FIRST AND EXCLUSIVE ARE THESE—Long delayed by censorship restrictions and just received in the United States by clipper mail, this exclusive picture of the sinking last September 18 of the British aircraft carrier Courageous shows the big ship heeling over for her final plunge somewhere in the North Atlantic after being torpedoed by a German submarine. This picture was taken by an officer of an unnamed merchant ship as the Courageous, smoke still pouring from her funnel, went into the plunge that cost

515 lives in the first major British naval casualty of the war. The small black figures on the side of the ship are sailors and other men on the ship sliding into the water in desperate efforts to save their lives. The dark shadow of a lifeboat lies alongside the Courageous. In the foreground is a portion of the ship from which the picture was made. The picture was passed by the British admiralty and British censor, but the name of the officer who took the picture and the name of his ship were not revealed. (Associated Press Photo)

MISS LAMEOUS NOTES

Little boys eyes look out on life so bravely. They have no fears, no doubts, no cynicism. With eyes wide open, they gaze calmly at life and feel no apprehension.

It is a sad thing that age can't keep the ideals and beliefs and make them workable with acquired wisdom. But acquiring age seems to make cowards of men. Makes them slow to believe, quick to doubt and anxious to scorn.

Perhaps the two aren't compatible—the trustfulness and honesty of youth and the experience of age but what a man he would be who could conquer age like that! He would be a man as men must have been meant to be.

If he could sit through his experience keeping only the best to remember and the good to believe, scorn and doubt would be foreign things. Maybe he would be a fool but all great men have been termed fools by their contemporaries.

Perhaps this is why only the very young and the very old have a philosophy of life that makes them immune to ordinary fears. The young trust to someone else to fix things right. The old are fatalists too.

It must be a heart-breaking thing to see the clear, bright eyes of a little boy begin to acquire a worldly wisdom and tinge of distrust. That may be why some mothers have been accused of shielding their sons too much. They are really shielding themselves from that look of first disillusionment that comes with brushing shoulders with the world.

See how little it costs to have Better Light!

Such a little thing as an undersized lamp bulb may be standing between you and EASIER SEEING. Or it may be a poorly shaded lamp that could be corrected by an inexpensive shade.

Good light now costs less than ever. A few pennies a night for electricity is all it costs to have all the light you need.

1. CHECK THE SIZE BULBS YOU'RE USING NOW—YOU'LL BE SURPRISED

Be sure your children who study have at least a 150-watt bulb in their study lamps. A 300-watt bulb in your reading lamp will make seeing easier and provide general room illumination. Shaving is easier and faster when a good light is used. Two 60-watt bulbs are needed. Kitchen work becomes easier when you have enough light. Use at least a 100-watt bulb.

2. THEN GET THE RIGHT SIZE LAMP BULB

After you have noted the size of bulbs you are now using, make a check of the sizes you need and get them the next time you do your shopping.

THIS IS NO TIME TO TAKE CHANCES WITH COLDS

With Contagious Colds Increasing Take These Precautions For Your Family's Sake and Your Own

Keep out of crowds as much as possible. Get plenty of rest and sleep. Eat simple food. Drink plenty of water. Keep elimination regular. Don't take needless chances. Don't experiment with untried medications. And be sure to have these two time-tested home-approved treatments on hand, ready to use.

At the First Sign of a Cold

Be ready to help prevent many colds from developing. At the first warning, sneeze, or irritated feeling in your nose—use Vicks Vapo-Rub, just a few drops up each nostril. Right away you can feel Vapo-Rub stimulating Nature's own cold-fighting defenses. It actually helps to keep many colds from developing—or so throw them off in the early stages.

Also use Vapo-Rub for swift relief from the puffing and snuffing and congestion of a head cold.

If a Cold Develops

Thoroughly massage throat, chest, and back with Vicks Vapo-Rub, then spread on a thick layer of Vapo-Rub, cover with a warm cloth, and go to bed. Vapo-Rub brings wonderful relief and invites restful sleep. Then hour after hour it keeps working—stimulating the skin like a warming poultice, while its medicinal vapors are breathed into the cold-irritated air passages of nose, throat and chest. Often when morning comes, most of the cold's discomforts are gone.

New Be Prepared—Get a bottle of Vicks Vapo-Rub and a jar of Vicks Vapo-Rub today and take the above precautions. They may save you a lot of sickness and worry.

