974, the last football game was played. Like always, a pep rally was given, but this pep rally was no ordinary one.

To begin with, a nice gift was given to Mrs. Cox in appreciation for all the service she has contributed to the Shallowater Schools. This was a gift given on behalf of the Shallowater Independent Schools. Mrs. Cox gave a moving speech which earned a standing ovation.

After we settled down, Coach Grimes recognized the football boys for their hard work. The senior boys are the first players to start football at Shallowater. They were 7th graders when the football program was initiated. Few tears had already started to manage their way out of students' eyes at this point. The thought of this game being the last to be played by the senior boys and the thought of this being the last football pep rally to be held caused more tears to trickle down a few cheeks.

The pep squad (S.O.S.), presented the boys with a beautiful cake for their hard work and dedication. This cake was given to Jerry Harrison by Gracie Lupton.

The pep really continued with different cheers, although some of us were not able to make any noise come out of our mouths because of the lumps in our throats. It was a pep rally never to be forgotten by all seniors.

The school song was sung and the boys went back to the dressing room. As the last boy placed his foot inside the dressing room door, the student body and band marched outside to line up beside the chartered bus. This was to wish the boys good luck and to see them off.

As the football boys approached, more tears were shed. The boys were stopped and the band played the school song with students trying to sing it. Some of the seniors weren't doing a very good job because as we were trying to sing, we were also trying to fight the tears.

The song was finally finished and the boys climbed into the bus. After it had left, some of us were still crying and some were thinking or saying how funny it was to see some people crying. All I have to say to these people is that they'll never know how it is until they get there. Sure, some of them say, "Oh, I'll never cry," but once that feeling gets into one's body, there is no way one can forget about it.

Tears can be and will be shed.
