DEVIL-MAY-CARE

by ARTHUR SOMERS ROCHE

ILLUSTRATED BY DONALD RILEY

FOURTH INSTALMENT

At a party in Palm Beach given by Mr. Cooper Clary, Leeson, an attorney, meets Lucy Harkness, known as Devil-May-Care because of her adventurous, eventful life. In a game in which partners for the evening are chosen, Lucy is won by Tim Stevens, who has a great reputation as a successful heart-breaker. Leeson is a bit jealous. Tim Stevens tells Lucy they are going aboard his boat, the Minerva, and she accedes in order not to be "a quitter". Asked if she is sorry that she won her company, Lucy says she is not and that evidently Fate has arranged it. Tim thereupon tells her to stop looking regretfully after Leeson.

Aboard Stevens' boat, the Minerva, Stevens tells Lucy of his love. When she replies with contempt for him, he grows violently angry and she becomes afraid of him. He says he will never let her go from the Minerva until she accepts him. To escape him, she leaps into the water from her cabin window, swimming a short distance under water.

Lucy reaches land and meets Dr. Fergus Faunce on an island. He takes care of her and takes her home. Everyone is worried about her, and when she meets Stevens he is frantic, regretful and still ardent in protestations of love.

"We start from here, then; I took you away with me; I frightened you; I drove you to almost certain death. But . . . we start from there. Is that it?"

"From where else could we start?" she countered.

"And you . . . you can't forgive me, Lucy Harkness?"

"Can you make me? That seems to be the question," she answered. He rose from his chair, fatigue dropping from him like a bath-gown from a bather on the beach. That amazing virility which was himself, but which this morning had been absent, returning to him in a rush.

"I don't like equal chances," he cried. "I want the odds against me. Two to one, ten to one, a hundred to one!"

"They are," she reminded him.

"And . . . and what shall we tell

"And you are afraid to take a dare," she accused. "But I've given you all the time I can this morning. I'm due at the Beach Club."

He held out a tentative hand. She shook her head.

"Not yet a while, Tim. Perhaps never. You know, after all, you didn't trump my ace, or move as I putted. You did—tried to do—a thing that you must have known would have caused me to kill myself. But enough of that. We start again."

After he left she leaned back in her chair and closed her eyes.

"We start again," she murmured. "But where shall I lead him?" The curved lips straightened harshly, and the hands that rested upon the arms of the wicker chair suddenly gripped them. Then she relaxed. She was able to summon a perfectly natural smile to her lips as, in response to the noise of the iron knocker upon the gate, a Jap admitted Leeson to the patio.

A nice-looking boy, she told herself as he advanced eagerly. Clean, well built, and enthusiastic. She liked this latter quality in him. She liked fresh eagerness in the viewpoint of life. Too much of it had gone from her; perhaps because the people she knew, played around with, were too sophisticated, too ennuied with the business of living. Perhaps she could regain some of it from Leeson.

"You didn't come back to Mrs. Clary's last night," he accused, as he bent over her hand.

"Did you expect me to?" she inquired.

"Of course. I hoped so."

"But you lost," she said.

"On a foul," he reminded her. She shrugged.

"We threshed that out last night. I like winners, as I told you."

"Did Stevens keep you away?" he asked.

She straightened in her chair.

"That's a strange question," she told him.

He brushed his forehead nervously.

"Well, Mrs. Clary was worried, and . . . I don't like Stevens, you know."

"Losers never care for victors," she mocked.

"It isn't that . . . alone. But when Stevens came and fainted in Mrs. Clary's patio . . . and you hadn't

I am not. Therefore, you will tell me about him."

"Professional ethics can't be permitted to conflict with common decency," he declared. "And he isn't a client any longer. The firm have telegraphed that, owing to many things, he is no longer a client. They have asked me to remain here a while; ordered me to . . . to get in touch with him, to get explanations of certain matter, to settle up affairs with him."

"And you, out of common decency—was that it?—tell me, who have no interest in the affairs of Mr. Stevens or your firm, that the latter is too holy to deal with the former. Stick to professional ethics, Mr. Leeson; they will get you farther than common decency, it seems to me. Professional ethics are laid down for you; you don't have to guess at them. But common decency is open to interpretation, and a cad will interpret it according to his caddishness."

"That is not merely unfair; it is dishonest," he said. His color, his embarrassment had vanished. He was not the nervous youth who had entered the patio, but a cool and collected attorney, willing and able to challenge her, to pick up where she left off.

"Why isn't it?" she demanded

"Because when a woman is involved, a man must not protect another man."

"You think I need protection?" she asked coolly.

