A WEEK AT A TIME

by J. M. RANKIN

DR. NUNN PASSES

The death of Dr. J. E. Nunn of Amarillo this week removes from this scene a pioneer who left his mark in the Panhandle. Dr. Nunn was a leader in the cause of prohibition which he championed particularly in the founding of the Amarillo Daily News in 1910. The newspaper grew rapidly under the direction of Dr. Nunn until he sold it in 1926 to Gene Howe and Wilbur Hawk. Though Dr. Nunn had retired several years ago, he will be long remembered by newspaper people of the Panhandle of Texas.

CAN'T SPARE THE BAND

We have heard for years that Slaton had a first class band in the High school. Knowing something about the cost of bands, and the facilities of the average South Plains high school, we couldn't see how it could be done. But it was. And now the Slaton Band is the biggest all-year attraction in the town. We have noticed that when anything distinctive is done anywhere, somebody does it. It's like that in this case. And everybody knows who has taken the Slaton Band to town. Clyde Rowe. For two years in succession his band has won first honors in its class at the State Band and Orchestra Contest. Scores of boys and girls of our town have had opportunity to develop their musical talent and express themselves through this medium. And now we hear that things look unpromising for our band next year. Something must be done. Let's find out what must be done to assure the future of this institution that has proved its worth as an advertisement for our town, as a source of immense pleasure for our townspeople whether they were listeners or performers. We can't spare the band.

THANKS TO PETE AND TECH

We like our football rough; it was rough. We like our football fast; it was fast. We like mild weather for our football; it was mild. We like our football close enough to look like real competition; it wasn't. But don't blame Pete Cawthon and the Tech Matadors for the fact that the competition wasn't close enough. We enjoyed the Tech Fiesta. The band was light and color; the cadets marched; the band played; there were brilliant broken field runs; long, dangerous passing; thrills a-plenty. It was a quite perfect, perhaps, but a good had by nearly all. Thanks to Pete and Tech.

STAYS NEW LONGER

Last week some time was official straw hat day—that is it was for some people. But the way we are about official straw hat day, we can take it or leave it alone. We left it alone. For several weeks now we have been considering the practicability of taking the anti-freeze out of our radiator and also taking the anti-freeze clothes and storing them in both balls. But each morning was a discouraging, though by noon we often were uncomfortable. So with all due respect to the officials of official straw hat day, we didn't come at in time. But of course when you give your new hat, it stays new longer.

COMFORTABLE POSITION

"Hurrah," say CIO Lewis and AFL men about the President's plan for recovery from the depression. "Leading to ruin," says Winthrop W. Aldrich about the same plan. Only Winthrop says it in more complicated words such as, "based on economic theory." Anyway there you are, different people looking at the same thing and getting different impressions, yes, totally different. So what does a country boy have to tell about whether the President's plan will work or not. We believe labor and bankers and the President himself all want to see prosperity. Something should be done. We believe in the comfortable position of being able to do anything we want to do, and cheer if the going is good, and revile if the going is bad.

HOUSE SCHEDULE

Monday—Mrs. Smart's group, 5 to 10 p.m.

ELABORATE PLANS MADE FOR JULY 4TH

Postal Department Asks Building Bids

Proposals are being solicited, to be received in the Post-office Inspector A. S. Page at Fort Worth, up to and including May 20, 1938, to furnish quarters suitable for post-office purposes here, for a term of five years. Floor space of about 1800 square feet is desired. Important considerations are reasonably central location, good daylight, and accessibility to rear or side entrance for mails. General building requirements, equipment specifications, and form of proposal, together with information concerning the provisions of the lease, may be obtained from the Postmaster or the Inspector.

"In Old Chicago" Is Big!

"The public forgets 95 per cent of the movies it has seen because most of them are too narrow in their scope." This, Henry King, who directed the spectacular 20th Century-Fox picture, "In Old Chicago" insists is due to an over emphasis on camera intimacy.

"What the public never forgets is a production which carries with it the broad sweep of large scenes, the scenes which used to be called colossal and stupendous," says King.

"Every discussion of motion picture history brings up 'The Birth of a Nation,' 'Ben Hur,' 'The Covered Wagon' and films which set milestones in the cinema because of their magnitude. I think the public response to 'In Old Chicago' proves that we are in for a return of the bigger, and consequently better pictures."

Once in a nation's history a drama of such stirring power—gaudy palaces of pleasure—sprawling acres of squalid, crowded shacks—Dion and Jack O'Leary, fighting side-by-side or to-toe with equal zeal—dazzling Belle Fawcett, loving and hating hot-headed Dion in the most tempestuous romance ever brought to the screen! Chicago, thrilling, restless city of reckless strength, blind ambition, great dreams—levelled to ashes by searing, roaring flames that destroyed all but its dauntless spirit—the spirit that made a nation great!

"In Old Chicago" starts Sunday at the Palace theatre. The production features Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Alice Brady and Andy Devine in a story of the rise and fall of the mid-West metropolis of the 1870's. The climax is reached in the destruction of the city by the historic fire.

BOARD of CITY DEVELOPMENT and CHAMBER of COMMERCE NEWS

A. J. PAYNE, SECRETARY

Slaton's Post Office receipts as given to us by Postmaster K. L. Scudder reflect a gain over the same months of 1937 and 1936. The receipts for March 1938 are $1120.36, a gain of March 1937 of $63.02, receipts for April 1938 are $1115.08, showing a gain over April 1937 of $14.98, and a gain over April 1936 of $136.19 and a gain over March 1936 of $301.03, and for the four months of 1938 show a gain over the first 4 months of 1937 of $519.84 and over the four months of 1936 of $644.09.

We are giving you these figures to show you that we are on the gain each month this year over last year and very much over 1936, and we need to continue to gain more than this if we are to get a Federal Building in the very near future, and to get into the Federal Building class we will have to gain the balance of the year $761.40. So let's buy more stamps and write more letters.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—Georges Bonnet, France's new foreign minister, has been a vigorous advocate of a British-French-American alliance.

French May Join Four Power Pact He is regarded as more in accord with the Chamberlain policies than his predecessors.

With the downfall of the Left government, the conclusion of an Anglo-Italian agreement and the appointment of M. Bonnet, interpreters of European politics see an advance toward a four-power pact, possibly five-power, with Poland in, and the further isolation and immobilization of Russia.

The abandonment of the French-Soviet treaty is expected to be an immediate issue in what is regarded as a sharply clarifying outline of dominant conservative policy in France and England.

M. Bonnet, shrewd, suave, dressy, is a somewhat rakish figure, with his hat usually on the back of his head, but a personage of power and dignity in the political forum. He is of the younger school of French politics, and, in that connection, one of the best Jai Alai players in France.

At his country place at St. Georges de Didonne, he spends much time making incredible kangaroo leaps, playing pelota basque, as they call it there.

M. Bonnet Cuts Didos on Estate But, in statesmanship, he is no rubber-heeled bounding basque. He is rather a wary and adroit fencer.

