STRONGER GOVERNORS

The next president will, by the laws of probability, be either a governor or a former governor. Of our 33 presidents, 13 had served previously as governors. The percentage has increased. Since 1900 there have been 10 presidents, of whom one half were former governors. In addition six other governors, three Democrats and three Republicans, ran unsuccessfully for president.

A governor seems a natural choice for the higher office. Both the governorship and the presidency involve supervision over a number of departments. In both offices there are the problems of dealing with a legislative body. The theory works out in practice. While some of our greatest presidents never were governors, none of the less successful chief executives had such experience.

State Sen. Thomas C. Desmond of New York, with many legislative years behind him, discussed the governorship in the New York Times Magazine. He thinks that the governors have too little power. Too many state offices, which should be under them, are filled by popular vote. If anything goes wrong with them, people complain to the governor. But what can he do?

The states should make appointive a number of offices elected by statewide vote. The United States government would never function if the cabinet officers were elected independently, so they could defy the president. Why should the states prefer this chaotic arrangement? Governors should have more power rather than less.

MORE EFFECTIVE WAY

The National Congress of Parents and Teachers has put its considerable weight behind the principle that the best way to improve comics, movies and other entertainment for juveniles is not through censorship but through education and self-regulation. This will be heartening to all who believe that censorship, whether by government or by self-appointed groups, is a threat to one of our basic freedoms.

There are many in this country who think otherwise. They believe that censorship (though usually they balk at calling it that) is a necessary evil. They forget that intentions, however excellent, do not justify evil means.

There is no question at all but that some comics, some movies, some radio and television programs are not suitable for children and young people. The National Congress of Parents and Teachers recognizes this. It also recognizes that education, parental guidance, and efforts to bring about self-regulation by publishers and producers comprise a more effective—and far less dangerous—weapon than censorship has ever been.

TOP SECRET

Some people love to know secrets, and to have it widely known that they are important enough to hold them. This may explain some of the silly slapsdowns on information as to what our public servants are doing, slapsdowns which cannot be justified by any public need.

One of the latest has been revealed by Rep. John E. Moss of California, chairman of a subcommittee on government information. He was told that border patrol officers had been sent, of course at public expense, to attend rifle and pistol matches. Controllor General Joseph Campbell raised a question as to whether this was legal.

Immigration Commissioner Joseph M. Swing replied to Campbell, but ruled the information secret. If given out, would this information endanger anything but the reputation of the commission and of its head?

PLENTY OF HOT AIR

A recent survey of the debates and discussions of Soviet historians in the period of thaw and de-Stalinization and then of the new freeze provides many interesting sidelights. One concerns a controversy about a certain Russian named Krakutnoi, who is said to have "piloted the first hot air balloon in 1731."

After a manner of speaking this Krakutnoi is the spiritual grandfather of Krushchev. For Russia's Mr. K knows how to pilot his own hot air balloons.

England's Air Force Marshal Tedder calls possibility of there ever being push-button warfare a "mere fantasy." But he must admit that the "button, button, who's got the button" game during the recent years has been too near to war to be comfortable.

New York's Mayor Wagner, getting an early start in his campaign for re-election, attended 13 public gatherings in two days. If he maintains that pace until the balloting five months from now voters will have convincing evidence that he likes his job—and that he has the stamina to perform it.

Edward G. Robinson's art collection was sold recently for $3,250,000. With pictures selling for money like that it hardly seems wise to discourage the youngsters from drawing on the bedroom walls.

STRENGTH FOR THE WEEK

Up in one of the Northern states a young Protestant minister was defrocked because of the heresy of some of his beliefs. There were questions concerning his belief in the virgin birth, the physical resurrection, the responsibility of Adam for man's sinfulness, the validity of the miracles, etc. Heresy trials of history have practically always been concerned with a man's theological beliefs. I suppose these trials are necessary since there are some great fundamentals which are innate to the Christian faith.