"This man Stevens is a beast; any woman would need protection from him, and almost any man who wasn't forewarned. And I . . . isn't anything fair in love or war?"

"Is there a war?" she asked.

"Perhaps there's love," he retorted.

"We met last night," she reminded him.

"And again now," he said.

"And about Stevens?"

"There's going to be a warrant issued for his arrest, today, unless he settles a certain matter. And he can't settle. It's for a quarter of a million cash. That he stole. That's why I come, caddishly, to you, to warn you not to have anything to do with him."

"Did you think he'd borrow from me?" she asked idly.

you. And I'd worried, as Mrs. Clary had done; and then . . . you defend Stevens, and . . . Well, I've told you."

"Oh, I didn't mean to say all this!" he cried. "I . . . I wanted to see . . . Most unethically, and not even common decency. Your ex-client—"

"To my present client." He smiled.

"You didn't know? Your lawyers, Maddox and Roe, have just joined our firm. Another reason why I'm staying longer than I'd intended. The firm—the new firm, Maddox, Thamer, Roe, Wilson, Crewe and Lovejoy—telegraphed me this morning."

"Oh," she said.

She hid a sigh of relief when Leeson ended. Here—formality ceased; one went to the room and at hazard or roulette forgot one's hostess, one's guests. She played a while at a wheel, then was conscious of some one standing over her. She turned, to meet Leeson's intense gaze.

"Hello!" she said.

He knew the etiquette of roulette. "Don't let me disturb you," he said hastily.

She shrugged, bet her last few chips, lost, and rose from the table.

"No need to concentrate on the wheel when one's luck is vile. I'm through. Have you been lucky?"

"I can't afford to play," he said. "I came to luncheon, and am just looking on. Stevens," and his voice sank to a husky whisper, "is to be arrested at five."

"Why that hour instead of another?" she asked. She was hardly conscious that her every muscle was tense.

Leeson laughed.

"After all, Stevens has been our client. To demand a quarter of a million from him on the spot is going too far. To demand it within a few hours is slightly different. Stevens was given that amount of money for a definite purpose. Either he used it for that purpose or should have it accessible. He didn't use it. Unless he has stolen it, converted it to his own use. This, we happen to know, he has done. But the police here won't act on the moment. He asked, an hour or so ago, until five o'clock. Said he had the money, but was busy with things. At five he'd pay."

She hastened from the room, and ed her wrap from the maid, and out into the blazing sunshine, credible in February. The do beckoned for a chair, and she into it, she ordered that she be to her bank.

"What's my balance?" she the paying teller.

He looked it up and told her she had something over forty and dollars on deposit.

"How much can I borrow?" she asked.

The teller summoned the pay there was a ten-minute com From the vaults Lucy broog ties. The loan she asked arranged.

"And there'll be no w leak out?" she asked.

The bank officials assured their silence.

"I'll take it in cash," she

"You're no saint, Lucy Harkness. If you were I'd not love you."

. . . People are curious." "I came home," she said calmly, "in my bathing-suit. I your crew and Modane."

"They'll say nothing," he promised. "And, naturally, we won't!" she laughed.

"And you'll see me, speak to me, as though nothing had happened?"

"I'll do what Fate directs," she promised.

He shook his head.

"You're no saint, Lucy Harkness. If you were, I'd not love you. You're flesh and blood and wavy hair and long lashes and pink and tan skin, and . . . human! You can't fool me. You're going to do something . . ."

"Which ought to make life interesting, Tim," she chuckled. "Trying to outguess a woman is hard enough under ordinary circumstances, but under these . . . But perhaps your blood has cooled. In emotion we want things, promise things, do things that contemplation causes us to regret. An hour ago death was an adventure which you welcomed. Now a flirtation seems dangerous. Well, go on your own way, Tim Stevens."

"I'll go yours," he cried. "The way of Fate."

She laughed.

"We'll see."

"You hate me. You'll get even, some way . . ." He paused, too to continue.

"I hate you," she replied. "I think you're low, but what has that to do with daring me," he asserted.

answered the telephone. . . .

"After parties I regain my girlish color by plenty of sleep," she said. "And aren't you being a trifle persistent, Mr. Leeson? I'm not used to cross-examinations, or insinuations that I'm unable to take care of myself. What makes you think that Stevens, or anyone, could take me anywhere against my will?"

He blushed nervously.

"I didn't mean to be . . . impertinent. But . . . Well, I don't care whether its good form, or being done, or anything like that. Stevens's bad, Miss Harkness. I mean . . . a rotter. And when you go off, with him, and don't return . . ."

