Uncle Ananias says that one should be honest with people, but it is vastly more important for him to be honest with himself.

High Heels were invented by a girl whose sweetheart kissed her on the forehead.

If you think advertising a good product doesn't pay, $80,000 worth of advertising has sold more than 1,000,000 copies of "Gone With the Wind."

Late hours are bad or one, but fine for two.

"Can we go on with the old spending ideas? Can we go on with the rearing living on forced loans, with public debt of $38,000,000,000? Can we go on and on and make a $50,000,000,000 debt, and get anywhere? I say we cannot."—Josiah W. Bailey, United States Senator from North Carolina.

"Recent events in Europe have offered one consolation to observers on this side of the Atlantic—the consolation of being on this side of the Atlantic."—Business Week.

Dr. John W. Ruytin, pastor of Mount Vernon Methodist Episcopal church, South, of Washington, started some members of his congregation last Sunday by announcing that he layed bridge.

"You don't have to hide out in the bushes to find out about it, either," he said.

"There is no harm in playing bridge per se. The moral issue comes when a woman spends all afternoon laying bridge and then rushes home and feeds her husband on canned soup."

If you will take time to think you will find that quite a few of our moral issues are along the same line.

Slaton citizens are to be complimented. If you will drive around our fair city you will find that more improvements are going on in the residential section than ever before. The people seem to be getting very "civic minded." Lawns are being worked over, new flowers, shrubs and trees are being planted—but above all is the fact that several of our citizenry are improving vacant lots. One in particular that we noticed are the lots being improved by S. S. Forrest.

Most of the improvement in Slaton can be traced back to the work started by the Civic and Culture Club shortly after their organization in 1915.

The other side of the question is andelions, which can be found in abundance at many of the residences in Slaton and we might add that the city has one of the best crops that we have ever had the misfortune to see.

We have been experimenting for several years in the killing of this nuisance, and have kept ours down by keeping them cut off and immediately afterwards burning them so the seed won't spread. Most people make the mistake of cutting them and letting them be to be blown from here o yonder; thus giving others a good crop. They should be cut and put in a container, then burned.

This year we are trying a new system—that of trying to kill them out with a blow-torch. Most of them can be killed in a few years by keeping them cut to the ground. Under no circumstances let them lie to be blown to other parts of your lawn or to a neighbor's.

Homemakers Club To Send Delegates

The "Future Homemakers of Slaton," composed of the members of home economics classes of Slaton high school, are now in the midst of their annual contests to determine who shall represent the school at the annual state Homemakers rally, to be held this year at San Antonio early in May. Practically every girl in the home economics classes is entering the local contest, which will be concluded in one more month.

The state Homemakers rally has been an annual affair since 1920, when 49 girls met in the basement of the University Baptist church at Austin for the first contest. By the fifth year the number of contestants had reached 500, and did not exceed this number for ten years. In 1934, 900 girls gathered back at Austin for the fourteenth annual meeting. Two years later, 1,300 contestants vied with each other at San Angelo, and last year more than 1,500 entered the contests at Ft. Worth. This year, with increased interest being shown, the number is expected to exceed 2,000 when the trek is made to San Antonio, the historic shrine of Texas.

The Slaton girls have prided themselves on the fact that they have always made the necessary money for their own expenses to these rallies.

One student from each of the three years and one from the Home Economics Club with the instructor, Mrs. Dayton Eckert, will attend the rally from Slaton.

There will be many recreations such as teas and suppers and a formal banquet given the evening of May 6, besides the general meetings of the Future Homemakers of Texas.

Slaton Is Showing More Civic Pride

Local Men Improve Adjacent Property

The forthcoming Clean-Up Week will find marked improvement in several spots in the city that formerly were eyesores and detrimental to the beauty of our town.

Mr. S. S. Forrest is having numerous trees and shrubs planted on the vacant lots immediately behind the Forrest Hotel, and in time hopes to have a small park thriving where once was only a barren waste, displaying the rears of many unsightly business buildings. A white fence cuts off this view now, and soon the budding trees and shrubs, and the many flowers and grass will present a lovely vista.

Mr. Meader, the photographer, is beautifying the vacant lot next to his studio on a smaller scale, but it, likewise will be very attractive and serve to hide ugly scenes from the passerby. The county park, for which funds from the WPA have been allocated, has had the initial work begun on it, and will be something to which we may point with civic pride when it is completed. Expert landscaping will be used to make it one of the most beautiful parks of its size in this territory.

Later there will be amusement vehicles for the children installed, and no doubt many people from a great distance will be attracted to this spot to spend their holidays. The cooperation of all the citizens and clubs of the town will make this project possible, according to Ben Mansker, county commissioner, who was instrumental in securing the allotment from the WPA.

AUSTRIA IS WIPED OUT
Made a State in German Reich After Armed Invasion
By Hitler . . . The Fuehrer Enters Vienna in Triumph

This picture, made in an Austrian border town and transmitted by radio photo, shows a contingent of Hitler's troops marching toward Vienna after being landed from airplanes in the country that has now been made a state of the German reich.

Edward W. Pickard

Austria a German State

AUSTRIA, as a sovereign state, is no more. In the twinkling of an eye its independent identity was wiped out and it became merely another state in the German reich.

Arthur Seyss-Inquart

"Anschluss" was made a fact and the treaty of St. Germain, by which this union of Germany with Austria was forbidden, is just another torn scrap of paper.

The German reich has acquired 32,369 square miles of territory and 6,732,000 more inhabitants. Arthur Seyss-Inquart rules the Austrian state after the enforced resignation of President Miklas and Chancellor Schuschnigg. Such is the concrete result of Hitler's startlingly sudden invasion of Austria and seizure of power there. His coup was well planned and it was carried out with a swiftness that demonstrated the speed with which motorized troops can act. When Schuschnigg announced a plebiscite on Austrian independence, the Fuehrer rushed his soldiers across the border by motor and airplane and within a few hours they were in possession of all government buildings and strategic points. Schuschnigg, helpless, broadcast to the Austrian people the word that he and President Miklas were yielding to "brute force" in order to avoid bloodshed. Then both of them resigned at the demand of Seyss-Inquart.