When he was appointed ambassador to the United States in January, 1937, he brought with him a year's supply of truffles and pate de foies gras. He had to take most of it back, however, as, in July, he was recalled to save the franc in the Chautemps cabinet.

He was supposed to have saved it, but, as usual, it didn't stay saved, and, in the turn of the Ferris wheel, which is French politics, he was down under and up again.

He is an economist, but also a philosopher and author, in the chamber of deputies from southwest France at the age of thirty-six and a former minister of budget, pensions and finance. He budgets a few wisps of hair carefully across his bald pate and surveys the world warily through gold-rimmed spectacles.

JAPAN'S strongly authoritarian government, with its feudal carry-over, has never fitted exactly into any of the molds of ultra-modern absolutism.

Spotlight Now on Jap Strong Man The intensifying issue of fascism which may force out the present government spotlights several likely-looking "strong men" as possible successors to Premier Konoye.

The only one with apparently clearly formulated ideas, and a fluent line of totalitarian talk is War Minister General Hajimi Sugiyama.

After several years of European post-graduate studies in direct action, he returned to talk of "national renovation," "decadent parliamentarianism," "cadency and discipline," and the like. More than any other leader, he employs the standard terminology of fascism—if that means anything.

On May 27, 1937, he gave the diet quite a lacing and said that it would have to behave, or "we will dissolve it." Since he was then a member of the ruling military triumvirate, this was no casual editorial "we."

Sugiyama Tells Diet to Behave While he is fifty-eight years old, he hits big-time politics with a strong momentum, not a contender for high place until 1936, and hence not track-sore, like some of his rivals. He did not become a general until 1936, after the army revolt early in that year. He had been vice-minister of war and head of the military air force.

His heavily underslung face, resting, neckless, on a heavy torso, is asymmetrical, with one eyebrow always cocked, one side watchful and the set of a Benda mask of a dictator. He is of the army caste, graduated from the national military college. He represented Japan at the 1926 disarmament conference at Geneva, remaining in Europe for several years thereafter.

Elephant Remembers An elephant walked along a road near Rangpur, Bengal, a man in a garden shouted and made faces at it. The beast ambled into the garden, but the mahout restrained it while the mocker fled to safety. When the elephant returned along the road the same night it rushed at its tormentor's house and badly damaged it.

WPA WASTE ASSAILED

Senators Lodge and Davis Make Vigorous Minority Report on Unemployment Relief

Loan contracts totaling $36,657,000 for four cities, covering not more than 90 per cent of the cost of proposed slum-clearance and low-rent housing, were approved by President Roosevelt upon the recommendation of Nathan Straus, administrator of the housing authority. These will provide approximately 6,667 family dwelling units for over 26,000 slum dwellers. The photograph shows Senator Robert Wagner of New York watching Mr. Straus sign the loan contracts.

Lodge and Davis Strike

HENRY CABOT LODGE, JR., of Massachusetts and James J. Davis of Pennsylvania made a minority report of the senate committee on unemployment and relief in which they vigorously attacked administration business and relief policies and condemned the majority report for failure to investigate alleged waste in the WPA administration.

The two Republican senators demanded that administration leaders stop making "extravagant utterances, in which whole classes of people are insulted and nameless individuals are lambasted over the radio instead of being prosecuted in the courts."

They then offered these further suggestions for immediate action:

1. Repeal of the undistributed profits tax and modification of the capital gains tax as proposed in the senate tax bill and general tax reduction wherever possible.
2. Encourage that which is good in business.
3. Stop congress from "wasting its time" over consideration of "such schemes" as the Supreme court enlargement bill and the government reorganization bill and allow the legislators to concentrate on the relief and unemployment problem.
4. Eliminate tax exempt securities and reduce unnecessary and burdensome social security taxes.
5. A true unemployment census should be taken to serve as a basis for scientific treatment of the question of wages and hours on a national scale.
6. End executive discretion in tariff matters and return to congress the control of the currency.
7. Reorganization of the agencies of unemployment and relief.
8. Initiation of a new inquiry into the relief problem during which all persons who have constructive criticism of the operations of the present unemployment relief system would be heard.

Wallace Is Rebuked

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE WALLACE was rebuked for star chamber methods by the Supreme court in a decision reversing his order of June 14, 1933, fixing maximum rates to be charged by marketing agencies at the Kansas City stockyards.

The court's opinion, written by Chief Justice Hughes, reverses a decree of a three judge district court in Kansas City, upholding the order, on the ground that the commission men were denied a fair and open hearing and that Secretary Wallace accepted the "findings" of the government prosecutors without even reading the evidence.

In other decisions the Supreme court upheld the municipal bankruptcy act of 1937, and the 1923 filled milk act which bars interstate shipment of milk to which other oils or fats have been added.

"End Tax Exemptions"

PROMPT legislation was asked of congress by President Roosevelt to remove tax exemptions on income from all future government bonds, federal, state and local, and on all government salaries.

simple statute" which he felt the courts would uphold.

Mr. Roosevelt said: "Tax exemptions through the ownership of government securities have operated against the fair or effective collection of progressive surtaxes. Indeed, I think it is fair to say that these exemptions have violated the spirit of the tax law itself by actually giving a greater advantage to those with large incomes than to those with small incomes."

"The same principles of just taxation apply to tax exemptions of official salaries. The federal government does not now levy income taxes on the hundreds of thousands of state, county and municipal employees. Nor do the states, under existing decisions, levy income taxes on the salaries of the hundreds of thousands of federal employees. Justice in a great democracy should treat those who earn their livelihood from government in the same way as it treats those who earn their livelihood in private employ."

Won't Deal With Hitler
FRENCH PREMIER DALADIER let it be known that his government will not enter into any four power European treaty that includes Nazi Germany. In consequence, it was understood in Paris, Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain had given up that plan for the present. Daladier and Foreign Minister Bonnet went to London and discussed Anglo-British relations and other matters relating to the peace of Europe.

Henlein Warns Czechs

KONRAD HENLEIN, leader of Czechoslovakia's 3,500,000 Sudeten Germans, warned the government of "war internally or from the outside" in a militant speech which quarters close to the government believed bore the approval of Fuehrer Adolf Hitler.

Henlein openly proclaimed that German Nazism is the "guiding principle" of his Sudetens and demanded that Czechoslovakia's foreign policies be revised immediately as regards Germany.

He warned the Prague government against placing reliance in its military alliances with France and Soviet Russia, and frankly asserted that Czechoslovakia must cease resisting Germany's ambitions toward the east.

An emergency meeting of the cabinet council was called to consider the grave situation created by Henlein's demands.

In Budapest 20,000 Hungarians demanded the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia at a rally of the Hungarian Revision league.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

PRIME MINISTER EAMON DE VALERA of Ireland and Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain of Great Britain met again in London and signed an agreement that brings to a close the six-year tariff and trade war between the two countries. The quarrel began when Ireland refused to pay England land tithes amounting to $25,000,000.