But what about a few heresy trials of men who profess Christian faith but do not practice it? For instance, when someone asked Jesus how many times a Christian should forgive him, he said, "Not seven times but seventy times seven." If my mathematics is correct that's 490 times. In other words, Jesus said that Christian people should always maintain the forgiving spirit. (After you've forgiven a man 490 times you have gotten in the habit.)

there is a statement about going the second mile, turning the other cheek and when someone asks for your coat, give him your cloak also. It's so easy to dismiss this as impractical idealism but are we not dismissing Jesus when we waive His teaching aside?

On another occasion Jesus said, "Do not lay up for yourselves treasures on earth... lay up... treasures in heaven..." Don't you suppose this makes heretics out of a lot of us? How many of us have run ourselves literally to death seeking to become "the richest man in the cemetery" when, all the time, we assumed we were followers of the Man of Galilee who insisted on heavenly rather than earthly treasures.

We do we insist that heresy is in terms of theological belief only? Is not the greatest heresy that with which we are all tainted, the heresy of failing to practice in our lives that which we profess with our lips?

 WHAT DO YOU DO?
 The curiosity created by the mention or signs about freshly painted surfaces is uncanny. Being an inquiring sort of people, most of us will not take for granted such notice. We must have a feel or other evidence of the existence.
 There's logic in that old phrase, "Seeing's believing." And when we refer to a fellow from Missouri we usually mean that the guy must see it to accept it. Down here in Texas, however, many of us have to feel it before we are convinced. For example:
 I test each wall, each pole and seat,
 In hopes, perhaps, some day to greet
 Wet paint
 That ain't!

Model of Earth Satellite Will Be Displayed at State Fair of Texas

A full-size replica of the "man-made moon" which will be launched into space to circle the earth will be exhibited at the 1957 State Fair of Texas, Oct. 5-20.

The Dallas Health Museum will display the earth satellite model, along with much of the IBM calculating equipment which will gauge its flight and record its reports. A model of the three-stage launching rocket which will carry the "moon" into space also will be on exhibit.

The exhibits will be furnished by the U. S. Naval Research Laboratory in Washington, D. C., where the technical program is being carried out for Project Vanguard.

"Vanguard" represents man's first real attempt to conquer space. The earth satellite, a sphere 20 inches in diameter packed with intricate instruments, will be fired into outer space where it will circle the earth in an orbit some 300 miles out. Its instruments will send back data by radio which will assist scientists in their studies of space.

The launching of the "man-made moon" is one of the experiments to be carried out in the United States' scientific program for the current International Geophysical Year which began July 1.

It is estimated that the "Vanguard" project has already cost $57,000,000, with hundreds of the nation's scientists involved in work to perfect the satellite sphere, design the equipment to track it and build the giant rocket to take it up.

EXTRAORDINARY SANDHILL CITIZEN

By A. S. Jackson, Biologist

On one's first meeting with a kangaroo rat the impression is likely to be that here is a creature straight out of a Disney movie, characteristic of such without benefit of the cartoonist's license. Oversize, bugged out, black eyes, swollen cheek pouches, and two-legged locomotion give the kangaroo rat an impudent, winning personality not possessed by other members of the rat family.

Indeed, the kangaroo rat is neither kangaroo nor rat; it takes its name because the tiny front legs are not used for locomotion: instead, long hind legs and a long balancing tail like the kangaroo's enable the animal to move about with celerity. As to rationality, the kangaroo rat is distinctly American in distribution, and in kinship most related to the pocket mouse.

The kangaroo rat's preference for arid or semi-arid country and dry sands make it a typically western animal. Many tourists get their first sight of them when their headlights pick them out on lonely desert roads. Out of a total of some sixteen different species, four species are found in Texas. By far the commonest of these, both in number and in total area of distribution, is the Ord kangaroo rat (Dipodomys ordii). By way of explaining the technical term, Dipodomys is the Latin equivalent of "two-footed mouse," while the ordii refers to George Ord, an early American naturalist.