Great Britain and France filed strong protests against the German coup, but their notes were scornfully rejected by the Berlin foreign office. The British showed no inclination to go further in defense of Austria, and France, just then without a government, could do nothing because Premier-designate Blum could not be assured of the support of both the Socialists and the Communists in the chamber of deputies.

Italy, taken by surprise like the rest of the world, was supposed to be in a tight place; but after Hitler, in a personal letter to Mussolini, promised that German expansion would stop at the Italian frontier, the Fascist grand council gave its approval to the Fuehrer's coup d'etat.

Hitler Goes to Vienna

RETURNING in triumph to the land of his birth, Hitler first visited the graves of his parents and then, standing bareheaded before a cheering throng in Linz he proclaimed the union of Germany and Austria, declaring this had been his divine mission. He announced a plebiscite on April 10 to seek the approval of Austrians for all the acts of their new government. Moving through many towns and cities, the Fuehrer's motor caravan finally reached Vienna, and that once proud city, now just a provincial capital of a German state, went wild with joy in greeting its master. Swastikas and troops were everywhere, and not a single anti-Nazi dared to show his head.

Adolf Hitler

Already a "purge" had been started, directed especially against the Jews, and all people of that race who could get out of the city were leaving. New laws were passed excluding some 75,000 Jewish lawyers and 60,000 Jewish doctors from practice. The Evangelical church of Austria was united with that of Germany.

Hitler took supreme command of the Austrian army and all officers and men took the oath of allegiance to him. On his progress to Vienna Hitler was accompanied or followed by numerous units of his motorized armies so that when he arrived the city was swarming with German troops.

Nazi economists in Berlin were busy planning in detail the economic future of the annexed territory. Minister of Economy Walther Funk said that Austria would henceforth participate in the German four-year plan for recovery and independence of foreign markets.

It was assumed that Seyss-Inquart would be "minister and president" of the Austrian state, having the same status as the chief executives of Prussia and Bavaria.

Insist on TVA Inquiry

IT DOES NOT seem likely, at this writing, that the administration can prevent the congressional investigation of the TVA which Chairman A. E. Morgan and others have demanded. Senators Bridges and King, Representatives Maverick and Snell and various other congressmen insist that there be a thorough inquiry into the situation. However, a showdown was postponed for a week when President Roosevelt gave that much time to Chairman Morgan, David Lillenthal and Harcourt Morgan, the directors, to settle their differences. He told them plainly that if they could not do this they should resign from the board.

For six hours the President tried in vain to induce A. E. Morgan to substantiate if he could the charges he had made against his colleagues, these including the making of evasive and misleading reports and "dishonesty of malfeasance" in handling the claims of Berry and others. The chairman steadily refused to offer any evidence in support of these accusations on the ground that the conference in the White House was not and could not be an "effective or fact-finding occasion."

He noted in a statement put into the record that he had "repeatedly but unsuccessfully" sought Mr. Roosevelt's co-operation in correcting "grave conditions" within TVA. Lillenthal and Harcourt Morgan offered evidence in support of their complaint that the chairman had pursued "obstructionist" tactics.

No one of the directors indicated, after the conference, that he would resign. It was generally believed in Washington that the President desired to get A. E. Morgan off the board and that in that case he would make Lillenthal chairman.

Mutiny in Russian Army?

UNCONFIRMED reports were received in Riga, Latvia, that mutiny had broken out in some of the largest garrisons of the Soviet army and that fighting was going on. The troops demanded that the department of the interior surrender control of the arsenals.

The Red army is the only armed force in the world which does not control its supplies of munitions. A special GPU army of 350,000 heavily armed troops guards the military supplies.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses CARBOHYDRATES and FATS

Foods That Provide Motive Power For the Body Machinery ★ ★

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th St., New York.

THE human body might be compared to a framework filled with machinery. It takes food to build the framework, food to run the machinery and food to keep it working efficiently and this food must be of the proper type.

Last week, I discussed the body building proteins and explained how to distinguish between those which build and repair body tissue, and those that are adequate for maintenance, but not for growth. It is equally important that you should learn something of the fuel foods which are necessary to fire the body engine and furnish motive power to propel the body machinery.

Fuel Foods Keep Us Alive

The body could not function in the absence of fuel foods any more than a machine could run without power, or a car without gas. Every breath requires an expenditure of energy, and so does every movement—from the beating of the heart to the winking of an eye.

Even in repose, the body machinery is kept functioning only by an ever-present supply of fuel. For, as long as life continues—even when you are lying perfectly still—you need fuel to carry on the internal work of the body.

Activity Demands Energy Foods

Every type of daily activity, including work and exercise, requires additional fuel. If you walk slowly, you expend twice as much energy as when you sit still. And when you walk fast, you may use up four, five or six times as much energy.

The chief fuel, or energy producing foods, are the carbohydrates—that is, the starches and sugars; and fats. Protein also has some fuel value, but its primary function is to build and repair tissue.

Carbohydrates are quick burning. They might be compared to the flare of a match in a dark room, which gives bright light for an instant, but is soon extinguished. Fat, on the other hand, burns slowly, like a lamp whose wick is turned low.

Danger of Inadequate Fuel Supply

Recently there has been a tendency to minimize the importance of the fats and carbohydrates, due to the craze for dieting. Some of the results of disregarding the absolute necessity for these foods are extreme irritability, and a greater susceptibility to fatigue, nervous diseases, tuberculosis and other infections.

Too Much Fuel Causes Overweight

It is true, however, that an excess of fuel foods will tend to produce overweight. For if we assimilate them,

Your Food Is Your Fate

THE third of the series of articles entitled "What to Eat and Why," written by C. Houston Goudiss, the eminent food authority, author and radio lecturer, appears in this issue.