The Hidden Ones Hurt

Taxpaying time always is painful to most property owners. That is because they must dip up a lump sum to square themselves with the tax collector.

Yet most of us pay other taxes without feeling it, almost without knowing it. Take the cigarette tax, for example. It amounts to a federal excise levy of six cents per pack and a state levy of three cents per pack—a total of nine cents for every package smoked.

It is not the visible, painful tax that keeps our noses to the grindstone year after year. It is the multitude of invisible, indirect and unsuspected hidden taxes we pay.

While we can hardly expect anyone to pay additional taxes with positive pleasure, we can recommend to him that he consider what he gets for his money before squawking overmuch about the burden of direct taxation.

George Tucker

Man About Manhattan

NEW YORK—The present crop of thieves on Broadway is not without at least one fellow with a gift of humor. This observation is based on a chance mishap that befell George Manvell on a recent visit to New York.

Mr. Manvell is an artist and a gag-man (Popeye) for the Fleisher studios in Miami. He is also something of a camera bug, and while in New York he took hundreds of feet of color film of the city's busy streets, of the ice-clogged waterfront, of the gardens and skyscrapers.

Then he parked his car on safe, well-bred Fifth avenue and went for an hour's stroll among the shops. When he got back his car was still there but his camera wasn't. It and all the costly film taken by Manvell had been stolen.

This made George Manvell pretty sick, but he couldn't do anything about it except grouse a lot, finish out his stay, and go on saddy back to Miami.

I think it was about ten days after his return that a package from Rochester, N. Y., was dumped on his desk one morning. In it was all that color film of New York that had been stolen. Film already used was naturally useless to the thief. But instead of leaving it into the first vacant lot he had at Manvell, he can only shake his head, and wonder.

When people come to New York on visits you think of them far removed from the chores of home life. Transients especially stay in hotels merely to sleep and change clothes. Their days are pretty well ordered.

That is why the actress Bess Johnson can't get over a telephone call from one of her out-of-town friends. This friend had just checked into the Sherry Netherland, and when she called Bess was delighted to learn of her arrival.

"We must have lunch," cried Miss Johnson sociably.

"But I can't possibly get away for lunch," moaned her friend, "because I'm right in the middle of making some strawberry preserves."