The agreement leaves for later settlement the question of incorporation of North Ireland, or Ulster, into the Irish republic. This now seems possible of accomplishment for both parties in Ireland have nominated for first president of the state under the new constitution Dr. Douglas Hyde, a Protestant. Hyde is the country's most distinguished Gaelic scholar. He is the son of a former Protestant rector in County Roscommon and is seventy-eight years old.

SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL
By Carter Field

Washington.—It becomes increasingly apparent with every passing month that President Roosevelt has not successfully replaced Louis McHenry Howe. It is absurd to say that Howe was Roosevelt's political brain. As a matter of fact Roosevelt often overrode Howe's judgment. For instance, back in the 1932 campaign Louis Howe moved heaven and earth to prevent Roosevelt from making the swing to the Pacific coast. But Roosevelt went. He wanted to go.

But again and again Howe would be able to stop Roosevelt from doing or saying something that might have unexpected and bad repercussions. No one who knew the two men believes that Howe would not have prevented the President's opening up the story about the rift between the White House and Vice President John Nance Garner.

Actually it was one of the worst publicity moves made by Roosevelt in his entire political career.

Let's look at the history of this particular item. Chapter one was a sentence in a story by Arthur Krock, published on the editorial page of the New York Times. Krock knows his Washington from the days of the Taft administration, when he was correspondent here for the Louisville Courier Journal. He is shrewd and discerning, and his judgment is greatly respected.

An article, printed on the editorial page, would be skipped over by many readers who were not actually Krock fans. Unfortunately for the President, in this case, there are a good many Krock fans among the Washington newspaper men. So they asked the President if it were true that Mr. Garner had made the remark about letting the cattle—big and little business—put on a little fat.

Garner in Opposition

Roosevelt could have turned the thing off with a joke. He could have just smiled and said he hadn't seen the story — his normal procedure on anything threatening to become embarrassing.

But he didn't. He demonstrated to the reporters that he had worried about the story by telling them he had asked the Vice President about it, and had been assured by the Vice President that he didn't say it. Which immediately put the story in every newspaper in the land, accompanied by the alleged Garner opinion that the cattle (business—big and little) should be allowed to put on a little fat.

It makes no difference now whether Garner said it or not. It sounds like Garner, and it is a logic which at the moment is very appealing to the country.

But the real danger is this. Actually Garner and the President are very far apart indeed on many important issues, notably spending—the very issue on which the fight is now raging. So every day, almost without exception, there is some reference to Garner's attitude in the stories that come out of Washington about government spending.

And the President having gone as far as he did, Garner simply cannot do anything to stop it without stultifying himself. All of which spells loss of prestige for Roosevelt among a great many Democrats who admire and agree with Garner.

Question of Dare

Although the vote by which the house pigeonholed President Roosevelt's pet reorganization bill has been hailed from one end of the country to the other by critics of the New Deal as marking the turn of the tide, actually there is a good deal of doubt in the minds of most senators and representatives, even those who bucked him on this and some other issues, as to just how strong the President remains with the folks back home.

A careful canvass of a number of members of the house who voted against the President on reorganization discloses that for the most part they voted as they thought a majority of their constituents wanted them to vote. They were glad to find this backing for the vote, for in almost every instance the members approached wanted to vote against the bill. It was just a question if they dared to do it.

But a considerable sprinkling of the letters Democratic representatives received urging them to vote against the bill—and considering only letters from people they knew, or knew about—did not indicate any swerving of loyalty to the President. Lots of the people thought the President should not be given this power because they were afraid some of his lieutenants would misuse it!

In other words, plenty of voters are strong for the President who would not trust Harold L. Ickes across the street. Plenty of others don't mention Ickes, but think Jim Farley's political activities should be restrained. Still another group is strong for the President but has no use for Henry A. Wallace. And a tremendous lot of them, without voicing antagonism to any particular New Deal official, insisted that the comptroller's office should be maintained 100 per cent independent of White House control, and should continue to audit and approve payments to be made from the Treasury before they are made. In short, just because a lot of voters approved Mr. Roosevelt personally, and thought he was making a fine President, they did not propose to set up a change in the government which might make it easier for some lieutenant or aide to get away with something.

Makes Them Foggy

There is so much of this in the mail of so many Democratic representatives that it is no wonder they are a bit foggy as to what the President's strength really is.

It is a truism, as old as the picking of tribal chieftains, that loyalty is given to the king—but not to the king's ministers. It is much easier to understand in the British system, where the king's ministers may be kicked out of office overnight, but the king goes right on undisturbed.

It is not as logical when applied to the United States form of government, for actually the President is responsible for his lieutenants. Most of them he can fire at will. Most of his actions, save on the really big issues, are really decided by them.

But the loyalty out in the country which makes a President strong is not to them. It is to him alone. Few even of the most rabid partisans of President Roosevelt will argue that he has a good cabinet. This is not necessarily a commentary on the caliber of his official family. For party leaders of every party have always deplored the cabinet selections of their Presidents. Their loyalty is to him alone.

And that goes for the individual cabinet members as well as the folks who write to their congressmen. There is not a member of the cabinet who does not think he could vastly improve the administration if he could toss half a dozen of his colleagues out the window and pick their successors.

Faces a Problem

Robert L. Doughton, chairman of the house ways and means committee, faces a problem in the conferences between the house and senate on the tax bill, which only a Southerner can understand. It revolves around the idea of unswerving loyalty to the Democratic party, and to whoever is leader of that party at the moment, regardless of one's private opinions.

As a matter of fact two of Doughton's Democratic colleagues in the house from North Carolina are refusing to run for re-election because of this same problem. They do not like the New Deal. They disapprove most of the administration measures, but they regard themselves almost as soldiers in the line of battle. They do not feel they have any right to do anything else than what the general says—especially on any question which by any remote stretch of the imagination could be classified as a party issue.

Wild horses could not drag it from Doughton in a public statement but in private conversations with many friends he has indicated, again and again in the last few months, that he was fed up with the present situation. He is still seriously considering not being a candidate for re-election this fall. Yet just a year ago Doughton was thinking of rounding out his career with a term in the senate.

So that President Roosevelt's special letter to Doughton and to Senator Pat Harrison, insisting that the principle of the tax on undistributed corporation earnings be retained, put the North Carolina veteran very much on the spot.

Actually the house leaders were afraid, when the senate tax bill was brought to the house, that it might be accepted by acclamation without being sent to conference at all.

Badly Scared

So frightened were they that Doughton himself appealed to his colleagues personally, saying on the floor that questions and proposals indicated the house didn't have much faith in its committee.

This is the sort of appeal the house seldom denies, especially to a man who has its whole-souled respect to the degree that Robert Doughton has. So the bill was sent to the conference with no strings on the house conferees. This was before the receipt of the Roosevelt letter demanding that the house provision, instead of the senate provision on undistributed earnings, be retained.

Harrison snapped back at the President. Doughton said nothing. But the senators on the conference committee know how the house feels. They know the administration leaders in the house were afraid of a test vote just before sending the bill to conference.