In these articles Mr. Goudiss tells how you can be strong, beautiful, wise and rear healthy children by combining the right food materials in the diet. He points out the vast influence which food wields over one's life.

The housewife and mother who desires to know what foods will benefit her family the most will do well to read these articles week by week and make a scrapbook of them for ready reference.

and do not utilize their potential energy in muscular effort, they will be stored—as fat—usually in most inconvenient locations! On the other hand, an excess of any food is a detriment. Therefore the goal should be enough, but not too much, of all necessary foods.

Since both carbohydrates and fats are energy foods, one might expect them to play an interchangeable role in the diet. To a certain extent, they do, although fat, being more concentrated, provides two and one-fourth times as much fuel value as an equal weight of carbohydrate.

But because of the variation in the way these materials are handled by the body, it is generally considered that health is best served when 40 to 50 per cent of the total energy value of foods is provided in the form of carbohydrate and 30 to 35 per cent in the form of fats.

Carbohydrates Are Quickest Fuel

Carbohydrates, which originate chiefly in plant life, are readily converted into heat and muscle energy. Foods rich in carbohydrates include bread, potatoes, macaroni, rice, cooked and ready-to-eat cereals, peanuts, dried and preserved fruits, sugars and syrup.

Sugar furnishes heat more quickly and more abundantly than any other food. But it has a tendency to dull the appetite and is also apt to cause fermentation. Therefore, a large measure of our heat and energy is best secured from starchy foods such as bread, cereals, macaroni and potatoes.

Quick energy can also be obtained from the easily digested sugars of fresh and dried fruits, such as prunes, apricots, raisins and fully ripened bananas.

Here is an interesting and important point which is frequently overlooked in unscientific reducing diets. Fat requires carbohydrates for its proper utilization by the body. That is why women who try to reduce without following a scientifically planned diet frequently become seriously ill as a result of cutting down on carbohydrates while overlooking the fats contained in milk, butter, and other foods.

Relation of Fat To Health

Fats are so necessary to the body economy that it is no exaggeration to say that without fat,

Vegetable Pests

THERE are two major classifications of insect pests—sucking and chewing.

Chewing insects, such as beetles, leave telltale holes in leaves. They are best controlled, according to Harold N. Coulter, vegetable expert of the Ferry Seed Institute, by dusting or spraying plants with arsenicals (poisons with arsenate of lead as a base.)

These arsenicals are known as stomach poisons, for they must be eaten by the insects. Plants attacked by chewing insects include cucumber, squash, other vine crops, mustard, tomato, pepper.

Sucking insects, such as aphids or plant lice, can be detected in small groups on the under surface of the leaves. Control by dusting or spraying nicotine sulphate or pyrethrum directly on the insects. Plants attacked by sucking insects include peas, pepper, cabbage, and crops grown for greens.

Make certain what type pest you are fighting. Buy properly prepared poisons; follow directions.

life, in its higher forms, is impossible. The noted Arctic explorer, Stefansson, found that he could exist satisfactorily on an all-meat diet, provided he ate liberally of fat. On a diet of all lean meat, he became violently ill within a week.

Besides furnishing concentrated energy values, fats help to create the fatty tissue which cushions the nerves and abdominal organs, and forms the pleasing contours of face and figure.

Because it leaves the stomach more slowly than proteins and carbohydrates, fat retards the digestion of these food groups somewhat, and thus gives staying power to a meal. At the same time it promotes the flow of pancreatic juice and bile, thus helping in the assimilation of other foods. Foods rich in fat include butter, cheese, egg yolk, cooking fats and oils, margarine, olives, pastry, peanut butter, most nuts except chestnuts and lichi nuts, various kinds of sausage and fried foods.

Anger Destroys Fat Reserves

Experiments have demonstrated why nervous, irritable individuals are usually thin, while those with a serene temperament often accumulate weight. It has been proven that anger and fright increase the amount of fat in the blood and remove a corresponding amount of fat from its usual storage place beneath the skin. A fit of anger may take off more fat than an hour's exercise, or two or three days of enforced diet. Thus the person who allows himself to become upset continually withdraws the fat reserve from his body. Such persons could profit, perhaps, by taking more of the fat-forming foods.

But whether the members of your family are good natured, or irritable, young or old, they need a constant supply of fuel foods—at every meal, every day. Fuel foods produce energy—and energy is the motive power of life and work and thought.

"Home-Wrecking" Qualities of Poor Furniture Polish

How often a houseful of fine furniture and handsome woodwork is spoiled by the use of a poor furniture polish! There are many polishes on the market today—some fair, some good, others excellent for luster and long life of the finish! The best is non-greasy, because made with a fine, light-oil base! In time, furniture and woodwork can be ruined by the persistent application of a cheap, poor polish! Such polish will contain kerosene, harsh abrasives and harmful acids—destructive elements, that are unseen and unsuspected! The housewife may use one of these polishes, feeling that she is economically keeping her furniture polished—but this is poorest economy, if she values her furniture (and what housewife does not?). The furniture in a home constitutes the largest part of the furnishings—and will show up like "sore thumbs" when dried out, cracked or checked. This is just what occurs, when other than a reputable oil polish is used! Too, a quality oil polish is less expensive! Less is used at one time—for it's undiluted. The resultant glow is deeper, richer, more lasting! Best of all, the finish of the furniture and woodwork is properly "fed" and kept in prime condition! So beware of harsh, "bargain" polishes—for through them, the furniture suffers!

SYNOPSIS

Ruth Chiswick of L C ranch, obsessed by fear of danger to her outspoken and bull-headed father, Lee, from a band of lawless rustlers headed by Sherman Howard, decides to save him by eloping with young Lou Howard, Sherman's son, and comes to the town of Tail Holt to meet him. While in Yell Sanger's store, a crook-nosed stranger enters, sizes up the situation, and when a drunken cowboy, Jim Pender, rides in and starts shooting, protects Ruth, while Lou Howard hides.