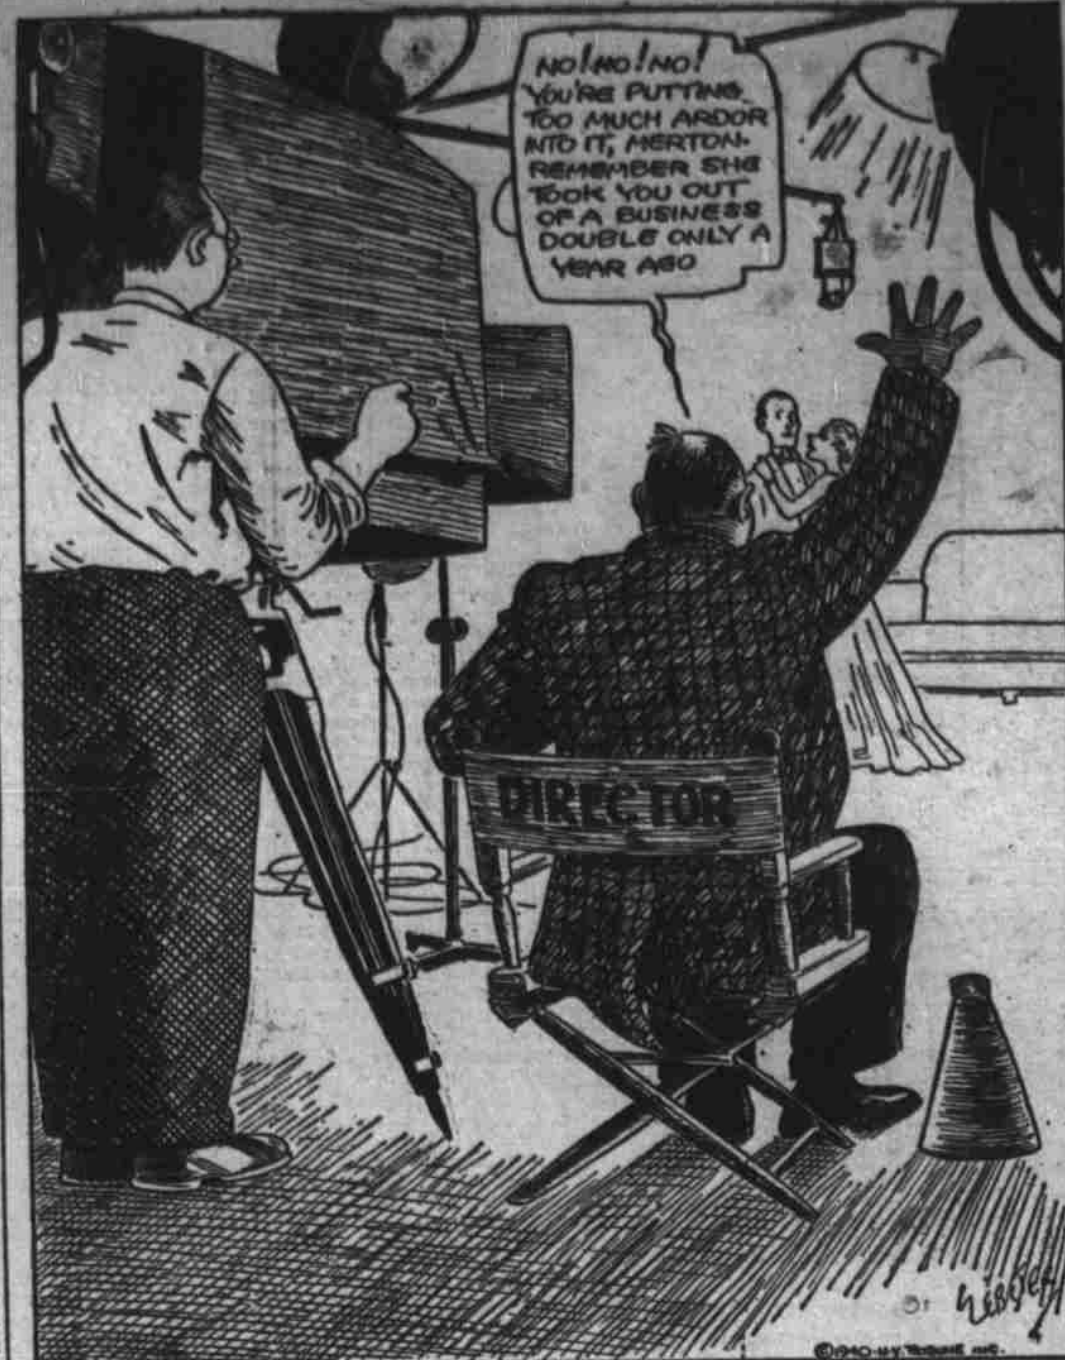

Chinese restaurants as a rule are successful because eating chop suey is a routine matter with a great many people, just as going to the movies once a week, or going to the barber shop for a haircut.

Some time ago a wandering yellow man decided to set up his restaurant in a downtown neighborhood, and after he was underway with his plans he discovered that the neighborhood was predominantly Jewish.

There is a restaurant in New York known as "The Splendid Beard." . . . That is sort of tempting fate, if you ask this reporter.

Federal funds appropriated under the Social Security Act have been used in part to employ 440 physicians on State health staffs and to pay more than 2000 local physicians for services in clinics and out-patient centers.

BLOOD RUNS COLD

By Ann Demarest

MOTHER AND BROTHER

Chapter 11. I went on down the stairs. There was one thing I was sure of. Miss Wells hadn't been home last night, and I was sure she knew something the Sergeant hadn't been able to pry out of her.

"In the lower hall I ran into the ubiquitous Sergeant. 'Anything else you've forgotten to tell me?' he inquired wryly.

"Before I could answer, a colored man, a big lumbering fellow as tall as the Sergeant, came up the stairway from the basement. He stood before us, shifting from one foot to the other, regarding the Sergeant unseeingly.

"To tell you the honest truth I had just a drop too much, Cap'n." "Drunk," the Sergeant snorted. "Then you weren't near this house the whole evening, I suppose."

"No, sir, I was uptown." "All right, run along." Patrick ran gratefully. "Come into the shop, Miss Howarth," the Sergeant said.

"So I gave up lunch with considerable regret and followed him into the room. Mr. Kimball was there with a woman and a young chap.

The Sergeant introduced me. "Miss Howarth, this is Richard MacDonald and this is Mrs. MacDonald, Joan Kent's mother."