"The intimation is that I am also bad, a rotter, isn't it?" she returned.

"Not at all." His blush was painful. "You know . . . No, you don't know . . . How could you? . . . my opinion of you."

"It might be interesting, though," she scoffed. And I almost believe you're frank enough to give it."

"You don't mean frank; you mean unsophisticated, Miss Harkness," he said. "Well, I suppose I am. I'm not used to . . . well, the sort of people, the sort of things I meet down here."

"Why not run back home, then, where every one is nice and wholesome?"

"Now you're not being you. You know I'm not critical, or condemning. I'm merely explaining. I . . . I'm a lawyer, Miss Harkness. And I ought to tell about Stevens."

"How ethical!" she murmured.

"Stevens is a client of your firm, and "I never thought your husband went into places like that!"

MRS. BEARDSLEY had just returned from the city and she was telling her friend, Mrs. Stanley, all about her visit.

" . . . and I saw him through the window. He was all alone at a table."

" . . . and I saw him through the window. He was all alone at a table in the main dining room of the very best hotel. I was so surprised—you know, from seeing your husband washing his own car and cutting the grass himself and all those things. I didn't think he was at all extravagant."

"Sure, I go in there once in a while when I'm in the city," Mr. Stanley told his wife that evening. "It's not for the food. It's for the coffee. That coffee is worth the price of a meal there by itself. You know, dear, I simply must have good coffee once in a while and . . . well, I didn't like to hurt your feelings by mentioning it."

"That coffee, madam," the waiter told Mrs. Stanley the next time she accompanied her husband, "is White Swan Coffee. This hotel has used it for years."

Wives who are coffee-wise know that the appetizing aroma and satisfying flavor of White Swan Coffee served at home makes everyone wish that every meal could be eaten there.

OUR FLAG—JUST WHAT DOES IT MEAN TO YOU?

With the passing of the eleventh Armistice Day, Monday 11, viewing the procession of Legion boys, school pupils and kindred organizations, with program by the local Post members, a wonderful address by Attorney Dupree of Lubbock and a large gathering of citizens of Slaton and communities, all most impressive.

However, the absence of respect to the Flag was one of the prominent irregularities noticed, when the procession headed by the Legion Boys, with the color bearer carrying Old Glory, men on the sidelines did not even uncover or salute the flag. We even saw boys from high school who failed to uncover when the Star Spangled Banner was sung. We supposed patriotism and respect for the flag was taught in the public schools. Even the morning after Armistice Day we saw flags on their standards that were left out all night. The Legion boys have much to do to re-educate the people of Slaton to a proper respect for the Flag. We have a Flag Day, June 14, which originated Feb. 12, 1898, with the Congress of National Patriotic Societies. To us the respect for our Flag means just this, to honor, protect, and display the Flag on appropriate occasions.

THE GOOD ROADS MOVEMENT IN LUBBOCK COUNTY.

No citizen of Lubbock county but must feel that the great field for future progress in highway building lies in the improvement and construction of market and secondary roads. At present over the state there is a decided trend toward expansion of low cost road construction in rural districts as a "farm relief" measure. We all admit that good roads have become necessary to the farmer in his commercial and social life. The cow-trails and mud-holes that once characterized rural roads are disappearing, and serviceable, but inexpensive, paved highways are gradually taking their place. There is no end to the good roads movement.

Thousand of miles of pavement have been constructed in the last few years, and the demand steadily increases. It is now generally realized that a highway is not an expense, but an investment which pays for itself many times over. In Lubbock county, many are in favor of paved highways, but want them to come in an orderly manner, and be builded where the greatest number may benefit. This brings us to the rural communities, they need the roads and they should receive first consideration. This would mean a county wide election for bonds to pave.

It is too bad that some folks cannot report things correctly, that they must always leave a sting where Slaton is concerned. Slaton knows what she wants. Lubbock folk make the statement that Slaton would not vote for any issue. Well, they did in the past, and until we were double-crossed. We voted against the bonds, and we know just why we did, and the gentlemen who are ruling the destiny of Lubbock surely must know as well. We all admit that Lubbock county needs good paved roads, in time she will have them, but we feel there must be a square deal all around, that Slaton has never asked more than she can rightfully claim as being her share. We are still for the communities of Lubbock county that need roads, rural communities build towns, why should they not have the first consideration.

Slaton is still on the map of Lubbock county. She intends to remain there, and if we have to fight every inch of the way, we are going to fight, until we get what is rightly ours.

When Lubbocks wants to tote fair, they will find Slaton going fifty-fifty.