CHAPTER I—Continued

From under the counter where he lay the storekeeper did not announce his presence. He had ducked just in time to keep from being seen.

A crook-nosed man with rusty hair stood beside some sacks filled with potatoes.

"Who in Mexico are you, Sorrel-top?" demanded Pender. "Where's that bald-headed galoot Sanger?"

He did not wait for an answer. In his hands was a rifle drawn from the side beside the saddle. Raising it, he drummed holes in the tinware suspended from the wall. A forty-four had jumped to the hand of the man beside the potatoes, but though the weapon covered the drunken fool it was not fired.

The frightened horse went into the air, and as it came down jammed the rider's leg against the counter. The animal whirled, flung Pender from the saddle, and dashed wildly out of the store. Scrambling to his feet, the drink-crazed man snatched up the rifle and followed his mount. He took a shot at the gelding as it went racing up the street in a cloud of dust. Apparently he had forgotten what he had come to get, for he limped across to the cow-ponies in front of the Golden Nugget, selected one, mounted, and rode away with a wild yell.

"Fireworks over," drawled the crook-nosed man, and his weapon vanished from sight. He gave the girl a hand to help her up from where he had flung her. "You were sure right, Mr. Sanger. You know yore town. It livened up like you promised."

Ruth Chiswick stood beside him, breathing a little faster than usual, her cheeks still pale. The man with whom she was eloping came round the corner of the counter. He was carrying a revolver.

"I would sure have got that bird if I hadn't seen he didn't mean business," Lou Howard boasted.

Ruth looked at him, scorn in her eyes. The scorn was less for him than for herself. For hours she had been discovering that the man she had chosen was vain, shallow, and a boaster. Now she knew too that he lacked courage, the one essential virtue on the frontier for men both good and bad.

"Watching him through a knot-hole maybe," the stranger suggested lazily, a hint of derision in his murmured comment.

Lou turned to Ruth. "Let's get out of here," he said sulkily. "Sanger is going to send Spicer down to Ma Presnall's."

The crook-nosed man remembered having seen a sign on the street mentioning that Al Spicer was a justice of the peace.

In a low voice Ruth said, "I'd like to speak with you alone, Lou."

"Sure," he replied. "On the way down to the hotel."

"No. At the back of the store." Her voice was almost a whisper.

He followed her reluctantly toward the small boxed-in office.

The girl talked, fast and low. She seemed to be both urging and pleading.

An angry oath ripped into her words. "Have you gone crazy?" Howard demanded, raising his voice. "Think you can make a fool of me?"

She spoke again, trying to calm him.

He would not listen. "You can't do this crazy thing. You've compromised yourself. Don't you see it, you little idiot? Folks will talk about you. They'll say—"

Ruth began to lose patience. "Never mind what they'll say. I've made up my mind. I'm going home."

"You got no right to treat me that way. I'm not going to stand for it."

"I'm sorry, but be sensible, Lou. Be glad I've found out in time."

He flung a name at her. She looked at him for a moment steadily, then turned and walked up the store.

"My name is Ruth Chiswick," she told the man with the rusty hair. "I'm much obliged to you for looking after me."

"Nothing at all, Miss. I'm a stranger here—name, Jeff Gray."

Lou Howard joined them and broke in curtly, speaking to Ruth.

"Let's get out where we can be alone and talk this over."

The name he had called her still rang hotly in her heart.

"I've nothing more to say to you, Lou," she said, and again there was the sting of a lash in the low voice.

Ruth turned to walk from the store, but instead of doing so stood rigid, her eyes fixed on two men riding down the street. To Howard she said, over her shoulder: "You'd better light out; my father is here."

The young man took one look at the dismounting men. "Maybe I had better, to keep from having trouble with him," he faltered.

He left by the side door. The girl did not even notice him go.

"I don't see how Father could have found out already," she said, frowning in thought. "But that doesn't matter. I'll go meet him."

Gray shook his head. That would not do. Decent girls could not go into such a place as the Golden Nugget for any reason. He heard himself, to his own surprise, offering to do her errand.

He walked across the road into the gambling-house.

A big, fat, heavy-shouldered man who was playing solitaire lifted his head as Sid and Mile High came into the Golden Nugget. He beckoned them to him.

"What's all the shootin' about?" he asked.

One of the men playing poker at the next table leaned back to catch the answer.

"Jim Pender on one of his toots," Sid replied. "Wants to clean up the town again, Sherm."

Sherman Howard frowned down at the table and shifted a queen. "He'll go just so far, that bird."

The man at the poker table, a tall, broad-shouldered fellow with black curly hair, said significantly, "He's here only for a short visit."

"I reckon you're shoutin', Curly," agreed Mile High. "I never liked any of that bully-puss warrior's game." He mentioned, in a low voice, news that might or might not be important. "Stranger in our midst."

"Where?" asked Curly.

"Over at Sanger's. Drapped in on a big roan that has been rode far."

"What kind of a guy?" inquired Howard.

"Red-headed. Tough as they come. Wears his gun low."

Howard made a sign and a man strolled over from the faro table. He was a slim, hard-eyed young fellow sporting a fancy silk bandanna tied loosely round his neck. The name he went under was Morgan Norris. He was known to be a killer.

"Stranger over at Sanger's, Morg," the solitaire player said. "Might stroll over and size him up. Find out if you can where he comes from, what he is doing here, and how long he aims to stay."

Into the Golden Nugget walked two men. Their entrance created a stir, as a breath of wind does in a field of grain. Out of the corner of his mouth Curly murmured, "Look who's here." Interest in the games momentarily diminished. The bartender stopped polishing a glass. To Morgan Norris, in a whisper, Mile High gave warning: "Keep yore shirt on, Morg. Let Sherm make the play."