For those who might want to do some checking up on the identity of a questionable rodent at hand, the following description is offered as a key for the identification of Dipodomys ordii:

"Five toes on hind foot, the inside toe small and easily overlooked; tail relatively long, body actually and relatively short (averaging four inches); external cheek pouches; tail seldom white-tipped; dorsal and ventral stripes brownish or blackish; back, cinnamon buff; conspicuous white patches above eye and at base of ear. Total length, 8-10 inches; length of tail 5-6 inches; length of hind foot, 1.5 inches." (The Mammals of Texas, by Walter P. Taylor and William B. Davis. Bulletin No. 27: Game, Fish and Oyster Commission, Austin, Texas. August 1947.)

In Texas, the Ord kangaroo rat occupies the sandier soils of a broad belt extending from Corpus Christi west to El Paso, and northward through the Panhandle. In so vast an area, the environment of the kangaroo rat will naturally vary somewhat; the one constant requirement seems to be aridity of climate. Sandy soils are seemingly preferred by this little rodent, yet their burrows encroach on the mixed lands around Childress, and they have been turned out by lister plowing on some of the tighter soils of Cottle County. In Collingsworth County, Before The drought set in, their burrows were noted during the fall months well out in farm crop land where feed crops were shocked. But it is in the deep sand grazing ranges of the South Plains and Panhandle country that the kangaroo rat reaches its greatest abundance.

Such ranges will usually be characterized by growth of sage brush or shin oak; often both plants occur together. Here the telltale evidence of a population of kangaroo rats will be yellow mounds of sand usually, but not always, before open entrances. Often faint trails radiate from these; if traveled since the wind last blew hard, there will be mouse-like tracks and in addition the groove made by the long trailing tail of the kangaroo rat.

It is probable that the high populations of Ord kangaroo rats found in deep sand, shin oak or sage-brush pastures result from the greater diversity of vegetation occurring in such pastures, as compared to the vegetation of tighter soils. This variety of plant life provides better living conditions for the kangaroo rat.

Kangaroo rats are nocturnal and therefore come out to feed only at night. As adaptations for this type of activity, it has the large eyes referred to in the opening paragraph, furlined (external) cheek pouches, and a tremendous amount of industry for such a small package. Since travel and support are provided by the hind legs and tail, the front legs are left free to help in the harvesting of food and its transference to the cheek pouches. The latter is done at an amazing rate of speed, so fast indeed that the movement of the front feet on the spot are transported to underground storage chambers. Grass stems are also cut into convenient lengths and carried off in the cheek pouches.

Often only choice sections of the litter are utilized, and one sees a latter of discarded stems which may represent most of a stool of some species of grass. During spring and fall seasons, the kangaroo rats seem to undergo an urge to clean house; then the mound at the mouth of their burrows reveal an old saying in reverse: "what goes down must come up." The discard of a season's work has been brought up from somewhere far below and kicked out the front door.

After nightfall, pasture lanes are good places to see kangaroo rats darting about in search of food. In some seasons, when grain is being trucked on the paved highways through western country, kangaroo rats may be seen on the pavement at night gleaming grain lost from uncovered trucks. On the night of March 9, 1950, the author with a party of biologists spent the night in a motel in Canadian, Texas. After dinner, an expedition was made to the highway just outside of town where waste grain was attracting many kangaroo rats from the sandy roadside. A half dozen or so of the rodents were captured and confined that night in wastebasket traps, over which newspapers and magazines were laid. Placing so many of these privacy-loving animals together led to fights, and the resulting high jumps displaced the "lids" over the paper baskets. Since experience earlier in the evening had confirmed that the kangaroo rat is not prone to bite, it was not deemed necessary to get up to recapture them, more especially since a howling March norther was dropping the temperature well below freezing. It was then that the author received his first demonstration of the amount of energy that could be released by a few kangaroo rats loose in a room. Their leaps carried them all over the room like leaves in a whirlwind, and they soon had found the bed covers and ways to get beneath them. Thereafter, and regularly throughout the night, each time the thermostat clicked, one or more rats landed in the writer's face and whisked down his spine.