Mr. Kimball brought in some chairs from a room in the back of the house and we seated ourselves. I hadn't the faintest notion why the Sergeant wanted me there and I was a little afraid of what might happen.

The Sergeant glanced through his notebook, leaned against Mr. Kimball's desk and addressed us. "Mr. MacDonald was out of town last night. He left because his father was ill."

"This is terrible," Mrs. MacDonald said in a low voice. She looked pretty bad and the boy's face was pale and drawn.

"Now let me get this straight," Sergeant Lang said. "You are Joan's half-brother, he indicated Richard. 'And your present husband, Mrs. MacDonald, is Joan's o'clock train to see just how ill Dad was.'"

The woman nodded. "You were married twice, and Joan is the child of your first husband and Richard the child of your second marriage."

"Yes." "There are no other children?" Richard's story she shook her head. The Sergeant's questions seemed to drain the little strength she had.

She was leaning back in the chair, her hands hanging limply at her sides. Not a pretty woman, I thought, but there was something very smart about her. And there was a strong resemblance between her son and herself, and yet he seemed to have inherited mainly her poorer features; a decided weakness about the mouth and chin and a pleasant face lacking strength.

I was so busy listening to the Sergeant that I didn't notice when Dick Koff came in with Mr. Norton.

"He says he's a lawyer," the detective informed the Sergeant. "Dick was grinning at me over Norton's shoulder."

"I telephoned and asked him to come," I said quickly before the Sergeant recovered from his surprise.

I could feel the color come up in my cheeks as I introduced Dick to everyone.

"If you don't mind I'd like to have him represent me." The Sergeant, after a rather grudging acknowledgement of his presence, raised an eyebrow at me, but he drew up a chair for Dick beside mine and said nothing.

Out of the corner of my eye I looked at Dick. He still made my heart do a lap dance and I couldn't imagine why. I've met handsome men. He wasn't much taller than I and he was too thin, but he had nice eyes and an alert, inquiring look that reminded me of an intelligent fox terrier.

The Sergeant turned to Richard. "I don't like having to question you at a time like this, but there are some important points to be cleared up."

The young man nodded. "I'll be glad to help you all I can. We must get this settled. When I find the person who did this, I'll— His voice trailed off miserably. I was sure he was really fond of his sister and hadn't anything to do with her death. But I was certain, too, that the Sergeant thought otherwise. Dick's eyes flashed back and forth from the Sergeant to the MacDonalds.

"So it was you Miss Howarth saw with Miss Kent at the Knife and Fork." "I guess so. We had dinner there," he said, looking at me curiously.

"Why did you keep your coat and muffler on while you were there?" "I don't recall that I did."

"Miss Howarth seems to remember it very clearly," the Sergeant said with peculiar emphasis. "No One Saw You?"

Dick's eyes caught mine at that, and he depressed the corners of his mouth. I looked away hastily.

"I may have kept it on, at least for the first few minutes. But I'm certain I didn't eat dinner with a heavy coat on."

"It isn't possible that you had a reason? Perhaps you didn't want Miss Howarth to be able to identify you?"

He flushed and glanced quickly at the Sergeant. "I didn't have the pleasure of knowing Miss Howarth last night."

"And your sister didn't mention that she'd seen her in the hall?" "No."

The Sergeant was silent for a moment. "Well," he said, "you might as well tell the whole story now. What did you do during the evening?"

Richard MacDonald took his handkerchief out of his pocket and mopped his face. "After dinner we both came back to the house and I went upstairs to pack. That took me only a few minutes. When I was ready to leave I stopped in to say goodby to Joan."

"Was she alone, and what time was that?" "She was alone and it was about a quarter past nine, perhaps a few minutes before that. She was reading."

Washington Daybook

WASHINGTON—In spite of British secrecy on trade statistics, evidence has accumulated here that England is fighting so hard for her old markets that she is even cutting down on production of war goods so she can make things to sell abroad.

A government economist charged with observing these things said England had pulled numerous plants out of war production to fill orders for foreign goods.

Even the rationing of British subjects and the restraints on purchase of non-essentials, he said, is in large part directed at preserving the output of exportable goods. It has other purposes, too. Britain doesn't want her subjects to spend their war wages foolishly. British industrial wages are in large part pegged to prices. If British wage earners begin buying too lavishly of luxury and non-essential goods, prices will rise. That will force up wages. In turn rising labor costs will force up prices—and so on. The old spiral leads to inflation.