The men who had just walked into the gambling-house had the stamp of their calling written on every crease of their dusty clothes, on every wrinkle of their weather-beaten faces. Both were big men who had taken on the solidity that comes with years.

Unless his salient, close-shut jaw, his steady, keen, blue eyes gave false witness, the older man, Lee Chiswick, was one of dominant will, one who would fight for his rights. His companion and foreman, Dan Brand, was a barrel-chested fellow of great physical strength. On his tanned, open face there was the hint of a smile, not unfriendly, as if he offered it to mitigate the hostility of his chief.

A thin, satiric smile rested on the face of Sherman Howard. He leaned back in his chair, opaque eyes fastened on the older of the newcomers.

"Nice to have you drop in on us, Lee. You don't often get around Tail Holt way. We sure feel honored." He nodded at the younger man. "You, too, Brand. Both welcome as the flowers in May. Pete, take the orders. The house is drinking on me."

"I don't drink with you or any of your crowd, Howard," said Lee Chiswick harshly. "I'm here strictly for business."

Through the swing doors a man dropped into the Golden Nugget. He was the stranger who had given his name as Jeff Gray.

"Tail Holt will welcome yore business, Lee. You have always been cash on the barrel-head," Howard told the cattleman blandly, ignoring the insult.

"I came to serve notice that anyone who steals my stock from now on will do so at his own risk," Chiswick answered bluntly. "I've given my men orders to shoot rustlers at sight."

A tense silence followed the words of the cattleman, one pregnant with peril. Gray's gaze swept the room. Unless rumor lied, three-fourths of these men present must be cattle rustlers.

Instinctively Gray knew that half a dozen men were waiting for their cue. Howard gave it to them. For the time at least his decision was for peace.

"That's fine," he said with suave mockery. "Sooner we get rid of scalawags of that kind the better."

"You can pass the word that any I catch will be hanged to the nearest live oak," Chiswick said flatly.

Morgan Norris asked a question, his eyes narrowed, his voice low. "Having anyone particular in mind, Mr. Chiswick?"

"Meaning anyone the shoe fits," Howard answered for the cattleman. "And I don't reckon that is anybody present, Morg. If there is any way we can help Mr. Chiswick, we will all be glad to do so. Am I right, boys?"

"Sure you're right, Sherm," agreed Curly Connor heartily. "If you can use me, Mr. Chiswick, I'm much at yore service."

"Don't want your help," Chiswick flung out bitterly. "I'll look out for my own stuff and find out whether an honest man has a chance against a pack of thieves. What I'm here to tell you is that from now on I'll be sheriff, judge, and hangman on the L C range."

Dan Brand, foreman of the L C outfit, poured oil on the roiled waters. "Don't get us wrong, boys. We're not here to start trouble but to stop it. This steal is getting so big the L C has got to bust it up or go broke. We don't claim we know who is doing this rustling. If we did, our job would be easy."

"We don't know, but we can guess," Chiswick cut in hardily.

"Out loud?" Norris asked, his eyes slits of menace.

The swing doors of the gambling-hall burst wide open. A wild yell brought everybody in the room to attention. Excitedly a horse did a nervous dance on the floor. Its flushed rider waved a rifle about recklessly. Long black hair fell to the man's shoulders. The chaps were fringed, the fancy vest decorated.

"Way for Wild Jim Pender!" the drunken man shouted.

All eyes focused on him.

"Get out of here, you fool," Curly ordered.

"My night to howl!" Pender exulted. "Me, I'm a wild wolf from the Chiricahuas."

To emphasize the point, or else by accident, a bullet from his rifle plowed into the ceiling.

Half a dozen revolvers roared together. Pender pitched from the saddle like a sack of meal. He struck the floor in a crumpled heap, rolled over, and lay motionless.

Norris thrust his smoking weapon back into its scabbard and caught the bridle of the rearing horse. Someone else ran forward to assist him. The two men got the frightened animal out of the place.

Sherman Howard gave a curt order. "Get the coroner, Sid."

Nobody paid any attention to the body on the floor. It was as if the roar of the guns had banished the strained situation the entrance of Pender had interrupted. The games were resumed. Sounds of voices, the rattle of chips, the spinning of the roulette wheel filled the room. Wild Bill Pender's adventure was finished business.

Jeff Gray took temporary leave of absence. He had to explain to a girl probably sick with fear that the shooting had nothing to do with her father.

CHAPTER II

The cowboy Sid stood in the doorway of the store.

"Job for you, Sanger," he said. "Fellow bumped off in the Golden Nugget."

Jeff Gray shouldered past him toward the white-faced girl leaning against the counter. "It's all right, Miss Chiswick," the red-headed man told her cheerfully. "Nobody hurt but Pender."

"Who was sure shot into rag dolls," Sid added.

Ruth relaxed limply as the blood poured back into her frozen heart. "I thought . . . I was afraid . . ."

she murmured, the words drying in her throat.

"Help me carry this stretcher, Sid," requested Sanger. He was coroner and undertaker. In Tail Holt the first of these positions was honorary, but the other was no sinecure.

"Did you tell my father I am here?" Ruth asked.

"Haven't had a chance yet," Gray answered. The other two men were leaving with the stretcher. He continued, lowering his voice: "Mr. Chiswick came to town about some rustling."

"And doesn't know about . . . me?"

"I couldn't say."

"What is he doing in the Golden Nugget?"

"Serving notice that he is on the warpath against rustlers."

The eyes of the girl opened wide. "To that gang in there?"

"Looked to me like some of them were sullen about it," he conceded. "Lucky for him Pender picked that time to cut loose his wolf. The boys got the finger-itch out of their systems. I reckon it's going to be all right now. Howard seems to be the big boss, and he is making peace talk."

"Father is so bull-headed."

Gray asked for information, reluctantly. This was none of his business, but he had been dragged into it. "This young Howard—any kin to Sherm Howard?"

A flag of color fluttered in her cheeks, but the dark eyes held steadily to his. "Son," she said. Then, sharply, "Why do you ask?"