Not very much is known about the life history or family life of the Ord kangaroo rat. This lack of knowledge stems from the difficulty of studying an animal that spends so much of its life below ground, and will not, it appears, breed in captivity. In addition to numerous tunnels near the surface which are difficult to trace because of the loose sands, researchers report that there are deep and extensive burrows whose excavation for study comes under the name of hard work. It seems probable that, aside from serving as a home and a place of refuge from hungry predators, the kangaroo rat's burrow supplies a vital-ly needed escape from the high summer temperatures common to his range. In other words, the cool depths of the burrow are a necessity for an animal that seldom sees water, and must conserve the little water it gets from its food. To that end, nature has equipped Dipodomys with an excretory system that filters and recirculates most of the water but leaves him little margin for enduring 100 degree temperatures.

The flesh of the Ord kangaroo rat is tender and without offensive odor. Doubtless, were it not for our prejudices, it would be as delectable as quail on the breakfast table. Certainly, there are on the kangaroo rat's home range any number of flesh eaters without prejudice where he is concerned. Among these are the horned owl, the coyote, foxes, hawks, and badgers. The most of the hawk's hunting is done when Dipodomys is underground, but marsh hawks, in flight at the first crack of dawn, are known to catch a kangaroo rat now and then. Badgers excavate tremendous amounts of sand digging for them, but how successful they are in catching them nobody knows. An old cowboy once told me that he had witnessed coyotes jumping up and down on kangaroo rat burrows, and that after so much of this the rat would bolt from his hole, only to be caught. Perhaps so? For coping with predators, the kangaroo rat is endowed with an acute sense of hearing, hair-trigger reflexes, and a sense of orientation that makes him aware at all times of the exact location of his basement door. These suffice to keep the species, to use an apt phrase, several jumps ahead of the predator.

Ord kangaroo rats make interesting and docile house pets, and can be handled freely by children. Like other small mammals, they dislike to be grasped, and will struggle if held tightly. If loosely held, they soon cease to object to handling and become quite gentle. However, their nocturnal habits make it necessary to enjoy their antics after nightfall, and practically limits observations to the after-dinner period (a pair loose in the room would help to endure television commercials).

Almost any small-grain seeds will do for feeding pet kangaroo rats. Milo maize or commercial cracked-grain chicken feed is suitable. In season, stalks of green grass should be added to the diet. As pets they need snug boxes provided with bedding of dried grass or excelsior for day-time sleeping. Such boxes may be inclosed in a larger cage, if you want to keep the pets confined. If there is more than one, there must be a box for each, for they will not usually share quarters. Needless to say, house cats and kangaroo rats are incompatible.

Highlights and Sidelights From Your State Capitol

AUSTIN, Tex.—A big change is forthcoming in the operation of the largest law enforcement division of the State.

In keeping with recommendations of the Texas Research League, following a two-year study, the Texas Department of Public Safety will reorganize into six commands. Each command will be responsible to the central office in Austin.

Headquarters of the six regions will be in Lubbock, Corpus Christi, Waco, Houston, Dallas and Midland. Two Highway Patrol districts will be within each command.

Col. Homer Garrison will continue in the Austin office, in overall charge, with the rank of major.

Heading the various commands will be Capt. R. A. (Bob) Crowder (Lubbock); Chief Kent Odem (Corpus Christi); Chief W. J. Elliott (Waco); Capt. Rose (Houston); Capt. Guy Smith (Dallas); and Capt. W. E. Speir (Midland).

In addition to the regional reorganization, the new plan calls for four central divisions in Austin.