OCTOBER WAS WET MONTH ON PLAINS

According to the weather gauge in this section of the country, October of 1929, was a wet month, wetter than the average. The rain fall for the month was a little more than three and a half inches, which was just a bit under an inch over normal. According to the Experimental station east of Lubbock:

Coldest day of the fall season occurred in October, when the thermometer went down to 26 degrees. Maximum temperature was 93 degrees and mean temperature was 1.97 degrees. The maximum relative humidity was 95.5 per cent and minimum humidity 45.5 per cent.

Total wind run for the month was 3,493 miles, average wind run for this period, being 4,820.1 miles. There were eight clear days, 14 partly cloudy and nine cloudy days in October.

Rainfall here from January 1 to October 31 inclusive, totals 17.56 inches, while the average precipitation for this same period is 18.27 inches, giving a departure from the average this year of minus .71 inches.

POLITICS THIS WEEK.

The gallery observer in the Senate this week must have gained the impression that tariff rates are merely an incidental part of the bill under discussion. A few changes were made, it is true, but most of the shooting had to do with a more exciting subject—was the bill dead, and if so, who killed it. However, the consensus is that the bill will be passed, and that it will be written by the Democratic-Insurgent coalition, representing the agricultural South and West. The Finance Committee, representing eastern industrialism, has had its say. The supremacy of the coalition is definitely settled now.

The opposition of agrarian Western and Southern states to a tariff bill written by the Senate Finance Committee that represents eastern industry was voiced by Senator McMaster of South Dakota, who said:

"I wish to call attention to the fact that Vermont, with a population of 350,000; New Hampshire with a population of 450,000 and Connecticut with a population of 1,600,000, making 2,400,000 in all, have three representatives upon the Finance Committee, while the great territory comprising the Northwestern states with over 17,000,000 people, has not a soul upon that committee to represent its interests. It is no wonder that a stream of letters is pouring in from the Northwest, protesting against the tariff bill that was framed by a committee upon which there was not a single representative for the 18,000,000 people in that section of the country."

The section referred to by the Senator from South Dakota is Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, Kansas, North and South Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon. There is not a single representative from any one of those states on the Finance Committee, that spent last summer writing the tariff bill.

WHAT HAPPENED IN WALL STREET

The principal sufferers from the slump in the stock market are the business enterprises which purvey luxuries to the newly rich. One New York "beauty parlor" which charged a minimum fee of $25 for a "treatment" has already closed its doors. The "exclusive" jewelry shops where no customer was really welcome unless he had a hundred thousand dollars to spend report a decided falling off in sales. One Fifth Avenue furrier who had imported some Russian sables to make a $50,000 wrap for the wife of a Wall Street gambler has had the garment thrown back on his hands and is now advertising it for sale for a mere $30,000!

Slackening of trade in things like those represents no real economic loss; quite the contrary. The $50,000 which the furrier did not get for his sables is now in the hands of gentlemen who know what to do with money. It will be invested in something which will enable some great manufacturing establishment to add a dozen workers to its payroll. And that is worth more to all of us than a dozen sable wraps.

There is just as much money in the country as there was. Payrolls are as large as ever, and growing. The businesses whose shares have declined in price are earning as much as they did before. The folks who have lost money are those who tried to get something for nothing by buying stocks at more than they were worth in order to resell them to others who were even more gullible.

What has really happened is that a vast amount of money and credit has been taken out of the hands of wastrels and has got into the bank accounts of men of constructive vision. Most of this money will now go to channels.

Here's How

BY E.W. HOWE
"The Sage of Pokato Hill"

ROCKEFELLER'S ABILITY. WISE FOX. IMPUDENT CRITICISM.

I have never believed in fortune teller, seer or prophet; the wise man is on able to profit by events after they happen.

John D. Rockefeller displayed ability not only in making money. When his stomach failed some years ago, he investigated the subject as he did an oil field, and made it function again to his advantage. The Rockefeller Foundation, his tribute to philanthropy, is as well managed as the Standard Oil Co. . . . Although the disposition is not to think better of him, Mr. Rockefeller was once rewarded as the world's greatest sinner. If he could be judged justly by some unknown power, I believe his rating, from the cradle to the grave, would be as high as that of any other man that ever lived, all because of his enormous common sense; his knowledge that honesty is the best policy.

Intelligence is merely that cunning exhibited by a fox; knowledge of traps, dogs, men, poison, inherited and acquired from long experience.

A fox, celebrated as smartest of dumb brutes, is never prejudiced or fanatical; he is able to use every particle of sense he has.