Incidentally, the Harrison statement was one of two chickens that came home to roost within a week, to the annoyance of the White House. It was the President's influence that beat Pat Harrison by one vote for Democratic leader of the senate. It was also the President's influence that beat John J. O'Connor of New York for house Democratic leader. O'Connor virtually led the fight that beat the President's pet reorganization bill, much as it must have galled him to be on the same side as Father Coughlin.

Once upon a time—"

Yep, once upon a time, back in the days of buggies and dirt roads your grandfather on his way to town would draw over to the side of the road, stop the rig and read a sale bill posted on a fence.

But times have changed

We whiz along the road today in our cars—no stopping to read some dinky handbill . . . We're going to town to buy something we read about in our newspaper.

Got Something You Want to Sell

Most people have a piece of furniture, a farm implement, or something else which they have discarded and which they no longer want. These things are put in the attic, or stored away in the barn, or left lying about, getting less and less valuable each year.

WHY NOT SELL THEM?

Somebody wants these very things which have become of no use to you. Why not try to find that somebody?

SYNOPSIS

Ruth Chiswick of L C ranch, obsessed by fear of danger to her outspoken father, Lee, from a band of lawless rustlers headed by Sherm Howard, decides to save him by eloping with young Lou Howard, Sherm's son, and comes to the town of Tail Holt to meet him. While in the Yell Sanger's store, a crook-nosed stranger enters, sizes up the situation, and when a drunken cowboy, Jim Pender, rides in and starts shooting, protects Ruth, while Lou Howard hides. Disgusted with Lou's cowardice, Ruth calls off the elopement, and sends the stranger for her father at the gambling house across the street. There the stranger, calling himself Jeff Gray, meets Morgan Norris, a killer, Curly Connor, Kansas Mile High, Sid Hunt, and other rustlers, and Sherm Howard. Lee Chiswick enters, with his foreman, Dan Brand, and tells Sherm Howard of his orders to shoot rustlers at sight. Jeff Gray returns to Ruth and coldly reassures her of her father's safety. At supper, Ruth introduces Lee to her father and Brand, and in Sanger's store later she speaks cordially to Curly Connor. Coming out of the store they are greeted by sudden gunfire. Lee is wounded, and Jeff Gray appears with a smoking revolver. Two days later, Ruth tells her father of her projected elopement and her disillusionment. Later, Ruth meets Jeff Gray, whom she thinks tried to kill her father. Ruth accidentally wounds Jeff. She takes him to Pat Sorley's camp. Ruth is incredulous of Jeff's story of shooting at the assassin rather than at her father, and later pleads with Lee to listen to him. When Lee arrives at Pat Sorley's camp, he finds only a note to Pat from Jeff. Meanwhile, Jeff rides into Tail Holt and sends word to Sherm Howard he wants to see him. He shows Howard a poster with his picture, with the name of Clint Duke, wanted as the leader of a band of outlaws. The rest of the band arrives. Jeff shows the outlaws the poster and asks their confidence, and tells them Ruth shot him. They agree to allow him to stay. Another raid on the L C cattle causes Lee to line up his men in pursuit, and to send his son Frank to Iowa to reconnoiter.

"I'll find out what I can," Frank said.

"Be careful about asking questions, and don't get into trouble with these thieves. If anyone wants to know what you are doing there, say you have come to meet a buyer we are expecting from New Mexico."

Frank cut back to the ranch while the others rode up Box canyon. It was already beginning to drizzle when the posse pushed into the high lands above the gorge. Before night fell it was raining steadily. Chiswick made camp on Stampede creek, well up toward the headwaters.

All through the night rain poured down. The campers rose in the morning wet and stiff. They warmed themselves at the fire, dried off as best they could, and saddled as a chill sun broke through the mist.

Chiswick divided his men. One half of them he sent with Dan Brand to comb the Flat-Tops. His son Bob and Sorley stayed with him. They dropped in on half a dozen mountain ranches on the far chance they might hear or see something of the missing stock. The owners of two or three of these were away from home. The others showed no pleasure at sight of the L C men.

Lee questioned them sharply. The answers were either evasive or sulky. They had no information to give him. For all he knew his cattle might be hidden in some gulch or now less than a mile distant.

Late in the day he joined Brand and his men at an appointed spot. The foreman had made a wide sweep of country without seeing any L C stuff. Wearily the riders returned to the ranch, getting in late at night.

Ruth knew from her father's dejection that they had been unsuccessful. She waited until after he had eaten to ask questions. While he smoked his pipe he told her of the expedition.

"This fellow Gray was in it," he said abruptly, when he had apparently finished.

She was clearing away the dishes and turned, slim figure alertly poised, to find out how he knew.

"Pat had checked up on his horse and knew the hoofprints," Chiswick explained. "They must have sent him here ahead of them to locate a good bunch to run off."

"And I believed his lies," Ruth said bitterly.

"Don't blame yourself for that. He might have fooled me too. The fellow looks you right in the eye when he talks. He doesn't look like a sneaking coyote. Well, we live and learn, girl."

Frank Chiswick took a room at Ma Presnall's, the only place at Tail Holt which offered accommodations. He could see that he was eyed with surprise by one or two men who knew him, but he took no overt notice of that. To Curly he mentioned casually that he was waiting for an expected cattle-buyer whom he was going to take back with him to the ranch. This information, he felt sure, would reach Sherm Howard and his rustler friends.

Once he caught sight of Lou Howard in the distance, and at that young man's strutting arrogance felt his fists involuntarily clench. He had an urge to change the contour temporarily of the man's vapid, good-looking face, but he was under orders to keep out of trouble.

At the end of the second day he went back to his boarding-house completely bored. He washed up, and went down for supper.

At the long table in the dining-room Ma Presnall put him next a crook-nosed stranger with reddish hair. Presently the man mentioned amiably that his name was Gray.

The words were a little shock to Frank. His swift gaze swept the man, down and up. He noted a certain pantherish lightness of body, a hard recklessness of face. A chill ran through young Chiswick. His first impulse was to fling out a challenge, but he remembered his father's instructions. He was not to get into trouble with their enemies.

Stiffly he answered, iron in his voice, "I am Frank Chiswick."

Two or three of those at the table were watching them.

"I reckon you don't feel friendly, Mr. Chiswick," drawled Gray.

"Would you expect me to feel friendly with a man who tried to murder my father and later helped to rustle his cattle?" Frank asked harshly.

"You've certainly got me wrong, sir," Gray replied, with unhurried courtesy. "But I don't expect I can convince you of it."

"Not in a hundred years," Frank retorted hotly. "I don't wish to talk with you, sir, or to know you when we meet."

"Short and sweet," Gray said with a smile, his manner cheerfully indifferent. "It's a blow, but I expect I'll have to get along without knowing Mr. Frank Chiswick."

He turned and began to talk with the man on the other side of him.

As soon as supper was over, Frank went to the landlady and asked her to change his seat to the other end of the table.