Identification and intelligence services will be in charge of Chief Joel Tisdale. Motor vehicle records and services will be handled by Chief A. F. Temple. Personnel and staff services will be directed by Chief Glen McLaughlin. And inspection and planning will be headed by Chief G. W. Busby.

Colonel Garrison said the move would result in more efficient service and greater economies. "The Texas Rangers also will come under the regional grouping," Garrison stated. "A Ranger captain will be within each region, and responsible to the regional commander."

TO DAM OR NOT TO DAM—A slice of the sort of troubles that plague Texas water development planning is shown in the current problems of the Brazos River Authority.

At Gov. Price Daniel's request, BRA directors held a statewide conference in Austin. Purpose: to reconcile the numerous conflicting views on how best to use the water of the 1300-mile stream. Scores of people came and spoke their minds, but reconciliation was hard to find.

BRA directors suggest a six-dam program on the Brazos. It would include raising the level of Possum Kingdom Dam and constructing six more dams between it and Whitney Dam. Cost is estimated at $183,000,000. BRA hopes to borrow $50,000,000 from the federal government, get the rest from private bond sales. All would eventually be repaid, according to the plan, by revenue from sale of power and water.

But downstream water users and private power companies are dead set against the plan. Representatives of South Texas industrial and agricultural interests contend that paying for the dams would raise the price of water they use from $1 to $10 an acre foot. Private utility spokesmen say the dams would produce more power than anyone wants at a higher price than anyone will pay. And people living near Possum Kingdom fear that raising the dam level would flood their land.

Net result: the BRA plan, first launched 21 years ago, still has troubles.

TEMPEST AT TECH—Gusts from a political-educational storm that swirled up out of the Plains blew into the State Capitol.

In a closed session, directors of Texas Tech at Lubbock fired Professors Bryon R. Abernethy and Herbert M. Greenberg and abolished the job of Dr. Per Stensland.

In explanation, Board Member J. Everetts Haley said Drs. Abernethy and Greenberg "did not measure up to academic standards." He called the adult education program in which Stensland was engaged "boondoggling."

But numerous observers attributed the dismissals to the professors' liberal political views as contrasted to the ultra-conservative platform on which Haley ran for governor last summer. There were protests and demands for re-consideration.

Governor Daniel made no comment on the professors, but said he thought the secret session was "a mistake." Tech President Dr. E. N. Jones predicted the board would have another session on the subject soon.

Capital reporters compared the case with the 1944 furor that resulted when Dr. Homer Price Rainey was fired as University of Texas president.

PENNY-PINCHING DUE—If the Legislature meets in special this fall, members may have to ration every paper clip to get by financially.

State Treasury has hardly an extra nickel. There is, however, $460,000 appropriated last session for interim legislative expenses. But State Comptroller Robert S. Calvert has raised a question as to whether this could legally be used for special session expenses.

If the attorney general rules it cannot, legislators will have to amend the appropriation bill in order to get at the $460,000. Even so, it may be nip and tuck to get

by. Previous special sessions have cost about $500,000.

Numerous economy measures have been proposed. Sen. David Ratliff suggested a swift three to six-day session with no pay. Rep. Louis Dugas proposed cutting the number of secretaries.

House Speaker Waggoner Carr is polling members as to whether they (1) favor a special session, (2) would serve without pay and (3) favor a tax to pay session costs.

STEEP GRADES AHEAD—State Highway Department is taking a long look at its ambitious road-building, land-buying program and wondering if it can meet the cost.

"We have $13,500,000 in projects ready to go, but only $8,000,000 income that will be available," said State Highway Engineer D. C. Greer. He said inflation in prices of materials and labor may force a plan to build 48,000 miles of road in 13 years to be spread over 20 years instead.

One cost-cutting suggestion was to buy up right of way far in advance of construction in order to get land before it becomes developed and, hence, more expensive.