"If you aim to tell yore father about this little fling, maybe you had better get him out of town first," he suggested.

There was a slurring drawl in his speech that stirred anger in her. Clearly he disapproved of what she had done. She did not hesitate to affront the young men who fluttered around her, but she objected to being made the victim of cool contempt.

Science Backs Microbe Into Corner, and Beats Him, Psychologist Asserts

A century ago your life expectancy at birth was about forty years. Now it has jumped to more than sixty and is still going up. Why?

Preventive medicine is largely the answer, according to a statement by G. H. Estabrooks, professor of psychology at Colgate university, writes a correspondent in the Los Angeles Times. In preventive medicine, science either prevents the microbe from making contact with you, or, if he then does, we study his own life cycle and spoil his game by ditching him at some vital part of his own career, Estabrooks asserts. For example, he may be one of the kind that have to spend a part of their lives in another animal and the rest in you.

An example of this is the malaria germ which cannot reach you except through a mosquito, or the germ of bubonic plague that rides on a flea that rides on a rat. Here the stratagem of preventive medicine is to exterminate the mosquito and the rat, rather than to shoot directly at the germ.

When these methods fail we still have our bodily natural immunity to fall back on, for the body already knows how to deal at once with a large part of the germs that hop aboard it, without any outside help. If not, our bodies then can often build up in time an artificial immunity by manufacturing an anti-toxin, or anti-poison, to neutralize the poison secreted by the invading germs. Finally, if our bodies are too weak to do this, doctors inject anti-toxins.

Arizona Crater a Wonder

Near Winslow, Ariz., the great meteor crater is an object of unflagging interest. This tremendous hole, a mile in diameter, was formed by the impact of the head of a small comet that plunged into the earth ages ago and now lies buried more than a thousand feet beneath the surface. The bottom of the crater is about 50 stories deep, and around the rim is an even hill as white as snow, that indicates the intense heat that scorched the earth all around as the flaming comet struck.

HOW to SEW

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

Why Not Fix Those Sagging Springs?

SPRINGS in furniture seldom break. The twine that holds them does break and webbing wears out throwing the springs out of position.

To set the springs you will need a ball of twine and a needle such as used by the upholsterer, enough webbing to replace the old, tacks 1/2-inch long with large heads, a block of wood for stretching the webbing, a tack hammer and a tack lifter. Remove the cover from the seat carefully so that it may either be used again or serve as a pattern. Most of the padding may also be used. Observe how each layer of material is fastened in place, so that you may put it back the same way.

Remove the springs and all old tacks. Tack the first strip of webbing to one edge of the bottom of the frame, letting the end extend 1/2 inch beyond the edge, then fold the end over the first tacks and tack again as at A. Draw the webbing across the frame using the block of wood as a lever to stretch webbing taut as at B. When all the strips have been stretched and tacked across the frame one way, stretch strips of webbing across the other way weaving these over and under the first ones as at C. Now, sew the bottom of each spring to the webbing with the upholsterer's twine and curved needle as shown in this diagram.

Next, turn the frame right side up, drive tacks part way in along the edges; then tie the springs across each way with upholsterer's twine as shown in diagram C. The twine is tied to the tacks and to each spring and regulates the height of the springs—the outside edges usually being lower than the center to make a rounded top. When the springs are regulated evenly, drive the tacks in; then replace burlap or muslin coverings and padding.

Band Gave Concert Last Friday Night

Friday, March 18, 1938, at the High School auditorium the Slaton Tiger Band gave a concert—the first public appearance since the arrival of the new uniforms.

The program was of a varied nature; added attractions to the regular program were: An acrobatic twirling act by Margaret McGee, of Borger; J. R. Walker, guest conductor, from Borger, Texas; a saxophone solo by Louie Cohen, Borger; and a saxophone quintette by Borger High School students.

The band had the good fortune of playing for a very receptive audience who appreciated the talent of the musicians and the appearance of the band which is above par since the arrival of the new uniforms.

The members of the band wish to express their appreciation to the Band Mothers' Club and to the Slaton Merchants who made it possible for the band to have new uniforms.

Slaton Track Men Attend Ralls Meet

The Slaton track team went to Ralls Friday, and came back with top honors in relays. Those competing were Amarillo, Ralls, Lubbock, and Slaton.

The Slaton team did not enter anything but relays, but won highest honors. Slaton made 10 points, Amarillo 8 points, and Lubbock 8 points. The last relay, a medley relay, was not entered by Slaton because they couldn't run but in three running events.

Slaton won first in the 880 yard relay with a time of one minute and forty-three seconds. This is a very remarkable time for the 880-yard run. The team ran second in the mile relay, and third in the 440-yard relay.

Those composing the team were Leon Powers, Henry Pinkert, Charles Austin, and Perry Reed.

Leon was third in the 100-yard dash, and Gregory won fourth in the shot-put.

Slaton had five men, Amarillo 28, and Lubbock 28 men.

Slaton has great prospects for a very good team this year in track.

One Man Starts Redbud Fever

"Redbud Fever" has swept over the city of Denton, Texas, and thousands of the delicate flowers are now in bloom throughout the town. The man behind it all is Dr. L. H. Hubbard, who started the movement by having over a thousand redbud trees planted on the campus of Texas State College for Women.

With "A Redbud in Every Yard" as their slogan, the Civic Bureau has marked out U. S. Highway 77 as a "Redbud Trail," along which trees are planted at 25-foot intervals within the city limits.

THE best thing about your telephone service is that it's home town service—tailor-made for you at the switch-board by people who live and work here.

Experts can develop better methods of giving you service. Scientists and engineers can contribute new inventions and developments. Western Electric can buy and manufacture economically for the operating companies of the Bell System.

And all of these things can—and do—help tremendously at the job of giving you good telephone service at a fair cost.

Yet not one of them could replace the qualities of friendliness and neighborliness which grow out of the fact that the men and women who operate the telephones here belong to and are part of this community.