The day after Frank reached Tail Holt, he saw Morgan Norris and Mile High jog into town and tie at the hitchbar in front of the Golden Nugget. Young Chiswick sauntered up the street and turned in at Curt Dubbs' place. He knew he would not be exactly welcome there, but the objection to his patronage would probably be expressed only in pointed hints.

Morris and Mile High were at the bar slaking thirst after a short visit to a hidden cache. A poker game was in progress, but the wheel and the faro table were both deserted. It was too early in the day for them. Inside of an hour they would be going full blast. Around the poker table sat six men. Curly and Jeff Gray were two of them.

To Mile High his companion said, out of the corner of his mouth, "Tail Holt sure is being honored these days."

Mile High glanced at Chiswick hastily, to see if he had caught the slur. "What's eatin' you, Morg?" he said hastily. "No use raisin' a rookus."

"Am I raisin' a rookus because I'm grateful the big moguls have started drappin' in on us?" he asked offensively.

Frank moved away. He heard Norris say, without troubling to lower his voice, "I was aimin' to ask him how his old man is getting along putting down the rustlers."

The tall cowpuncher laughed, then tried to cover his mirth with a decorous cough.

Chiswick flushed angrily. The rage was still simmering in him when he passed the poker table and met the bland smile of Gray. He felt the disadvantage of youth. He was not philosophical enough to ignore insults without letting them burn him up, nor neat enough of tongue to answer them with a stinging retort that could not be construed as a challenge.

Out of the back door Frank passed into a night roofed by a star-pierced sky. He cut across a vacant lot and walked up the narrow, dusty road leading to a crooked canyon the black mouth of which opened in front of him.

In the shadow of a cottonwood he saw the figures of a man and a woman locked in embrace. The murmur of the man's low voice reached him as he passed. At the end of the road, where it terminated in a narrow trail running up the canyon, Frank turned and retraced his steps.

The girl beneath the cottonwood ran into the adjoining house and the man came out to the road. He was just behind Chiswick, whistling gaily, "Good-by, my lover, good-by." His brisk stride presently brought him abreast of Frank.

"Lo, fellow. How are cases?" he asked cheerfully.

His good spirits subsided abruptly. Lou Howard did not feel like a conquering hero when he recognized in the man beside him Frank Chiswick.

"So you're at it again," Frank said grimly.

There was a false note of heartiness in the glib reply of Howard.

"I been wanting to have a talk with you, Frank," he said. "I reckon you have done heard Ruth's side of the story. You know her better than I do—how bossy she is when she gets a notion in her head, and has to have her own way. I tried to talk her out of this eloping business, and finally I did all right. Told her to go home and behave like a good girl, which of course she is, come down to brass tacks."

"You liar," Frank said. He had heard gossip since he came to town.

Howard bristled. "Looky here. You can't talk thataway to me. I won't stand it for a minute."

"I am talking that way. I'm telling you that you're a liar and a yellow cur. Right now I'm going to whale the life out of you."

Frank weighed twenty pounds less than the other man. He was only nineteen years old and Howard was twenty-four. In actual physical strength he was no match for the Tail Holt loafer, but he had one great asset. He yearned to get at this scamp who had, according to his view, insulted Ruth and dragged her name into common talk, whereas Howard had gone panicky at the thought of a fight.

"Don't you monkey with me, fellow," blustered Lou. "My friends will make you mighty sorry if you try to do me a meanness."

"Put up yore dukes," Frank ordered.

The larger man backed away, protesting that he did not want to fight.

"But you're going to all the same," insisted Chiswick, and he drew his hand insultingly across the cheek of the other.

Howard reached for a gun. The fingers of Frank's left hand closed on his wrist and twisted the arm. With a yelp of pain Howard dropped the revolver to the ground. He broke free and tried to run. Within a dozen strides Frank landed on his back and brought him down.

As he scrambled to his feet, Chiswick crowded him against an adobe wall and lashed out at his frightened face. Feebly Howard put up his arms to defend himself. He took for five minutes a hard drubbing, then collapsed to the ground.

"For God's sake, don't!" he whined. "I've had enough. You're killing me."

"I've heard about yore talk," Frank panted, still hot with anger. "Listen. If you ever mention my sister's name again I'll beat you till you can't stand."

He turned on his heel and walked down the road.

Frank had no feeling of elation at what he had done, but he could not blame himself. To thrash a man who was too cowardly to fight was no pleasure. Yet he had at least stopped Howard from talking

First Dentistry by Family Jewelers; Blacksmiths Also Drew Aching Molars

Back in Revolutionary war days men called upon their blacksmiths when they wanted aching molars drawn. Ladies of the nicer families, garbed in flowing gowns and powdered wigs, visited their jewelers for the drawing of a tooth and for its replacement.

While the war was at its height two fidgety, excitable Frenchmen arrived in this country with brown leather packs containing iron forceps, wires, dog teeth, human teeth and goat teeth. These two men, said a bulletin of the Dental Institute of America, were the first real dentists of professional background in America. Crude as were their methods, they were like rain on a parched field.

"What a steep road dental science has climbed in the intervening 160 years," says the Institute. "Leaders in Europe observe that we are fifty years ahead of the old world. Our 60,000 dentists are highly-skilled and of superior scientific intellect.

about Ruth. The fellow would keep his mouth shut after this.

It would be better to go back to the rooming-house, Chiswick decided. To hang around Main street now would be asking for trouble. Someone very likely would take on the quarrel for Lou. If so, it would be with guns. By morning a more reasonable point of view would obtain.

He turned into Main street down the alley beside the Golden Nugget. As he did so, he caught sight of a man at the hitchrack in front of the gambling-house. The man was Jeff Gray. Frank stopped in the shadow and watched him.

Gray was examining the hoof of a horse. He put down the foot of the animal, glanced swiftly at the door of the Golden Nugget, and moved to a second horse tied to the rack. He stooped and picked up the left hind leg of the cow-pony. Long and carefully he studied the hoof, not forgetting to look occasionally in the direction of the door. Clearly, he did not want to be caught at this inspection.

He straightened, dusted his hands, and walked into the Golden Nugget.

On his way to the lodging-house Frank asked himself questions. The horses at the hitchrack had been the ones upon which Morg Norris and Mile High had ridden into town a little while ago. What was Gray trying to find out? Why was he interested in these horses more than any others? He seemed on friendly terms with the outlaws. Yet Frank had sensed a latent hostility between the stranger and Morgan Norris. Oh, well, thieves fell out among themselves. Frank went to his room and forgot the incident. Very likely it had no importance.

Five minutes later Lou Howard pushed open the door of the Golden Nugget and moved, feet dragging, to the bar.

"Gimme a drink—a stiff one," he ordered.

The bartender stared at the bruised and bleeding face. "Holy mackerel! You been tangling with a grizzly, Lou?" he asked.

"He jumped me—when I wasn't looking," Howard said, almost weeping with self-pity.

"Who jumped you?" Morgan Norris wanted to know.

"Frank Chiswick. That's who."

"A kid," Norris jeered.

"No such thing. An' he lit on my back while I was walking down the road, then beat me up something awful."