F-M CHANGE SUGGESTED—Texas' farm-to-market road system should pay its own way, suggests a Research League report.

Laws creating the F-M system earmark millions annually for construction of the roads, but none for maintenance. This has to come from regular Highway Department funds.

Eventual result, says the League report, will be more farm highways than needed as an "intolerable burden" of upkeep. It recommends the law be amended so that F-M construction funds could be used for upkeep as well.

SHORT SNORTS—Trial of Ex-Rep. James E. Cox of Conroe has been postponed until Oct. 7. Cox is charged with consenting to accept a bribe.

Texas Republicans take a dim view of the 55th Legislature. GOP's official "minority" report charged the lawmakers had "failed miserably" to cope with corruption, lobby control, loan sharks, congressional redistricting and fiscal problems. It blamed one-party control. Texas Highway Commission announced the highest-in-history operating budget for the coming fiscal year — $72,498,650.

Local School Head Charter Member of Educational Fraternity at Texas Tech

Sixty-eight public school teachers and administrators, Texas Tech staff members and full-time Tech graduate students became charter members of the new Tech chapter of Phi Delta Kappa, professional fraternity for men in education, Saturday on the Tech campus.

An installation team of three national officers installed Tech's Delta Zeta Chapter of the fraternity, the nation's oldest and largest honorary professional organization for men in graduate education programs.

Candidates for initiation were screened from among former Tech graduate students who have received advanced degrees since the summer of 1953, and those currently in Tech's graduate education program.

Proceedings got under way at 3 p.m. in the Tech Union Building with an oral examination of candidates. Charter members were installed at 4:30 p.m. by a ritual team from the Beta Beta Chapter of North Texas State College, under the direction of Clifford S. Blackburn.

After a 6 p.m. dinner in the Union ballroom, Dr. Morris S. Wallace, Tech education department head, presided over the chartering program. Installing the Tech chapter were Phi Delta Kappa national officers, Ernest M. Anderson, recording secretary; and Robert E. Strickler, District III representative. The charge to the initiates was delivered by Blackburn.

The first business meeting of the Tech Delta Zeta Chapter was held at 8:30 p.m., at which time charter members signed the new chapter's charter. A chapter officer training conference was held after the business meeting.

Members of the Delta Zeta Chapter sponsoring and interviewing committee included Albert Barnett, Bruce Browning, Lewis Cooper, Doyle D. Jackson, Lewis Cooper, R. E. Garlin, George Mechem, John Mize and Morris Wallace.

Included in the charter membership was Lee Vardy, superintendent of schools at Slaton.

Slaton Men In Service

FORT BLISS, Tex., July 23 — Two Slaton men will return home Saturday, July 27 from two weeks annual unit training with the 413th Civil Affairs-Military Government Company, a South Plains Army Reserve unit.

First Lieut. John J. Hansen is serving as Labor Relations Officer of the unit, and specialist second class Benjamin B. Hanson is assigned as an investigator.

The training of the two Slaton men includes both tactical and technical problems at this Army Air Defense Center near El Paso.

The 413th, activated at Lubbock in 1951, was among other units taking part in "Operation Assault," this year's training exercise for Military Government units of the Fourth Army area and the New Mexico Military District.

The training at Fort Bliss includes an overnight bivouac, visits to the pistol and carbine firing ranges, and theoretical "occupation" of a foreign area.

TIME OUT for refreshments as Della Scoggins, president of Slaton Chapter FHA, pours punch to be served the officers attending the planning meeting last Friday morning. Others in the picture are Louisa Moore, Beth Lowery, Linda Smith and Sandra Long.

Knowing What To Do, Proper Reaction Quickly in Case of Highway Emergency Can Save Your Life as Well as Others

How good are you in a highway emergency? Would you know what to do if a car you were trying to pass suddenly speeded up, leaving you too little room ahead to pass safely?

Knowing the answer to questions such as this and reacting correctly and quickly when confronted by such a situation could save your life.