All it usually costs to relieve the misery of a cold today—is 3¢ to 5¢—relief for the period of your cold 15¢ to 25¢. Hence no family need neglect even minor head colds.

Here is what to do: Take two BAYER tablets when you feel a cold coming on—with a full glass of water. Then repeat, if necessary, according to directions in each package. Relief comes rapidly.

The Bayer method of relief is the way many doctors now approve. You take Bayer Aspirin for relief—then if you are not improved promptly, you call the family doctor.

SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL

By Carter Field

Washington.—The Farley maxim that the Democrats should fight to the last ditch for every possible elective office, no matter how hopeless the fight might seem, and always with a view to building up the organization for the "next election" is being shamelessly abandoned, according to some very caustic critics inside the Democratic party.

Out in the country some Democratic leaders, sharing this view, are very much disturbed. They are telling their senators and representatives that all is not well, that the Republicans are likely to make big inroads this fall, and that there will be a terrific number of casualties among Democratic house members, if not among Democratic senators.

This impression that the Democratic machine is not functioning at top speed, that it is depending more on general propaganda and more on the strength of Roosevelt with the voters, is enhanced when such pessimists come to Washington and try to get something done about it.

"I told our problems to Charley Michelson," a Democratic worker from Missouri told some friends afterward, "and I was afraid he would go to sleep while I was talking."

What that worker did not know, of course, was that Charley might be excused for being bored at hearing the same tale for the thousandth time. On the other hand there is the old story of the boy who kept crying, "Wolf! Wolf!" when there was no wolf, and who regretted his false alarms very much when, after the real wolf came, no one paid any attention to his cries.

Call It Good Strategy

There are some influential members of the party, however, who believe that it is good strategy to let down for a while.

They don't think it would hurt very much if the Republicans should gain sixty or seventy seats in the house of representatives this fall. They do not expect that the Republicans will do anything like this well, but point out that there would be some advantages to such a change. For one thing the Democratic majority in the house would not be so unwieldy and top-heavy. For another it would put, as they express it, the "fear of God" in the hearts of the surviving Democrats. So these survivors might be brought to heel much more easily on White House commands.

"But suppose the Republicans should actually get control of the house?" one of them was asked.

"That is almost impossible," retorted the Democrat. "But suppose they did? Wouldn't that put the Republicans on the spot before the country? What could they do except snipe at the President and the New Deal? I think actually it would be far from an unmixed evil. I think a house for the next two years controlled by the Republicans would do more to insure a sweeping Democratic victory in 1940 than anything I can imagine."

Interest in the senate battles this fall is mostly personal. Nothing could shake the grip of the Democrats on the senate except a crop of upper house funerals far in excess of any reasonable probability.

Stumbling Block

Nothing would surprise anyone who has been watching the stalemate on the wage-hours regulation bill, but it is quite apparent that the magic formula which would open the door to its enactment has not been found.

Secretary Perkins remains the chief stumbling block. Not because of anything she has done about it, but because of where to put the administration of the act, and the discretion about tempering the wind to the shorn lambs—in this case the sections of the country and the particular industries which might be favored with differentials—is the chief problem on which agreement is not in sight.

If Miss Perkins were entirely satisfactory to William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, to John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O., and to congress, the bill would go through like greased lightning. To put it another way, if Miss Perkins were to resign tomorrow, and the President should appoint Edward F. McGrady in her place, passage of the bill would happen within 36 hours.

But—there is no likelihood of that. Lewis and Green are not willing to trust Miss Perkins. Congress is not willing to trust her. So the alternative would seem to be an independent board or commission to administer the law. This is where the power of Green in congress becomes important. Green sticks to the position he took two months ago that he would not trust such a board. His shins are still too much barked up by the national labor relations board, which he says, favors the C. I. O. as against the American Federation of Labor.

The way around that, apparently, would be to permit no discretion at all in the administration of the act, to pass a law specifying that no workers could be made to labor more than a given number of hours a week nor paid less than a given amount per hour or per week.

Seek Magic Formula

This would be all right if it were not for the sections of the country and the particular industries which think they must have a differential. The only way to have a law and to permit such exceptions in its enforcement is to vest discretion in some administrative body.

Solution of this problem requires a magic formula. Administration experts have been busy trying to evolve this formula ever since, but it is still undiscovered. The President is not willing to humble Miss Perkins in order to get the law through. No other solution has been suggested which would come within a mile of success.

It might be found tomorrow. The President still hopes that it will be found before the end of the present session. But he is not as optimistic as he was. In fact, there are indications that he has become convinced the bill will not pass this session, though he is still insisting on it.

The new committee appointed to study the situation, of course, is just a gesture. The same man appointed to that committee have been working on the problem as individuals for more than a year. Merely naming them to a committee is not going to clear up the fog. Nor will the fact that they meet as a committee help much. They have been conferring as individuals, and as members of the house labor committee, for these many months. There is no magic in the word "committee," and, short of Ed McGrady, there is no magic in anything else that has been suggested.

Electric Industry

Every now and then something crops up to make the dispassionate observer wonder if Franklin D. Roosevelt really hates the electric industry as much as it believes. Most recent among these developments is the letter which J. D. Ross, one time government ownership executive in Seattle and now big boss of Bonneville, wrote to a Mr. Neal in Knoxville. The sum and substance of this letter was that it was good policy to buy out the existing private companies, and to pay a fair price.

There has been considerable question as to whether this was not a bad slip on Mr. Ross' part, one calculated to get him into pretty serious trouble with the President. The answer seems to be that there is, so far, no indication that it has. The further answer is that very recently Mr. Roosevelt, discussing the Supreme court decision approving public loans and grants to local communities for government ownership power plants and electric distribution systems, said that he assumed municipalities and other local governments contemplating such projects would negotiate with the privately owned units now supplying them with a view to avoiding duplication.