The British want none of that. Moreover, they want their wage earners to save their increased earnings. It will be nice to have them able to buy war bonds.

LITTLE DESTRUCTION Britain wants no all-out effort to sweep the country as it did the United States in the war years. That sends gallons of gold out of the country for fashionable frivolities just when the country needs raw materials she can make into things to drop on Germany or sell to neutrals.

What has made it possible to return part of the great English factory system to manufacture of export goods is the strange nature of the war. There has been no enormous destruction such as might have been expected by this time. No trains have been blown up. No columns of trucks have been destroyed.

Britain expanded her plants in the expectation that there would be lots of shooting by now, and much destruction. These haven't been much, so England is able to direct her attention to saving overseas trade which she might have expected to surrender to the U. S. or Japan if the war had become really explosive.

BRITISH TRADE CLIMBS Here is an indication what is happening. Normally England imports $324,000,000 of goods a month, exports $187,000,000. For two months after the war started in September both imports and exports were cut almost in half. By November the conviction had grown in Britain that there was no need to cut off her own old customers and in addition get those from which Germany had been cut off. That was especially true in South America.

Promptly British trade climbed back to normal and above. By December it was better than normal, with imports at $387,000,000 and exports at $180,000,000. Returns from shipping and insurance handsomely helped balance her trade.

She is engaging in direct barter in many instances, just as Germany did. Without stinting her primary war production, England is able to supply machine tools and railroad equipment in return for essential raw materials. The raw materials she has sought since November are the kind which can be converted either into essential war goods or into export goods. She is using mighty little shipping space to supply fancy goods for her wage earners.

England seems to figure that when the war ends she will have world markets already at hand to take up the slack caused by disbanding her armies. In time of war, England is preparing for peace.

HOLLYWOOD—A plugged nickel for their money: Josef von Sternberg's after seeing Dietrich in 'Destiny Rides Again' . . . Lee Tracy's after the preview of 'His Girl Friday' . . . in which a 'newspaperman' named Rosalind Russell plays the Hildy Johnson role Lee created on stage in 'The Front Page' . . . Pat O'Brien's ditto, because he did Hildy Rooney was new 'king of the box-office,' which was ruled by a little queen the past four years—but whatever the first thought here, you can bet your nickel (unplugged) that the second thoughts were sensible . . . All those people—the ones who said that Ernst Lubitch had lost the 'touch' and was finished; the ones who thought 'Gone' would be a flop and 'Of Mice and Men' would be a weakling and 'The Grapes of Wrath' wouldn't be released . . . Until I saw Cliff Edwards in a movie (all of him) the other night I'd begun to think the ukulele kid was retiring to status of a mere voice . . . The mouthpiece of Jimmy Cretchet in 'Pinocchio' and that superbly done voice from the dead in 'Gone,' all the more effective because the speaker was unseen . . .

Speaking of 'Gone'—has anyone observed that the place where the film really broke a record was Atlanta? Saw an uncut newsreel record of the gala going-on down there at the opening, and what does it show but the customers (Atlanta) giving free sets of dishes (very old) to the stars? Same reels showed Carole Lombard giving her sincerest performance with 'merely Mrs. Gable—it's his show.'

Sneak preview reports on 'Young Thomas Edison' point to a sock reversal for any opinions that young Mickey Rooney is just a clever kid with a full bag of tricks . . . They say he doesn't play Mickey Rooney at all, and he really acts . . . The box-office 'king' title, of course, isn't going to make Mickey any cheslier—nothing could!

Look for Rosalind Russell to make the big stride up the glimmer-ladder this year—still photos of her in earlier films look like a poor relation of today's model . . .

Norman Krassa, describing Deanna Durbin's actress-mother in 'It Happened in Kaloha,' wrote: 'She is Hayes and Cornell except that she sings. . . They call Kay Francis, who doesn't sing, either. . . But Kay is right at home in mother parts, and this looks like a good one, minus all the sticky maternal goo that marked her bow-out from stardom. . . Deanna plays her own age, again, and that famous first kiss of 'First Love' is going to be overshadowed. . . First scene of this one shows Deanna being smothered with kisses—but it's just play-acting. . . The horror boys, Karloff and Lugosi, are facing their 'Black Friday' without make-up. . . Lugosi looks like himself, Karloff wears only a wig (to cover his 'Tower of London' shorn pate) and a moustache.