E. C. McFadden of Dallas, Vice President of Employers Casualty Company and President of the Texas Safety Association, reminded motorists of this fact today as he urged them to drive defensively. McFadden spoke in behalf of the defensive driving program which the Texas Safety Association is conducting throughout March in cooperation with the National Safety Council. This is part of the nation-wide Back the Attack on Traffic Accidents campaign aimed at cutting the scandalous traffic toll. The spring phase of this campaign stresses the moral responsibility of drivers for their own and others' safety.

McFadden explained that the defensive driver is one who drives in such a manner as to avoid accidents by anticipating and allowing for hazards created by the unsafe acts of others and adverse traffic and weather conditions.

"If a defensive driver suddenly found he did not have enough time to pass safely, he would not step heavily on the gas and take a chance on making it," McFadden said. "He would slam on his brakes, let the car he was trying to pass move ahead then drop back behind it."

The defensive driver realizes that in addition to turning in a top-notch driving job himself, he also has a responsibility to make up for the shortcomings of others, McFadden said. He pointed out that such an attitude comes naturally to persons accustomed to accepting their moral responsibilities in other departments of daily living.

"Unsafe actions of other drivers and pedestrians are not the only hazards that may confront the motorist," the TSA President warned. "He must also be alert to the dangers presented by adverse traffic and weather conditions."

McFadden said drivers should be aware of the emergency situations that can arise when they're behind the wheel and should know how to cope with them. It is equally important to be constantly alert to anticipate danger and act quickly to remedy it, he said.

Miss Ann Carlton and Miss Sharon Shelton of Lubbock were guests this week in the El Lora Motel.

Mrs. Ona Wright of North Platte, Nebraska, returned home Thursday after visiting since last Saturday with her sister-in-law, Mrs. A. C. Eaves.

Guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Maeker were Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Maker of Wilson; Mr. and Mrs. Joe Moller of Southland; Mrs. Julian Stahl and Fabian of Posey; and Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Schuette; Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Schnell, Mrs. Gus Vivial, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Behlen and Mrs. Robert Meeks all of Slaton. Dr. and Mrs. Roy German, who are enroute to Orange, were the honored guests.

Charles Church of Halfway visited from Thursday to Sunday of last week with his grandmother, Mrs. W. C. Church. Charles' parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Church, and Myra Sue came after him.

Mr. and Mrs. Rob Katts of Wink visited Sunday with their niece, Mrs. Raymon Mauldin, and Mr. Mauldin.

FHA Officers Map Years Program

An FHA officers planning meeting was held Friday morning, July 18, in the home of the president, Miss Della Scoggins.

Some of the highlights planned for this year's program were as follows: Informal and formal initiation, Emblem Ceremony, and the Fair for September; program parliamentary procedure in October; Banquet, Sweetheart Crowning, and collection of Christmas cards

(A state project) in November; Christmas Party in December; Daddy Date Night and March of Dimes in January; Career Program in February; Style Show and Area Meeting in March; FHA Week and election of officers in April; and Conferring of Degrees, Installation, and Western Day in May.

Refreshments were served to Sandra Long, 1st vice president; Beth Lowry, 2nd vice president; Shirley Kitten, 3rd vice president; Louise Moore, secretary; Linda Smith, treasurer; Kathy Smith, historian, Venita Green, public relations, Peggy Ray, song leader, Pam Maxey, pianist, Mrs. W. Wilke, chairman of Chapter Mothers, Mrs. Otis Gunter, Chaplin, Gail Huser, Dorothy E. Eton, Pat Schilling, Ophelia Brown, Eunice Wiley, June Lytle, Dorothy Wilke, committee chairman, Joyce Cheatham, Mrs. Dora H. Chapter Advisors, and Miss B. Smith Apprentice teacher. All committee chairmen are requested to have a list of their committee members to Della Scoggins, August 1.