If a fox encounters suspicious tracks, he doesn't stop to argue that he is entitled to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, but makes off to safer territory. When a man encounters dangers, he too frequently stops to argue about his rights, and the danger overtakes him. A fox knows no heaven except hen roosts where there are neither dogs nor men; every fox is his own doctor, preacher, and philosopher, and never yet has there been a fox urging foxes and men to make us, and love each other. Foxes have become famous because they use all the intelligence they have, a good habit most men lack.

Constructive criticism is often great impudence. Here are our best men in transportation, finance, manufacturing, farming, mechanics, navigation, engineering, merchandising, and in all the other legitimate activities of life. They have at least done so well that our country ranks first in all essential respects. But there come a lot of palpable second raters who declare that everything has been done wrong. The bulk of these constructive critics are much like barbers talking about the money problems of the world, or tennis players discussing the problems of transportation.

If a man harms himself in spite of repeated warnings easily understood, he is lacking in intelligence. I do not care how many powerful poems he may have written, or how many eloquent sermons he may have delivered; if he does not exercise ordinary practical sense and fairness in affairs most vital to him, he is not intelligent. Jean Jacques Rousseau is a famous man, but the man was not intelligent; his private life proves it. A man's private life is the real testing ground. Lazarus is also a famous name, but the man failed so utterly we hear of him only to teach us charity.

Farmer and Wife Praise It

"Just Send 'em to Me About Orgatone For This Medicine is a Knock-out." Declares Shelton.

East, West, North and South, all over Texas, Orgatone is the talk of the State. People by the thousands are now taking this famous medicine that is creating such a sensation at drug stores and are reporting remarkable results in restored health, strength and energy.

"Statements such as the following from W. T. Shelton, of 420 Avenue E, Lubbock, Texas, well known retired farmer, while apparently amazing, are heard on all sides every day. In his statement of the remarkable results his wife has obtained from the use of Orgatone, Mr. Shelton says:

"Believe me, Orgatone is the best medicine that ever came to Lubbock—it's a knockout. I wouldn't take $1,000.00 for what the first bottle has done for my wife and she praises it every day and will continue to do so for many a day for it has put her in the best of health again.

"I tell you after every meal she used to bloat up with gas as tight as a drum and have sharp shooting pains through her stomach. It seemed like she could not digest a thing she would eat. Constipation caused her no end of trouble and she was bothered with biliousness and felt sluggish and tired all the time. Her sleep wasn't any good either, and she just felt pretty much 'all in'.

"Well, sir, when she began taking Orgatone, this medicine lost no time in getting right down to the roots of her troubles, and now it has fixed her up so she can eat whatever she pleases, and lots of it, without a trace of gas pains, stomach cramps or indigestion afterwards. Everything agrees with her now—she sleeps good, feels good and is in A-1 condition in every way.

"I know dozens of people right here in this town who praise and boast Orgatone like I do and I don't hesitate to recommend this medicine to everybody. Just send them to me about it."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called patent or secret remedy but a new scientific bile treatment containing no alcohol or other false stimulating drugs and is sold in Slaton by the Teague Drug Store who are direct laboratory agents.

American Education Week to be Observed November 11 to 17

AUSTIN, Texas.—American Education Week, sponsored each year by the National Education Association of the United States and The American Legion, will be observed this year during the week of November 11 to 17, according to an announcement by Department Commander, Ernest C. Cox. Legion posts throughout the country will provide speakers and will otherwise aid educational authorities in making the movement a success again this year, he said.

"The purpose of American Education Week," the commander said, "is to direct public attention to the schools, with their ideals, achievements and needs. This week is observed every year during the week which includes Armistice Day. A vital theme of education is emphasized on each day. The program for this year is built around the seven cardinal objectives of education.

"Monday this year falls on Armistice Day, November 11, and the theme will be 'Education for Faithful Citizenship'. This is indeed an appropriate time to stress training in good citizenship. The boys and girls who in a few years will be responsible for the destiny of the nation, must have a high sense of their individual duties and obligations to community, state and nation.

"The second day of Education Week November 12, will be known as 'Home

Are You Ready

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot pass away. And it's always ready for the crueser pangs of colic, or constipation, or diarrhoea; effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

and School Day'. Every effort will be made to show what the schools are doing to improve homes. Constant emphasis on right relationships and noble attitudes in school creates habits which carry over in home life. The home lays the foundation upon which the school builds and the schools tend to lift all homes to higher levels.

"Know Your School' is the theme for Wednesday, November 13. Parents and others are urged on this day to visit the school in the neighborhood in which they live. Special programs and exhibits will be arranged so that they can get a better understanding of the work that is being done and see the ways in which schools are being improved.