Fare Westmore, who did Laughton's 'Hunchback' make-up, was amused because RKO credited it to Laughton himself . . . After seeing it, I think Perce would be happy to let RKO blame it on Laughton—or anybody else . . .

Janelle of Winters, Texas Lions Sweethearts, who were heard in vocal duets, carrying their own string accompaniment; the Colorado City Cowhands, introduced by John Watson and featuring a variety of string music and novelty acts; and the Melody Maids, local trio composed of Beatrice Peck, Juanita Cook and Marie Baird, who with Mrs. J. H. Kirkpatrick, were given club gifts.

Dr. W. B. Everett, Sterling City, who thundered out an impromptu address in homespun language, was greeted with long and loud applause when he told of boosting the club membership from 21 to 62. He was called to the rostrum to meet Jones.

Humor was injected into the program when Burke Summers presented Jones with—of all things—a night shirt with the local club roster. Jones observed it was "too damned long."

Twenty-six new members from Big Spring and many more from other points were inducted into Lionism by Jones after R. W. Ogden, Big Spring Lionsmaster, made the presentation.

Master keys, given for obtaining 12 new members, were presented to Adolph Everley, Sweetwater, and E. J. McDaniel, Big Spring. Keys, for two new members, went to D. S. Riley, J. C. Douglass, Dr. C. W. Deats, Harry Hoekendorf, H. P. Steck and Ogden, all of Big Spring.

Announcement of the district 2-T convention at Midland on May 2-7 and the state and 2-E convention at Sweetwater on May 26-28 were made.

Clubs represented here included Hamlin, Iraan, Ferryton, Sweetwater, Odessa, Lamesa, Childress, Crosbyton, Wink, Colorado City, Winters, Kermit, Tampa, Borger, Sterling City and Big Spring.

New members inducted by the local club included J. C. Loper, John Ratliff, E. G. Christensen, George Tilligbust, W. S. Phillippe, K. A. McGibbon, W. L. Mead, Pete Howze, C. E. Higginbotham, Earl Bleakney, J. D. Brown, Randall Pickle, John H. Brown, Troy Gifford, Robert McEwen, Dr. H. B. Clay, Fred Martin, Joe Myers, Dewey Martin, Earl Bibb and Jake Crane. Reinstatements included Dave Tobolowsky, Harry Stalcup, Hollis Webb, Hack Wright, and Hayes Stripling. J. W. Morrow was a transfer.

Favor More Funds To Check Radio Broadcasts

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (AP)—The senate appropriations committee, told that any foreign spy could broadcast trans-Atlantic messages with a radio built from dime-store parts, recommended today that the federal communications commission be granted an increase of $235,163 over current appropriations for checking on unauthorized broadcasts.

The house had voted a $278,165 increase for next year, but in its final report the senate committee cut the item by $40,000. That amount was to have been spent on the construction of a new listening station near Anchorage, Alaska.

TREASURY DEFICIT STILL GOING UP

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (AP)—The treasury ran up a deficit of $2,421,682,471 in the first seven months of the fiscal year which will end June 30.

In the corresponding period of the previous fiscal year the deficit was $1,987,153,408 because receipts were slightly higher and expenditures somewhat lower than this year.

President Roosevelt has estimated the deficit will total $4,032,812,641 by June 30.

Superintendent Woods conducted a general discussion, answering questions propounded by those in the audience. In referring to difference in state aid distribution in West Texas and other sections of the state, he said problems were different in that heavy percentages of negro and Latin-American students in other areas created a situation that West Texas does not have to contend with.

Nelson asserted that improvements in the state educational system were coming, with revamping of transportation lines, the establishment of uniform teacher salaries, and the erasing of inequities in state aid.

Federal Grants To Texas More Than Taxes Paid

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (AP)—Texas received $217,738,000 in federal grants and expenditures in the fiscal year ended last June 30, Representative Williams (R-D) informed the house, while the government's internal revenue collections in the state amounted to $138,804,000 for the year.

Federal tax collections exceeded the total of federal grants and expenditures, he said, in only 17 states.

For states near Texas Williams reported these figures: Arkansas, collections $7,943,000, grants and expenditures $82,967,000; Missouri, $10,000,000, $100,000,000; Louisiana, collections $4,500,000, grants and expenditures $70,000,000; New Mexico, collections $2,500,000, grants and expenditures $64,000,000; Oklahoma, collections $6,500,000, grants and expenditures $60,000,000.