"You sure look like a tiger had clawed you," Curly said cheerfully. "Frank certainly worked you over considerable."

He was immensely pleased at the retribution which had fallen on Howard.

"Time someone cut the comb of those Chiswicks," Norris growled. "I'll go along with you any time you say to fix this fellow's clock, Lou."

"How much help do you reckon Lou will need, Morg?" Curly inquired, with intent to insult young Howard.

"You throwin' in with the Chiswicks, Curly?" murmured Norris derisively.

"Would I have to ask yore permission, Morg?" the black-haired man demanded coolly. "Or am I free, white, and twenty-one?"

The eyes of Morgan Norris flickered over Curly. The killer leaned negligently against the bar, his body slumped, his eyes sleepy. But in him was the suggestion of violent eruption one sees in a crouched tiger.

"I like to know who my friends are, Curly," he said softly.

"Don't get you, Morg. When a kid whops a loose-mouthed scalawag bigger and older than he is, do we all have to get on the prod about it?"

W. P. FLORENCE

Candidate for REPRESENTATIVE presents his

Gospel of Democracy Applied to Texas

Wake up and Vote! to make and keep our land fit in which to wake up and live.

"Democrat" is used here in the sense Governor Hogg used it when he said of Republican, Theodore Roosevelt, "Teddy is the best democrat we have had as president since Andrew Jackson." Notwithstanding we had recently had Grover Cleveland elected by the Democratic party as president. And doubtless Hogg would now say, Franklin D. Roosevelt is the best and greatest democrat we have had since Thomas Jefferson.

Remember: "Ill fares the laid, to hastening ills a prey, Where wealth accumulates and men decay."

A time there was ere Texas' griefs began, When every rood of ground maintained its man.

But times were altered; trade's unfeeling train Usurped the land and dispossed the swain.

And forced the aged to: Pick their wintry faggots from the thorn Then seek their nightly shed and weep till morn."

Thoughts from 'The Deserted Village'

Remember: Those were the awful conditions that arose under the "Old Deal" wherein we had assigned nearly all our business to corporations licensed to supply our needs because with machinery and organization they could do it cheaper and with less labor. It's man's natural craving to live with less labor necessary. In return, from these corporations we expected fair division and distribution of the profits and the labor thus saved. We saw started, with less labor, floods of production never before known.

Then democracy went to sleep with the mummified notions that the least rule is best for the people, and that surely government should keep out of business. But behold, wealthy men, mostly alien to the state, bought the stock of service corporations, organized higher holding companies, and with their voting stock, much of it fictitious, controlled all our business companies. They taxed the people for profits, and that without representation. When they had produced more than they could sell to the overtaxed people and the under paid laborers they turned off many laborers to starve. Even the farmers, with machinery and less labor, produced more than they could sell to the overtaxed people and underpaid laborers.

Fields, stores, and factories were filled with stuff rusting and rotting for lack of buyers. Homes and businesses were being taken from owners for debts all their stuff wouldn't pay. Their owners were forced to roam and suffer for lack of work by which to live. That was the Depression under the "Old Deal." Who wants to "wake up and live" in those conditions? Then the Holding companies, or Big Business, ruled supreme over our business. Not being taxed much itself, it taxed the people for profits until they could pay many officials ten times as much as we pay our president of the United States, and pay millions for secret agents to spy on labor and the people, maintain armies of regimented employees, many of them supposed to be representatives of the people, and build great skyscrapers and monuments, and still have clear enough to make millionaires. Now the people were ruined and could afford business no more profits. The most desperate thing in the world is Big Business without profits. This was the Depression from the time there were no more hopes to stimulate.

and failed. Take the thoughts of politicians away from elections and the thoughts of busy business men away from profits, they become helpless in general welfare problems. They got through an R.F.C. to help business with the promise business would help the people. But did it? and will it ever unless forced to?

By then Business saw it had made such havoc of the people's business that the people would take charge through their democracy or turn their affairs over to a dictator. Then Business cried to democracy, "Save us and the country from this ruin, if it cost 70 billion of debt." Even that would have been a bargain.

Then our democracy awoke to its power and duty to rule over all the people's affairs to promote general welfare. For solving the awful Depression it called into counsel men with educated brains and democratic hearts like the great Jefferson who offset the notion that kings had divine right to rule with the notion that all people are born equal and that the people themselves form their governments to promote and safeguard their happiness and that they reform their old governments or replace them with new ones when the old ones fail to meet their needs. These great democrats, known as the "President and his Brain Trust," extended that notion, as Jefferson would have, to include business as being of and for the people to be assigned by them as they see fit to companies or individuals to perform for them under their control.

Solving the Depression must be done upon that fundamental proposition. Throwing money through R.F.C. to business for it to put into circulation had failed. Then was considered the suggestion of taking 2% out of trade as it accrued and gave to old folks to put into circulation, retiring them from jobs to make jobs for abler ones out of employment. That is a noble plan and would go far in starting prosperity. But it fails to reach the bottom of our economic trouble. Those deep thinking democrats decided our trouble is being able and greedily inclined to produce more than the people demand. From education and style people are actually eating and wearing less per man. While, with their inventions and organization, they are able to produce ten times as much per man. Of course some lack food and clothing because too poor to buy. But this fact is the fundamental proposition for all future economic solutions: Though every one's pocket be filled with trade money, if all powers of production be turned on full speed and no wars or calamities happen, before five years every body would be full and clothed, and all our barns, stores, and factories would be full of undemanded stuff. What could happen but some kind of depression? There would be no trade money.

We have illustration in our midst: how ten times as much per man may be produced while consumption per man could not increase in proportion if every body were loaded with money. Therefore, to avoid fluctuations regulations of production to demands is inevitable. Then to make the people all able to buy all they need to increase consumption all the people must receive plenty of living and spending money out of whatever "Deal" is arranged. And then, all the laborers will not be needed at full time and capacity. But all must be buyers of our stuff and not degraders of our standards to keep up our trade. That means the labor that is needed must be divided fairly among all the workers giving each less time but plenty of pay to make him a good customer.

But to make more time for able laborers a noble and fundamentally economic plan is to retire from labor the aged, the blind, the crippled dependent children, and old teachers, into a class considered as already having rendered their share of labor, or not able now to labor, and have them supported with honor by those that work and sell that they may be good customers of our business. We know business cannot thrive without plenty of good customers. One way to make more employment is for the public to furnish it on needed public works.

No deep thinker, abreast of the times, can escape the conclusion that these regulations must be fairly carried out if the people continue their progress and be prosperous and happy. Can we trust Business to do it fairly? We tried it and it failed. There are only two other ways without going back to old and strictly individual life by which Business would lose every thing. One is to turn our affairs over to a dictator as many foreigners have, or do it our selves through our chosen representatives responsive to our will and needs, and who regard the expressed will of the people above every consideration. That is the democratic way and, thank God, that is the way the people of this country have chosen to do it.

The "New Deal" is the name given to the processes of administering our affairs by our government in accord with the above principles.