"School Opportunity Day' will be observed on Thursday, Nov. 14th. Emphasis will be directed on what the schools are doing towards helping young people discover and train their talents and in preparing them for some useful occupation or vocation. Education not only pays in excellence and happiness of life but in greatly increasing earning power.

"Friday, November 15, has been designated as 'Health Day' for the purpose of showing what the schools are doing to promote physical vitality, good health and habits of safety. The fundamental habits of health and clean living as taught in our schools go far towards raising the standards of citizenship.

"Saturday, November 16, will be 'Community Day'. Attention will be directed to what the schools are doing to improve the standards of community life. It is noticeable that where the best schools are found, there also are found the best communities.

"The final day of American Education Week, Sunday, November 17, will be devoted to the theme 'For God and Country'. Ministers of all denominations will emphasize the higher values of education and of living. They will show how the schools build character by helping each child to develop high standards of physical, mental and spiritual fitness."

EPISCOPAL RECTOR MAKES TRIP IN CHEVROLET

ATLANTA, Ga.—Paying high tribute to the economy and performance of the low-priced automobile, especially as a mean of long distance travel, the Rev. G. W. Gasque, Rector of the Episcopal Church of the Incarnation, recently recited some of the accomplishments of his new six cylinder Chevrolet coach on a recent 10,618 mile loop tour of the western half of the United States, during which he averaged 22.3 miles to the gallon of gas.

Accompanying Dr. Gasque on the seven weeks adventure were Mrs. Gasque and their young daughter, Anna Lee.

The long trip was made on schedule time so that the minister could fill speaking engagements in prominent Episcopal churches along the way. The route led from Atlanta to Chicago, by way of Nashville, Evansville, and Indianapolis, thence across the northwestern states to Seattle, down the Pacific Coast through Portland, San Francisco and Los Angeles and back home across the desert country of Arizona and New Mexico.

A highlight was the climb of Pike's Peak over a tortuous roadway that stretches 13 miles along the mountain side. Dr. Gasque reports that the car carried its party to the summit without faltering and without heating the motor. Many other cars attempting the climb were forced to halt along the roadway to cool off before continuing, he said.

Dr. Gasque kept an expense book of the trip, which discloses interesting facts about the performance of the car. Having been newly purchased when the trip began, the car was not extended during the first 500 miles of driving. During this period it averaged 18 miles to the gallon, the book showed.

When the car was broken in, however the gas mileage was greatly improved. For the entire 10,618 miles, which included driving in cities and in open country, he Chevrolet consumed 476 gallons of fuel, an average of 22.3 miles to the gallon. The gas bill on the trip was $107.18. Sixteen and one half gallons of lubricant were used, costing $22.25. The minister's book showed no expenditures for mechanical repairs.

BLEEDING GUMS HEALED.

The sight of sore gums is sickening. Reliable dentists often report the successful use of Leto's Pyorrhoea Remedy on their very worst cases. If you will get a bottle and use as directed druggists will return money if it fails.

Hose or Lead Pipe Risky Gas Connection

Flexible connections for gas stoves are dangerous. They are likely at any time to become leaky or disconnected, with the danger of resultant injury to health and property.

This is true not only of rubber hose, but also of copper-coated pipe, which, bent a time or two, cracks and leaks. There is this additional objection to copper-coated pipe; the aperture in the usual lead connection is only one-eighth inch in diameter. A hole of this size, even this small diameter, will admit sufficient amount of gas to reach the burners. A one-eighth-inch iron pipe connection is the safest and most efficient for the ordinary room heater.

Natural gas, when properly used, not only cleanest, most convenient and efficient of fuels, is also one of the safest and most economical.

If you are in doubt regarding the safety or efficiency of your gas equipment, call our Service Department, which is maintained for the free use of our customers.

Excuse for the Widely Prevailing Custom of Killing Chickens at the First Sign of Illness; Use of Simple Home Remedies or Easily Obtainable Commercial Preparations May Save Valuable Birds and Many Dollars of Profits.

Editor's Note—This is another story series of 52 stories on poultry written by the well known national poultry authority, Dr. L. D. LeGear, V. S., of St. Louis. The series will appear in this paper and readers are urged to read them fully and clip them out for future reference.

The wife of a friend of mine tells me of a great relief of waking up not to go and find him in the arms of a violent nightmare. He was struggling desperately against an imaginary assailant and shouting the top of his voice, "No-no-Don't! I tell you it's toothache, you—nothing but toothache!"