BLOOD RUNS COLD

"The house was dark when I got home," the young man said hastily, "so I didn't disturb anyone, but went right to my room."

"What time did you get to Williamston?"

"About 11:00."

"Did you see anyone when you got off the train?" He leaned forward so that his eyes were on a level with Richard MacDonald's.

"No. There wasn't a soul around, not even a taxi, so I had to walk from the station. It's quite a distance from the house, two miles or so."

"No one on the road at that time of night, I suppose?"

"How long did it take you to walk home?"

"Half an hour at least, probably more. It was snowing hard."

"Why didn't you wake your mother if you were so worried about your father?"

Richard MacDonald's eyes were tired when he answered, "I decided to wait until morning. There was nothing I could do any more that night."

"So no one saw you at all after you left here about 8:15? You have no way of proving that you were in Williamston at midnight?"

The sergeant's voice was ominously low.

The young man was staring at him, his face haggard. "No," he said after a long moment. "No, I have no way of proving it."

"HIS GIRL FRIDAY"

AN ANALYSIS OF THE WAR DEVELOPMENTS

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

The powerful Balkan entente—Rumania, Yugoslavia, Greece and Turkey—is meeting today in Belgrade to consider its attitude towards the war between Herr Hitler and the Allies, and if we could sit in at the secret sessions we likely should have a much better idea of the trend of the conflict.

There was an earthquake yesterday at Mount Olympus on the lower Balkan peninsula where the Grecian gods were wont to hold their conclaves—and there's the makings of a bigger convulsion in this council of leaders to the north.

Publicly there may be little more than reaffirmation of neutrality. Privately decisions may be taken which will have a strong bearing on the outcome of the European upheaval.

Indeed, so much do the Balkans mean both strategically and as a fruitful source of supplies that it wouldn't be surprising to see this rugged zone again become a cockpit for major military operations of the chief belligerents.

Only this week there was confirmation that the Anglo-French allies had concentrated a powerful army in the Near East to meet any possible German thrust through the Balkans. It could be used against Russia as well, should the occasion arise.

Berlin yesterday charged that the British hoped possibilities for spreading the war would arise at the entente parley. Nazi Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop also declared that neither Germany nor Russia has any intention of carrying the conflict to the Balkans.

Whether the entente will feel reassured by Von Ribbentrop's promise would seem very doubtful, especially in view of what is happening in Poland and Finland. The Balkans have been showing plenty of fear and distrust of the Russo-German brotherhood of late, but there have been no demonstrations of affection.

The embattled powers are watching every move of the entente meeting, and the atmosphere surrounding the uneasy conference is sulfurous. For in effect the Allies are saying, and the Nazis are warning:—"Come with us and don't get entangled with the other side—or we won't be responsible for the consequences."

The Balkan entente was formed partly to handle political and economic problems, but chiefly to maintain the territorial status quo. The question of boundaries has been of special interest to Rumania and Yugoslavia, both of which are fat as butter with lands acquired from neighbors.

The only Balkan state not in the entente (apart from Albania, which has been swallowed by Italy) is Bulgaria. This hardy land of tough warriors lost territory to Rumania, Yugoslavia and Greece, and has refused to join any fraternity designed to perpetuate those losses.

The territorial disputes have caused much friction. This has been increased by the quarrel between Hungary and Rumania over Transylvania, which Rumania acquired as result of the World war.

However, fear of invasion by Germany or Russia or both has drawn the Balkans together somewhat. Mussolini also has been taking a hand in trying to compose their differences and form them into a defensive peace unit. It is said that he is prepared to march his armies to the defense of the Balkans against invasion.

Claims Emotional Disturbances May Precipitate Cold

CHICAGO, Feb. 2 (AP)—Emotional disturbances may precipitate the "common cold" in some individuals, a Chicago psychiatrist said today.

Investigations of the relation of such disturbances to various ailments have been conducted at the Chicago Institute for Psychoanalysis.

Dr. Leon J. Saul said the studies led to a belief prolonged or severe frustrations of wishes for love, care or relaxation may be important factors in causing colds in some persons.

"This observation in no way implied that all emotional states or thwarting results in colds, nor obviously that this study in any sense shows the exclusive cause," he said.

New Controversy Over Stream-Pollution Control Legislation

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (AP)—A new controversy over enforcement provisions of stream pollution-control legislation was in prospect today.