Further discussion of how the New Deal saved our country and the people's liberty economically and how the same groups that had ruled us to ruin began to clamor for their old powers back as soon as the New Deal got them able to stand up, and how by that reaction, which we are in danger of, we would suffer the same ills, and how our Texas legislators have been the most niggardly in solving our affairs in harmony with the New Deal principles, will be added in pamphlet form for all our voters to read.

Our national government proposes according to circulars from the National Social Security Board, to go 50-50 with States towards providing funds up to $30.00 per month for maintaining every needy worthy citizen 65 years old. The Social Security Board itself interpreting "NEEDY" to include all 65-year-olds without sufficient means of supporting themselves comfortably "in their own homes independent of children."

The people of Texas voted a plain mandate that funds be provided from the wealth of our state to provide ample funds for the above purpose and for other social security purposes which our representatives have failed in, though they have extravagantly increased our state's operating expenses 20 million per year recently.

This breach in our democracy prompts me to solicit the people's support as their representative and democratic missionary in our Legislature.

Yours truly,

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for May 8

CO-OPERATING IN SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 9:30-41. GOLDEN TEXT—For he that is not against us is on our part.—Mark 9:40. PRIMARY TOPIC—When We Want to Be First. JUNIOR TOPIC—Not in Our Class. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Working with Others for Christ. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Co-operating in Service.

That there is strength in united and co-operative effort is a truth so obvious that in the affairs of the home and of the office we would not attempt to make progress with "a house divided against itself." But with strange and destructive inconsistency some who are engaged in the propagation of the Christian faith, and often the very folk who speak much of love and fellowship and sacrificial service, fight one another with cunning and often bitterness of spirit, and all in the name of Christ whom they profess to serve.

No one who is awake to the real issue involved would ask any true believer to co-operate in Christian work with those who, while holding the name and outward symbols of the followers of Christ, deny His deity and His Word. But surely there is need for loving co-operation between all those who truly love the Lord, who believe in Him and in His Word.

I. A Dispute by the Way (vv. 30-34).

Jesus had taken His disciples from the Mount of Transfiguration by secluded roads through Galilee so that He might instruct them in the all-important truths regarding His death and resurrection. One could hardly conceive of a more propitious arrangement for their growth both in knowledge and grace. Did they profit by it? No; they not only did not understand what He told them but they used their time to dispute "among themselves who should be the greatest" (v. 34).

II. An Example of Humility (vv. 35-37).

"The greatness consists not in attaining the first place in the notice and praise of the world, not in being served by many, but in being willing to stoop down to a humble place, not for the sake of self-effacement, not in timid diffidence, but in order to serve others for the sake of Christ" (Erdman). Note carefully that it is the receiving of a little one in the name of Christ that brings to us the glory of His presence with us. Every deed of kindness and love is commendable and has its own reward, but there is a vast difference between it and humble service in the name and for the glory of Christ.

III. A Lesson in Co-operation (vv. 38-41).

John, quick to apprehend spiritual truth, sees in the teaching of Christ concerning the little child the condemnation of something he had done. "If indeed it be true that to receive a child, an ordinary every-day child, is to receive Christ, and to receive God," said John within himself, "what did I do when I forbade that man who in the Name was casting out a demon? Verily, the light had broken in upon him."

The man who casts out demons, or who gives the disciple of Jesus a cup of water, in His name—that is with true faith in Christ, and in His power, and for His glory—must be a believer. He may not belong to our group or circle, he may not speak our language, he may not use our methods, but if he is serving Christ we should not forbid him or speak evil of him. God has at times called a man to witness for Him, who has done so in a manner distasteful to others, and these in turn have aligned themselves against him and hindered his full usefulness in the gospel. One of the great evangelists of the last generation used methods which shocked many church folk. They stood against him, and yet that man was used to win hosts of business and professional men that the church had scarcely touched, into earnest Christian testimony and service which continues to this day. You and I may not like one another's appearance, or voice, or methods, but let us love and co-operate with one another for Christ's sake!

The Word of God

The word of God will stand a thousand readings; and he who has gone over it most frequently is the surest of finding new wonders there. —J. Hamilton.

Wash Frocks Set High Style Record

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WITH each succeeding season dresses and jacket costumes smartly styled of swank wash materials reach a new high in fashion importance. The current modes developed in voguish cottons, linens, rayons and hosts of intriguing novelty weaves that "wash like new," give you a dressed-up appearance that tunes to any occasion.

Especially in the matter of smart daytime suits and afternoon frocks the trend is to style simple materials that will launder perfectly with as flattering details and meticulous finesse as you would expect in higher priced apparel. To prove our point that dresses and costume suits made of wash materials look every inch patrician we are picturing three models that received curtain calls at a recent preview of spring and summer fashions recently held in the Merchandise Mart of Chicago.

These attractive dresses are just such as you will find available in leading stores in most communities. You will like to know about the congo cloth that fashions the two light-with-bright-contrast costumes in the illustration. It is just what every woman is eagerly seeking, a material that keeps its whiteness or clear natural tone, does not shrink and is as non-wrinklable as modern science can make it.

After you have satisfied yourself as to the good service the material itself offers, consider the style-high "looks" which you may be sure will make instant appeal, for designers are turning out perfectly stunning tub frocks this season. Note the accent on color contrast in each of the two light outfits shown. This matter of using dark with light in sharp contrast is important news.

Because it is champagne color, because it is a new fabric, congo cloth to be explicit, and because the top of the dress is of the same fabric in chevron stripes of yellow, royal and polo blue, the model to the right is a noteworthy example of what's newest for spring and summer. It is a perfect choice to wear in the way of a spectator sports costume on a sunny afternoon.

Very definitely does the other dress announce the smartness of dark with light. The manner of combining navy with white as here shown is characteristic of this season's new styling. In some instances the latest dresses go fifty-fifty white or light with dark brown or perhaps the new copper tone or deep red as the case may be.

The peasant dirndl full-skirted models have emerged from play clothes fashions being shown in the new spring dresses for street and general wear. Note the dirndl frock in the foreground. It is a sure-enough winner. Made of navy linen this dress with white braid ornamentation has the typical high bust line of the authentic dirndl as worn by mid-European peasants. The matching kerchief scarf worn on the head is a young fashion that persists among the sorority of school age—gives the picturesque peasant atmosphere and is flattering in the extreme.

GIBSON GIRL VOGUE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The air is rife with news in regard to the revival of Gibson-girl fashions. And if you think there is any doubt as to the reality of this style movement see here pictured a lady of fashion, year 1938, as will grace the immediate spring and summer style scene. The rough straw sailor hat with huge decorative pin and crisp veil is true to an honest-to-goodness original Gibson type. The demure blouse of shadow-printed Swiss organdie with cascading jabot frill and high-tucked band collar is reminiscent of the early 1900's. The smart wool suit in the picture has a straight navy skirt with action pleats at front and back. The fitted jacket which she carries is of matching blue wool fabric, chalk-striped in white.