Suggestions on Preparing Low Calorie Meals for Weight Watchers in Family

Any weight watchers in your family? If so, you, the cook, can be a big help by planning and preparing foods to cut calories.

Here are some suggestions offered by extension foods and nutrition specialists:

* Use non-fat, dry milk solids for cooking. Reconstituted dry milk solids heated and combined with vegetable liquors are good in soups.

* Keep desserts simple. . . . Serve fresh fruits or canned and frozen fruits packed in water or juice—not syrup.

* Roast or oven or pan-broil meats, poultry and fish instead of frying in fat. Avoid "breading" and use of egg batters on foods. Trim extra fat from the meat.

* Serve salad materials plain—or use low-calorie seasonings or salad dressings. These can be made with tomato juice, herbs and lemon juice or vinegar.

* Prepare food without added fat, sugar or flour whenever possible.

* Tempt appetites with herbs and spices instead of rich seasonings, sauces and gravies.

* Serve low-calorie items for nibbling in-between-meals or as appetizers. Try celery, cabbage wedges, carrot sticks, or other low-calorie vegetables or fruits.

* Avoid high fat foods such as cream, butter, gravies, sauces, rich potato chips, oil pastries, rich omelets and dressings; sweet foods, such as cakes and cookies; rich puddings, candies, fountain drinks and alcoholic beverages; and starchy foods such as macaroni, dry peas and beans.

Lawn Disease Can Be Controlled; Common Occurrence on Texas Lawns

Brown patch is a rather common lawn disease in Texas. Most lawn grasses are susceptible but San Augustine lawns are most often attacked, says Extension Plant Pathologist Harlan Smith.

He says the disease starts as small spots in the lawn, but the circular brown areas spread rapidly and the grass soon takes on a dead appearance. Infected areas often regain their green color following changes in the weather, says Smith. Brown patch is most prevalent during humid weather on lawns with a dense turf when night temperatures remain 70 degrees F. and above.

To prevent the disease, Smith says to avoid overwatering at all times. If serious outbreaks of the disease occur, avoid watering during the late evening or at night and apply fungicides. The specialist recommends the use of Tersan, Semesan, Special Semesan, Kromad, Calo-chlor or Actidione. These chemicals, he adds, should be used in strict accordance with the manufacturer's recommendations, including precautions in handling them.

Brown patch disease is caused by the same fungus which causes serious diseases in cotton, Irish potatoes and many other crops. It lives in most soils regardless of the plants being grown and when conditions become favorable causes the disease outbreaks.

AGITATED ORIENTAL ALLIGATOR—This 12-pound Chinese reptile, believed to be the last of his species, has a hungry look in the arms of Bob Raabe, keeper of the reptile house at New York's Bronx Zoo. The owner of these gaping jaws arrived in the city from the Warsaw, Poland, Zoo, which got him from Peiping, China, in 1955.

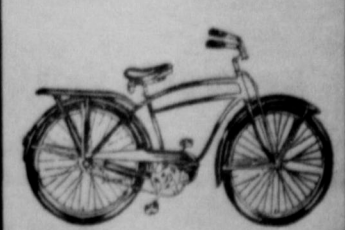

THEY'LL HARVEST SURPLUSES—Secretary of Agriculture Ezra T. Benson, center, scoops grain from pickup truck of model threshing unit at Department of Agriculture in Washington shortly after announcing that the government will make available to overseas relief agencies as much surplus food as they can handle. Representatives of two of some 18 agencies which will share in the 1 1/2-billion-pound distribution of various products are R. Norris Wilson, left, executive director of Church World Services and Mgr. Edward Swantrom, executive director, Catholic Relief Service.

The use of aircraft in direct support of ground units by the Marine Corps was employed for the first time in combat July 16, 1927, when a flight of six bombing planes strafed and bombed a force of 500 bandits who unsuccessfully attacked a small Marine garrison at Occotal, Nicaragua.