Finally roused up and pressed for an explanation, he admitted rather sheepishly that he had dreamed a huge rooster had him penned and was preparing to cut his throat with his sharp spurs because he looked droopy and had a huge swelling in his jaw. Not wishing to lose this sage, friend wife at once reopened an argument that had been waged for months between them—"Serve it right if it really happened," she said. "Any man who is too lazy to care for his birds that could be saved with a little trouble ought to have his own medicine."

Sometimes I feel much the same about it, for chickens are much more than a mere hobby with me. Aside from all such sentimental considerations as might influence the issue, there are some good sound reasons why it is unwise to resort to every time a chicken begins to show signs of some more or less serious affliction. For one thing, the examination doesn't always tell the whole story. Not every snuffle or cough nor is every droopy, dispirited fowl infested with worms to a curable degree.

Sick fowls, no matter what their condition, should be removed at once from the flock and either killed or bled. Chickens can be cured as live stock, or people, when and I believe in individual treatment in most cases. I have been doctoring poultry diseases on my experimental farm for more than 20 years and have had excellent results except in incurable ailments, such as cholera, bacillary white diarrhea and other diseases known to be incurable.

A well protected coop, box or pen, from the flock is very necessary to place the sick fowls. Sick fowls placed in such quarters can be treated. If they develop unmistakable signs of diseases known to be incurable, kill them. My many experiments during the past several years have proven to me that Potash, the medicine that turns water a reddish purple color, is of little or no value in preventing or curing diseases of poultry, when used in the drinking water in the regular way. But, I find Epsom Salts very beneficial in preventing and curing many diseases of poultry. Each sick fowl should be given one teaspoonful of Epsom Salts or for flock treatment, one pound mixed with a small tempting wet mash feed for each 100 hens.

Most people depend on Bayer Aspirin to make short work of their aches, but did you know it's just as effective in the worse pains from rheumatism or neuritis? Rheumatism is too. Don't suffer when Bayer Aspirin can bring complete comfort and relief, and without harm; it acts on the heart. In every case of genuine Bayer Aspirin, read the directions for a number of uses.

Sanitation and disinfecting are two of the great secrets of successful poultry raising. Poultry houses and brooder rooms should be thoroughly cleaned often, and sprayed freely with a good dip and disinfectant. Properly built chicken houses with high open fronts that face the south, that are kept clean and free from insects by spraying with a good dip and disinfectant will do more to keep fowls healthy than anything else.

In many cases a cure is possible with simple home remedies as easily administered as the flannel rag soaked with camphorated oil on baby's chest when he has a cold. Furthermore, any druggist or feed merchant carries reliable preparations for the treatment of practically every poultry disease that is amenable to medication. Such medicines are always accompanied by simple, complete instructions not only for the dosing of the feathered patients but for the general care needed to make treatment successful. Why then let them die or deliberately kill them off when they can be easily cured.

Poultry raising is a business that is or should be run for profit. It is for the poultry raiser to determine, therefore, whether or not any individual cure will justify the labor and expense necessary to effect a cure. It is unquestionably true, however, that many fowls are needlessly sacrificed when a little extra trouble would be repaid many times over. Don't forget that every flock in your flock represents an investment of both time and money. You throw that away in addition to sacrificing possible future profits every time a bird is subjected to the "get the axe" cure if less drastic methods would have saved it.

CHEVROLET AGAIN GIVEN 1ST PLACE IN AUTO SHOW

Tribute to its leadership as an automobile producer is again paid the Chevrolet Motor Company in the announcement by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, that Chevrolet has again been awarded first place at the 1930 national automobile shows.

The award is given annually to the member company doing the largest annual volume of business, and is one of the most coveted honors that the automobile industry can bestow on an individual automobile manufacturer.

In addition to the distinction that goes with the award, Chevrolet is given first choice of exhibition space at the national automobile shows in New York and Chicago.

The public has a cordial welcome to be present at that hour.

Former Sponsor Writes to Members Of Class of '25

November 4, 1929.
To All Members of the Immortal Class of '25, Greetings:

I have been looking forward since 1924 to the prospective reunion to be held on "December 24, 1929". Since that time is so near at hand I am writing this letter of inquiry for the purpose of getting information. It is impossible for me to write a personal letter to each of my "kids" so I am taking this means of getting in touch with my former students.

At present it seems almost impossible for me to be in Slaton on December 24, this year, but I am interested in knowing just how many could meet me there, if plans for a giant reunion should materialize. Think of all the fun of coming to the high school once more and causing time to "turn backward" just to live again those most enjoyable days. And the time is nearly here!