BANGLE BRACELET STYLE HIGHLIGHT

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

In the way of a novelty bangle bracelet here's one that makes appeal to women of discriminating taste. If you inquire at the jewelry counter you will find that the bangle bracelet is a style highlight this season. One of the cleverest types yet designed has little gadgets of all-American inspiration dangling from a slender gilt chain. Exquisite workmanship marks the motifs in that each is defined in dainty rhinestone solid settings. The bangles consist of an American eagle, Independence bell, covered wagon, a happy Indian figure, and cunning-as-can-be wee "Yankee Doodle" come to town riding on a pony. This bracelet by Lester Gaba will add a most pleasing accent to any costume in that the entire scheme is carried out with consummate artistry.

Twelfth Century Lending

Glamour to Glove Fashions

The fine glove, tabards and even shields used by Robin's nobleman enemies are contributing ideas to the early spring style picture. The gloves all have picturesque gauntlets and many of the finer ones are embroidered in silver or gold.

This is an idea which should blossom around cocktail time or even after dinner. The tabard of the Twelfth century was a long, oblong piece of cloth which had a hole cut in the center. The head was thrust through the hole, the waistline was girded and the result was a dashing tunic. Usually the front of these were elaborately embroidered in metallic thread. The tabard is a clever way to dress up lounging pajamas or to give a tunic effect to any gown.

A DISTINGUISHED nutritional scientist once remarked that it is a small favor to keep people alive on a poorly chosen diet. For with the wrong food, they may not get one-fifth of their potential efficiency into their lives; they will drag themselves through miserable days, never knowing the joys of physical fitness nor enjoying the abundant health that comes from a perfect balance of nutriment.

The Perfect Diet May Not Be Safe to Eat

But even the homemaker who plans an ideal diet may be undermining the health of her family by feeding them spoiled or tainted food which carries the deadly germs of disease.

We frequently hear stories of death or serious illness caused by food contamination. And it is significant that the improper care of food in the home is most often responsible.

One physician has gone so far as to state that there is no estimating the number of persons who, while not sick in bed, feel "rather poorly," "not strong," or "kind of run down" because improperly preserved food gives them insufficient nourishment and their strength is exhausted in combatting the action of germs.

Homemaker's Responsibility For Food Sanitation

An enormous amount of time and money is expended to put foodstuffs in your kitchen in a fresh, palatable and safe form. Laws govern the manufacture, transportation and merchandising of every food product and an elaborate system is maintained for the inspection of meat. But all this care can be undone if food is not adequately refrigerated in the home.

From the moment that meats, fruits, vegetables and groceries reach your kitchen, the responsibility is yours, and you will be guilty if your husband and children suffer ill effects from eating tainted food.

Causes of Food Spoilage

Spoilage in food is due to the ravages of a vast army of micro-organisms which cause it to sour, decay or putrefy, depending upon the nature of the food.

There are three classes of micro-organisms which develop in food—bacteria, molds and yeasts. All three are notable for their minute size, rapid growth and wide distribution. Yeasts and bacteria can only be seen with the aid of a microscope.

Not all micro-organisms are the enemies of man; some are useful in the preparation of foods such as cheese, sauerkraut and bread. These need not concern the homemaker. But the harmful bacteria will flourish wherever conditions are favorable to their growth.

There are two important factors governing food preservation. One is the maintenance of a constant temperature of from 40 to 50 degrees Fahrenheit—under no circumstances should food be stored at a temperature higher than 50 degrees, or bacteria will multiply so rapidly as to make it unsafe to eat. The other is to maintain the proper degree of moisture in the air—neither too much, which encourages the growth of micro-organisms, nor too little, which dehydrates fruits and vegetables.

Appearance of Food May Be Deceptive

The great danger of food that is improperly stored is that it may become spoiled without advertising that fact. Appearance is seldom a reliable guide and unless your refrigerator is efficient, food may become unfit for consumption before spoilage can be noted by sight, taste or smell.

All types of protein foods harbor bacteria which multiply rapidly at temperatures higher than 50 degrees. Under favorable conditions of moisture and temperature, bacteria double their number every 20 to 30 minutes, and a single bacterium can produce a million bacteria in 15 hours.

Safeguard Children's Milk

Milk is the most perishable of all foods, because it is an ideal medium for bacterial growth. If this master food is to be kept safe for children, it must be stored at a temperature not higher than 45 degrees.

Careful studies show that there is very little increase in bacteria when milk is held for as long as 48 hours at a temperature of 40 degrees. But when the temperature was allowed to rise to 50 degrees, almost 30 times as many bacteria developed, and at 60 degrees, the bacteria multiplied more than 8,000 times in the same period.

Foods That Spoil Easily

The rapid multiplication of bacteria also occurs in other foods having a high protein content, including meat, meat broths, fish, gelatin, custards, creamed foods, peas and beans. It is important that all these foods, as well as milk, be kept in the coldest part of the refrigerator, as a few degrees in temperature make a great deal of difference in preventing spoilage.

Once food has begun to deteriorate, it must be discarded or it may endanger health. Cooking will not make spoiled foods fit for consumption.

How to Prevent Mold

Molds are another form of spoilage that the homemaker must constantly battle. Mold will grow on almost any substance, but is particularly likely to occur on acid foods, as lemons, oranges, tomatoes and berries; on neutral foods, such as bread and meat; on sweets, notably jellies and preserves, and on salty foods, including ham or bacon.

Molds may develop quickly or slowly, depending upon the temperature and degree of moisture. They thrive under the influence of warmth and moisture and may remain invisible to the naked eye for as long as 36 hours. All molds are white at first, but as they mature they change color, becoming blue, red, or assuming various shades of brown.

To the bacteriologist, these colors have different meanings. To the homemaker, they all tell the same story—that through improper storage food has lost its appetite appeal and palatability.

Mold growths may be destroyed by boiling temperatures. They may be retarded by keeping food in the cold, dry circulating air provided by an efficient refrigerator.

A good refrigerator is the best investment a family can make. It enables you to take advantage of bargain prices to buy food in quantity. And it safeguards health by preventing contaminated food from finding its way to your table.

An efficient refrigerator also preserves the flavor and texture of meats, fruits and vegetables, so that you enjoy these foods at their best. But its greatest contribution to human welfare is the preservation of food so that it will nourish your body instead of poisoning it.

Questions Answered

E. W.—It's a fallacy to assume that brown sugar is "more nutritious and healthful" than granulated sugar. It is true that brown sugar contains traces of mineral elements, while white sugar contains practically none. But the amounts are variable and never significant. Regardless of color, sugars make their sole contribution to the diet through their carbohydrate content. The caloric value of white sugar is a trifle higher than that of brown, the difference amounting to 91 calories per pound.

Mrs. S. T.—When thoroughly chewed and given a proper place in the diet, cheese is usually well digested. Experiments performed by the United States Department of Agriculture demonstrated that an average of 95 per cent of the protein and over 95 per cent of the fat of cheese were digested and absorbed.