A senate-approved bill (8688) proposes a voluntary program among industries, states and the federal government. A house bill (HR7971) would make a program compulsory after five years of voluntary efforts.

Agitation in behalf of the house bill was revived yesterday by Walter Heer, Ohio conservationist. A dispute over compulsory provisions bogged down pollution legislation last year.

Chairman Mansfield (D-Texas) reiterated his opposition to the measure and announced the senate bill would be presented to the house in revised form shortly.

SLICK BAND RAID

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Feb. 2 (AP)—Robbers used telephones instead of guns in Springfield's slickest bank raid and walked away with $4,000 before Union National bank employees even became suspicious.

Teller Arthur Sanders was at lunch. Six telephone calls with fake messages took tellers away from adjoining cages.

Suspicion of a clerk who saw two strangers loiter near Sanders' cage, then stroll away, led to discovery that $4,000 was missing. Officials deduced the loiterers had used a stick to bag currency within reach.

To Press Civil Suit Against Al Capone

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (AP)—The justice department said today that it would press a civil suit for income taxes against Al Capone as soon as a process can be served legally on him. Suit seeks $350,000 in taxes, plus interest and penalties for the 1924-1929 period.

The department's comment was prompted by a statement by Federal Judge John P. Essman in Chicago the case would be dropped unless the government was ready to go to trial by April 1.

"This case has not progressed beyond the point of filing the suit," the department said, "for the simple reason that while Capone was in the penitentiary he could not be served with a process."

REFUSE TO MOVE

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 2 (AP)—Oklahoma City had thousands of sleepy-eyed startings today.

Firemen and policemen, rallying to A. J. Brunawig's plea to rid the caves of his clothing store of its swarms of twittering startings, set off 75 Roman candles last night trying to frighten the birds away.

The unwelcome residents retreated but returned as soon as the shooting quieted. Then fire truck searchlights were added and the birds vanished. The estimated crowd of 10,000 started homeward.

John J. Lynn, assistant fire chief, then spotted a dark host on a building in the next block. The startings had found a new home.

Another fireworks attack is planned tonight.

Begs For Prosecutor

NORMAN, Okla., Feb. 2 (AP)—Ellis county needs a prosecutor so badly it's begging for one.

Wrote a member of the county's democratic central committee to the Oklahoma university law school:

"Neither of the political parties have a man who will be a candidate for the office, x x perhaps you may have a young graduate that might wish to come to our county and engage in practice with the view of being a candidate x x" Times must be better. There were no takers.

RULES and CONDITIONS

To obtain the 10 symphonies and symphonic masterpieces and the electric Record Player to be distributed, proceed as follows:

First, fill in and mail the Reservation Form printed below.

The purpose of this form is not to obligate you in any way but to enable us to estimate the quantity of records and Record Players to have on hand to meet the demand.

Each day during this music appreciation offer we will publish a reminder coupon setting forth the date on which each symphony will be ready. You can get the four symphonies listed above at any time—come in for them at once. Subsequent symphonies will be released one every two weeks and will be available thereafter. Watch the reminder coupon which will be published daily. It is not necessary for you to clip the coupons in order to get your records or Record Player.

You obtain each symphony, which consists of three or four double-faced, 12-inch records, for a payment of $1.49. This payment is not for each record but for all THREE or FOUR records. Symphonies which consist of FIVE double-faced 12-inch records require a payment of $1.50 for the entire symphony of all FIVE records. The Cosac Franck Symphony in D Minor, on account of its great length, is divided into two units, each unit consisting of three double-faced, 12-inch records, and the cost of each unit is $1.49.

After you have obtained all ten of the symphonies, you can secure the Electric Record Player for a payment of only $3. If you want to get your Record Player earlier, you can do so—you can get it with your first group of records, your second, third, or any other group, merely by making a deposit of $5. After you have obtained all of the 10 symphonies, $3 will be returned to you. Thus, whether you get your Record Player before or after you have obtained all of the symphonies, the cost to you is only $2.

For those who want a more elaborate Record Player, a Symphonic De Luxe Model, enclosed in a walnut case, is available at a higher price.

First, mail the Reservation Form to assist us in our distribution problems. Please check whether or not you want the Record Player reserved. We will acknowledge your reservation by mail. Filling in and mailing the reservation entitles no obligation whatever on your part.