By the way, do you remember Joe Hestand's idea of the buried treasure? I wonder how far each student has ascended the ladder toward their life's ambition as written on the piece of paper almost five years ago, and which has lay buried all this time? Incidentally, I am not sure I can walk right to the spot where this "treasure" is buried—but I must find it, for I am the only living being who knows the exact resting place of the sealed jar which contains those forty-eight bits of paper which tell of the ambition of those hard-working boys and girls of '25.

Wonder how many would have to "hook up the team" and bring the family. The grandchildren would be just as welcome as the rest. Let me suggest that each and every student of that famous class of '25 who now thinks it would be possible for him or her to meet in Slaton Christmas Eve, write me at 206 East 22 Street or House of Representatives, Austin, and I shall give further advise later.

Cordially, your sponsor,
W. VERNON LEMENS.

POLITICS THIS WEEK.

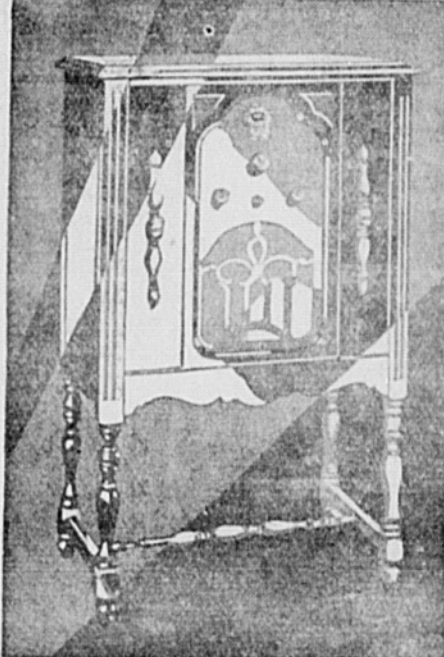

Senator David Reed of Pennsylvania has publicly announced his opinion that the tariff bill is doomed. His statement was duly given front page honors, but it could scarcely have been "big news" to close observers of Senate procedure. It is, however, the first admission by a majority member of the Senate Finance Committee that the tariff revision for which a special session was called seems headed for a complete fiasco.

Exception to Senator Reed's honest opinion was immediately taken by Senator Smoot, who says that these individual sentiments do not reflect the intentions of the Senate Finance Committee. More significant, however, is the statement of Senator Borah of Idaho, who remarks, "My opinion is that the tariff bill is not going to die. I believe it is going to be made into a good bill and that it will be passed." Perhaps Senator Reed means only that the tariff bill that emerged from the Finance Committee is doomed. Perhaps Senator Borah is right in assuming that the tariff bill revised into a "good bill" will be passed. Consumers will do well to analyze carefully the implications underlying the two apparently conflicting statements.

ENGINEERS WILL MAKE MAP OF CITY

H. C. Lotte and George Young, insurance engineers with the Sanborn Map Company of New York City, arrived in Slaton to begin work on a new map of the city, the first to be made by their company since 1922. The Sanborn Company maps are supplied to all local fire insurance agents by the insurance companies and are quite expensive.

Mr. Lotte expects the work to require two months in Slaton, as each sheet of the map about three feet square, is drawn to show each business or residence lot to a scale of fifty feet to the inch. On each lot is shown the outline of the building upon it, likewise drawn to scale and in such detail as to show even bay windows, porches, and other irregularities in outline. The map for Slaton required 9 pages in the 1922 edition and Mr. Lotte believes at least 20 will be required for the 1929 edition, showing the growth of this city in the past seven years.

The courtesy of such inspection of business and residence premises as is required for the map-making will be greatly appreciated by Mr. Lotte and local insurance agents. In the business section, on account of close exposures and insurance rate requirements, the maps will require interior inspection as well as exterior, said

Mr. Lotte. Residence inspection is chiefly exterior.

"Our work is greatly expedited when the people understand what we want and do not subject us to an undue amount of curious questioning," said Mr. Lotte, "and we shall deeply appreciate the cooperation of the citizens of Slaton."

SICK AT HIS STOMACH

"I was suffering from stomach trouble, in 1917," says Mr. C. K. Nelson, a railroad engineer living in Pulaski, Va. "I had a tightness in my chest, a shortness of breath. There seemed to be a heavy weight in the pit of my stomach, and quite a bit of nausea, yet I couldn't vomit. I tried different remedies, yet suffered on just the same. "When in West Virginia on a work train, I was in such a condition that I just gave up and came home. I couldn't stand to work, in my condition. Some one told me about Black-Draught. I started taking it in small doses after meals. It helped me, and I went back to work."