The point seems to be that President Roosevelt does not go anything like so far as either George W. Norris, Nebraska senator and daddy of TVA, or Representative John E. Rankin, the Mississippi utility baiter. Rankin has said frankly, many times, that because of their past sins he would, in buying out privately owned utilities, pay only second hand junk value for the properties.

Roosevelt's "prudent investment theory" applied to the price which should be paid for any utility is pretty tough, the utility men think, and their opinion is shared by most men who have ever been in business, but it is a lot better than Mr. Rankin's idea. In fact, it is not very far from correct to say that Roosevelt is about half way between John Rankin and J. D. Ross in his idea as to what would be a fair price for any privately owned utility.

Check on Prices

There are plenty who think that Roosevelt is not really eager to have the entire electric industry of this country public-owned and operated—that all he wants is enough of it so operated to be a check on the prices charged by the privately owned companies.

Roosevelt believes strongly in the social value of cheap electricity. Those who hold the view just stated believe that cheap current, and not public ownership, is his real objective. Tinctured a little, of course, by the enmities which gradually develop in such a long fight.

It must be remembered that this fight has not been going on only since he entered the White House. Most of the bitterness was engendered before that, when, as governor of New York, he did some things which irritated the utilities, and as a result of which many of their executives supported other candidates for the Democratic nomination in 1932. Which last, of course, is something that could not be overlooked.

There are a good many impartial observers, folks who think government ownership is always an economic crime, who wish devoutly that the privately owned utilities would test this theory out by marking down their rates. It might cost them some money, though even this is debatable, as evidenced by the records of the privately owned electric company in Washington.

CORRECTING WRONG IDEAS OF RELIGION

LESSON TEXT—Mark 7:1-13. GOLDEN TEXT—This people honoreth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me. Mark 7:6.

PRIMARY TOPIC—At Dinner-Time. JUNIOR TOPIC—What Is Real Religion? INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Counts with God? YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Sidestepping Responsibilities.

The never-ending struggle of Christianity is to keep the simple gospel of the grace of God in Christ Jesus free to operate in all its glory and power, unencumbered by the traditions and formulas of men. It has been my privilege to read a recent book by a brilliant young man who, while serving as a professor of philosophy in a large university, is also versed in the related fields of theology, psychology, psychiatry, and psychotherapy. He has had first-hand experience in dealing with the problems of men and women. With this background of both study and experience he gives it as his absolute conviction that we must get "back to the original simplicity of the Christian gospel." He suggests that we need to "dust off the additions and superstructures" that have been added since Christ came to seek and to save the lost.

Our lesson for today finds Jesus meeting that very issue with the traditionalists of His day.

I. Washed Hands and Unwashed Hearts (vv. 1-6).

In the process of interpreting the law of Moses and applying it to the affairs of daily life the religious authorities of Israel had developed a mass of intricate and onerous rules which had literally buried the law itself and had substituted ritualistic formalism for spiritual life. So fond had the scribes and the Pharisees become of these traditions that they became bold enough to declare that they were far superior to the law itself.

Their attack on Jesus because His disciples ate with unwashed hands did not refer to the proper cleansing of one's hands before eating, but to the ceremonial washings which were said to be necessary if one had accidentally touched a Gentile, or something that a Gentile had touched in the market place.

Jesus skillfully and finally disposes of that question by reminding the objectors that they were serving God with their lips only, but their hearts were far from Him. Washed hands are not a thing to be condemned, and Jesus says nothing about that point. When the washing of hands becomes of more importance than the cleansing of the heart, however, the soul is in real danger.

II. Traditions of Man Versus the Commandment of God (vv. 7-13).

Here is the heart of the entire matter, for while we may not always be aware of it the fact is that our anxiety to maintain human tradition which is contrary to the law and Spirit of God is fundamentally for the purpose of evading our full and true responsibility.

The Jew who was so avaricious that he did not wish to support his aged and needy parents could responsibly evade that God-given responsibility by declaring that his property was "Corban," dedicated to God. Thereafter no matter how great was the need of his parents they could receive nothing. The execution of this oath was carried out to such a fine point that a son who had declared his property to be "Corban" could visit a sick father or mother for only a brief period lest he might stay long enough to perform some duties of a nurse and so contribute to his parents by saving them some expense.

Thus do men even in our day make "the word of God of none effect" (v. 13), through their traditions. No right minded person objects to the worthy traditions of worship and service which are such a precious heritage of the Christian church. Rightfully apprehended and properly used they are both desirable and helpful. But we must never permit the grace and power of God in Jesus Christ "to be brought under the trammels of human teachers or the arrangements of human office-bearers. The first movement toward the mastery of the soul by tradition is the movement of that soul away from immediate, direct, first-hand fellowship with God" (Morgan).

The crying need of our day, as it was of the time when Jesus was on earth, is that we should clear away hindering encumbrances.

Goodness

The general goodness which is nourished in noble hearts, makes every one think that strength of virtue to be in another whereof they find assured foundation in themselves.—Sir P. Sidney.

Simplicity of Religion

Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world.—James 1:27.

Dress With Lengthening Panels. The plain neckline, the slim waist, snugged in by gathers, the long panel, front and back, are all beautifully slimming in effect. All in all, this dress is so smart that it's certain to be one of your favorites. This design adapts itself

Tragedy Was Difficult In Ye Olden Tymes The trials of a strolling player in Eighteenth century England may be judged from a handbill announcing a performance of the "deep and affecting tragedy of Theodosius, or the Force of Love," at the "Old Theater in East Grinsstead," in 1758, quoted in "Portrait of Mrs. Siddons," by Naomi Royde-Smith. It says: "Mrs. Crawford (a contemporary of the great Sarah Siddons) had a shriek and a groan that made rows of spectators start from their seats. Mrs. Siddons went further: when she shrieked the house shrieked with her; at her groan young ladies swooned in their boxes."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets made of Map Apple are effective in removing accumulated body waste.—Adv.
